Hi-ya Pete;

you probably heard about the big change at the Cinder Flats, as of now about 90% has been filled in. Oddly enough the remaining 10% takes in the nesting site of the Wilson's Phalarope. Although there were six females & two males during most of the nesting period, I could only find one nest, this was on May 31, it had four eggs in it. These were hatched either the 15th or 16th of June. Since then I have seen one young Phalarope that could fly on two different occasions.
