

First picture.

Nest and eggs of the Western Meadowlark.

Second picture.

Western Meadowlark approaching her nest with a mouth full of food for her young. This picture should enlarge well.

Third picture.

While trying for a picture of the mother Meadowlark feeding her young a garter snake entered the nest and attempted to devour one of the young. He is shown with the entire head of this fully feathered young bird in his mouth. This is as far as he could go as his jaws were up against the shoulders of the bird. The bird was killed by the snake. The complete story of this incident would be told in my article.

Nest of Western Meadowlark
on Mt St L Right of Way

5/19/27

20

5 PM

Stop 12⁵ June 1 sic Bright sunshine but nest entirely shaded

Round Robin 3/6/28

Meadowlark coming up
from back of her nest
with food in mouth

Brady Ranch
Atkinson, Neb.

6/5/29

E-8

W. W.

Lonnie

F45

1/50

245 PM

Garter snake trying to devour a young meadowlark in nest on Ogden Golf Grounds
Bird 11 days old and
about ready to leave the nest.

8/3/27

Round Robin 3/6/28