Knowledge Is Power Says Dr. Thomas At Family Seminar

"... We must create an attitude in our youngsters that says 'I am the most magnificent creature on the face of this earth and there is nothing I cannot do if I make up my mind to do it.'" — Dr. Arthur Thomas, Central State Univ.

Wilberforce, Ohio

In an inspiring, two-day appearance in Des Moines last week, Dr. Arthur Thomas, author, educator, worker, stressed the message that "Knowledge is Power." The more children recognize that fact, the more secure will be the future of blacks in this country, Thomas said.

Thomas, 42, is vice president of academic affairs at Central State University in Wilberforce, Ohio, his alma mater. For the past four years he has hosted the public affairs program, "Like It Is," a provocative interview show broadcast in 50 midwestern cities. Key black figures and other names in the news have been his guests, and the best of those interviews will be published in a book later this year.

Thomas stirred a receptive audience at the Tiny Tot Multicultural Center Thursday Feb. 26 with a fiery speech that emphasized the need for strengthening family bonds, and the importance of getting the most out of an education.

In an interview the following day at the new Urban Campus Center, Thomas expanded upon his theme.

"The most critical problem facing our people is a need for hope," said Thomas.

"This is not the time for black people to be conservative. This is the time for us to go back and utilize and exercise all of the strategies and knowledge given to us by our forefathers from the kings of Mali and Ghana right on down through Malcolm X and Martin Luther King Jr...."

Though there have been and are obstacles in this society, namely racism, that have stunted progress, Thomas said often those very obstacles are used as a crutch or excuse for some blacks not to struggle for the advancement of the race.

"White people are responsible for and guilty of outright racism in trying to deny to us the rights that are constitutionally and God-given..."

"On the other hand," continued Thomas, "White people are not keeping us out of the library; they are not preventing us from reading nine books while others read two; they are not forcing us to, at least directly, manipulate to do psychological and physical harm to each other."

No one can tell black people where to put their money — some $125 billion annually as a group, Thomas added. He urged that pocketbooks be opened for black colleges, churches, voter registration, and be donated also to institutions and organizations that "will positively affect our people for generations to come."

Workshop Examines Black Male/Female Relationships

A three-hour workshop last week on the reconstruction of family life sparked lively discussion on a most touchy topic: Black male / female relationships. Candid and emotional exchanges between the some 20 participants yielded key ingredients for the building blocks for healing relationships — communication, sensitivity, and compromise.

The workshop held Feb. 28 was part of the Ethnic Family conference sponsored by the Carter G. Woodson Cultural Center for Human Achievement. The program was part of the Black History Month celebration.

Augustine Wright, associate dean of students at Iowa State University in Ames, and Russell Pounds, economics professor at ISU, chaired the workshop.

The discussion was not without disagreement. However, few left the affair without the feeling that substance and headway was gained from the exchange of philosophies. One participant, summing up the workshop, said improved relations with black men and women hold the key to survival of the black family, which faces the "Threat of extinction."

The workshop was constructed upon pillars of "Exploring Your Relationship" through: Awareness of yourself, positive relationships; recognizing behavior you would like to change; influences on how we are raised and how we react in later life; and the course of winding in and out of relationships.

For some, the workshop might have served as "therapy," in identifying and getting in touch with dormant, deep-felt feelings, venting anger that can be destructive in a relationship, and seeing the need to reconcile for statements or actions made in the past that were not intended, but did occur.

Some of the "nutrients for a good love relationship" pointed out in the workshop were: love, understanding, acceptance, respect, trust, communication, approval, laughter, emotional support, friendship, and sexual satisfaction. The absence of one or more of the ingredients might be the pitfall of a relationship, most participants agreed.

Participants discussed the role of mass media, particularly television, in influencing personal values and behavior — in roles played by men and women, and in the increase of the number of interracial relationships in the society.

There was consensus that decision-making responsibility in marriages was a key in the success of a relationship. Compromise and communication are vital in reaching decisions on most matters, one participant said.

Another stressed that if one doesn't feel good about his or herself, then it is difficult for that individual to relate to his or her mate.

There was unanimous agreement on a point advanced that there is a need to build community institutions that will offset the influences of powerful institutions, such as media, that tend to divide blacks and turn one against the other.

In the morning workshop, "A General Look at Parenting," chaired by psychologist Etta K. Brown, participants addressed the issues of disciplining children, effective communication with children, parental stress, and other issues. Those attending indicated that the workshop, too, was beneficial and enlightening.

Rhomania

Epsilon Theta Sigma, local chapter of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority will present their second "Rhomania", Saturday, March 7, at 8:00 p.m. in the North High Auditorium.

This year the theme is the Celebration. The program is dedicated to the Black Family cultural and educationally, with a local dynamic cast of singers, dancers, and very talented speaker.

Jack & Jill

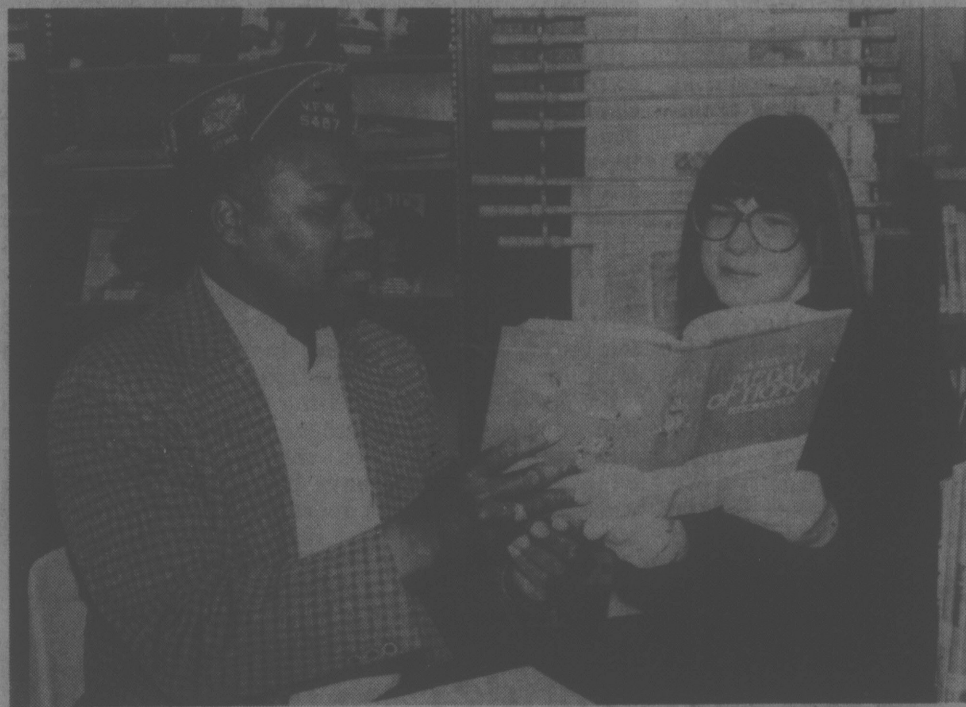

Variety Show

The Des Moines Chapter Of Jack And Jill Of America will be presenting their first annual variety show this Saturday night, March 7th from 5 to 6 pm in the auditorium at Tiny Tots Multicultural Center at 16th & Forests streets.

There is no admission fee and the public is cordially invited to see and hear fine entertainment from the talented kids of our black Des Moines community!

Director of the Broadway show is Reginald Byrd, native of Waterloo, Iowa. Byrd has directed on many occasions here in Des Moines at the Community Playhouse and in his hometown.

Musical director again this year is Mr. Terry Shane, who did an outstanding job last year, returning this year with a marvelous combo and vocal group. If you miss this year's show you are missing one of the most exciting nights of your life.

Last week Ted Carr, Quartermaster, represented VFW Post No. 5487, the Roy Leonard Rollen Post, in presenting the book, AMERICA'S MEDAL OF HONOR RECIPIENTS to Librarian Linda Thelsen Roberts for the Mid City Library at 1305 University.

The book contains a complete listing of Medal of Honor citations; Mrs. Roberts stated that the handsome red, white and blue book would be "a wonderful addition to the Reference collection of the Library."

The Medal of Honor, often called the Congressional Medal of Honor, was established in 1861; and first was given in 1863. The lead of establishing the medal was taken by Senator James W. Grimes of Iowa, Chairman of the Senate Naval Committee.

The Medal is presented for individual gallantry at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty.

Those who have received the medal since it was established have worn the uniform of all the branches of the service and have been of all races. 3411 have been awarded; 49 have been Iowans; 14 people have won it twice.

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

Seeing the old Interracial Commission and a couple of the key members in one of the recent Bystanders took me back a few years. George Webber, General Secretary of the YMCA was one of the principal organizers, and I remember some of the names on it.

Names like J. B. Morris, Archie Alexander, Reverend G. W. Robinson and such. The first president was a Mr. Steeper, principal of North High school. I mention these two because they gave me some food for thought.

In those late twenties and early thirties, the YMCA had a cafeteria and everybody who could went there to eat. I was working downtown so I went there too. The first few times I went there, Mr. Webber sat down beside me and ate while we made small talk. I went every day, and finally one day Mr. Webber asked me if I would get angry if he asked me a question that been bothering him.

I said shoot away and he asked me if I didn't feel out of place among all of those white people and I the only black person alone there. I told Mr. Webber that I considered myself as good as anybody in that room, no matter what color they were, and I didn't have any other feelings about it, because I had come for the same reason the other people had come; to eat. I kept going there, but I never saw Mr. Webber again.

Then there was Mr. Steeper. In those days the Des Moines high schools had a social hour and the kids danced for a while after school on Fridays. It was only natural that some whites and black kids were going to dance together.

Well, I heard this from several kids of both races and at different times. Mr. Steeper called an assembly and told the kids that the races were not supposed to mix. "You stay on your side and we stay on ours." He didn't want to see any more mixed dancing at the socials and if he did the dancers would pay dearly.

Then we had a youth conference at the Y Camp. There were about seventy five white kids and two blacks and I was one of them. Well, the discussion that day was on race relations for about an hour. Mr. Steeper was our leader, and for most of the hour he talked and the questions of my companion and me were brushed aside as if they had never been asked. He had nothing against Negroes as we were called then. Some of his best friends were Negroes, men like Rev. Robinson, J. B. Morris, Alexander and some others. But he wouldn't want one of them living in his neighborhood or as a guest at his dinner table.

Those things just didn't fit in that way of thinking. I couldn't get anybody to believe my story when I got back to town. I didn't try too hard, because he was who he was and everybody agreed, a fine man. So I let it drop. Then came the surprise.

Some time after that, the Ku Klux Klan tried to take over the school board. They had gotten into the city government and wanted more. Well, sir, Mr. Webber and Mr. Steeper led the fight against the Klan. They fanned out over the city and spoke at every black church in town, urging people, "For God's sake, get out and vote and beat those fellows."

The entire interracial group canvassed the city and the result was the largest vote turnout for a school election in Des Moines history up to that time. The Kluxers were soundly trounced and sent back to their rat holes.

I often thought about the side of Webber and Steeper that it seemed that only I had seen. Why? I didn't understand it then, but in later years I did.

With so many people, folks of another color or nationality are all right, friends. But in their place. So I figured that was the trouble with Webber and Steeper. And lots of people feel like that today. People don't change.

BROWN V THE J.H. BELL COMPANY AND F.J. LANE

Throughout my discussion of the Bell case, I maintained that the ruling which I discussed in preceding weeks was that of a majority of the Court (3 out of 5) which made it the official ruling of the Iowa Supreme Court in this case. There were two justices who did not agree with the ruling of the majority filed a ruling based upon their feelings in the case, and, in this opinion (a dissenting opinion), they present a more seasoned argument which seems to be more in harmony with the expressed legislative intent (that all provisions and proceedings under the Code shall be liberally construed with a view to promote its objects and assist the parties in obtaining justice).

Their reasoning is important, in view of the prior case law, in understanding somewhat the social attitudes and divisions within the white community in Iowa and across the nation regarding blacks during the years immediately preceding the First World War. Justices Evans and Weaver, who joined in the dissenting opinion (although Evans wrote it) provide sharp contrast with those concepts and arguments that the majority of the Court uses to justify its position.

The issue, determined by the lower court arose upon plaintiff's demurer to defendant's answer. From both petition and answer it appears that defendant Lane was in charge of a certain booth of the Des Moines Pure Food Show. It was affirmed in the answer, however, that this booth was leased by J.H. Bell Company from the Des Moines Retail Grocers' Association, and that neither the defendant Lane nor J.H. Bell Company had any control over any other part of the pure food show.

Further, it was noted that they were serving coffee at such booth simply for the purpose of advertisement for such persons as seemed to them profitable. This allegation, he noted, gave the majority an open door through which it permitted the defendant to escape. It was admitted that the service of coffee was refused to plaintiff because she was colored, and she was so informed at the time.

The fact that a contract existed between the Des Moines Retailers' Association and J.H. Bell Company defining their mutual rights and obligations contains in it no element of a defense to this action. So far as the public was concerned the pure food show was one

I am so glad I didn't let household chores keep me from attending the afternoon session of the all-day Family Conference, February 28th, jointly sponsored by the Carter G. Woodson and Tiny Tot Centers at Irving-Nash Multi-cultural Center, 16th and Forest Ave.

I very much regret having missed the morning session on parenting. Dr. Etta M. Brown, school psychologist, an important asset to our community - a truly dynamic person was the presenter.

The afternoon session was under way when I joined the group. The topic of the afternoon was Nutrients For A Good Love Relationship man / woman relationship as friends, as lovers, as partners. The question of open and honest communication received top priority as essential to a successful relationship.

Four large sheets had been circulated before my arrival. Each person wrote on each sheet their definition of happiness is ————.

The second sheet is circulation contained a sentence to be completed, "The thing I most desire from my special friend / spouse" is ————.

The third sheet received responses to the meaning of acceptance as encouragement, psychological, spiritual, and trust. I was supplied a list of eleven nutrients or ingredients of a good love relationship. Love, understanding, acceptance, respect, trust, communication, approval, laughter, emotional support, friendship, sexual satisfaction.

These are my observations and responses to the session. I was pleased to be included by a younger generation of my sisters and brothers. I very much admired Dr. Augustine Wright's calm and gentle technique for keeping the discussion on target.

It was gratifying to realize that women are interested and able to get together to discuss their feelings in the presence of men who are also trying to sort out their feelings. That is really progress in human relations. I am sure such discussions can go far in improving the quality of family life.

I believe that after reading a disturbing piece of information, namely, the family is a scene of much violence in this country.

A most interesting discussion of the portrayal, if at all, of Black people on TV and in the movies came up in the discussion of Black men's expectations of Black women. Prof. Russell Pound, Iowa State University explained the powerful influences at work on our subconscious.

TV and the movies define standards of beauty as white. Prof. Pound cautioned both men and women about stereotypes and generalities in our thinking.

Time ran out and it was not possible to explore this somewhat complicated situation more thoroughly. My daughters speak of the problem as it relates to both Black and White men. I think it might be very helpful to talk about feelings after a bit of background in terms of history as reflected in laws over most of the United States.

For example, the laws in the period of slavery clearly reveals the fact that white women were far from free in spite of the romantic illusions of magnolia blossoms and wealth concealing the fact that her husband could legally turn her out of the house without her children and her personal belongings!

This situation was possible where there was suspicion of intimacies with a male slave or the wife was being difficult by objecting to her husband keeping a slave concubine in the mansion.

The last laws against intermarriage in the U.S. were erased from state law as late as 1960, I believe. There is a 'witches' brew behind the tensions of racism. We need to understand its ingredients because "He (or she) who does not know the past is condemned to repeat it."

Brannan Explains Polk Budget

Dear Editor:

February and March are the months of the government budget season. It is during this period that the public attention focuses on how much a government plans to spend in the coming year. More importantly, the public focuses its attention on how much governments plan to take from citizens in the form of taxes. In our community during this time of expectations, anticipations, and projections, there is one certainty. At least one government will spend less of your money next year than they did this year — Polk County.

The 1981-82 Polk County Budget of $61,007,400 is over $3.2 million less than the current year. Because of this, if you own a home or business in one of the cities and towns of Polk County, the amount of your money taken by County Government to support this budget for each $1,000 of property valuation will go down. In fact, the total reduction in spending will be more than 5% and comes in spite of double digit inflation, spiralling increases in fuel and other energy costs, and a substantially increased demand on and for County services.

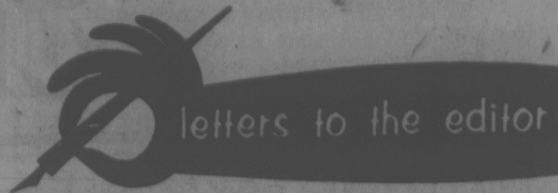

A comparison of Polk County's 5% decrease in spending with the actions of other governments dramatically demonstrates the significance of this action. Governor Robert Ray's proposed "austere" State Budget calls for an increase in spending of 4%. And, President Ronald Reagan's "dramatically reduced" Federal Budget provides for an increase in spending of almost 5%. Clearly, the Polk County Board of Supervisors has led the way in effective fiscal management.

This success was achieved by the Board through the implementation of a budget philosophy that had its foundation in two concepts: 1) that any increase in County askings or in the tax rate would be held to the absolute minimum necessary to maintain the existing level and quality of services provided to our citizens, and 2) that any additional personnel in County government would be authorized only where there was demonstrated an absolutely compelling reason for such an increase. These and other objectives were not only met, but exceeded. In addition to the overall reduction of more than 5% in proposed expenditures, the County payroll was cut.

The Board of Supervisors actions will create difficult challenges for County Government but the Board is determined to continue to provide essential services of the highest quality at even greater levels of efficiency. We believe the taxpayers expect and deserve no less.

This Wednesday, March 11, 1981, at 6 p.m. in Room 120, of the Polk County Administrative Office Building, the Board will hear public comment on the proposed budget. Copies of this proposal are available through the County Finance Department, Room 340 of the Administrative Office Building. I urge individuals and organizations to obtain a copy of this document and to attend the Public Hearing on Thursday evening.

Sincerely,
Richard Brannan, Chairman
Polk County Board of Supervisors

Dear Editor:

I want to commend your paper for the very fine coverage and attention that was given to Brotherhood Week in your 2/19/81 publication.

I am grateful that your staff finds it fitting and important to stress the concepts of improved human relations at this time in conjunction with the National Conference of Christians and Jews observance of Brotherhood / Sisterhood Week.

Your paper is certainly a leader in portraying the fine concepts and purpose of this annual observance.

enterprise. The fact that many persons representing many lines of goods participated in the enterprise did not in any sense destroy its unity.

Though there were many booths, they became voluntarily a part of the greater unit. Without the booths, there could be no "show", and without the "show", there would be no booths. The argument of the majority separates the defendants' booth from the larger unit, and then holds that it was not such a place of "refreshment" as is contemplated in the statute.

The Pure Food Show, he felt, addressed itself to the public as a quasi-public exhibition. It set dates and collected an admission fee at its gates. It necessarily consisted of many parts. Its methods of exhibition of pure foods naturally appealed to the sense of taste. Whatever may be said of the booth of the J.H. Bell Company if it had been a separate and independent entity, he continued, the pure food show in its entirety partook of the character of a place of entertainment and amusement as well as a place where refreshments were served.

But those who stay in the middle or at the bottom of the ladder have never learned to handle ideas!!!! God gives us what we need — but many of us don't know what to do with it after they get it!!

light, And joy its own security."

W. Wordsworth
Last Sunday, Rev. Grady reminded us that we were about to approach the Lenten Season. So, his sermon was, "Toward Calvary". Lenten Season should be a period of repentance — "It's Me, O Lord, Standing In The Need Of Prayer" — I need your Divine Grace. All we have to do is to remember that Jesus forgives us of our past, if we look to Him to be saved.

Rev. J. Allen Parker, of Detroit, Michigan, will be our guest speaker this coming Sunday. He will, also, be participating in the Presiding Elder's District Conference at Bethel A.M.E. Church, March 5-7.

Thanks to Sister Jeannette Spencer for initiating an Over - night Sunday School Retreat, last Saturday, with the theme: "The Meaning of Communion. It was a Christian family of 46 children and 20 adults experiencing togetherness with love in all activities.

Shepherding God's children and surveying their sleeping bodies at 5:00 a.m., I realized the true responsibility and the need of dedicated teachers giving them basic, formative Christian background to face the outside world. Your reward comes from knowing you are God's helper.

Wasn't it beautiful to see Brother William Weathers, Jr. at the Chili Supper, after 4 months in the hospital from having three - plus major operations? God works wonders. Sister Sarah Tucker received a beautiful invitation from God to come and live with Him.

If an individual's nature is to find fault, it strains Christian love to accept corrective suggestions, positively, from that person.

"A SONG TO REMEMBER"

Submitted by Evangelist, T.R. Brown

"YOU DON'T KNOW ME LIKE THE LORD DO"

You may watch the way I walk, You listen to me talk (that's the way your friends do).

You may try to see all my faults, (every - time my back is turned)

You may say my friends are few (But oh) You don't know me like the Lord Do!

When I am smiling thru tears - You don't know about it.

When I give up the right for wrong

When I walk the floor all night long. (You don't know about it)

You don't know me like the Lord do!

NEW FRIENDSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

Praise God from whom all blessings flow! We must continue to be steadfast, unmovable and abiding in the Word of God if we are to make it thru this Christian warfare.

These are the encouraging words by our Pastor, Elder Richard Daye, on Sunday morning. His subject was, "We Must be Steadfast". He delivered the Word of God thru the anointing of the Holy Spirit telling us how to be steadfast. After the morning message and prayer a backslider came back to the Lord. PRAISE HIM!

Could you believe we could actually surprise our Social Mistress? Juanita Burke stepped out of the meeting room, her picture was snapped and before she could recover, there was her sister, Mrs. Minnie Clyde, putting the finishing touches on a table of snacks for every one to enjoy. Turning back to education, Thomas said, "We have to start identifying professions for our youngsters in Kindergarten, first, second and third grades. We have to develop a comprehensive program designed to prepare X number of biological engineers, X number of genetic researchers, X number of oceanographers, X number of petroleum engineers ... This is the road I think we have to take."

"If we had 60 Percent of the engineers, 60 percent of the researchers and 60 percent of the experts of transplanting various organs of the body, that would have more long term impact on black folks than having X percent of the players in the NBA, the NBA, and professional baseball," Thomas asserted.

Thomas is author of a publication that will be on the market in September called "Future Shock From a Black Perspective." In it, he addresses many of the issues he feels are crucial to the survival of blacks in the 1990s and 21st century.

"I agree with Sam Yette, author of 'The Choice: The Issue of Black Survival in America,'" said Thomas. "Black people are no longer necessary to large number of Americans — there is no more cotton to pick, there are no more ditches to dig. We are viewed by them as obsolete and there are various strategies being devised to eliminate us, either physically or psychologically, or both."

"The issue is, what do we do about it," Thomas added. "How will we be affected by mind manipulation, oceanography, various advances in medicine, cloning, and cloud seeding, in a world in which food is becoming very scarce."

"We have to understand that we are fighting for our very hard lives. The battle will be won by the number of PhDs we get in the sciences, in business, in computer science. We must prepare a place for our people in space, prepare a place in the ocean, where people very well could be living in future years."

Asked about the coming meat - cleaver cuts in social programs by the Reagan Administration and the belief some hold that blacks rely too much on the federal government, Thomas replied:

"I have a problem with this 'government handout, government intervention' business," said Thomas. "I think they're code names for racism. What they're saying is that it's OK for white folks to get subsidies and OK for them to get guaranteed loans, but it is wrong for a black woman to get a $150 a month check because she has been denied access to work opportunity."

Said Thomas: "Whites rely too much on government handouts. The Maritime Industry relies too much on government handouts, just as Chrysler, Lockheed, Amtrak and Iowa farmers rely on government handouts." He said when large corporations receive loans when they are on the brink of financial disaster, it is in fact welfare.

Thomas had this message to share also: "I want to emphasize that I have great hope for America. To quote James Baldwin, 'I love America ... and it is precisely for this reason that I reserve the right to criticize her perpetually.'"

"If you have a 5 year old child and the child runs into the street while the light is red, you spank the child, not because you hate the child, but because you love the child, and you want the child to develop the maximum of his or her potential."

"The issue here is we must struggle, we must criticize, we must do everything we can to ensure that America lives up to her potential — for everybody," concluded Thomas.

Thomas was part of a program, "All in The Family," sponsored by the Carter G. Woodson Cultural Center for Human Achievement, as part of Black History Month celebration.

Also included on the program Feb. 26 were performances by the Langston Hughes Company of Players, the Gateway Dance Theatre, and a crowd - pleasing performance by the Westbrook Family of East Moline, Ill.

The talent - laden gospel group launched into several harmonious songs of worship, including a tribute to Martin Luther King. The performance sparked spirited crowd participation and resembled a church revival. They will return to Des Moines April 27 for an appearance at Hoyt Sherman Place.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

One last shot at the wrestling game as compared to what we have today. In my day the rules for professional and amateur wrestling were identical. In fact, several of us including me, used to wrestle in amateur meets at the old YMCA one night and appear in professional shows around town during the same week.

In our amateur matches there were usually two judges who decided on the winner. If my amateur matches had been close, I might have been an ex-champ. But, I was lucky enough to end all of my matches by falls so they didn't have to make any decisions.

We wrestled for ten minutes straight through with no rest period. If at the end of the ten minute session they couldn't agree on a winner, you wrestled five more minutes.

There was no time limit on professional matches unless the limit was agreed on before the match. So you struggled on the mat until someone got a fall or gave up. The usual match ran from forty five minutes to anywhere from one hour to two hours.

There was no rest period until after the first fall and that was ten or fifteen minutes. I can't remember what holds were barred. It seems that we used them all as both pros and amateurs.

Now there are so many things that are illegal that if I turned the clock back about fifty years, I wouldn't stand a chance against these school wrestlers. I watched some of the state high school wrestling and the matches were a lot livelier than were the college matches the week before.

The metro conference basketball race is over and Lincoln came away with the boys' crown outright and a share of the girls' title. Let's hope they can do well in the coming state meets if they get there. I remember when we used to take our teams from the Crocker Y to play in the city amateur basketball tournament, we were in trouble because most of the other teams could beef up their teams with high school players and we couldn't.

There just weren't that many blacks playing high school ball. You look over the fellows playing on the different schools today and you could field a team that would win some games if they didn't win the meet, which I doubt they would do. And you might come up with a pretty fair girl's team from the high schools.

What is to be said about the Big Three of the state? They all won, and now Iowa will have to win the Big Ten title on their own. They won't get any help from Indiana, so they better not drop one of their last two games.

This has been a funny season for the Big Ten. Teams that were supposed to be in contention suddenly dropped out, and Northwestern, the team that didn't figure to win a game, beat two of the teams that were supposed to be tough.

Someone said the other night they wondered how Mike McGee of Michigan, whose home is in Omaha, managed to get away from Lute Olson of Iowa. You will recall that Olson went after Isiah Thomas of Indiana too.

Now what would he have done with his present team and McGee and Thomas? A friend of mine who follows Big Ten athletics rather closely thinks he supplied the answer. He said that that would have made the Iowa team too black, champs or no champs. Not for the coach, but for the Iowa alumni and lots of the spectators.

I have found it to be somewhat like this: the first couple of years the fans are so happy to have a winner that they don't care who plays, but after another winning year, they begin to wonder why we have to have so many blacks. And a coach has to really believe in himself and his program to stand up to that pressure.

On March 20 there will be a meeting at the Logan Opportunity Center at 8 p.m. for those who are interested in helping to plan the second annual Y Camp reunion. You are all welcome, so don't say "I didn't know." The reunion is set for April 25 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., same place.
