Long time opponents make long time friends. Opponent and friend are not mutually exclusive terms. The more worthy opponents the more lasting the friendships. Through thirty-six vacillating years Drake and Ames have pitted their school spirit, their love of sport, their strategy as mentors of football, and their comity against each other. A long continued series of home and home games establishes the finest traditions and creates an increasingly interested constituency far beyond that which continually changing opponents can ever establish. May this, our thirty-seventh year, further cement these friendships and honor the sportsmanship of both institutions.

D. W. MOREHOUSE,
President, Drake University

D. W. MOREHOUSE, President

On behalf of Iowa State College, I am glad to extend a cordial welcome to the parents of her students, to her alumni, and to her neighbors from Drake University who are our guests today.

This occasion has been designated as Parents' Day. It is particularly pleasing to see so many fathers and mothers at the game. I would suggest that if time permits while you are on the campus, you familiarize yourselves with the College and meet some of her staff members. We are proud of the high place which Iowa State continues to enjoy among the great technical institutions of this country, and we are especially anxious that as parents of her students you, too, shall share in this pride.

CHARLES E. FRILEY, President

Through the years there has existed an unusually friendly feeling between the administrations and student bodies of Drake University and Iowa State College. This feeling has manifested itself each year on the football field. While the rivalry in these annual games has been keen, a fine sense of sportsmanship has been demonstrated which is characteristic of intercollegiate athletics at their best.

I look upon this occasion as an excellent opportunity to strengthen the friendly associations and contacts which have meant so much to both institutions.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES E. FRILEY,
President, Iowa State College

Eleven Years Ago Today

Most Thrilling Iowa State-Drake Game Won by Cyclones, 7-6

By JIM HENDERSON, Editor

"They tore their hair—they bit their lips—they clenched their fists—but they were helpless. Captain Johnny Behm, in one of the cleverest exhibitions of gridiron strategy seen this year, played the game safe, and in the last three minutes kept possession of the ball until the timekeeper fired the gun which ended the Iowa State-Drake grid classic of 1925 with a score of 7 to 6."—From the Iowa State Student, November 23, 1925.

This is the story of how the Iowa State quarter-back in the days when the late Sam Willaman was coaching, almost precipitated mass apoplexy in the Drake stadium on November 21, 1925, by a trick he pulled in the last few minutes of play. With the Cyclones leading 7 to 0 late in the game, Behm made three intentional safeties rather than risk a punt from the coffin corner into a strong wind.

Cyclones Score First

The Cyclones' touchdown was the result of the second of two marches down the field in the third quarter. They received the ball at midfield and worked it right down to the five-yard line only to lose the ball on an incomplete pass over the goal line. Shortly afterwards Cook of Drake punted to the Cyclones' forty-seven-yard line. On the first play Norton "Mope" Behm, Johnny's brother, shot a pass over the center of the line to Roland "Bud" Coe, who was downed thirty yards from the goal. Lincoln Corey and N. Behm carried the ball to the one-yard line on seven plays just before the third quarter ended. Corey carried it over on the first play in the last period. Johnny Behm kicked the extra point. Iowa State led, 7 to 0.

Late in the fourth quarter, Drake uncorked its only sustained drive of the afternoon. Taking the oval on the Iowa State thirty-four-yard line they quickly drove to the Cyclone three-yard line by a series of off-tackle sprints by Max Everett, interspersed by three passes. It was fourth down and still two yards to go. "Squatty" Spears of Drake was downed a yard from the goal and the Cyclones took the ball on downs. A stiff wind faced the Cyclones and only three minutes were left to play.

Behm Makes Intentional Safety

Punting was dangerous. The ball couldn't have been kicked more than twenty yards and a bad bounce might have given the opponents the ball close to Iowa State's goal line. Quarter-back Behm, playing it safe, touched the ball down for a safety on the first play, putting the score at 7 to 2. The rules at that time stated that the ball, following a safety, was to be brought out to the thirty-yard line where it should be put in play by scrimmage or by a free kick. The Cyclones chose the former. Three times "Mope" Behm carried the ball into the line to stall time. On the fourth down, Johnny turned tail and trotted back over the goal line with the ball for another safety. Score: Iowa State 7, Drake 4.

Again the ball was brought out to the thirty-yard stripe, and again the Cyclones made three time-killing plunges into the line. And on the fourth down, Johnny carried it back over the goal for a third safety. Iowa State 7, Drake 6. After the ball was brought again out to the thirty, the game ended on the first play with the baffled but snarling Bulldogs awaiting the chance to obtain possession of the ball that they might again open up their frenzied offensive.

Perfectly Timed Strategy

As it worked, Behm's stratagem was perfectly timed, but what would have happened if he had miscalculated? Suppose he had been forced to kick on the last down after that third safety and Drake had returned it for a touchdown. His name would have been added to the famous blunder list headed by Roy Reigels of California, who ran eighty-five yards with the ball the wrong way in the 1929 Rose Bowl game.

As a result, principally, of this game, the official rules regarding safeties were changed the next season by the rules committee. They decided, that following a safety the ball would be brought out to the twenty-yard line where it must be put in play by a free kick.

Lincoln Corey was the outstanding performer in this unusual game, gaining seventy-eight yards in twenty-eight attempts. Bud Coe's punting was good, while the offensive and defensive work of the Behm brothers and the battling of the Iowa State forward wall was outstanding.

Cyclones' Line-up

The starting line-up for the Cyclones was:

Ends, Bud Coe and Karl Bond; tackles, Frank Mayer and Elmer Kingery; guards, Raymond Gailbraith and Norman Thomas; center, Alvin Thornburg; quarter-back, Captain Johnny Behm; halves, Norton Behm and Charles Hill; full-back, Lincoln Corey.

Substitutions: L. W. Grimes, Bob Fisher, Walt Weiss, Vernon Hall, and John Rasmess.

Bulldogs versus Cyclones . . . A Battle of Offenses

Past performances this season mean nothing today when the football elevens from Iowa State and Drake battle for grid supremacy on State Field. The annual traditional contest between the Cyclones and the Bulldogs is the game of the season for both teams. Past records are cast aside, the dope is ignored, and most anything is liable to happen. A victory, despite the results of previous games, means a successful season for the winning eleven.

Drake, after getting off to an auspicious start early in the season, has failed to maintain the dazzling pace expected from them. Still, the Bulldogs pack lots of offensive punch and deception. Not once this fall have they been held scoreless, and in only two games have they been held to one touchdown. In eight games this season the Bulldogs have scored 213 points.

The spearhead of the Drake attack is Pug Manders, 210 pounds of plunging power. Manders, an all-state high school back in South Dakota and a promising prep full-back at the University of Minnesota two years ago, is truly a versatile backfield man. He hits the line with the power of a pile-driver, he is an accurate passer, a capable blocker, and a bulwark at backing up the line on defense. His team mates in the backfield, Eldon Woltz, Chuck Orebaugh, co-captain and a star basketball guard, Bob Underwood and Bud Suter, are all fleet ball carriers who, with their shifty running, have given all their opponents this fall plenty of anxious moments.

Bulwarks in the Drake line are co-captain Bill Pettit, big center; Dick Tomilson and Herb Hedlund, tackles; and Bus Bergmann, giant end.

On the Iowa State side of the ledger for today's game is a record of no defeats on State Field this season. Beaten thrice on foreign Big Six fields the Cyclones drubbed Kansas and Cornell, tied a powerful Oklahoma eleven, 7 to 7, and battled to a scoreless tie with State Teachers in a sea of mud in their own back yard.

The Cyclones' season has its bright and its dismal portions. The Iowa State eleven played mediocre ball in losing to Nebraska, Missouri, and Kansas State, the three top teams in the Big Six Conference. But, a trio of brilliant performances by the Cyclones has tended to balance the books. On October 10, the Cyclones, playing alert and smart football, overwhelmed a heavier Kansas eleven 21 to 7. A week later, with the Cyclones' highly touted aerial attack again clicking, the Cardinal and Gold eleven swamped a fighting Cornell College team, 38 to 0. Before a Homecoming crowd three weeks ago the Cyclones displayed a fine exhibition of courage and fight against a powerful and deceptive Oklahoma eleven.

On a puzzling triple-pass play the Cyclones scored against the Sooners early in the first quarter. From that time on it was an uphill fight for Coach George Veenker's eleven, but the Cyclones fought back a last quarter scoring drive of the Sooners to insure a 7 to 7 tie.

Today's game, according to all indications, will be a battle of offense. Headed by Pug Manders' line smashes and Bud Suter's dashes around end, Drake's offensive this year has far excelled its defensive; while, on the other hand, the Cyclones' razzle-dazzle offensive, under the proper conditions, has clicked in great style this fall.

Their Last Huddle . . .

Donning their Cyclone football regalia for the last time today are seven Iowa State College seniors. For three years now these men—alongside men now in the ranks of the alumni, and others who will carry on next year—have played an important part in Cyclone football. Their play has been outstanding; their spirit, dauntless, and their inspiration, a tradition.

CLARENCE GUSTINE, Gus to Iowa State, entered school in 1933 with very little football experience. His lack of experience was made up by his liking for the game. In his sophomore year Gus came along fast as the season progressed and by the last of the 1934 season he was seeing lots of action at end. His work won him a minor letter.

Last fall Gus won himself a place in the Cyclones' starting line-up and set about in a determined manner to prove that Coach Veenker's confidence in him was well-placed. By mid-season he had proved it. When it came time for the Cyclone squad to pick a leader for the 1936 season to succeed Ike Hayes they immediately chose the most logical candidate, Gustine. He is a real fighter—dependable, clean-cut, and unassuming. For the past two years Gus has been a regular outfielder on the Cyclones' championship baseball nine. Last spring he was Iowa State's leading hitter.

Unlike Gustine, TOMMY NEAL came to Iowa State with a vast amount of experience in football. A natural athlete who is at home in any athletic competition, Tommy won all-state high school honors at Central High (Sioux City) in the fall of 1932. The next spring he won the state championship in the hurdles. After only a fair prep grid showing at Iowa State, he blossomed out in his sophomore year. In the now famous Iowa-Iowa State game of 1934, Tommy ran wild, scored a couple of touchdowns and in general made it an embarrassing afternoon for the bewildered Hawkeyes. Maintaining a dizzy pace all that season, Tommy finished the year with a dazzling performance against Drake. Tommy marshalled the Cyclone forces as they marched over the Bulldogs, 33 to 12. At the end of the season Neal was picked as all-Big Six quarter-back on several selections.

Last fall Neal shared the quarter-back duties with Harold Miller, but this season he has played nearly every minute. A fast ball carrier, Tommy's pass catching ability makes him one of the spear-heads in the Cyclones' proficient aerial attack.

On October 21, 1934, a long-geared Iowa State College sophomore startled the grid world with a kicking feat seldom equalled. FRED POOLE, "the kicking fool," punted thirteen times in the 31 to 6 victory over Iowa two years ago, averaging 54.4 yards a kick. Perfectly placed punts out of reach of the elusive Ozzie Simmons paved the way for each of the Cyclones' touchdowns. Poole's place-kick from the thirty-one-yard line in the first quarter started the Cyclone scoring, and he further contributed to the Iowa State cause by kicking all four extra points.

For this and other punting performances, Poole was given All-American mention. Today Freddy is playing his last game for Iowa State. But athletic fans at Iowa State will see more of Freddy this year, for he is a letter winner in both basketball and track.

A bulwark in the Cyclone forward wall, HAROLD SCHAFROTH, 195 pounds of fight and aggressiveness. His graduation will leave a hole that will be mighty hard to fill. Shaf, following in the footsteps of his brother Ed, who was a star full-back for the Cyclones up to 1933, earned a first team tackle berth in his sophomore year. Nearly every minute of his three years of competition, Shaf has been in the game smearing up the plays of the opposition. He has a great love for the game, and practices are made lighter because of his constant chatter. The past two seasons he was named on several first or second all-Big Six selections.

A reserve center for two seasons, BURDETTE HANNA had the determination to keep fighting, and this fall has been playing his share of the time as first string center. Bud, a tall 185-pounder, is a steady and dependable pivot man, a hard worker, and an accurate passer. In the Cornell game a month ago, Bud scooped up a blocked Purple punt and raced five yards for the first touchdown of the game. The Cyclones went on to win 38 to 0.

ED BLUMENSTEIN, stocky guard for the Cyclones, is playing his third year on the squad. Always a hard worker, Blumy loves football. Although seldom ever in the starting line-up, he has seen action in most of the games. Last fall he won his minor letter, but he is seeing a good deal more action this season.

His second year at Iowa State is the last for ELWIN SNELL, Cyclone backfield man. Snell, who qualifies without restriction for the title of the "hard-luck king" this fall, was a star ball carrier last season, his first at Iowa State. Before enrolling at Iowa State, Snell played a couple of seasons with Mason City Junior College. Early this fall Snell suffered a sprained ankle. A recurrence of this injury and others have kept him out of action practically all season. Last year Snell won his major "I" in baseball and a minor letter in basketball.

Over the Air

Andy Woolfries will bring the Drake-Iowa State game to radio listeners over station WOR, Ames, this afternoon. For years Andy has thrilled radio audiences with his picturesque accounts of Cyclone football games and state high school basketball tournaments.

Radio fans throughout Iowa and the Mid-west know Andy's voice, not only as a sports commentator, but as chief announcer for the Iowa State College radio station.

Forty-four Years of Drake-Iowa State Rivalry

Nearly 300 Times the Bulldogs and Cyclones Have Met

In May of 1892, Drake and Iowa State met in their first athletic contest. This contest, a baseball game, was won by Iowa State, 10 to 7. Since that day, forty-four years ago, Cyclone and Bulldog athletic teams have met on the field of combat 290 times. Though the representatives of Iowa State over the period of two score years have been victorious seventy-four per cent of the time, this is hardly a fair indication of the keen competition that has marked every meeting between the Bulldogs and the Cyclones.

Recent rivalry between the athletic representatives of the two schools has been much more even. In the last ten football battles, each eleven has won four games while two ended in ties. In the past five years of track competition, the Cyclone and Bulldog runners have won five meets apiece. In basketball games the last five years the cagers from both schools have broken even.

The first grid battle between Iowa State and Drake—the fore-runner of the most thrilling rivalry in the state—was played in Des Moines in the fall of 1893. This initial battle was won by the Cyclones, 17 to 16. In the thirty-eight years of the series, the Bulldogs and Cyclones have met thirty-five times on the gridiron. Twenty-three times Iowa State elevens tasted “duck soup,” nine times Drake cut off a slice of “beef steak,” while three games ended in a deadlock.

In only three years since the first Drake-Iowa State game in 1898, these traditional rivals have not met in football. These lapses in the grid rivalry came in 1899, 1918, and 1920. Following Iowa State's 1893 win, Drake evened the score in 1900, winning 16 to 0, and then went ahead the next fall with a 12 to 5 victory. Following a scoreless tie in 1902 the Cyclones struck a winning pace that netted them sixteen victories over the Bulldog gridders in seventeen games. The Cyclone winning string was halted in 1922 as Drake triumphed 14 to 7.

The Cyclones won four in a row from 1924 to 1927, but the Bulldogs equalled the feat with a quartet of victories from 1928 to 1931. In 1932 and 1934 Iowa State scored one-sided victories, 34 to 13, and 33 to 12, while the 1933 and 1935 battles ended in 7 to 7 draws.

Future Varsity Gridders

"In our present group of about seventy freshman football candidates," Louis Menze, head coach of the prep squad at Iowa State stated the other day, "we have about ten football players who are a good deal above the average—men who have, not only football ability, but weight to go with it."

A group of one hundred enthusiastic freshmen reported for the first football practice on the evening of September 28. Since that day these aspiring Cyclones have toiled four nights of the week on the playing fields north of State Gymnasium.

The work-outs of the freshman squad is devoted largely to the teaching of football fundamentals; while each day the squad is divided for signal work or scrimmages using varsity formations and plays. Each Monday the so-called freshman varsity is given formation and plays of the team; the varsity will play that week-end, and usually on Tuesdays and Wednesdays they scrimmage against the Cyclone varsity.

The line-up used by Coach Menze and his staff as the first prep team is a husky bunch—the forward wall averaging better than 190 pounds. At the ends are a couple of real prospects: Arnold Krekow, 215-pound brother of Ed Krekow, Cyclone star in 1927 and 1928, and Martin Boswell, 185-pound husky from New Mexico. At the tackle posts are Chester Affeldt, 200-pounder, and Howard Rodekohr. Holding down the guard positions are Kermit Barker and Bill Heilman, 180-pounders. The No. 1 prep center is Paul Morin, speedy 205-pounder from Illinois.

Forming the versatile yearling backfield are Ray Gans, little all-state quarter-back; Hank Wilder, 195-pound driving full-back; Bill Morgan, blocking half-back, and Hugh Vickerstaff, little tail back.

IOWA STATE RELIES ON SEAL-O-SAN

IOWA STATE and more than 3500 other schools now have Seal-O-San finished gymnasium floors. For Seal-O-San is the one floor finish that can take the punishment inflicted by all gym activities and come through unharmed.

Especially for basketball is a Seal-O-San floor ideal. Because Seal-O-San makes any wood floor 100% non-slippery. By preventing skids and falls, it assures faster floor play, speedier dribbling, and more confident shooting.

But there are many other advantages of Seal-O-San. It provides a beautiful floor, yet it costs much less than other types of finish, because it is applied without skilled labor. It seals the floor against dirt and moisture, thus eliminating costly scrubbing. And it is easy and economical to maintain.

Seal-O-San offers the correct solution to the gymnasium floor problem. Coaches and school officials are invited to write for complete information.

Householders ATTENTION!

THIS YEAR . . . Know the coal you are buying. Don't take chances with unidentified coal. Buy now, for higher prices seem inevitable this fall and winter.

GREEN MARKED COAL

is the solution of your heating troubles. Its high heat value makes it economical—and you know what you are buying—you can see the green marks on the coal—Franklin County's best.

The Ball that makes the headlines!

Again in 1936—the Spalding Official J5V will play a big part in putting the nation's gridiron engagements on the front page. Of course, we can't predict the outcome of today's game ... but we can predict that the J5V will give a good account of itself in contests the country over. In past performances the J5V has proven its ability to take everything a hard kicking, fast playing team can give it ... Yes, take it and come back for more.
