Ernie Banks Here For Oaks' Winter Banquet

Local baseball fans, with an appetite for good food and off-season goblets, are heartily invited to emerge from their winter hibernation on January 12, at 6:00 P.M. and attend the first annual "Iowa Oaks Winter Banquet" in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Fort Des Moines.

For $11.00 those attending will be served a sumptuous meal and a full program of entertainment featuring the "1981 Cubs Caravan", the Maple Street Jazz Band, and the Oaks version of the San Diego Chicken.

Members of the Caravan will include Cub General Manager, Bob Kennedy, Director of Player Development, C.V. Davis, Field Manager Joe Amalfitano, a member of the Cubs' WGN Broadcasting team Milo Hamilton, three or four Cub players, and "Mr. Cub" himself, Ernie Banks. Newly appointed Oaks Manager, (and former Cub Catcher) Randy Hundley will also be introduced to Oak Fans.

Following dinner, tentative plans call for the 1980 Cubs highlight film to be shown. With Milo Hamilton serving as Master of Ceremonies, Ernie Banks and each of the players will make brief speeches, and the Caravan will participate in a question and answer session with the audience. Afterwards, members of the Caravan will sign Autographs while door prizes provided by the Cubs will be distributed to some of the children in the audience.

All in all, it promises to be an evening that will hasten the advent of Spring for Oak and Cub faithful.

The Cubs believe that they have placed their top minor league team in fertile baseball territory and a big turnout is anticipated. Accordingly, seating will be limited to 400 and no tickets will be sold at the door. Tickets may be purchased through the Oaks office at Sec Taylor Stadium, either in person or by mailing your check payable to the Iowa Oaks. We will then send you the tickets by mail.

Tickets will also be on sale at the front desk of the Hotel Fort Des Moines. Unfortunately, tickets cannot be charged.

Hooks Meets Pres. Elect Reagan, discuss differences

New York City, N.Y. ... Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, voiced cautious optimism after meeting with President-elect Ronald Reagan at Blair House in the nation's capital.

"President-elect Reagan and I did not see eye-to-eye," said the former Federal Communications Commissioner, "but I was glad to hear that the President-elect is committed to guarding the civil rights of all Americans even to the point of enforcement similar to measures taken in the Eisenhower Administration."

Hooks explained that he and the President-elect disagreed on the effectiveness of busing to reach the goal of equal educational opportunities for blacks as well as whites.

Appearing before Reagan in his capacity as chairman of the Black Leadership Forum, Hooks urged: "Job creation to bring more blacks and other minorities into the workforce; increases in the number and size of minority-owned businesses; and reinvigorated commercial activity in predominantly minority communities.

"These are objectives we believe we can achieve together within a general policy of economic renewal, which would concentrate direct and indirect public subsidies on communities in which private economic activity has all but disappeared ... and some of us are looking carefully at the 'Enterprise Zone' proposals from this perspective. That policy would especially encourage creation of the small businesses that generate most new private-sector jobs.

"We believe that major roles should be played by neighborhood and community-based groups capable of helping to create jobs, products and services — and of brokering private and public resources from outside the target communities."

Among other things urged by the Black Leadership Forum were full employment and the implementation of the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill; extension of affirmative action programs to all areas where federal spending is involved, including set-asides; appointment of blacks to policy-making and judicial positions in the Cabinet and administrative agencies, as well as to the U.S. Supreme Court; extension of the Voter Rights Act; maintenance and extension of the minimum wage; support of majority rule and end of apartheid in South Africa; economic and moral support of Third World nations; federal funds to be targeted on the basis of economic need; public works aimed at relieving poverty; national health insurance; the federal government as the final guarantor of civil rights and the rebuilding of cities to improve health, housing, transportation and social improvement.

The Forum also urged support for maintenance of CETA and the funding of community-based organizations as well as quality integrated education for every American; aid to black higher education and support to the Justice Department's implementation of all laws and regulations.

A special request was made by the Black Leadership Forum for a continuing dialogue with the Executive Branch to maintain an ongoing input toward decisions being made that affect blacks and poor.

The meeting with the President-elect capped a two-week long stint of on-going lobbying and staff work as well as a meeting with President and Mrs. Carter on December 4. At that meeting, Hooks joined Urban League head, Vernon Jordan, and Rev. Jesse Jackson in ironing out strategy for President Carter in dealing with the anti-busing rider attached to the Justice Department's appropriations bill. The rider posed severe political problems for President Carter in that if the out-going President vetoed the appropriations bill a similar rider might be attached later to a continuing appropriations bill of far larger scope, where a veto would effectively stop Federal government activity altogether.

"The strategy decided

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

1981 seems to be a tough year for black people, and now more than ever since the Moral Majority came into power, they think. Our trouble will start in Congress and spread out around the country.

First we will have Senator Strom Thurmond, already laying plans to scuttle the 1964 voting rights bill and anything that he can find that will help black people, even though he insists he isn't racist. Then some of the statements by the members of the Reagan people who will be in positions to carry out what they want make one wonder what will happen.

When they talk about curbing crime, so many of them see only black criminals, forgetting that we are outnumbered ten to one and therefore there have to be quite a slug of white criminals, too.

I have to repeat the statement by a member of the transition team for the Republicans. She said that there was no cause to worry about unemployment among black youth because most of them were unemployable anyway.

Just about everybody talks about cutting government expenses and raising defense spending. Some want to turn the welfare spending back to the states. Some of us can remember when the states did have control of welfare, and the great big difference in grants to people in various states.

And in too many Southern states, the county officials tried to drive blacks out of the state and run them into the northern states. What makes anyone think that won't happen again? It has always been so that when states had control of giving money to poor people, the first ones who got taken care of have nearly always been the people who didn't really need it, but who had the most political clout.

That was true even in the days of the Great Depression. Sure, the people who needed help got it, but you'd be surprised how many of the nieces, nephews and sons in laws of the politically powerful got help they could have done without. Why, I could even name names, but it is going too far back into the past and wouldn't do any good.

But the thing stands a good chance of being repeated, because human nature hasn't changed with time. It might not be as widespread as it, and may be even more because people who aren't affected by the circumstances won't believe it is happening, just as people who aren't affected by race prejudice can't believe how vicious it is and the extent to which it can go.

Another thing that makes us wonder is the guy who said last week that there was no more poverty in the U.S. today. When a person is that uninformed about what is going on around him, or so calloused that he wants to try to make things look so much better, it does little good to ask him where he has been, because he has been there all the time. Now these people are just getting a chance to get public attention, and they are making the most of it.

It may be that they can't do as much damage to the cause of blacks and other minorities as they would like to, but you can bet they will try. And the battle will be tougher because there will be no leadership from the top. President Eisenhower, didn't like the decisions of the Supreme Court under Earl Warren, but he acted the leader and enforced them to the hilt, and I can't see the new president - elect doing that, nor could I see Jimmy Carter doing that either. Ronald Reagan will likely try to keep hands off as many controversial issues as he can, because he will have learned by now that it is one thing to speak out on issues when all you have to do is talk and another when you have to back up what you say.

Yep, we will be looking for a long hot summer. Riots? Possibly, but they will get nowhere. What, then? I don't know. Do you?

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

The Iowa Supreme Court began its opinion by stating that, as regards the Constitutional principle of equal rights, in order to justify a denial of that equality of right to any individual, some express sovereign authority for that denial should be shown. Defendants claimed that since the board of directors are empowered and authorized to create and maintain as many schools in their district township as they may deem proper, and also have the discretion in their support and management, they had the authority to establish "colored" schools and require "colored" children to attend them or no other.

Further, they claimed that because public sentiment in that area was opposed to the intermingling of white and "colored" children in the same schools, it was a justification for the exercise of the discretion in establishing and maintaining a separate school for "colored" children. Essentially, the Court stated, if the board of directors had discretion in that particular matter, their discretion cannot be controlled or otherwise varied by a court order regardless of whether it is exercised wisely or unwisely.

To determine whether the right claimed by the plaintiff Clark is a clear and absolute legal right or one dependant upon the discretion of the board of directors, the Court began to explain the history of the states' public school statutes in light of its legislative history.

It saw three distinct phases of legislative sentiment on this subject: (a) the total exclusion of "colored" children from the common schools, which was, to some degree, tied to the legislative exemption of the property of "colored" persons from taxation for school purposes; (b) the allowance of uncertain, and in practice (due to the small number of "colored" children in any one school district) very limited and distinctively inferior common school privileges, dependent upon the unanimous consent of the persons sending children to that school (with its obvious limitations inherent in this practice); and, (c) the current statutes' allowance of equal common school privileges to all.

The rights of the plaintiff must be measured by and determined under the law currently in force (noted as (c) above). This legislation, as enacted, explicitly denies the right to the board of directors to exercise their discretion in relation to establishing and maintaining separate schools for "colored" children. The legislature, in its prior enactments in this area, have consistently denied any discretion by declaring its sovereign will in relation to the rights of "colored" children.

This declaration of sovereign will obviously exclude the exercise of any discretion in relation to the same matter, by any inferior authority — the board of directors. The Court concluded that because "...the law makes no distinction whatever as to the right of children between the ages of five and twenty-one years to attend the common schools and that there is no discretion left with, or given to, the board of school directors, to make any distinction in regard to children within the specified ages."

There is no question that the board of directors has certain discretionary powers as to the establishment, maintenance of schools within the district. Obviously the board may, in its discretion, fix the boundaries within which children must reside in order to be entitled to attend a certain school, or may designate the grade of each school and require certain

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

Apologies are in order this week to those of you who had been following my column of late. My legal studies and schedule were (are) such that I find it quite difficult to submit any writings on any sort of a regular basis. In any event, I should like to discuss an issue this week that has preoccupied black Americans, in particular, for centuries, I refer of course to the Criminal Justice System as it exists in the United States.

Though I could be regarded somewhat of a "rookie" in the legal sense, after only one semester in law school, one factor has really struck me as to the various modes of procedures as practiced in American jurisdictions. The old concept of "stare decisis", or rule by precedent, as we were taught in school is practically nonexistent in many areas of the law. Legislatures notwithstanding, many courts have wholly usurped the law-making function of congress and administrative agencies by their reinterpretation of the law. While there is certainly nothing wrong with this approach (it tends to liberalize the law, and change inequitable states of affairs much more quickly than the long, drawn-out legislative process), a situation I find much more disturbing is the current trend in the criminal law as far as the substantive law is concerned.

What I mean here is that the substantive law itself is usually never a viable factor in a criminal trial, but rather, the characteristics of the defendant (the accused) is often the deciding factor, both to a judge and a jury. This becomes more obvious when one examines criminological statistics; blacks are more likely than whites to be stopped and detained by police, formally charged, brought to trial, convicted, sentenced, and incarcerated (or fined, in civil cases), except when the decedent (dead victim) is black. Then sentences for both blacks and whites become disproportionately lower.

But enough about the criminal law and the penal system. A far more threatening phenomenon is sweeping the nation in the wake of the overwhelming Republican victory in the November election, have come a series of violent, seemingly random attacks on black Americans by anonymous (white) persons. The conservative sentiment in this nation is being increasingly reflected in right-wing reactionary paramilitary retaliatory strikes against minority citizens.

Nine or more black men killed in Buffalo, New York a few months back — shot to death and disemboweled by their assailants; at least eleven black children murdered in the Atlanta area; several black joggers gunned-down in Chicago and Los Angeles; Vernon Jordan seriously wounded by an unidentified sniper (a suspect is in custody); dozens of incidents involving police brutality, including the Green (Philadelphia) and McDuffy (Miami) murders, and much more.

Elderly black women have been fired at in several southern cities, and on top of all this, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are conducting military-style combat exercises in the jungles of Alabama, utilizing the latest in fully-automatic weapons, rifles, handguns, explosives, camouflage uniforms and equipment, radio communications gear, and cross-country vehicles. They are reportedly training for the inevitable race war that Klan spokesmen (as well as many black youths) say is coming.

With President-elect Ronald Reagan promising to eliminate busing, affirmative action programs for minorities, and other Federal programs which exist only by Executive Order, there is clearly a potential for widespread urban violence. The local police cannot always be counted upon to protect the rights and interests of poor people, and are themselves often a part of the problems confronting black people (police harassment in particular).

For next week, I will outline a few measures which black Americans can take to protect themselves, as it increasingly appears that Washington cannot, or will not do so.

qualifications or proficiencies in studies before any pupil will be entitled to admission.

But this discretion is limited by the line which fixes the equality of right in all youths between the ages of five and twenty-one years. No discretion which disturbs that equality can be exercised, for the exercise of that discretion of the law, which expressly gives the same rights to all youths. Further, the statute does not either in letter or spirit, recognize or justify any such distinction or limitations of right or privilege on account of nationality. For this court to sustain a board of school directors or other subordinate board or officer in limiting the rights and privileges of persons by reasons of nationality, would be to sanction an obvious violation of the spirit of the laws, perpetuate the national differences of the American people, and stimulate a constant strife, if not a war of races.

The Court concluded finally that since it appears that plaintiff Susan Clark is of the proper age, resides within the boundary and possesses the qualifications necessary for admission to Grammar School No. 2, "and has" (as stated in her petition), "in no wise forfeited her right" to admission therein, it follows that the defendants wrongfully refused her admission.

It was the clear legal duty of the board of directors, resulting from the nature of their office, to admit the plaintiff to "Grammar School No. 2" and to equal privileges with the other students there. The District Court did not err, it said, in making the Order to admit the student to the aforementioned school, and affirmed its earlier action.

KEEPING THE DREAM ALIVE

By Don McEvoy

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Most Americans believe that the segregation system in the South was instituted immediately at the end of the Civil War and the abolition of slavery. The historical facts are different from this common misconception.

The truth of the matter is that the cessation of hostilities was followed by approximately three decades of Reconstruction, during which time the emancipated slaves experienced relative freedom. Many became landowners, were elected to public office and enjoyed the first fruits of their newly won liberation. Constitutional amendments were enacted that limited the powers of the states to deny individuals the freedoms guaranteed by the national charter. The Federal Government was active throughout this period of transition.

In the mid-1890's, the era of Reconstruction came to an end as the Federal Government withdrew its oversight. Almost immediately, the states of the old Confederacy began to enact laws that mandated the separation of the races. During the decade of 1895-1905, the superstructure of Jim Crow was erected. The gains of the past generation were wiped away and segregation was codified into law. It took more than half a century to undo the damage done in that short period.

The past 25 years have been the most significant period of progress in race relations in our history. In fact, I think it a period unmatched in the experience of any nation in recorded time. Despite the continuing presence of both individual and institutional racism in this country, America has moved farther in a shorter period of time than almost anyone would have dreamed possible. A latter-day Rip Van Winkle who fell asleep in 1960 would not believe his eyes if he awoke today.

But all this progress notwithstanding, I feel the earth rumbling beneath my feet. Both houses of Congress pass a rider to an appropriations bill that forbids the Justice Department to effectively pursue school desegregation. Senator Strom Thurmond, soon to be chairman of the Judiciary Committee, suggests that it is time for the Federal Government to cease monitoring the performance of states in regard to the Voting Rights Act. Others are saying that it is time to junk affirmative action programs in employment and education. Humane social programs of recent years are in jeopardy.

Are we about to experience once again a withdrawal by the national Government from its commitments to equality and justice? Is the second period of Reconstruction at an end? Will the decade of the '80's see us turn again to a denial of basic and fundamental human rights of those who are not in the majority? We dare not permit that to be.

Christmas and a Happy New Year to you and yours from New Friendship.

We praise the Lord that our Pastor's wife Sis. Daye made a safe journey to Denver, to be with their daughter during the passing of their infant baby, born on December 10. We are praying for Bro. and Sis. Wilson that God will lift their burden and take them on to victory.

We sincerely miss Mo. Vera Perchman, who is yet in Atlanta in a nursing home due to a stroke, but the saints at New Friendship forward her some cards and tokens of love, we do love and miss Mo. Perchman.

We are praising God for our Holiday revival which is being conducted by Elder Pritchard of Red Bank, Mississippi, who is truly an anointed man of God. He can also sing and play that guitar. We have truly been enjoying the Holy Ghost last week and this week. Come on out each nite at 7:30 p.m. and enjoy the Lord with us.

The services will begin at 7:30 p.m. each nite with the exception of New Years eve nite, the service will begin at 9:00 p.m., so we can joyously shout the New Year in this Holy Ghost revival. We praise God for our Sister, Prayer of Faith in West Des Moines, where our Supt. E. David is pastor. They have closed their church during this revival so that we can praise God together.

On Sunday morning, Pastor Daye did bring to us an inspiring message entitled, Seeing the Unseen, scripture text II Kings, 6: 17. Let us continue to praise God during this Holiday season. Come to church and praise the Lord, try it you might like it!

Soul... Food and Thought

Aldeen Davis

The American people are a divided lot when it comes to the New Year Holiday. New Year's eve finds many of us in watch meeting services at the various churches of the community.

Others spend the night in fun and frolic toasting friends midst best wishes for the coming New Year. The Jewish community combines feasting and fasting in celebrating their New Year—Rosh Hashanah or the first day of a ten day period of penitence.

Rosh Hashanah—the feast of the trumpet—comes in the fall, and is a time of "stock taking and heart searching". This is not a time of gaiety or idle festivities, but rather a time for meditation and self-examination. It is believed that there is a book of life in which deeds of every individual are recorded. Therefore, when Jews greet each other at Rosh Hashanah they say, "May you be inscribed for a Happy New Year".

Prior to R.H., Jewish housewives clean their houses, shop for new clothes, prepare for the New Year feast that is served the evening before, and send greetings. The table for the evening meal is spread with the finest linens and set with the best China and centered with a basket of fruit. Candles are lighted, a special New Year benediction is said over an apple dipped in honey.

At the synagogue the shofar (ram's horn) trumpet is blown calling the congregation to repent and symbolizing warning and hope. Readings from the Torah (bible) recounting the story of Abraham and his willingness to sacrifice his son, Isaac, to Jehovah, and the 37th Psalm is chanted—"Fret not thyself because of evil doers..."

At the close of these ten "days of awe" or penitence the solemn day of atonement is celebrated, better known as Yom Kippur. No other Jewish holiday is celebrated with such devotion and fasting. An ancient ritual symbolizing one great annual expiation of all the sins of the complete Jewish community is culminated in the ceremony of the scapegoat—on whom the burden of all sins was loaded.

On this occasion two goats are placed before the high priest. Lots are cast to see which will become a sin offering sacrificed unto the Lord. After this ceremony is completed the live goat is placed before the priest who lays his hand upon its head confessing the sins of the congregation. The animal is then sent into the wilderness. (Thus, the term "scapegoat")

Beginning the evening before Yom Kippur there are prayers for forgiveness, memorial services for the dead, prayers in behalf of the deceased and their children, and gifts to charity. Both in the homes and in the Synagogue lights are kept burning, symbolic of the immortality of departed souls.

On the eve of this day of atonement the Kol Nidre prayer is recited three times. This most holy and solemn day of the Jewish calendar is observed by abstention from all manner of pork, food, drink and pleasure. The day is spent praying for forgiveness for past offenses and for help in the coming year.

It is a long standing custom of Blacks to serve Black-eyed peas on New Years for success and good health in the coming year. The Jews have traditional food served on the evenings preceding the actual holidays such as Lekoch (a honey cake), Tzimmes (meat, sweetening and vegetables) for Rosh Hashana and Kreplach for Yom Kippur.

Carrot Tzimmes:

2½-3 pounds brisket of beef, 6 sliced carrots, 6 med. sweet potatoes; cut in small pieces, 1 sm. onion. 2T chicken fat, 2T flour, salt & pepper, 1/2-3/4 C br. sugar. Season meat, let stand several hours. Simmer in water until tender (2½ hr. with pan covered). Add vegetables the last 1/2 hr. Melt fat in pan, add flour, stir until smooth. Add 2C. of meat stock. Cook until thick and smooth. Add salt and pepper and br. sugar. Pour over meat and vegetables in a roasting pan. Bake in oven 350 until meat is brown.

Kreplach:

One recipe for home made noodles. Roll cut then, do not dry. Cut in 2" sq. Place 1T filling on each. Fold into triangle securing edges. Drop in boiling salt water. Cook 15 min. Serve with rich tomatoe sauce or meat gravy. Filling: Lt. onion juice, 1t. salt, papper and salt to taste, 1 egg, 1 pound cooked gr. beef. Mix well.

Black Folk In American Civilization

The End of 1980

Nineteen - eighty is about to come to a close. Some of are probably saying saying thank God. "I thought it would never end." Unfortunately many of the things started in this new decade are not ending. During 1980, we saw a new birth of the Ku Klux Klan. It seemed to have been revived with new energy. Some of us have probably sworn, I hope, it will never roll back the years to the way it used to be.

We saw busing being attacked in the courts, the legislative halls, executive chambers, and even on buses where students were being bussed. Yea, some of us do not want our children taken out of the neighborhood to receive an education, but it is seemingly OK if black children are taken out of the neighborhood to sit next to a white youngster, or a white kid is bussed to sit next to ONLY white students, but there is something very wrong if white kids are taking from their neighborhood to sit in a predominantly black class.

When we looked at the courts, we saw all white juries deciding the fate of black men in rape trials where white women were supposedly raped. The communities where these juries sat were not all white. But there seeming were a serious lack of qualified and non-prejudicious blacks. Sometimes these juries were deciding the fate of black men who were accused of killing "innocent" white men. One wonders if we are returning to the day when only whites will be called for jury duty.

We read about whites preparing themselves for the day of the Armageddon — when whites and blacks will fight tooth and nail over the control of this country of OURS. Do we really foresee that happening? Camp Puller is not the only one. There are places all over this country where such is taking place.

Unfortunately, we — WE have our minds on boogeying and have radios up to our ears and could care less about tomorrow.

We are losing jobs mighty fast. Our country is going deeper and deeper into a recession while WE are going deeper and DEEPER into debt. We had better wake up to what is happening around us. When will we realize that there is meaning to the adage about the last hired and the first fired. How do we expect to financially support our family without a job?

Finally, we elected a president. He is a Republican. We voted Democratically. He does not owe us a thing! Of course Jimmy Carter didn't give us a thing. The jury is still out on Ronald Reagan. He appointed a black man to his cabinet, but please do not let that fool you.

If we are going to make 1981 better than 1980 we will have to remember ONLY WE CAN SAVE US. Let us individually decide to do whatever — WHATEVER — is necessary to make life a little bit better for all of us.

Project Retrofit is a program of the Iowa Center for Local Self-Reliance with funds from the City of Des Moines' Office of Neighborhood Development.

Volunteers Weatherize

Eighty homes of low-income elderly and handicapped citizens were weatherized against cold winter air drafts during Phase I of Project Retrofit. The program was sponsored by the Iowa Center for Local Self-Reliance through a grant from the Office of Neighborhood Development, City of Des Moines.

Seventy-five community volunteers worked with ICLSR staff to help low-income individuals save money and energy while keeping warm through the winter. Volunteers caulked leaky window and door frames, applied weatherstripping to windows and doors, insulated home water heaters, plugged drafts from electrical outlets and installed water-saving showerheads and faucet aerators.

Up to $75 a year can be cut from utility bills by applying these energy-saving techniques.

Jordan Feted By IRS

The Hyatt Regency Hotel Ballroom East in Los Angeles, Calif., was the setting for a beautiful retirement dinner dance for former Des Moines resident, Adeline Jordan.

The theme for the program was "The Adeline I Knew". Her career and outstanding achievements were high-lighted throughout the evening by Internal Revenue Service District Directors, Management Personnel and Community Leaders.

During her 27 years with the IRS she was acclaimed for many "firsts."

The first black woman in the Management Training Program, the first black woman manager in the Los Angeles District and the Western Region, the first Equal Employment Opportunity Coordinator, the first black Office Audit Branch Chief, and the first woman to chair the Federal Executive Board EEO Council for over 100 Federal Agencies in the Los Angeles area.

She sponsored the first Seminar for Professional Women in the IRS and the first International Women's Year Proclamation Day at the Los Angeles Convention Center. She has brought to the service many programs in conjunction with the Los Angeles City

Board of Education, city of Los Angeles and the State of California.

Adeline has received the United States Secretary of Treasury Award, Distinguished Federal Employee Award and Women of the Year, to name but a few.

Her career has been one of initiating and implementing programs to assist and promote better human relations and career opportunities in addition to her management responsibility.

Her first supervisor opened the evening reminiscing the days of no automation in the service.

He was entertaining as he spoke of her diligence and dedication. Three District Directors recalled "The Adeline They Knew" while Ella K. Mays, Public Relation Consultant and friend shared her association about the family and Adeline's community involvement.

Henry Talbert, National Urban League Western Region Executive Director spoke eloquently of her work with the Urban League on the National, Regional and Local level.

The Master of Ceremonies shared experts of many congratulatory letters received from District Directors throughout the nation and the Regional Commissioner of Internal Service.

Adeline was presented a Resolution of Appreciation for her Community Service from Mayor Tom Bradley, city of Los Angeles; a Plaque for Outstanding Leadership and Community Service from Councilman David Cunningham of the 10th district, a plaque from the IRS-Western Region for untiring efforts in furtherance of Equal Employment Opportunity, a plaque for Outstanding Performance in Human Relations from Ella K. Mays and the Albert Gallatin Award given by the U.S. Department of Treasury for Meritorious Public Service.

She was presented gifts from the National Association of University Women, The Association for the Improvement of Minorities, her grandchildren and friends.

A beautiful bouquet of red roses was presented by her son on behalf of her three children who were all present. Dr. Shirley Bailey, of Los Angeles, Carolyn Booker of Harrington Park, New Jersey and Limuary A. Jordan, Jr. of Ringwood, New Jersey. Also present were her son-in-law Dr. Henry Dan Bailey, grandchildren Pamela, Patricia and Danny Bailey and Kimberly Jordan.

The affair was a gala evening spent with friends, employees and retirees sharing the good ole days and dancing to the music of Hugh Bell.

upon was to threaten a veto if the anti-busing amendment was not withdrawn," explained Hooks. The political ploy proved effective and the rider was vetoed separately from the bill and was not overridden, although Senator Jesse Helms claimed that he had sufficient votes to override the veto.

Monday, December 1, Mr. Hooks found time to grant an interview with Dean Brelis of Time Magazine on the expected impact of a Republican-controlled Congress.

Besides lobbying for fair housing and against anti-busing riders, Hooks and his NAACP staff spent many hours in conference developing strategies aimed at enhancing NAACP accomplishments during the 1980s, gearing up for the advent of a new Republican Administration and Congress.

While hopping back and forth between NAACP Headquarters in New York City and Washington, D.C., Hooks also met with the 50-member Commission For An Agenda For The 80s with which he acts as chairman of the Committee on Social Justice, Civil Rights and Education. The Commission worked on its agenda, expected to be published in January, to ensure that the language and sentiments expressed would uphold the best interests of Democracy. The Commission has four other black members: Carl Holman; Dorothy Height; Addie Wyatt; and Marian Edelman.

Executive Director Hooks allowed a Swedish television team to follow him about for several days, documenting his staff and lobbying efforts for WDOV-TV of Sweden. The Swedish reporting team chose Hooks because of the scope of his impact on American and international race relations.

Hooks also saluted AT&T president William Ellinghaus at a black-tie reception at the Waldorf-Astoria's Grand Ballroom. The "Spirit of the City" gala, sponsored by the Cathedral of St. John The Divine, honored Ellinghaus for his many contributions to the community, including support of minorities.

While bustling amongst the corporate heads attending the December 1 festivities, Mr. Hooks made sure that the NAACP success story on civil rights reached the ears of the movers and shakers of commerce and industry in preparation for a planned wide-scale Corporate contribution drive coming in the first quarter of 1981.

Hooks also found time to be a member of a dinner committee which honored Lane Kirkland, former president of the United Auto Workers, and present a special medallion to Thomas

Murphy, retiring chairman of General Motors, at two affairs while in Washington. The NAACP executive director was one of eight black leaders attending the Murphy tribute. Hooks commended Murphy for his part in kicking-off the first NAACP corporate donation dinner of 1975. Abe Venable, director of Urban Affairs at General Motors, joined Murphy in arranging that appeal for contributions for then-director, Roy Wilkins.

The primary attempt at raising new funds garnered some $362,000 for the NAACP.

Murphy, 65, retires from his GM post January 1. His final act before the Board of General Motors was to offer a report on what measure could be taken by the auto company to increase the number of its dealerships run by blacks. Mr. Hooks told the audience of 150 civil rights and business leaders at the Murphy luncheon at the Washington Hilton that "except for President Carter, I know of no other white man in this nation able to gather together such a contingent of black leaders."

LOOK ON SPORTS

As the year 1980 closed out, Northwestern University made some real news by hiring two of the youngest people to head the athletic department and coach the football team in the history of the Big Ten conference.

The AD is around thirty three and the head football coach is thirty one. The thing I liked about the story was the fact that nowhere in it was the mention of the fact that Dennis Green, former Iowa University back of the Nagel period was or is black. Ron Maley wrote a pretty factual story in the Register, and he must have struggled mightily to try to keep away from the mention of Green's race, but it did slip out.

Green was at Iowa during the tenure of Ray Nagel as football coach, and most of the black players thought they weren't being given a fair shake, and decided to boycott the team. That made football captain Larry Furgeson, a black player very big in the eyes of lots of people of both races. When the blacks came to Larry and wanted him to join them, he told them that while he knew their problems and was very much in sympathy with them, he was captain of the entire team and not just the black players.

Well, the boycott was resolved after a while and it was decreed that the fellows would have to be voted back on the team by the rest of them. Some made it back and some didn't, but Green, one of the boycotters did, and became outstanding for that year. He had been an assistant coach at Stanford and really thinks he can turn the Northwestern football program around.

Really, there seems to be nowhere to go but up, so maybe he can do the job. I would guess he will need at least five years and some good luck with recruiting. The big danger is that the people won't say much while he is around, but will do all they can to disrupt his program behind his back.

The other day I read an article in the paper that one of the white players is considering a boycott of white players against the man, and he hasn't even arrived on the campus yet. If the Northwestern supporters can forget the man's race or color and do what they can to support him, he might make it, and failing, should be able to say he had a fair shot at it.

But can he stay there five years? No coach in the conference has ever had as much pressure on him as there will be on Green. Injuries to key players won't be counted as reasons for whatever failures he has, nor will anything else.

Wisconsin broke the ice when they hired a black head basketball coach, but he had his troubles and they were not all with the team, but with the alumni.

Black Folk In American Civilization

Afro-American
Yuletide Traditions

If black Americans were still in the "Motherland," they might expect to see a lot of children wearing masquerades celebrating the yuletide season. They might also expect to eat Egusi Soup which is made by greasing the inside of a pot with palm oil and adding egusi (melon seeds) but not frying it, just melting it before adding water.

Then add meat and fish which has already been boiled in a separate pot. When the soup has boiled for at least ten minutes or so, season to one's taste with pepper, salt and onions. Just before the soup is almost done, add vegetables. This soup is served with pounded yams, garri or any other suitable food.

Traditionally in Nigeria, the preferable meat would be from a freshly killed goat. It is a season of traditional dances, traditional dress, inter-village visiting, and outside of the urban centers, one might find women painting their bodies with indigo dye for Christmas. Usually, no cassava except yams can be cooked during the Christmas season.

For New Year's, one of the traditions involves taking the ashes from the fire place and throwing them out across the gate of the home on New Year's Eve (midnight) to mark the end of the year.

But since black people have been in the United States, they have established a few traditions of their own to celebrate the birth of the Christ Child and the ending of one year and the beginning of another.

Although Christmas carols are sung the world over by all people, black folk in America have come up with a few carols all of their own. In church, one hears the familiar Negro Spiritual "Go Tell It On The Mountains." Then since the 1950's, the gospel "Jesus, Oh What A Wonderful Child" usually is wailed until there is hardly a dry eye to be found.

If, however, one doesn't make it to church to show off one's Christmas frocks (new dresses, new hats, shoes, etc.) on the streets, especially near the bars and down in the bottoms, one can hear Charles Brown doing his thing with "Please come home for Christmas, and if not for Christmas, by New Year's eve."

Another tune being blasted across the sound waves would be B. B. King singing "Merry Christmas Baby, May the Christmas bring you happiness." One finds as a central theme of these tunes a man having trouble with his woman and sort of pleading with her that of all times, please be his during this season.

Intellectuals are well aware that Christmas is a very depressing season and usually carries with it an increase in suicides. Folks suddenly discover an inner emptiness. Black folks too have felt this, but for the common man, the love of his woman was usually one means of filling this void. However, if this and all else failed, then one went out and got knee-buckling drunk.

When one becomes somewhat "seditty" and Lowell Folsom, B. B., and Charles Brown are beneath them, he or she has always had Nat King Cole to croon to them about chestnuts roasting on an open fire and jack frost nipping at their nose.

But for some folks, Christmas meant going into town on Christmas eve and seeing all the toys in the store windows you know you could never have. The material things you would go without. However, when you returned home, you sat up almost all night helping mama bake sweet potato pies, pecan pies, lemon pies, a jelly cake, a coconut cake, a plain cake, and a big old hen.

And somehow you forgot about those songs you had heard in town — "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas," or "Silver Bells." Dad sat around the wood burning heater eating "nigger heels," and occasionally nodding as he read the Bible and called

What with the mood of the country, being split into so many different fragments, I would have to say that Mr. Green will have rough going, and may not make it.

Then I watched the playoffs in professional football and the last game of the season between the Chicago Bears and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. There wasn't one mention in any of the papers I read about the opposing quarter backs being black and both played the entire game. Up till last year people were saying that blacks couldn't play quarterback in the NFL.

But the only man who didn't believe that was Coach John McKay of the Bucs. Another coach would have probably sacked Doug Williams because the team was losing, but McKay insisted that Williams was his man and stuck with him. Now, it looks as if he is bout to be proved right.

Vince Evans of the Bears got his chance when the other two quarterbacks had their problems. How do you fault a thrower when the pass catcher keeps dropping passes, but they were blamed. I saw Evans when he was with USC and I was struck with the fact that he could call signals, but could also carry the ball and block. With him in there the Trojans had a real four man backfield and with a pulling guard, five blockers. Now we can sit back and see what 1981 brings.

you in every now and then to help him pronounce some word that neither of you quite understood.

On Christmas morning, everybody slept late, but you finally got up and helped finish the cooking while nibbling on apples, oranges, bananas, candy and nuts. Finally, everybody sat at the table and daddy prayed until he went into tears. You didn't quite understand why he cried.

As you grew older, you realized that, in part, he cried because he began thinking about how inadequate he was as a man in that he was unable to give his family the material things he had wanted to give them, but at the same time he was thankful to God that all of the members of the family were in good health, were warm, and had plenty of food. Therefore, tomorrow, there was hope.

It has also been a rural tradition that folks go from house to house sampling each other's food, and everybody greet each other by trying to beat the next one to say "Christmas Give (gift)!" The reply is "Hand it here!" Folks would hide behind doors just to surprise each other.

On New Year's eve, there is a tradition in the black community to go to "Watch Meeting" to watch the old year out and the new one in. At the strike of midnight, everybody goes into prayers. Then one goes home and prepares food which will include black-eyed peas and hog jowl.

This is suppose to bring good luck. On New Year's day, folks go visiting neighbors and they all have fun just sitting around telling "lies" about the past and simply enjoying each other's company.

Today, black people don't have to think about being called up to the "big house" on Christmas morning and being rewarded as their ancestors were during slavery.

Women who had been good producers received red bandanas and the "good" boys received some of massa's old hand-me-downs and rot'gut whiskey. Today is a new day. Let us, therefore, love each other and work toward giving our children and their children a better tomorrow.

Merry Christmas! Happy Kwanza! Happy New Year!
