Nest of Bob White containing six of her own eggs and two hens eggs, one of which evidently had hatched. The mother Bob White had been brooding these eggs but the nest was now deserted and she never returned to it. We were unable to determine just what happened here. It may be that she hatched a barnyard chicken and when she saw the size of her offspring she gave up in despair. This may be a tragedy or on the other hand it might be called a comedy. It all depends on what happened.
