

Crossley

At 6:20 P.M. on April 15, 1978 we were surprised and fortunate to see a yellow-crowned night heron in our back yard in central Dubuque.
We watched it for 6-8 minutes walk slowly down the lawn, ~~and~~ looking for food, until it flew off toward the river.
We had very good views with binoculars from our living room window at 80-90 feet, as it showed off its yellow and white crown, white cheek patch, white head aquettes, and blue-grey body, in full adult plumage.
