Dear Observer of Birds,

As winter resident birds are now becoming settled in central Iowa, now is an appropriate time to mention the upcoming Boone County Christmas Bird Count. Part of a nation-wide effort to annually survey winter birds, our count covers a lot of beautiful and productive bird habitat along the Des Moines River. The potential for having fun and turning up some interesting birds is exciting, so I hope you'll consider participating this year.

The count date this year is 1 January 1991, as publicized in the last Big Bluestem Audubon Society newsletter.

Participants may choose to go all out with nine hours in the field on count day or, as is also common, you may wish to put in a solid morning of birding and then attend the dinner and species tally later. Or, you may wish to count from your home the birds at your feeders.

If you are interested in participating, please return the enclosed post card by 30 November. I will then contact you regarding specific details.

Cheers,

Erik Munson
