Dear Paul:

I did not expect to be enthusiastic about the quail bulletin, fearing, I think, that it would be too much like the preceding articles to be particularly interesting to one familiar with the latter. I have changed my mind, however, and am much pleased with the publication. I think it is the best piece of presenting which you and Frederick have done either collectively or individually, and that is saying considerable.

I would be glad to review for Ecology except that I doubt my ability to compress any definition of the subject matter into such a short space. Does the attached draft in your opinion come anywhere near a clear definition of the main subject? I would like your help in this difficult job of compression, and if you can improve the definition, it would help me out.

Can you let me have 200 copies? I don't want to be unreasonable, but there are a large number of people on my list whom I know would be interested. Besides I would like to have a reserve for future use.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

Aldo
