Black-necked Stilt:

The stilt in the photos was observed on 25 May 1991 in a flooded pasture just north of Round Lake, Harrison County. I apologize for the poor quality (my memories of the photos were better), but there should be enough there to identify the species. ✓

Prairie Warbler:

My father, Jerry, and myself found a male of this species at the Gleeson-Hubel Wildlife area on 8 May 1983. The bird was in a dense stand of saplings and we were able to get rather close to the bird (less than 10ft.). Both of us noted the yellow underparts and olive upperparts. As well as the black eyeline and half circle below the eye. It was very distinctive and memorable at the time because it was a lifebird for the both of us.
