

May twenty-fourth,
1923.

Prof. W. H. Stevenson,
Campus,

Dear Professor Stevenson:

The question of the use of algae for the acquiring of nitrogen has often been discussed in scientific literature. Dr. Ada Hayden has been doing considerable work in connection with our fresh water algae, many of which occur upon the surface of our soils. Would a joint problem of the Soils Section and the Botany & Plant Pathology Section be of interest to you, and if so, would you be kind enough to confer with me in regard to the matter.

I am enclosing herewith a copy of a statement from Miss Hayden.

Yours truly,

P/T.