Supreme Court Decision 'A Reality' Which Cannot Be Ignored—Wilkins

Chicago (ANP) — Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP and chairman of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, told the platform committee of the Democratic National Convention Friday that its 1956 platform will be "highly unrealistic, morally and politically," if it fails to recognize and pledge executive and legislative action to implement the U. S. Supreme Court ruling against public school segregation.

Speaking before a packed audience in the Mayfair Room of the Blackstone Hotel, where a 16-man committee has been hard at work all week drafting the party's platform, Wilkins declared:

"In the face of extremist resistance on the part of a minority which sets its archaic prejudices above loyalty to our country, it would be highly unrealistic and an evasion of responsibility to ignore the issue in the party platform, to act as if the Supreme Court had never ruled and as if its rulings were not being flouted.

"The party is confronted not only with a moral obligation, but also with a political imperative to affirm its support of the Supreme Court and to pledge unequivocally appropriate action to assure the implementation of the court's ruling 'with all deliberate speed.'"

Wilkins, at the same time, urged the committee to include in its 1956 platform proposals for:

(1) Ending racial segregation by pledging the federal government to act, and specifically to implement the Supreme Court school desegregation decision.

(2) Strengthening federal civil rights laws and providing additional machinery and authority for the Department of Justice.

(3) Protecting the right to vote.

(4) Enacting federal fair employment practices legislation

(5) Changing the Senate and House rules to eliminate the filibuster and the bottleneck in the House Rules Committee.

(6) Altering the method of selecting chairmen of Senate and House committees so as to eliminate seniority as the dominant factor in such selection.

"I have heard discussions as to whether the reiteration of the 1948 civil rights plank, or possibly that of 1952, would not represent a simple method for disposing of this problem," Wilkins said.

"It is hard for me to imagine this committee drafting a plank on foreign policy or domestic

The Whys and Wheres Of the Waterloo Star

by Thomas Norman

Necessity has and always will be the mother of invention and since we are not handicapped by language or territorial barriers, we shall use our freedom of speech and freedom of the press in an honest and sincere effort to help promote better race relations. No city, town, or hamlet can reach its maximum potential as long as any part of its population are rated as second class citizens.

It is altogether fitting, expedient, and proper that we should have a centralized means of communication in this vicinity, capable of bringing out our side of the news as to co-ordinate the people of this community in a greater effort to obtain more of the economical, political, and social benefits enjoyed by all citizens.

The wheel that never squeaks will never get oiled, and by the same token if you never ask for anything you will never get anything. It shall be our duty and intention to ask and seek and knock in places where the maximum benefits may be obtained and you may be sure that the voting records of all public representative of this county, city, and state will be published prominently where you the citizens shall be able to take due notice and so vote accordingly. Since Civil Rights legislation shall play a major role in shaping the destiny of our lives, it shall be our duty to inform you of the voting records of all legislators on a national level.

We have long advocated Waterloo as a diamond in the rough, but too many of the rough edges are concentrated in our section of the city. It shall be our sincere and earnest desire to help eliminate some of the rough edges which so many of us have, and are bruising ourselves against in our quest for equal job opportunities. In this our native land we believe that physical and mental ability alone should determine a man's position in life.

To our younger people we have this to say, "Prepare yourselves for whatever occupation you may desire and it shall become and is now our duty to intercede in your behalf that you may have the God-Given opportunity to practice in whatever field of endeavor you may choose. An educated people are easily lead, impossible to drive, and can never be enslaved.

The organizers of this newspaper are all local, tax-paying citizens with roots which are extended deep into this community and in each article, a brief history will be given of each of the seven organizers of this paper. Following is a list of the organizers of the Waterloo Star Incorp., all members of the Negro Associated Press; Albert Garrison, Cullen Crawford, Betty Hackett, Rev. George T. Stinson, Mack A. Butler, Robert Robinson, and Thomas Norman.

Of ourselves we can do little, but with your support and with the help of God all things are possible. We sincerely believe that you the citizens of this community will support the Waterloo Star 100 percent and all that we ask of you is to patronize the people who advertise in this paper for they are the people who help to make the Star a reality.

It is our sincere hope that Waterloo will be a better place in which to live because of the humble efforts of the Waterloo Star.

Sermon of The Week

by Rev. George T. Stinson, Jr.
 All Scripture is given by inspiration of God. — 11. Timothy, 111.16

Before considering any of the proofs of inspiration, we want first to know what inspiration is. Some people hold to what is called verbal inspiration, that is, that every word and syllable of the Bible was dictated to prophet and apostle by the Holy Spirit. But the Bible nowhere asserts that, nor has the church ever so declared. The difference in expression and style of the various writers, while recording the same truth, shows that the human character and culture were not nullified in the writer, but merely quickened by divine power and illumined by divine light.

The following is Bishop Westcott's definition of inspiration whose careful language I shall frequently copy. "By inspiration the writer's natural powers are quickened, so that he contemplates with divine intuition the truth as it exists, and by revelation the dark veil is removed from the face of things, so that the true springs and issues of life stand disclosed in their eternal nature.

"But however various the forms of inspired teaching may be, in one respect they are all similar. In every case the same twofold character is preserved which arises from the combination of the divine influence with the human utterance. The language of the lawgiver, the historian, the prophet, the psalmist, the apostle, is characteristic of the positions which they severally occupied. Even when they speak most emphatically the words of the Lord, they speak still as men living among men; and the eternal truths which declare receive the coloring of the minds through which they pass."

We proceed now to consider some of the reasons which assure us that God has communicated some of his plans and wishes to men in certain written documents which we call the Scriptures.

In the first place there is no reason from the nature of the thing against such a revelation; on the contrary it is a natural — almost necessary — corollary to the belief in a God. If we are satisfied that there is such a Being as God, who created the universe and placed upon the earth rational beings like ourselves, having the curiosity to inquire, the intellect to understand and the freedom to decide and act; what is more natural than to suppose that such a God would communicate to these intellectually the idea of inspiration offers no extraordinary difficulties. To enlarge, or inform, any gift is evidently a secondary operation of the same spirit should be brought into direct connection with the Spirit of God, than that one human mind should be able to exercise a sympathetic influence upon another."

The direct and incidental proofs of inspiration of Scripture are so numerous, varied and complete that it is simply impossible to give even a comprehensive glance at the whole in

Over the Back Fence

With Bob

GREETINGS:

My dear friends and neighbors, it is a great pleasure to be with you again, and to be privileged to chat with you once more over the old back fence.

I've missed you all, very much. I've missed looking into your beautiful faces, enjoying your sweet temperaments, and listening to your learned and intelligent conversations and opinions on various old and new topics. I've really missed all of that — and I'll bet that you have too.

But things really haven't changed too much, just a few faces, here and there. We're still griping and cussing, fighting, and fussing, loving, and wooing, billing, and cooing. It's still the same old Waterloo, unpredictable, and intolerable.

THE ONE AND ONLY

As I've said many times before, there is no other place in the world like Waterloo. It should be on a planet by itself. Things happen in Waterloo, that I believe I am safe in saying, do not happen anywhere else in the world. Per square inch, and per capita population, Waterloo is the darnest place in the universe.

ASK HIM, HE KNOWS

A well known big shot from the big city can very well attest to that fact that Waterloo is one heck of a place. He came to Waterloo, a while back, for a change, and a little rest. Well, the gamblers got most of the change the women got the rest.

TELL ME WHY

And another thing about Waterloo people, here, are always trying to borrow money from me. I wonder why. Is it because I look prosperous or do I look that much like a sucker? Well, in either case, looks are deceiving. All I've got to give away is lot of good advice. Otherwise, I'm as poor as a church mouse and as ragged as a barber shop mop.

WHAT'S GOOD FOR THE GOOSE

Haven't you run into this sort of thing, or are you guilty of it yourself? Anyhow, the other day I heard a fellow say, "If I ever catch my old lady in a joint like this, I'll break her neck." Well, if the place is that bad why doesn't he stay out of it, himself?

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

So many fellows are leaving town, and coming back married, it set me wondering, since there are so many lovely desirable women here, in Waterloo. So I asked one of these fellows, why. Now, this is his answer or alibi, if you may wish to call it that. He said that, because of the acute shortage of women in Waterloo, in comparison to the number of men, and also the women here thought themselves so cute and slick, he was forced to go out of town to get girl. Well, all I can say if this: If you get a girl from out of town, you'd better wise her up, before you bring her to Waterloo. Don't let her get to Waterloo, and then get wise, or you'll have to tie her down, shackle her, and send her back where she came from.

STOP, LOOK, AND LISTEN

A good listener makes a very popular person. Knowing when to talk and when to listen is an exceptionally valuable accomplishment. But a certain young lady must have been talking, when she should have been listening.

DISASTER WARNING

Folks, there's going to be a whole lot of fireworks around here, pretty soon. The storm clouds are gathering. And friends, I'm going to find myself a hole. Won't you join me? Be may guest.

a single discourse. We can merely direct your attention to some of the leading lines of proof — suggestively indicating something of what might be done in a fuller treatise.

One remarkable proof of inspiration is the unity of spirit, doctrine and practical precepts which prevades the Bible. Although consisting of sixty-six different books, composed by about forty different writers, scattered over the world from Rome to Arabia and Babylon; some of the authors writing in different parts of the world at the same time, and others separated in time by fifteen hundred years; these books at length brought together in one volume, make a complete treatise, perfectly consistent with itself in its statement of facts and principles. That is more than can be said of the works of any single voluminous author the world has ever produced. It is of itself a miracle, and utterly inexplicable on any other theory except that some subtle influence permeated all those writers, quickening their intuitions and guiding their thoughts. Take for instance the books of the New Testament; the four gospels written in different places by men of different character and opportunities — the 4 classes of epistles by at least five different writers — Acts of the Apostle, a historical link binding these together and all to the gospels — then the book Revelation giving a prophetic and typical view of the fortunes of the church to the end of time — these all brought together after several generations were found to fit into each other so perfectly that they form one treatise, connected in historical sequence and complete in its systematic development of Christian truth. "A passing hint may arouse inquiry on this topic, but nothing less than a patient and candid study of the Bible can convey any notion of the intimate relations which exist between its several parts."

The Bible stands, like some mighty rock, its angles and edges only softened and beautified by the waves which have beaten against it; but itself, in its power and spirit, strong and unimpaired, even as that foundation Christ Rock upon which it is built.

"Old Hickory," was the nickname of President Andrew Jackson.

Williams Incident Proves Jackie Robinson Right

Boston (ANP) — After 10 years of campaigning in the major league, Jackie Roosevelt Robinson, the first Negro to enter organized baseball, is still the target of unjust racial barbs.

Jackie himself proved that point with almost prophetic accuracy in replying to a southern sports writer who had termed him "... the most harmful influence" to the Negro race in sports.

Bill Keefe, sports editor of the Times-Picayune, New Orleans daily, had accused Robinson of being a "trouble-making Negro" whose conduct on the field caused a widening of the breach between Negroes and the white people.

In a recent column, Keefe wrote in connection with the recently passed Louisiana law banning racial mixing in sports:

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People can thank Jack Robinson, persistently insolent and antagonistic trouble-making Negro of the Brooklyn Dodgers," for the law.

"No ton of the most rabid segregationists accomplished as much as Robinson did in widening the breach between the white people and Negroes."

Robinson replied in a letter in which he underscored Keefe's subtle racial barb. Jackie wrote:

"You call me 'insolent.' I'll admit I have not been subservient, but would you use the same adjective to describe a white ballplayer — say, Ted Williams, who is, more often than I, involved in controversial matters?"

"Am I insolent, or am I merely insolent for a Negro (who has courage enough to speak against injustices such as yours and people like you?)"

The reference to Ted Williams proved Robinson's reasoning, for a few days later, the slugging outfielder was fined, $5,000 by the Boston Red Sox for what was generally considered as conduct unbecoming a ballplayer on the field.

The huge fine, a top for baseball, was imposed on Williams by Red Sox general manager, Joe Cronin, for spitting contemptuously at a huge audience in Boston's Fenway Park in a game between the Sox and the New York Yankees here recently. Williams is said to have committed the act several other times earlier this season. He is alleged to have committed the act on one occasion in the presence of Commissioner Ford Frick and Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts. The only other player ever fined that much was Babe Ruth, the famed "Bambino" of yester-years, in 1925, for failure to show up for games in St. Louis.

There was no immediate comment from Keefe on Williams recent action. But after Robinson's reply was published in the Louisiana Weekly, a Negro newspaper, Keefe retreated from his former position.

Keefe commented on the letter:

"I did not mean to imply that Robinson's attitude was responsible" for the Louisiana jimcrow law.

"I simply expressed the opinion that Robinson's conduct had done more to call attention to the dangers of integration than anything else — even the hardest work of rabid segregations.

"And I sincerely believe," he added, "that if he conducted himself like Joe Louis, Harry Wills, Roy Campanella, Willie Mays, Don Newcombe and other great Negro athletes, he not only would have been a better ballplayer than he is but would have helped instead of harmed relations between whites and Negroes.

"Robinson was and still is a talented, spirited ball player and a courageous competitor. He proved his greatness as an athlete when he made good in the fastest competition and under conditions and circumstances that must have been trying.

"It would be hard to picture him as a better ballplayer, but I still think he would have been had he kept the chips off his shoulder."

Thus Keefe still blamed Robinson for harming Negro-white relations, while ignoring the conduct of controversial players like Williams and Ferris Fain.

Significantly, these southern-writers always went to an issue such as this or any other on the Negro-white relations basis. They never want to make it a man-to-man thing, wherein one man (no matter what his race, it being of no point in a given incident) may object to rough treatment by another, or a group of men. No, it always has to be the issue of Negroes versus whites, when in reality it's simply a clash between two men, or one man against a bunch.

That point is highlighted in Keefe's loud silence over the recent Ted Williams' incident. Why was not Williams "insolent?" Why did Williams' actions not strain relationships between, say, Bostonians and New Yorkers, or between fans of both clubs throughout the country: Funny, isn't it, how they always managed to twist things to cover up?

SPORTS

WITH "MACK"

This column will be dedicated to those of us who love sports, and to the people of Waterloo who wish to keep this community sports-minded. This column will also deal with the human and moral side of sports. We will try to stimulate more interest in our younger people in being good sportsmen. It will deal with interesting stories of our boys in the field of athletics on the high school, college and professional levels. We will attempt to bring back fond memories of some of the boys who helped to make Waterloo the "sport city" that it is. These were boys such as: "Big Son" Flowers, Willie Pugh, Edgar Penn, Don Commack, John Hollingsworth, and many more deserving boys. All helped to make our city a better place to work, live and play.

Read this column in each issue of the WATERLOO STAR.

EX-HAWKEYE BREAKS WORLD'S RECORD IN 100-METER DASH

Ira Murchison, former State University of Iowa sprinter, ran the 100-meter in 10.1 seconds to tie the new un-official record in Berlin, Germany, last Saturday. It was a remarkable feat, because just the day before, Willie Williams, a former sprinter from the University of Illinois also ran it in the same time of 10.1 seconds, breaking the record of 10.2 seconds made by the great Jessie Owens 20 years ago.

Speaking of track, our boys will well represent us in the coming Olympics.

BROOKLYN STARTS DRIVE FOR FIRST PLACE

The World Champs, Brooklyn Dodgers, are making a strong bid for the top spot in the National League. The Old pros of the team are beginning to hit, steal bases and pitch good ball. Sal Maglie, the former Giant pitcher, will probably be given credit if they do win. It has been rumored around that the World Series will be in the East again.

Supreme Court

economic policy in terms of 1948 or 1952, without reference to the events that have occurred since that time. The same holds true with respect to civil rights. The test of effectiveness of a plank on this or any other subject in 1956 is the extent to which the program it proposes is adequate to deal with the situation as it exists in 1956."

Wilkins told the group that ordinarily there would be no need for such an expression in a party platform because, generally, Supreme Court rulings are accepted and promptly implemented even though segments of the population often disagree with the decisions.

"The situation today is tragically different," he added. "A had core of eight states is on open rebellion against the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling.

"These states are defying the Court and the Constitution. They have passed legislation to circumvent the court's ruling. They have threatened to abolish the public school system rather than comply with the Constitution. They have taken — as state governments — punitive action against persons and organizations who have urged compliance. They have encouraged widespread disrespect for our Constitution, our Supreme Court, and for law and order. . ."

Wilkins said that because of this "grave" development, the federal government, as custodian of American freedom, "has the duty and responsibility to declare and execute an affirmative policy in support of its own Supreme Court."
