

BAIRD'S SANDPIPER

June 9 and June 16, 1983

These "p^ppeep" had black legs and bills. The wings extended beyond the tail. They were quite buffy around the face, head, and breast. They were, however, a long way away---even with 25x spotting scopes. I do believe they were Baird's (which is perhaps the commonest peep in this area) but you may wish to designate them Calidris species.
