Dear Gastro:

I approved the voucher for your $200 payment the other day and have already written you about the necessary delay in actually sending you the check.

It occurs to me that you may be able to find some winter-killed birds in the course of your census work. Unless Paul Errington has instructed you to send these to him, will you please save them carefully and send them to me for examination here in the laboratory? We would also appreciate a brief description of the circumstances under which each lot was found.

I would not send these through the mail, since they are liable to spoil. Whenever you have any birds, and if no other way to send them is available, drop me a postcard and I will have one of the boys come out to pick them up. If Ed Ochsner is making any trips into Madison, he would probably be willing to bring them.

Yours sincerely,

Aldo Leopold
Professor of Game Management
