PATTERNS...

Endless lines of black berobed figures await the ceremony, bearing little resemblance to the original band of jugglers carefully trained by the university. Once classed as a freshman, sophomore, or even junior, each student rapidly became a juggler of the facts and fancies hurled at him from all facets of university life. Academically, he caught Avagadro's number, the binomial theorem, ontogeny repeats phylogeny . . . Socially, the performer added experiences to his repertoire: from first-date queries, "What is your major; where are you from?" to more meaningful experience.

The repertoire increased; the performer became a skilled juggler. Skilled in adding more images to those already whirling in his mind, but straining to select one of them as a focal point upon which to build his education. Release from this cycling maze of images and facts may come through the inspiration of a dedicated teacher. Be his enthusiasm for tropolone synthesis, satire, or nutrient interrelationships, it makes meaningful certain facts and collects them into a foundation of knowledge.

Through the inspiration of a teacher or that which burst forth within oneself, patterns of life began to take form, unsymmetrical, unique. The dissymetry grows as one pushes back boundaries, obstacles, and frontiers to enlarge the total pattern. For pattern formation is a continuous process, a process differing from the growth of a rose or a crystal: these follow rules; one's own pattern follows no rules but those he himself chooses. Each pattern is unique.

The spirit of the university is revealed in the emerging patterns of its students. The spirit of society is molded by the patterns of its constituents. By virtue of his specialization, the graduate has a particular function to perform in society. Yet he remains a student, continually searching, seeking to add new dimensions to his design. The endless lines of black berobed figures, having developed unique patterns for life, emerge graduates, aware of their duty to enlarge and transmit the best of their heritage.

*The busy campus resumes its speed;
Initial confusion melts to mere custom*

September again brought an awakening of the campus — a new life for some — a continuation with new inspirations for others. New faces migrated to Iowa State and were swept up in the whirl of multitudinous tests and appointments intermingling with the incessant walking — to the Armory, to the lunch lines, to the hospital, to the long corridors of their residences. Early morning alarms called the new faces to new places — orientations, time card lines, photograph stations, and rows of book shelves. Soon old faces mingled with the new and joined the race for time, each resolving thereafter to register by mail.

SOLITUDE . . . alone together in a woodland maze.

Fall enrollment succeeded the largest summer enrollment in twelve years. Students and administration alike faced a housing situation deemed "the worst in the history of the University." For the first time, Iowa State coeds, other than those working for board and room, were allowed to live in approved off-campus housing. A brighter side of the fall picture showed completion of the quarter-million-dollar conversion to a direct dialing system and the installation of 1700 more telephones. The Legislature appropriated $7,000,000 for capital improvements in the University; new equipment was installed for TV classes in Beardshear Hall; and discussion proceeded for the plans to build a $7.5 million auditorium coliseum. The new policy against racial discriminatory off-campus housing took effect, and women were granted extended library hours.

Notebooks and texts were temporarily tucked away as fall burst into an irresistible array of activities and entertainment ranging from the combined humor and song of the Four Freshmen to the gay, carefree rush of the Blast carnival. The Campus Chest week-long drive to raise funds for seven student-chosen charities continued in the traditions of previous successes with the Miss Legs Contest, the Theta Xi pancake supper, and the auction where bids went up for such assets as the "Kings for a Weekend" service, a peck of popcorn, a lasagne supper, and President Hilton's favorite cake. Construction work was underway early Saturday with paper, wood, and any material that could be gathered together to transform a quiet Armory into a jubilant Blast carnival of fun to wind up the week of purposeful play.

New seats, press box attract near-capacity crowds

As the football season got underway, it was the true reorientation for many students who hadn't completely severed thoughts of the summer and once more attached themselves to the way of life of the college student. With only four home games, the stadium housed a near-capacity crowd at each event. The 4500 seats in the addition to East Stadium were initiated into membership and scores of communications men took advantage of the $125,000-$150,000 press box conveniences. Brisk, cool, so-called "ideal" football weather was short-lived, and thereafter a scanning of the crowd across the field in the opposite stadium revealed only a colorful smattering of umbrellas. A special salute was given to visitors at the Parents' Day game. The Cyclones left behind a 5-4 record for the season.

Homecoming 1961 . . . traffic-laden display routes . . . renewed acquaintances . . . elegance in Elgart

JOHN HAGGE and Mary Dresser prepare Homecoming programs for mailing to alumni.

The monotonous twang of hammers against nails as the framework for Homecoming displays took shape was the first truly overt expression of the whirlwind of festivities soon to sweep down upon the campus and catch up students, alumni, parents, and faculty alike. Dismissal of classes at noon Friday gave enthusiastic builders a chance to add the perfecting touches of wire and stuffing to their prized products to be unveiled of protecting plastic and canvas covers that afternoon. Winners displayed emotions ranging from buoyant gaiety to quiet content as the announcement of their triumph finally came at the Pep Bar-B-Q Friday night. Phi Delta Theta swept up Sweepstake honors while Beta Theta Pi and Lange House took top prizes in the fraternity and Men's Residence Association divisions respectively. Gamma Phi Beta and West Linden won first place in the sorority and Women's Residence Association divisions. But all was not lost for Delta Chi fraternity which was awarded the Chi Omega Purple Shaft trophy.

A GRAND FINALE to the busy weekend of Homecoming events was the dance music of Les Elgart on Saturday evening.

"VICTORYLAND" also meant victory for Phi Delta Theta members as they captured the Sweepstakes prize.

STARTING AT the top and working down to stuff 'Cy' proved the most effective construction method for Pearson House men. The display was entitled "C'mon, C'mon."

THE SPOTLIGHT turned to Paula Jones modeling in the Beauty Review Style Show where the slate of queen candidates was narrowed to six.

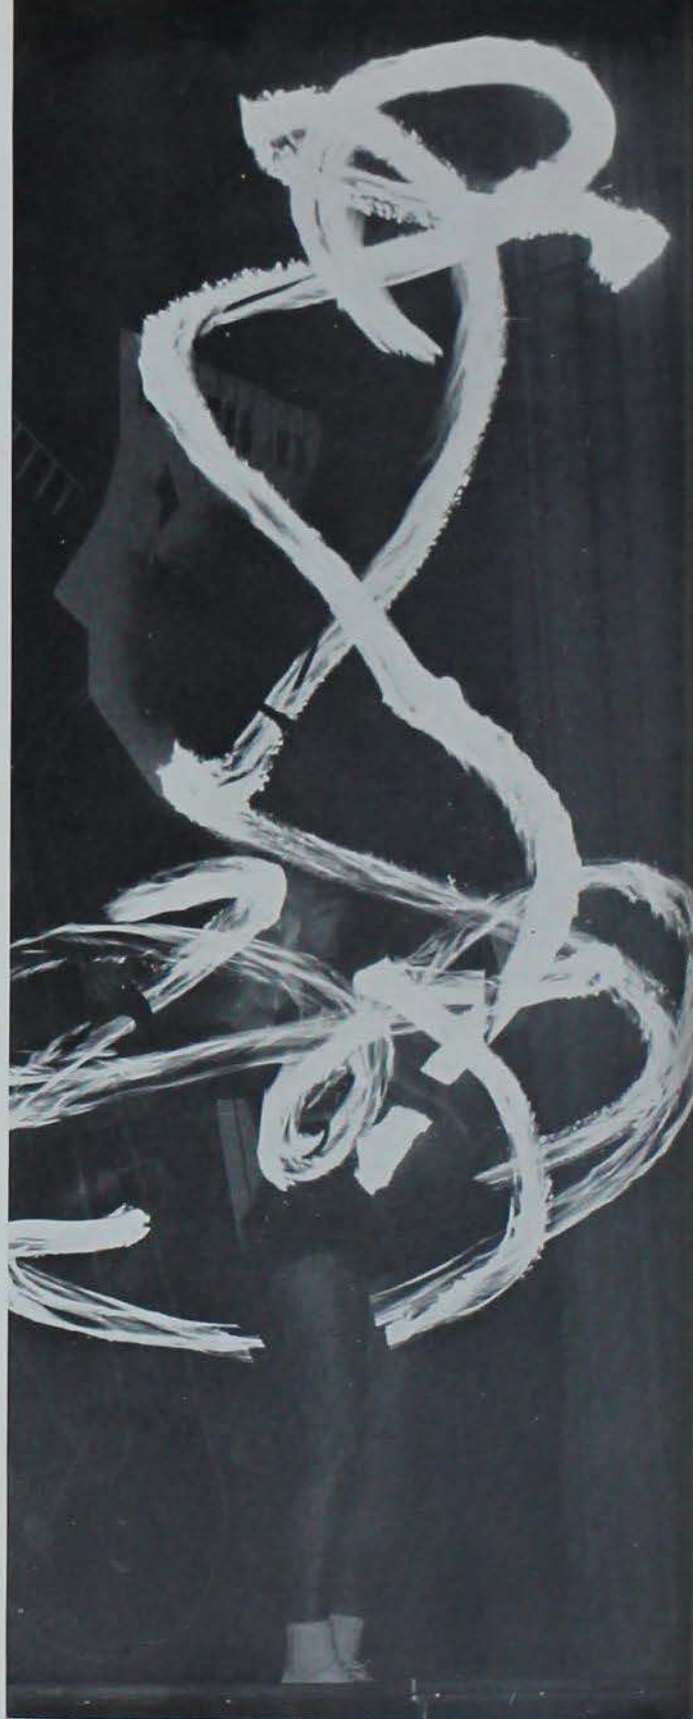

HUSHED silence fell over the Armory as 1960 Homecoming Queen, Joyce Rice slowly circled the stage before crowning the 1961 queen, Roberta Meyer.

OBSCURE in darkness behind the brilliant patterns of fire painted by her flaming batons, Joyce Rice demonstrated her talent at the Pep Bar-B-Q Friday evening.

FRANK POOLE, Master of Ceremonies for the Pep Bar-B-Q, led the student-packed Armory in a series of cheers. Mr. Poole is president of the Cyclone Club in Washington, D.C.

A RADIANT smile . . . a plump mum . . . a beautiful queen and her court. After being crowned 1961 Homecoming Queen, Roberta Meyer graciously reigned over the events of the weekend with her attendants Joannie Parizek and Nancy Hillig.

Roberta Meyer wears the lustrous crown of the Queen; crowd moves on to Jazzboree

The excitement of a full Friday evening began early and did not diminish until the Jazzboree combo blew its final beat. Interminable snake-lines filed past the lunch sackers into the Armory and diffused to fill seats on all balconies. Following an introduction of the 1931 Iowa State football team, Cy's favorite alum, Leo S. Fitzpatrick, '25, was applauded. Beauty took the stage in the form of three final candidates for Homecoming queen. Miss Roberta Meyer was chosen to wear the sparkling crown. A pep rally behind the Armory featured a bonfire, a fireworks display, and high-spirited faculty cheerleaders. Jack Teagarden and his combo gayly ended the evening in a Jazzboree atmosphere.

Cyclone energies were channeled for victory over visiting Wildcats

While alumni busily went about their registration, coffee hours, and luncheons Saturday morning, it was highly probable that the shades were still pulled in many students' rooms. But, as game time approached, all paths were spokes leading to the center of the wheel — the stadium. The student card section filled rapidly to collaborate with the Iowa State Band in carrying out a "Sing Along with Mitch" theme during half time entertainment. The football team scored high both on the board and in the hearts of thousands of fans with their rousing victory over Kansas State, for with the victory came President Hilton's announcement of "no classes Monday morning."

Meredith Willson chooses four 1962 Bomb Beauties

The Bomb Beauties of 1962 were selected by Meredith Willson, author of "The Music Man" and other Broadway hits. They were chosen from a total of 65 candidates nominated from various campus residences on the basis of beauty, poise, and general appearance. The women originally attended two teas, the first at Phi Delta Theta fraternity and the second at Gamma Phi Beta. Pictures of the eight finalists were then submitted to Mr. Willson who chose the final four. The 1962 Bomb Beauties were first presented at the Four Preps performance January 6.

MARY BETH SARTOR and Faith King enjoy an informal chat at the final tea held for Bomb Beauty candidates.

"THIS ONE without a doubt." Upon his return from Europe, Meredith Willson was met at the airport by his wife, and he began the pleasant task of selecting four Bomb Beauties from photographs of eight finalists.

THE MAJESTIC tree radiates an unseen but not unfelt companionship.

TWO ARMS discipline the utterances of hundreds of singers, and the resultant melodic strains hold an audience in seasonal reverence.

Hints of Christmas materialize with tree lighting . . . Festival of Music

Hints of Christmas were in the air, and the lighting of the sophisticated tree with seasonal choral accompaniment initiated it into campus life. Visitors traveled from all over the state to hear the traditional Christmas Festival of Music. The Armory was filled with the beauty of brass notes and strings melting into the overwhelming harmony of various choral groups. Over one thousand students participated in the festival and, in addition, the audience was invited to join in the singing of familiar carols. Darkness engulfed the atmosphere and focused eyes upon the illuminated Christmas story tableau. Selections from Handel's "The Messiah" swept listeners up in the spirit and reverence of the season.

LIGHTING THEIR WAY with individual candles, Iowa State Singers united in two parallel lines to make their choral entrance to the Festival of Music.

THE COMBINED CHORAL GROUPS of Iowa State Singers, Men's Glee Club, and Festival Chorus lifted hearts and voices in singing selections from "The Messiah."

*Students dress residences in tinsel and snow;
invite the season with house-to-house carols*

Residence doors and windows were transformed with angel hair, projections of artificial snow, and streams of tinsel. Holiday parties and dances told the story of previous hours spent canvassing stores for formals of red and white and gifts properly wrapped in a masculine or feminine cover. Postmen toted bulging mail bags; residence boxes filled to capacity to compensate for previous disappointing barenesses. Carolers sought out scarves and ear muffs and walked the sharp cold nights to endorse the season's arrival. Groups, large and small, disregarded the gaieties of the holiday to gather formally and informally and worship in high regard and esteem for the fundamental meaning of the season.

LOCOMOTION IN "over the river and through the woods" style brought startled stares from less fortunate pedestrians.

MEXICAN CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES were interpreted by the Modern Dance Club as they depicted both the religious and gala celebrations of "La Fiesta Mexicana."

THE CAMPUS DONNED its winter coat of glittering, iced limbs.

"NUTCRACKER SUITE" selections were chosen by Symphony Orchestra as its contribution to the Festival of Music.

NEWS FORUM MODERATOR, Dr. William Underhill, spoke to a usual full house. Other panel members included Dr. E. B. Smith, Dr. William Murray and Prof. James Schwartz.

Scope of education broadens with forums, lectures, discussions

COFFEE AND CAKE were a tasty termination to the Faculty Fireside held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith.

Education is a complex process; it rightfully includes an infinity of subjects and objects. At any moment the educational process is functioning, often unknown to the individual. The length of education must be spoken of in terms of a lifetime. It can be likened to the planet Earth, maintaining a perpetual, mandatory rotation. Concrete opportunities for encouraging the movement surround people of a university. Scheduled lectures, discussions, and forums are omnipresent and are received gratuitously. Crowded guest speaker rooms, complete circles, voluntary responses at informal discussions, and united efforts to acquaint oneself with the unfamiliar suffice to show the recognition of the need for a rotation of broad periphery.

*Sphere of education recognizes students, faculty, and politics:
Model U.N. hosts delegates representing 65 countries*

The periphery of education enlarged as days disappeared into weeks and weeks into months. The coexistence of cultural and academic advancement was most emphatically preserved. Exceptional individuals and groups were recognized for achievements in their respective areas. Politics in the form of 200 delegates representing 65 nations swept in to give foreign students an opportunity to express themselves on matters concerning the politics and government of their countries. The most significant actions in the Model U.N. Assembly were passage of a disarmament resolution and a protest walkout by student delegates of the Ukraine, the U.S.S.R., and the Peoples' Republic of China. Model U.N. makes possible an understanding and appreciation of the difficulties of communication which the official United Nations faces.

DELEGATIONS FORMED mainly of foreign students from colleges and universities throughout Iowa and the Mid-West congregated for Model U.N. where issues similar to those proposed to the official U.N. in New York were discussed.

Barjche features panorama of dancers*

Quality art in the form of music and dance exists in the midst of an acclaimed technical atmosphere. Students with exceptional musical talent annually share their abilities with the University in the Phi Mu Alpha-Sigma Alpha Iota American Musicale. Dance steals the scene and revises it for "Barjche," annual Modern Dance Club production. The talents of many of the dancers have been disciplined for ten or more years, and a wide variance exists in the artists under whom they have trained. Months of thought and energy result in a quality presentation by the devoted dancers.

SINGING THEIR WAY to the flash acts Sweepstakes title were the Double Brothers, Bill Lenz, Kirk Farnsworth, Tommy Timm, and Gordon Adkins of Phi Delta Theta.

A SOUTH INDIAN CLASSICAL dance by Cathy Rieniets took first place in the third Varieties performance.

FarmHouse nets Varieties sweepstakes with satirical resumé of campus life and politics

Jubilant groups descended to basement recreation rooms and moments later the music, dance, and narration was interrupted with "Hold it, let's take it from there again," as five sororities and seven fraternities batted their Varieties skits to perfection. Variety proved the theme with skits ranging from tales of a scared bachelor escaping a pursuing female to a medieval yarn of Edward the Fifth and Peter the Pint. FarmHouse topped Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Delta Theta in the Sweepstakes performance. Pantomimers, folk singers and other vocal groups, a magician, a modern dancer, and a Hindu dancer vied for the first berth in flash acts performances. The singing Double Brothers of Phi Delta Theta topped the Sig Ep Trio and Cathy Rieniets in the Sweepstakes show.

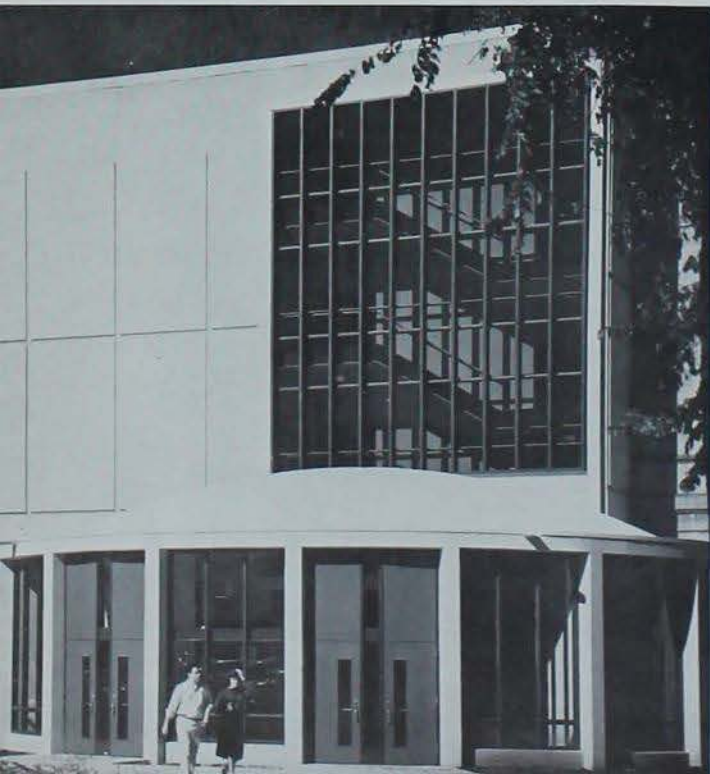

"ROME, SWEET ROME," a satire on campus life and politics, brought Sweepstakes fame to FarmHouse fraternity.

ATTRACTIVE, NEW LIBRARY facilities were successful in tempting students to keep regular hours of study.

TAKING ITS PLACE in the Clyde Williams Field Stadium, the double-decker press box, complete with elevator, accommodates about fifty newsmen, announcers, and technicians.

Campus is scene of expansion as facilities multiply

With expansion as its keyword, the University progresses. The $890,000 library addition is a construction to be valued by the student-faculty population in its entirety. The most important feature of the addition is the open stack system, a complete reversal of the previous closed stack system. Air-conditioning, extended hours, typing rooms, small group study rooms, desks, sofas, and easy chairs all contribute to the comforts and conveniences of the addition. Beige walls and ceilings with blending fluorescent lighting and pastel stack panels create a modern setting. Construction continued on the three-story classroom building as the last bolt took its place in the football stadium addition. Approved future plans include an Animal Industries and an Engineering Building and additions to the Chemistry and the Agricultural Engineering Building, to men's physical education facilities, and to one home management house.

Accumulations of recurrent snowfalls hinder some activities, enhance others

Weekly winter snowstorms taxed the physical plant workers to the point that any efforts to enhance pedestrian and vehicle traffic seemed in vain. The abundance of snow upon snow tempted amateur architects to leave traces of their trade in the form of animals, nursery rhyme characters, and traditional "snowmen." Snowballs penetrated the air while a scene nearby featured the dispersion of books, papers and purse of a red-faced owner. The seasonal coat of the campus was heavy, long-lasting, and only stubbornly shed with the onset of anticipated higher temperatures in mid-April.

Mikkelsen, Montgomery team; bag 94% of votes

The All-University Nominating Convention swung into a full afternoon of politics with Ron McElvogue, Morris Mikkelsen, Mickey Montgomery, and Bob Vasko emerging as candidates for student body president. McElvogue withdrew his name during the second session; Mikkelsen and Montgomery combined forces; and Vasko withdrew from the race several weeks later for lack of a running mate. Although the Mikkelsen-Montgomery coalition was later opposed by the write-in candidacy of Eugene Brunk and William Cox, they breezed through the election, tallying 94% of the total 3217 student votes.

Memories of Christian Petersen decorate the campus and fill the scrapbooks of the mind

Spring and all its grandeur begins a new process of life in many individuals — new functions of the present, thoughts for the future, and memories of the past, securely fastened in the scrapbooks of the mind. Pasted on a page somewhere are memories of the late Christian Petersen, the Danish-American sculptor who found he belonged in the Mid-West with nature as his schoolroom and natural beauty as his teacher. He has shown the hard side of life with his masterpieces "Flood" and "Drought," both experiences which he lived himself before his creative hands molded his expression of them. But in contrast he has shown in the fountain maidens in front of Memorial Union the warm side of life, the peace and primitive but genuine happiness of Indians working with the earth. His ability to breath soul into dead mass was a gift by birth. He knew humans; he sought out good in them, and careful, thorough hands brought his thoughts to life.

Focus emphasizes home talent, visiting groups and exhibitions

Another two-week Festival of Fine Arts overwhelmed the campus with drama, dance, music and lecture. Focus 1961 emphasized talents already present on campus as well as outstanding visiting artists. Exhibitions ranged from contemporary art and Mexican weaving to architectural concrete structures. The program included a Stephens College dance group, the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Soprano Adele Addison, and Margaret Webster, outstanding figure of the contemporary theater. Artist-in-Residence Dwight Kirsch gave several lectures and talks on Japanese art and American and European modern art. The chamber music concert was further evidence that fine arts are alive in an institution of sciences and technology.

FRAMED BY several works from his art collection, James S. Schramm lectured on "Businessmen and Modern Art."

RHYTHMIC FEET, mellow voices, and bonnie bright colors conspired to lift an enchanted Stars Over Veishea audience back into the Scottish Highlands and the misty, mysterious city of "Brigadoon".

Veishea

Light hearts and bright spirits penetrated the campus as students poured out of classes at noon Thursday in anticipation of the three-day Veishea festival. Under cloudy skies, campanile chimes rang out introducing Veishea with the opening ceremonies on the steps of Beardshear Hall. Obstinate afternoon winds sent the traditional Veishea Torch toppling into the tuba section of the band, but Governor Norman Erbe marched down to retrieve and light it, officially sending Veishea on its way. The ceremonies climaxed with the crowning of Veishea Queen of Queens Leslie Graham and her attendants, Nancy Starbuck and Mary Ellen Walsh. The opening event was wrapped up beneath the campanile with the tapping of fifteen student women for Mortar Board and eleven student men and two staff members for Cardinal Key.

*Spectators lined narrow lake shores as canoes splashed past:
day ended with musical note—Brothers Four, Skylarks, J-Hall 4*

THE BROTHERS FOUR musically entertained Saturday evening in the Armory. The singers have never had any formal training. They don't use any sheet music and make up all their own arrangements.

In the meantime, the hearts of 30 canoe teams were across the street on the shores of Lake LaVerne. They had already paddled a long way to be chosen out of the 350 teams which vied for a place in the "Paddling Past" race finals. Phi Delta Theta took home the championship title with a time of 1:19.2 minutes. Spectators thrilled to a water skiing exhibition which included a challenging jump over an elevated ping pong table. Crowds dissolved and crystallized and clustered and dissolved again at concession stands, the Union fountain, the lake side, and building show-cases throughout the afternoon. Young again met old en route to the Brothers Four concert where the singing stars combined their blue shirts and tennis shoes, guitars, banjos, and bass fiddle to delight fourth balcony fans as well as ring-side seat listeners. The Skylarks and J-Hall-4 tempted rhythmic feet at the Sweatshirt Ball to conclude the musical evening.

ALL WAS NOT HARMONIOUS on the AD-601 navy cargo ship as Wayne Michael and Larry Krummel prepared for action in "Mister Roberts."

Parade traveled dry route; crowd of 125,000 lined streets, later met 'Mr. Roberts'

Iowa State was wholeheartedly and proudly on display as about 60 departments dressed in the "Education for Future" open house theme. An international house displaying foreign costumes, foods, and drinks was a successful addition last year. Animal Husbandry won the sweepstakes prize. Sunshine and ominous clouds exchanged their reigning positions over the "Mile of Melodies" parade, but the forty-two floats and twenty-nine bands led by Parade Marshall Ira Schroeder traveled a dry route from the first 'forward march' to the final 'halt-2-3-4.' Many anxious youngsters discovered that father's shoulders or nearby tree limbs were convenient spots from which to overlook the crowd of 125,000 lining the parade route. Sigma Phi Epsilon's "Around the World in 80 Days" float won the sweepstakes trophy. East Linden Hall, Kappa Delta, Beyer House, and Delta Sigma Phi placed first in residence competitions. Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon won the residence combination trophy. Iowa State Players provided light entertainment with five performances of the popular stage and screen play, "Mr. Roberts."

For the sports-minded Veishea visitors, Iowa State met various opponents in tennis, baseball and golf. About 1,000 high school students donned their walking shoes and explored the campus educational programs and facilities on Career Day. Cyclone Review underwent a complete change of programming as the numerous performing groups combined their talents in a skit with a "Voyage to Mars" theme. Previously, the show was split up into individual acts. After some 10,000 man-hours of work, a Stars Over Veishea cast transformed the Armory stage into a misty, mysterious village, and nimble-footed dancers set the scenes for the Scottish Highland activity. The music of Les Brown and his "Band of Renown" and a "Bali Hai" theme set the mood for the Veishea dance.

*The world of a university . . .
changing, inconstant, versatile, unfixed
spinning rapidly on its axis*

IT'S "ONE, TWO . . ."! One, two . . ." as members of a freshmen physical education class warm up with some calisthenics before starting a touch football game.

CATCHING 40 WINKS on central campus between classes becomes a habit for spring fever victims.

A university is an everchanging world — a world demanding difficult adjustments, but a world never forgotten once the steps are strong and steady. The university world never stops rotating, and each day, each month, each season is a stranger to its predecessor. Certain basic elements are almost permanent in this summersaulting world, but they are never stationary. There must always be a system, a code; there must be life to make necessary the system and the code. But neither the animate nor the inanimate figures and objects, the abstract nor the concrete elements will remain indelible. There will always be architectural structures; there will always be human beings. There will always be specific laws; there will always be individual thoughts and emotions. But they are not constant or settled, and the university spins faster on its axis.

DARK FIGURES of the Alpha Company of the NROTC battalion stand perfectly silhouetted against the sky as they proudly pass the inspection of Lt. (j.g.) Allan Schultz.

ANXIOUS, PROUD RELATIVES and friends surround the sea of black caps and tassals which will soon scatter and become individual droplets in their respective places in the world.

Spring means different things to each individual student. The effects of spring are also widely varied. Spring is a burst of energy to certain persons — endless energy, lively, great-to-be-alive energy. Walking is no burden; they choose the long path home, and do not wonder why they walk so briskly but yet are in no hurry to get anywhere. They take up golf; they dance; they picnic; they sing. Their smiles and spoken words radiate their enthusiasm. But, young men and women on the opposite end of the gradient do not share this reaction to the new season. They doze through classes, fall asleep to drowsy music in mid-afternoon, live out the quarter in a peaceful horizontal position. Both of these types of individuals and all the students between these two end-points eventually come together, each wearing the cap and gown of achievement — a group united, soon to be permanently dispersed. Graduation — the end and the beginning, the climax of a story and the unfolding of a new plot, the Z and the A of the alphabet of life.

*Spring nurses both idlers and enthusiasts;
caps and gowns become a common goal*

IN THE MIDDLE of a busy day students still may pause to introduce themselves to a distinct aspect of Iowa State — a more lowly, but not less beautiful form of life.

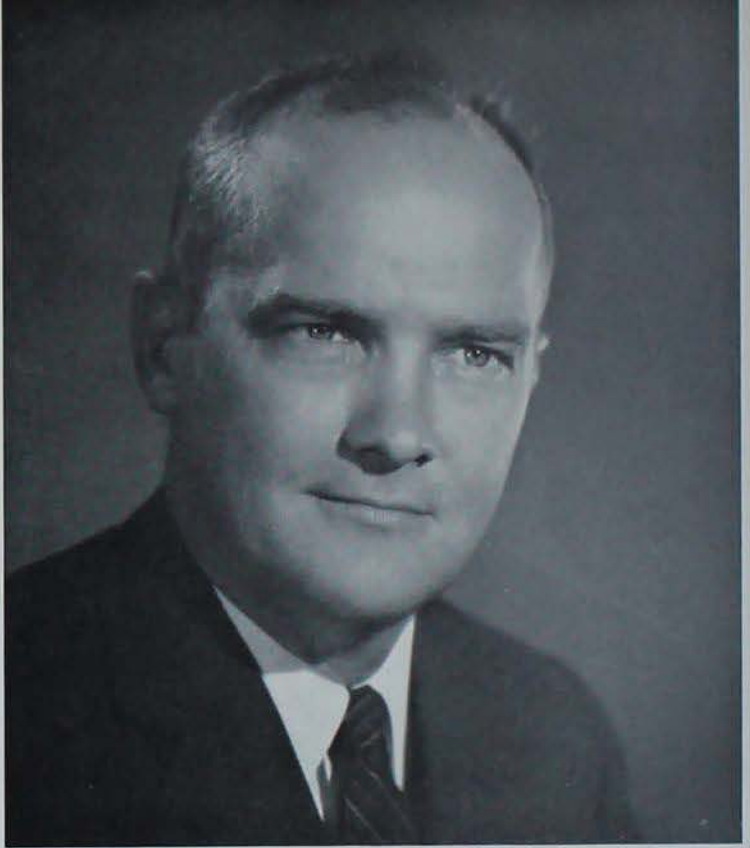

A NEW Lancelot and Elaine made Iowa State their home last spring and continued the tradition of gently waking Lake LaVerne at daybreak and gracefully lullabying it to peaceful rest at sunset.

EXCELLENCY is President Hilton's motto as he continues to lead Iowa State University's maintenance of its superior academic rating.

President Hilton kicks off 'dream center' drive

CONSIDERING the future "dream cultural center" as they stand on the steps of Beardshear are President James Hilton, C. Y. Stephens, and W. Harold Brenton. These three men lead a drive to accumulate funds for the project.

For nine years Dr. James H. Hilton has presided over Iowa State University; he is nationally recognized as a progressive administrator. Working closely with the Governor and Board of Regents, he continues to guide the expansion of University facilities.

SKETCHED in the plans on the wall is the proposed Iowa State Center. Business Students' Association made the first student organization contribution to President Hilton.

Director of Student Affairs

Working constantly with the student body is Millard Kratochvil, Director of Student Affairs, who is primarily concerned with the handling of extracurricular activities and the enforcement of University regulations. This duo responsibility requires an up-to-date familiarity with all residences and various student organizations. He also guides student conduct committees in establishing and enforcing rules for student discipline. All extracurricular activities must be registered and approved by his office.

Director of Admissions and Registrar

Dr. Arthur M. Gowan is the Director of Admissions and Registrar. In this position he supervises undergraduate and graduate admissions and works with the records of the whole University. He handles enrollment problems, registration procedures and works with the general curriculum committees. Dr. Gowan also serves as the secretary of the graduate and general faculties. He confers, too, with students who are having scholastic difficulties.

Vice-President for Research

John Page, the Vice-President for Research and Dean of the Graduate School, coordinates, through the deans and directors, the research program of the University (other than that of the Ames Laboratory of the Atomic Energy Commission and other established research experiment stations). As executive officer of the graduate faculty and chairman of the graduate committee, he helps to formulate rules governing admissions, registration and classification of graduate students, and requirements for advanced degrees.

Vice-President of Academic Affairs

Not only is Dr. W. Robert Parks concerned with the methods of instruction, changes in curricula, off-campus courses and possible new learning programs, but he also takes special interest in Iowa State's keeping abreast of the latest developments in teaching methods and course changes. The off-campus courses with which he is concerned provide a means for educating many people who are unable to attend classes at the University itself.

Vice-President of Business and Finance

Boyne Platt supervises all business and physical operations of the University. He handles all monetary aid and grants to the school, and he guides the distribution and budgeting of financial aid approved by the state legislature. Vice-President Platt works closely with other administrative personnel in coordinating the funds for expansion projects of the University and in providing for repairs and improvements in the existing physical facilities.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

The increasing complexity of modern agricultural enterprise provides a great demand for the highly trained graduates of the College of Agriculture. Men and women in agriculture at Iowa State are thoroughly versed in the latest scientific theory of the field and become specialists in one or more of the eighteen separate departments of the College. In addition to the regular four-year programs of study, a two-year course of study is offered leading to a certificate in technical agriculture. Students of exceptional ability who wish to do independent study may participate in the College of Agriculture's honor study program. The official voice of the college is the Iowa Agriculturist, a monthly magazine published by students under the supervision of the technical journalism department.

HOURS OF GROOMING and planning, time well spent as Jim Gute prepared his exhibit for Little International.

GUIDING the largest College of Agriculture in the country is Dean Floyd Andre, who recently has seen many new developments in his field.

The student who comes to Iowa State to study agriculture is faced with a decision immediately. Will he specialize in agricultural business, education, engineering, or journalism? Perhaps he prefers agronomy, animal husbandry, dairy husbandry, or entomology to farm operations, fish and wildlife management, food technology, or forestry. If he still can't make up his mind, he can consider horticulture, industrial education, landscape architecture, plant pathology, poultry husbandry, or rural sociology. Because it would be physically impossible for any one person to become a specialist in all these fields, the Center for Agricultural and Economic Adjustment has been created at Iowa State to provide a means for combining the talents of all people in agriculture.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Organized in 1896, the College of Engineering has increased its major offerings from four departments to fourteen plus the Technical Institute programs established in 1960. In addition to its regular instructional work, the college is also active in research. Most of the College of Engineering's research activities are carried on in the Engineering Experiment Station. The college also carries on joint research with the College of Veterinary Medicine in the field of biomedical electronics and with the College of Sciences and Humanities.

Two new curricula were added to the Engineering College this year, engineering science and engineering operations. Physical facilities have been expanded with the increased capacity of the Cyclone computer. Curricula in engineering are divided into two phases. The basic program includes subjects fundamental to all branches of engineering: chemistry, physics, mathematics, engineering graphics, and English. The professional phase includes intensive study in one's major and a variety of supporting work in mathematics, basic sciences, and humanities.

Engineering develops objective, analytical way of thinking

The major goal of engineering education is to develop an objective and analytical way of thinking. It is in this college that the engineers of tomorrow are trained to face the complex problems which must be solved if scientific progress is to continue. Engineering graduates are employed by industries which involve technological work, in government service, and in a number of business fields. Graduates of the College of Engineering are very much in demand and are often employed by organizations which offer rapid advancement to positions of high responsibility. In all the states, certification as a professional engineer is a prerequisite to obtaining many types of positions. The college offers cooperative programs in some of its curricula in which students may gain practical experience in engineering.

GUIDING both faculty and students, Dean Helen LeBaron continues her leadership in pioneering developments of the college.

The home economics curricula educates its students to become well-rounded family members, citizens, and professional workers. Graduates of the Home Economics College have earned a well-deserved reputation across the nation and many honors in a wide variety of fields. A graduate of this college is well equipped to be both a homemaker and a career woman. During her freshman year a home economics student takes courses both in fields of home economics and in the liberal arts. When she becomes a sophomore, she may decide on a major field of study and then concentrate her work on this and her elective fields. Majors are offered in applied art, child development, food and nutrition, education, journalism, home economics and related science, home management, physical education for women, and textiles and clothing. All students in the College of Home Economics may participate in the activities of the eight departmental clubs. Students of exceptional scholastic ability may qualify to participate in the college's honors program. A student must have a cumulative average of 3.5 or above at the end of two or more quarters to be eligible for this program. These students carry on independent research and individualized study.

Through a cooperative program with Morningside College in Sioux City a student may study at Morningside for two years and then transfer to Iowa State without the usual formalities to complete her final two years of education. Another branch of the recruitment program, the recruitment committee, promotes an interest in the Iowa State home economics school through off-campus programs, and by inviting prospective students to spend a weekend in becoming acquainted with the campus. Committee members visit high schools throughout the Middle West. In this project and in others, the students and faculty work together to promote the rapid progress.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCES AND HUMANITIES

The College of Sciences and Humanities conducts instruction which enables its students to meet the demands of the modern complex world. This college's instruction supports the curricula of all colleges in the University. The College of Sciences and Humanities provides programs leading to the Master's and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in a number of widespread fields. Research programs are carried out through the Industrial Science Research Institute. The college also offers basic and reserve training for the armed forces. An increase in the number of students in humanities has shown the need for expansion of the physical facilities of this college. An addition to the library has recently been completed; a new classroom building and a new men's gymnasium will soon be ready.

College of Sciences and Humanities educates students to live in a modern, complex world

Students with excellent scholastic records in the College of Sciences and Humanities, as in most other colleges, may participate in special honors programs which promote individual, independent study. Lampos, a local science honorary, provides recognition for those students who are outstanding in their academic fields and in activities. The program of study for sciences and humanities students gives them a broad, liberal education in seven different areas while also allowing the students to do a large amount of specializing in their major and minor fields. A student in this college must complete basic requirements in the following seven fields: English; mathematics; the physical sciences; the natural sciences; the social sciences; history, literature, philosophy; and modern languages.

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

The College of Veterinary Medicine is the oldest school of veterinary medicine in the country; it was established in 1879. It includes the departments of anatomy, hygiene, medicine and surgery, obstetrics and radiology, pathology, and physiology and pharmacology. In addition to these departments, there are the Veterinary Medical Research Institute, the Iowa Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory, and hospital and ambulatory clinics. The location of Iowa State University in the center of the nation's richest farming area provides the student in veterinary medicine with an opportunity to gain much practical experience and to observe the established veterinarian. A veterinary student may seek a career in research, in general practice, or with governmental agencies. Two years of pre-professional training, followed by four years of study in the College of Veterinary Medicine, are required of these students.

A new biomedical electronics building which houses combined facilities of the Engineering and Veterinary Medicine Colleges will aid in accelerating research in the field of medical electronics, which is one aspect of physiology. This building is located east of the science building. Diseases communicable both to man and to animals are studied by faculty and students in this college; there is also a project through which Iowa State University and the State University of Iowa cooperate in the study of public health. The College of Veterinary Medicine will certainly benefit greatly from association with the new Animal Disease Laboratory located near Ames. A two-way radio system between the college and farms surrounding Ames allows veterinarians to perform their duties very efficiently and has saved the lives of many animals; this service is offered by the field-clinic personnel. The students in this college are a very closely-knit group. They must work together often, and their hours are long and hard, yet a degree in Veterinary Medicine is a much sought goal, well worth the effort.

GRADUATE COLLEGE

During the past year nearly 1,500 students were enrolled in the Graduate College of Iowa State University. This figure represents approximately one seventh of the total enrollment. This is a fourteen percent increase over last year and is twice the national average of seven percent. There are many students from abroad pursuing graduate study on our campus; they represent over forty different countries. Because of tremendous technological advances and the increasing complexities of modern life, formal education beyond the baccalaureate degree has become almost imperative in many fields of endeavor. While enrolled in the Graduate College, many students hold either teaching or research assistantships.

Graduate College grows with rapidity unmatched by other schools

Opportunities for graduate study are available in fifty-one general areas. To be eligible for admission to the Graduate College, a student must have been in the upper one-half of his undergraduate class. Graduate students are expected to maintain a 'B' average. With today's highly specialized division of labor, one must be not only creative in making contributions to knowledge, but possess a talent for its practical application in our dynamic and ever-changing world.

RESEARCH

Iowa State University operates six different research agencies, each of which has made major contributions in basic and applied research. These agencies are the following: Agricultural Experiment Station, Engineering Experiment Station, the Institute for Atomic Research, the Industrial Science Research Institute, the Statistical Laboratory, and the Veterinary Medical Research Institute. Also the National Animal Disease Laboratory, which carries on research with highly communicable diseases, has recently been built near Ames. It will cooperate closely with the College of Veterinary Medicine.

Extension

Extension services provide the media through which the results and benefits of research are made available to all interested people. The cooperative extension service in agriculture and home economics helps people who are interested in learning new ways to improve their lives. Financial support for extension work in agriculture and home economics comes from state, federal, and county appropriations. The Iowa Engineering Extension Service was established at Iowa State University in 1914 to serve the people of the state along engineering and industrial lines and is coordinated with resident instruction and engineering research. The Engineering Extension Service offers refresher courses and industrial training programs; these short courses, visual aids programs, and lectures are all given by qualified instructors under the direction of Marvin Anderson in the Agricultural and Home Economics Extension Service and R. E. Patterson in the Engineering Extension Service.

HONORARIES

Cardinal Key

Senior Honor Society of Cardinal Key is a local, all-college, senior men's honorary whose membership is composed of men who have been outstanding leaders of college life at Iowa State University. Cardinal Key's purpose is to serve as a unifying body of undergraduate leaders and to foster and promote the cardinal virtues, leadership, service, character, and scholarship among students. Men's Leadership Day, a highlight of spring quarter, recognizes outstanding junior and senior men. A morning convocation open to all men features a nationally known speaker. In the evening a dinner is held to honor the seventy-five to ninety junior and senior men who have best displayed the cardinal virtues. One of the projects carried out by Cardinal Key is the sale of graduation announcements to the graduating seniors.

AS IS the custom, the past president of Mortar Board taps the newly chosen president; Sally Blanchard is doubly surprised.

Veishea tapping ceremony this year, as every year since 1925, was an outstanding event in the college lives of fifteen deserving women. These women were the new members of Mortar Board, highest women's honorary at Iowa State. They learned of their selection at this time when the previous year's members selected them from the crowd at the tapping ceremony. Members chose the new initiates on the basis of their scholarship, leadership, and services which they had performed for the university. Since members are selected from all colleges, Mortar Board is a unifying force among the various colleges and departments. It thus promotes co-operation between the societies and advances the spirit of service and fellowship among university women. Most university women first learn of Mortar Board at the Candle-light Induction service which Mortar Board holds as a welcome for freshmen women.

Phi Kappa Phi

Phi Kappa Phi is a national organization which exists for the dual purpose of honoring high scholastic achievement and encouraging those students who are capable of superior scholarship in all areas of academic endeavor. Thus, students in colleges of liberal arts, technology, and the various sciences and professions all stand on an equal footing for election. Each year the Iowa State University chapter elects the upper one-sixteenth of the graduating seniors, the upper one-tenth of the eligible graduate students, one alumnus, and several faculty members who have made outstanding contributions to scholarship.

Chessmen

All houses in the Men's Residence Association may submit applications for their outstanding junior and senior men for Chessmen, MRA honorary. A committee composed of the previous year's members then selects members from these applicants on the basis of their character, scholarship, and their leadership in and service to the MRA and the university. Only one per cent of the juniors and seniors in the MRA can be selected, and not more than half those selected can be seniors. Although the names of the new members aren't revealed until they are tapped at the spring MRA dance, hints are released prior to this in the form of notices placed on the bulletin boards of some of the houses stating that one of their men has been selected. Since Chessmen is an honorary organization it confines its activities to the publication of an alumni news letter and the maintenance of a picture board in the MRA office.

Tomahawk

A student passing the steps of Beardshear one day during winter quarter may have wondered what the students with the Indian feathers were doing. These were the newest members of Tomahawk going through one of the traditional rituals of pledging week. Tomahawk is a national honorary for independent sophomores. Sophomores with a grade-point of 2.25 or above are invited to join and are elected by the active members on the basis of activities, grade-point, and attitude. To be elected to the honorary a student must receive a two-thirds vote of the active members. Besides conducting a baby sitting service, members of Tomahawk also usher at university functions, and in general contribute their loyalty, service, and cooperation to Iowa State.

Lamos

Lamos is ISU's Science College honorary. It is a local honorary organized in 1953 which recognizes outstanding men and women in the College of Science and Humanities. Lamos has eight active members who are seniors, and these active members select four to eight new junior and senior members each year. New members must be in the upper one-fourth of their junior or senior classes, must have shown outstanding leadership ability, scholarship, and character, and must have contributed service to the College. The President was Sam Bowen; vice president, Ann Davidson; and secretary-treasurer, Mary Pat Read. The Faculty adviser was Professor E. W. Peterson, of the Government Department.

Membership is open to all male industrial administration students who have a 2.00 grade average and who are recommended by faculty and student members. Twenty members attended the regional convention in Chicago and remained three days for a field trip. At the spring industrial administration banquet, President James H. Hilton and Lloyd Bock, prominent C.P.A., were made honorary members. The Alpha Kappa Psi scholarship key was presented to Chris Durmond for the highest scholarship in industrial administration. Members also attended the district convention at Drake University and ushered for the Jesse Owens Convocation during Religion in Life Week. The spring pledge class built a departmental bulletin board.

This year thirty freshmen women accepted invitations to pledge Alpha Lambda Delta, which is an honorary for women who have a 3.5 gradepoint average for the first two quarters of their freshman year. A tea was held winter quarter by the members to honor and encourage freshman women who had received this gradepoint fall quarter.

Delta Phi Delta

A Christmas bazaar at which members sold various art objects which they had made was one of the projects of Delta Phi Delta, a national art honorary. Another project was an exchange of art work with students at Drake for a joint exhibit. Junior and senior art majors with a 2.5 all-college gradepoint and a 3.0 in art are eligible for membership.

Eta Kappa Nu

Each year an outstanding sophomore in electrical engineering is honored at the Eta Kappa Nu banquet. Dr. Lagerstrom, the organization's advisor, brought honors to the group by being a member of the national advisory board for the eighty-two chapters of Eta Kappa Nu throughout the United States.

Gamma Epsilon Sigma

A student wearing a large cardboard replica of the Gamma Epsilon Sigma pin discloses the fact to the campus that he is a new initiate of the industrial engineering honorary. One of the newest traditions put into effect by the honorary is giving an award to the freshman member with the highest grade point.

Gamma Gamma

Fewer than one percent of the undergraduate fraternity and sorority population are selected each year to become members of Gamma Gamma, the Greek honorary which recognizes outstanding contributions to the campus. Selections to the organization are made on the basis of scholarship and character as well as service to individual chapters, to the Greek system, and to the university community.

Omicron Nu

Promotion of scholarship, leadership, and research in home economics are the purposes of Omicron Nu, the home economics scholarship honor society. Juniors must have a grade point average of 3.2, seniors a 3.1, and graduate students a 3.5 to be eligible for membership. A twenty-five dollar award was given to an outstanding Omicron Nu member who indicated need and professional interest.

Phi Eta Sigma

The national honorary for freshman men, Phi Eta Sigma, was organized in 1923. To be eligible, a freshman must have a grade point of 3.5 or higher at the end of the first quarter, or a cumulative grade point 3.5 at the end of the second or third quarter. The purpose of the organization is the promotion and encouragement of high scholastic achievement in the freshman year. Prospective members were invited to a fall smoker, and qualifying men were initiated at the spring banquet. The honorary has 69 active members. Faculty advisor of Phi Eta Sigma was D. M. Anderson, associate professor in modern language. Officers were Ralph E. Patterson, president; Steven D. Wood, vice-president; Harry R. Leffler, secretary; and, Clark W. Munger, treasurer. Meetings are called by the president when necessary.

AMONG THOSE listed on the scholastic honorary plaques in Beardshear foyer are former members of Phi Eta Sigma; names of these present members may appear there in the future.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia

Last fall, Phi Mu Alpha, national men's music honorary, presented, in co-sponsorship with the Music Council, a jazz concert featuring the Four Freshmen. Phi Mu Alpha pledges men with outstanding musical ability who have been recommended by a member of the music faculty. The members of Phi Mu Alpha serve as ushers for concerts on campus and give informal campus serenades.

Phi Upsilon Omicron

One of the projects sponsored by members of Phi Upsilon Omicron, home economics honorary, was selling fruitcakes. The money made from this was used for a scholarship given to a girl in home economics. The bases for this scholarship, given each year, are home economics activities, scholarship, and need. The size of the scholarship depends on the amount of money made from projects.

Pi Mu Epsilon

Pi Mu Epsilon strives to promote scholarly activity in mathematics by electing members on an honorary basis according to their proficiency in mathematics. These sixty-six members are in the top third of their class and have received a 3.5 in mathematics. Two delegates from Iowa State were sent to the national convention in Stillwater, Oklahoma last summer.

Pi Tau Sigma

Pledges of this mechanical engineering honorary help to stimulate interest in and coordinate departmental activities through their projects. One thing that they did last spring quarter was to make a display board for the ASME office showing the pictures of all the faculty along with a short excerpt giving each instructor's career history up to that time.

Sigma Alpha Iota

Members of Sigma Alpha Iota are women at Iowa State selected on the basis of participation in music activities. One thing that they do each year is to sponsor a competitive singing fest for women's residences — better known as Sor-Dor. At Christmas time the members, along with the members of Phi Mu Alpha, carol at the homes of music faculty members.

Sigma Delta Chi

Sigma Delta Chi is the professional journalism society for men. To be elected to the honorary a student must have a 2.0 grade point and demonstrate proficiency and vocational interest in journalism. Twice a year Sigma Delta Chi sponsors high school writing contests as well as annually publishing and selling the Petticoat Pamphlet.

Sigma Gamma Tau

Sigma Gamma Tau is the national aerospace engineering honorary for upperclassmen. Its aim is to recognize and honor the individuals in the field of aerospace engineering who are a credit to their profession by virtue of their outstanding scholarship, integrity, and achievement. Sigma Gamma Tau teamed with the Institute of Aerospace Sciences to prepare a Veishea open house.

Theta Sigma Phi

Last April the student chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary, joined with the alumnae chapter in sponsoring a breakfast at which the outstanding women in journalism and communications from the Ames area were honored. Members served at the dinner honoring the retiring head of the journalism department and also at the reception to welcome the new department head.

Engineering students in the upper one-fifth of their class are considered for membership by the active members of Tau Beta Pi, engineering scholastic honorary. New members are elected at smokers in the spring and fall. To help freshmen engineering students, members make themselves available through the various engineering departments for free tutoring work. The organization sponsored the building of a bulletin board in Marston Hall on which each engineering honorary may obtain space for the posting of information about their organizations. Members also planned the erection of a four foot-high bronze Tau Beta Pi insignia near the entrance of Marston Hall. The society honored outstanding alumni at a winter banquet. Four faculty men shared the duties of faculty advisors — Professors Bullinger, Fellingner, Murphy and Pohn.

VOCALIZING is just one part of Tau Beta Pi pledge training, each day on Beardshear steps, they sing the songs of ISU.

Tau Sigma Delta

The initiation banquet for Tau Sigma Delta, architecture and allied arts honorary, featured Des Moines Sculptor, Fred Torrey, as speaker. Mr. Torrey presented a complete technical film commentary on his largest sculpturing project. Active members select new members from eligible candidates on the basis of scholarship and service.

Knights of St. Patrick

A St. Patrick's Day Dance, open to the public, was financed by initiation fees of the engineering activities honorary, Guard of St. Patrick. It served as occasion for the Guard's initiation. A tug-of-war tournament for teams representing each department of the College of Engineering was held by the Guard of St. Patrick during Homecoming.

Arnold Air Society

Installation of officers and activation of pledges of Arnold Air Society, the military professional honorary for Air Force ROTC cadets, took place at a formal ceremony in April. Money earned from concession stands operated by the group at basketball games and during Veishea was used to finance a dance and several picnics for members.

Advanced Artillery Cadets

Members of the Society of Advanced Artillery Cadets put the money they earned from their Veishea concession stand to good use. They used it to finance a picnic and a dinner party while they were at Fort Sill for summer camp. The organization strives to acquaint members with the social aspects of military life for an officer.

Scabbard and Blade

REPRESENTING the three military divisions on campus are Jerry Shafer, Navy; John Van Diepen, Army; and Terry Stine, Air Force.

Scabbard and Blade serves to act as a unifying force among the three divisions of military science. This year the society sponsored awards for the basic cadets' inter-service drill competition held spring quarter, and held the Cadre Tea winter quarter for all ROTC staff officers and their wives. The organization further serves to unify the departments by the nature of its organization, as members are selected from the upper quarter of the classes of all three divisions of advanced ROTC. Juniors and seniors are pledged fall and spring quarters and undergo a week of pledge-ship known as Buck Week. During this week the pledges stand guard in the Gold Star Hall of the Memorial Union. Members serve as escorts for the Veishea queen and her attendants.

Pershing Rifles

Iowa State's company of Pershing Rifles placed fifth in the second regiment in the two day spring drill competition held in Minneapolis for companies from seven midwest colleges and universities. At the banquet held the evening after the drill, the company's honorary sponsor Joyce Rice won second place in the regimental sponsor competition.

PUBLICATIONS

Ames Forester

Supplying interested students, faculty and alumni with articles on the various facets of forestry, alumni news and information on activities of the forestry department at Iowa State University is the function of the Ames Forester.

Iowa Agriculturist

The Iowa Agriculturist is written by, about, and for the student in the College of Agriculture. The Agriculturist serves as an important link in communication between the ag student and his faculty and college. The staff tries to concentrate editorial content on subjects which are of specific interest to ag students. The other function of the Agriculturist is to provide a training ground for students while in college. The magazine is a business operation, and students are able to gain valuable experience in learning to handle the operation like a professional business. The business side of the Agriculturist provides on the job training where students are able to gain experience in business management and sales. The Agriculturist was first published in 1902.

IN AN UNUSUALLY formal session on publication row, Editors Bill Berkland and George White confer with business manager John Rooks on the proposed layout for the latest issue.

PASTING-UP sessions are not drudgery in the Engineer office; at least not when only the "Old Dog Sez" remains.

Iowa Engineer

At the Engineering College Magazines associated national convention, the Iowa Engineer received the third-place award for the best all-around magazine and fourth-place for the best single issue. For many years the Engineer has been a consistent winner of these awards and one of the outstanding college engineering magazines. The Engineer is a serious publication which serves to acquaint students with developments in the field of engineering. As all the writing, editing, and managing of the magazine is handled by engineering students, the Engineer provides an opportunity to become acquainted with many phases of the production of a publication. This is especially important since it provides experience not specifically offered in the engineering curriculum.

Iowa Homemaker

THE STAFF have an obvious advantage over their reading public as they get to read the Homemaker before its distribution to the women's residences.

One of the only two student home economics publications in the United States is the Iowa Homemaker magazine. It is designed to teach students more about magazine production through practical experience. A training school for prospective staff members was held during the first weeks of spring quarter; women enrolled in home economics who were interested in working on the Iowa Homemaker attended. Staff members meet twice a month to plan issues for the following two months. Also, at this time the work of the staff is evaluated. General work is done in the University Press Building. The magazine is distributed mainly for students in home economics. It deals with local events happening on the campus and any new developments in home economics. The magazine aids in letting the home economics faculty know more about students and in helping students to become better acquainted with their faculty.

Iowa State Scientist

Approximately 25 science students cooperate each month to meet the monthly deadline for the campus publication, the Iowa State Scientist. The magazine is published October through May. The Scientist brings news from the College of Science and Humanities to the students and faculty. Staff members do all ad selling, layouts, editorial matter, and photography. Last year a special Veishea edition was sent to each prospective incoming freshman in the Science and Humanities College. A special award is given annually to the best all-round article, either fiction or fact, appearing in the Scientist. The Scientist has been published on the Iowa State University campus since 1948. This year the Scientist was under the leadership of Editor Ann Nelson. Helping her to make the magazine a success were Associate Editors Joan Keim and Howard Green. Mr. Rodney Fox, of the journalism department, served as faculty adviser.

THE FRENZIED PACE of deadline time has yet to ruffle the calm of editor Ann Nelson and associate editor Howard Green.

Iowa State University Veterinarian

The flurry of activity in the Veterinarian quarters scattered dust in all directions as the staff and equipment finally settled in a permanent office in the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory. From this new headquarters the Veterinarian was issued three times during the year for students of veterinary medicine and for veterinarians throughout the country. The copies given to the Iowa State University Library are used in an international exchange program; the Veterinarian's world-wide circulation includes over thirty countries. The writing, editing, and publishing of this magazine serves both the staff and the readers. Students and staff members of the College of Veterinary Medicine, as well as veterinarians throughout the world, may submit manuscripts for publication. Thus, the subscribers are rapidly informed of new developments in the field of veterinary medicine.

WEARING TRADITIONAL vet med white shirts and ties, Roger Turk, Adolph Stepan, and Cordell Schilmoeller carry out their duties as staff members in a businesslike manner.

Sketch and Writer's Roundtable

Opportunities for students to demonstrate and develop their creative writing skills are provided by Sketch and Writer's Roundtable. Sketch, the student edited and managed quarterly magazine, contains writing and art work selected from the work which interested students have submitted to Sketch Board. Sketch Board also promotes interest in literature by sponsoring Books and Cokes, a series of book reviews presented by students. Writer's Roundtable is a group of students interested in developing their creative writing abilities. The organization meets once a week to discuss and critically analyze the writings of the members. Writer's Roundtable is officially connected with Sketch through its representative to Sketch Board and unofficially through the submission to Sketch for publication of many of the writings presented at Roundtable discussions.

ACTUALLY it's all business. Managing editor Dennis Eilers made final approval of all copy, including the work of Ann Niehaus, before it was set.

MANY A FRIDAY night, editor Dick Daak forsook his inneroffice throne to work on the rim with the rest of the Daily hierarchy.

Iowa State Daily

Hushed reverence occasionally reigns in the inner office, occupied by editor, two associate editors, fading rose petals, and a "modern fiction" lending library. Such is the scene as the one, two, or three editors prepare editorials, coordinate the paper, or sell bubble gum. Not only does the editor-in-chief set up the editorial policy, censor letters to the editor, lay out the editorial pages, write editorials, and choose worthy editorials from other publications for reprint in the Daily; but each day upon his broad shoulders rests the responsibility for choosing an appropriate "Little Man on Campus."

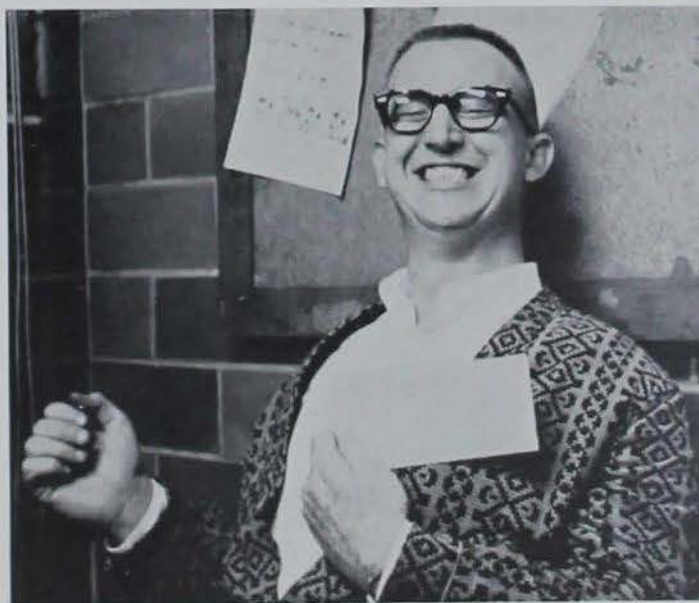

THURSDAY NIGHT staff meetings are question, answer, and work sessions. Results of Anderson's Amazons are posted.

Just outside the inner office, with one foot inside the door, the managing editor completes the general beat sheet (translation: list of reporting assignments) a day ahead of publication. At the same time, the society and sports editors are creatively constructing their respective beat sheets to be as interesting as possible. In addition to volunteer reporters, students of technical journalism classes write these assignments and turn them in to the respective editors. The beat sheets decorate the well-holed bulletin board on the east wall of the main office. Seasoned reporters are quite skilled in locating the beat sheets when they're hidden beneath reams of paper, but amateurs must refer to the editor's map of the bulletin board. Everyone reads the Daily bulletin board, and no wonder! The latest triumphant data regarding Anderson's Amazons or the Daily Dynamos may be displayed — as well as the critique of the previous Daily issue. Each faculty member has a day to evaluate the Daily, and his critique is duly posted.

JACK-OF-ALL-TRADES of the Daily staff was Nancy Anderson who efficiently served as associate editor, managing editor, and new editor in chief. Nancy is affectionately known as nanderson.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR, Jim Avey, had no complaints when the monthly check appeared. In fact, on pay day the check replaced his red badge of courage.

AS SPORTS editor, Vince Bradley was a walking Iowa State athletic encyclopedia. Jim Grunig succeeded him winter quarter.

Any stranger wandering into the Iowa State Daily office in the Press Building, which is continually humming with activity, is apt to be struck by seeming confusion. Members of the editorial staff, pounding on typewriters, listening at telephones or huddled in conference, all go about their work. Each is part of the over-all organization necessary in getting the Daily out every Tuesday through Saturday during the regular school year. Published to serve the entire University community, the paper is largely the work of journalism students interested in gaining experience in their chosen profession. They start out, usually, as reporters who get daily story assignments from a beat sheet posted by the managing editor. Tips for the stories are contributed by many persons, ranging from public relations officers to college deans. In turn, the reporters contact students and staff members serving in various capacities of the University operation. Writing their stories, they check for new angles and leads, then turn the finished product over to the night editor and copy editors working on the rim, the horseshoe-shaped copy desk.

LINE OF SUCCESSION. At winter graduation, Ken Cargill relinquished his position as advertising manager to Jay Feld.

BUSINESS MANAGER and emergency copywriter for the Bomb, Al Buch kept the Daily out of the red.

At the copy desk late every afternoon and on into the evening, the editors go over the stories with pencils ready to pounce, shaping the copy into readable style. Here the night editor positions the stories and pictures on the layout pages prepared by the advertising staff and work with the others writing headlines. As each story, headline and page is completed, it is sent downstairs to the "backshop." The editor-in-chief, the sports editor, and society editor prepare their pages in much the same manner. When the layouts are down and the pages are being built, the proof-reader checks the galley proof, and the various editors are on hand to make necessary changes on their pages. One by one the page proofs are ready and corrections made. When the final page has been corrected, all are taken back to the press. Now, after long hours at work, the staff can only wait. The managing editor may make out the next day's beat sheet, or, with the others, try to catch up on class assignments. In a short time the dull, grinding thud of the press is heard. Tomorrow's news, hot off the press, is checked once more and the staff may now leave for much needed study or sleep.

SOCIETY EDITOR, Judy Dorrell, handled features on fashions and other special items of interest to women as well as the Campus Calendar and news of pinnings and engagements.

AMONG others, Kayleen Honeck regularly took her turn on the rim. Kayleen edited New Dimensions during winter quarter.

Seven million dollars a year! Iowa State students spend that much each school year; merchants realize this financial fact and consequently advertise in the Daily. The Daily is the most direct medium for reaching the most students; through circulation methods between twelve and fourteen thousand people read this campus paper each day. Students on the business staff are responsible for the advertising and budgeting of the publication. National advertising is shipped to the Daily from New York, but students wear out the shoe leather pounding the pavements of Ames for local advertising. Advertising provides half the cost of publishing the Daily; the other half comes from activity fees; $1.25 per student per quarter is allotted to the Daily. The publication grosses $65,000 a year from advertising and activity fee allotment.

PUBLICATION BOARD

DAILY Publication Board consisted of Jerry Hansen, secretary; John Archer; Leslie Graham; Willard Latham, president; William Kunerth, faculty advisor; Jack Oak; and Frank Berry, faculty advisor. Missing from the picture are K. R. Marvin and Keith Huntress, both presidentially appointed members.

Bomb

MINUS the customary rose in a coke-bottle vase, Audrey Dutton, editor, relaxes in one of the frequent staff consultation sessions — complete with coke, cookies, and a desk piled high with pictures and copy.

HELPING WITH the handling of bill payments, collections of contract payments and other monetary dealings, was Dave Hatala, assistant business manager.

Telephones demanding in discord, typewriters clattering in conflict, Coke and Pepsi bottles in abundance — all these characterized the Bomb editorial and business offices about four o'clock in the afternoon. Occasionally, the business staff allowed an emissary from the editorial staff to cross the yellow line separating the two offices. In truth, the two staffs worked closely and congenially in an attempt to publish a book balanced three ways, editorially, pictorially, and financially. It was this business staff which launched the new promotional campaigns which raised book sales to the greatest number on record. In such an efficient manner, the business staff managed the $42,000 enterprise of putting out 5,800 copies of the 1962 Bomb. Although the financially minded frowned on the expense of painting the weary wooden tables in lively shades of mint green, cocoa brown, and mandarin orange, all was forgiven as the editorial staff fulfilled its sacred responsibility of caring for the newest addition to the staff, the Yogi Bear cookie jar. The editorial staff filled it; the business staff depleted it.

BILL SERGEANT, business manager, and sales manager, Bill Pardoe, conducted and executed the '62 Bomb sales campaign with success heretofore unmatched. Additional sales allowed Serge a wee bit more flexibility in managing the budget.

Four o'clock was the busiest time in the office, but all day, every day, the book was being put together. In fact, the section editors and managing editors began scheming early in spring during Veishea time. Advertisements to attract willing and talented staff members plastered pages of the Daily and doors of the Bomb offices. Such foresightedness reaped benefits as the recruits became staff members early in the fall. Assigned to sections of their choice, new staff members collectively wrote volumes of copy which they submitted to section editors, copy editor, and managing editor for editing. Through this triple handling, each piece of copy evolved to fit the space designed for it, to say what it was intended to say, and to tell its story in an interesting manner.

SHARON VON OHLEN found the steady taste of glue to be quite common as she prepared each picture to fit the layout. Sharon was managing editor of photography.

PICTURESQUE. This one word almost became Joan Keim's motto for the features section which is, incidentally, comprised mainly of pictures.

YOU can find it yourself this year in the Bomb due to this team of calculators. Ann Sargeant and Ann Murray, index co-editors, organized columns of scrawled names into the compact index.

ALL the copy in the Bomb passed under the pencils of copy editor Joan Hugi and managing editor Julie Briggs.

WITH "YOGI BEAR" as editor-in-chief for the hour, Deanna Michael, Jean Ackerman, and Rita Campbell bend intently over their typewriters preparing the senior section.

WILLA BANNISTER and Kelly Barcus assigned, selected, and edited write-ups for the 105 organizations and 93 residences. Willa will edit the '63 book.

B O M B PHOTOGRAPHERS appeared at campus events, club meetings and even in classes to get pictures of life at Iowa State.

BARBARA GOWAN and Sherry Arcless, Academic and Sports editors, respectively, were seldom without a "herd" book. Both editors made innumerable telephone calls to gather information.

MARILYN BRATTEN and Mary Weir shared the responsibility for utilizing the telephone to its utmost capabilities as they scheduled pictures for the six sections.

Photographers were glimpsed periodically as they dropped in for a camera, strobe, film, or keys to the darkroom. Of the nine hundred pictures in the book, seven hundred were taken by the talented fourteen-man photography staff. The photography staff, editorial staff, and business staff were all grateful to the efficient publication board, a governing council made up of student and faculty representatives. The board appropriated the funds to publish the Bomb. They voted on engraving company and cover manufacturer bids, sanctioned necessary photo equipment, and planned the annual chicken barbeque. Together, the publication board and the Bomb staff present the 1962 Bomb to you.

ART CREDITS in the Bomb this year go to Jeanne Young who filled the newest position on the staff, art editor. In sessions like this, ideas developed for the cover and division pages.

ONCE ESCAPED from his lair, Robert "the Fox" Johnson, head photographer, may be found instructing photog students in darkroom technique.

If you carved a pumpkin at Halloween time this year, there is a possibility that you bought it from the Science Women's Club. This was one of their money-making projects for the year. They also raised money by selling sandwiches and having a bake sale. The money raised from these projects was used for a one hundred-dollar scholarship given each spring to a deserving member of the club and for a gift presented to the highest graduating senior in the college of Science and Humanities. Science Women's Club is a local departmental organization open to all women in the College of Science and Humanities and the College of Engineering. The club was started a few years after the introduction of science to the campus. The purpose is to bring together the women in the different fields of science for educational and social purposes. They meet twice a month to explore the numerous fields of science. The fall meetings included tours of the atomic energy building, the greenhouse, and the veterinary medicine building.

Farm Operations Club

NOMINATING committeemen, Stan Laues, Jerry Hodson and Jim Turner discuss prospects for next year's officers.

A reception for freshmen students was held last fall by the Farm Operation Club members. They also had a watermelon feed, as well as a Veishea open house display and a concession stand. The Farm Operation Club is a departmental club in the College of Agriculture. The one hundred and twenty five members pay a membership fee and have an interest in farm operation. The organization provides farm operation students with a means of participation in extra-curricular activities and develops fellowship and leadership among students enrolled in the farm operation curriculum. Promoting these objectives were a winter quarter banquet and the spring picnic at the 4-H camp. At monthly meetings a speaker discusses a topic of interest to the group. The club is a local group organized in 1950. Serving as head of the group the past year was Jerry Hodson; Dr. Duane Acker was faculty advisor.

Generally, one hundred per cent of the students in the College of Veterinary Medicine are members of the Iowa State student chapter of American Veterinary Medical Association. This year a program of student counseling was initiated by the association to help pre-vet students. Under this program, a member of each class worked with the faculty in advising pre-vet students. A committee composed of students and faculty was established to visit high school career days to inform students about the field of veterinary medicine. The projects AVMA undertakes are divided up among the various classes. For instance, the Veishea open house display is practically the sole responsibility of the freshman and sophomore members, while some of the other activities such as the banquet and winter smoker are planned by juniors or seniors.

The projects of AVMA include various social activities and give students a chance to develop contacts with other students, alumni, and faculty members. A stag picnic, semi-formal dance, banquets, Christmas party, and smoker were some of the activities included on AVMA's calendar of events. The spring picnic, which was served by the faculty, was the occasion for the presentation of over ten cash awards to individual students. The annual fall banquet is traditionally the time for presentation of the Borden Foundation grant of $300 to the senior who has the highest over-all grade average for the first three years of veterinary school. Gerald Crawley received the grant this year. Another fact that made the banquet an important event this year was that Mark Morris, national president of AVMA, was the featured speaker.

GOVERNMENT

Student government at Iowa State is composed of three branches. They are the legislative, or student senate; the administrative, or the cabinet; and the judicial, which consists of the supreme court and the traffic court of appeals. Cardinal Guild formulates policies for students to follow, expresses student opinion, serves as a channel of communication between the students and the university administration, and in addition, provides activities advisory service and orchestra service to the student body.

PRESIDENT DICK GIMER and Vice-president Dan Loper combined efforts to lead the student governing body.

Compulsory ROTC, the accumulative traffic fine system, and restricted parking areas were a few of the existing situations which inspired action from the student government body. Cardinal Guild Senate, the legislative body, took a stand on the ROTC issue by passing a resolution which called for a voluntary ROTC program. After studying the present traffic fine system, Senate passed a bill favoring a change to a non-accumulative traffic fine system. Senate also passed a resolution recommending increased service parking areas on central campus.

NOMINATIONS are made and ballots are cast from the floor in a system of delegation roll call at the all university nominating convention.

VOTING, which resulted in ratification of the new constitution, completed; the vote counters move in.

Innovations undertaken by Cardinal Guild Senate included the extension of women's week-night hours for the purpose of library study, the establishment of an educational travel bureau for students, and the beginning of a "people-to-people" program. This is designed to help foreign students at Iowa State become better acquainted with other students and adjust to ISU. One feature of the program was the pairing off of incoming foreign students with other Iowa State students who gave help in all the problems of getting established at Iowa State, from finding a room to starting at the right end of the registration line.

ALL-UNIVERSITY nominating convention ended with the selection of Morris Mikkelson and Bob Vasko as candidates for student body president.

Drafting a new constitution for the student body government constituted a major project this year. The revised constitution was approved by the student body in an all-university vote winter quarter. The new Constitution which takes effect in 1962 changed the name of the governing body from Cardinal Guild to Government of the Student Body of Iowa State University. The change which attracted the most attention was the decrease in the size of the senate. Under the new constitution the Senate is composed of one senator from each residence association, one from each college, and three senators at-large. Under the old constitution, there were two from each college, two from residence groups, and seven at-large.

Unification of the various departments of the College of Agriculture is one of the functions performed by Agriculture Council as it serves as a link between students and faculty. The council passes information about university activities on to the departmental clubs and helps the Agriculturalist publicize the college by paying part of the expense of sending issues to high schools. Events sponsored by Agriculture council included a reception for agriculture freshman; Autumn Cotillion, Ag. Council's fall dance; and the All-Ag Banquet. At the All-Ag Banquet, four outstanding senior men in the College of Agriculture were honored. Recognition was given to outstanding high school seniors and the outstanding departmental club was given an award. Herbert Philbrick, famous former counteresp, was the featured speaker for the banquet.

A jack-of-all-trades function is performed by Engineering Council for the various engineering departmental clubs. The council, first of all, serves as a unifying and coordinating body for the clubs, partly by having all the clubs represented on the council. The council also provides help to the clubs on planning of their programs for meetings and on obtaining special speakers for meetings. Job finding services were provided to individual students by the distribution of notices of job interviews. Council also sees that high school students who are interested in going into engineering receive information about course work they would have to take in college as well as information about the field of engineering. In addition to these general services, Engineering Council sponsored an informal dance, "S to the 5th," fall quarter at which a king and queen of engineering were crowned.

Home Economics Council

Iowa State's Home Economics Council is affiliated with the National Home Economics Council and was organized on this campus to strengthen and co-ordinate college club activities. This summer three council members attended the American Home Economics Association convention which was held in Ohio. Attendance gave the council a chance to learn more about the national program for all home economics councils. During winter quarter, the local council sponsored a series of convocations at which topics related to home economics were discussed. A U. N. tea for foreign students, selling cookbooks filled with faculty favorites, and sponsoring three scholarships for home economics students, were only three of the many projects undertaken by the group.

Science Council

Last fall, Science Council was host at a science reception for freshmen and transfer students in the College of Science and Humanities. Science Council, a part of the student government, is the council for the College of Science and Humanities. The council consists of twelve members: five seniors, five juniors, and two Cardinal Guild senators from the college. Together, these members attempt to coordinate and encourage activities within the college in order to promote a feeling of unity. In line with this objective, the council sponsored firesides in homes of faculty members both in the spring and fall. The council also acts as a liaison between the students of the college and the administration. Throughout the year, the council conducted a study of the departmental clubs and the various curricula to determine what, if any, improvements could be made. Science Council meets every other week for two hours.

FACULTY FIRESIDES which gave students a chance to visit some of their professors in their homes were planned at the winter quarter mealtime meetings of the Council.

Veterinary Medicine Council

SECLUDED in the conference room of the vet med clinic, Veterinary Medicine Council members spent their Thursday nights planning the programs for AVMA meetings.

As the Veterinary Medicine Council is one and the same thing as the executive council for the student chapter of American Veterinary Medical Association, most of the work of the council involves the planning of the program for AVMA. This work includes the planning and scheduling of AVMA meetings, and the organization of committees to plan AVMA's special events such as the annual fall banquet, Christmas party and Veishea open house display. The council also has the responsibility of carrying out the provisions of the AVMA constitution, by-laws, Honor Code, and Code of Ethics, and acts upon all charges of misconduct filed against persons enrolled in the College of Veterinary Medicine. The council decides as to the eligibility of AVMA members for awards and designates the time for their presentation as well as passing on the eligibility of applicants for membership in AVMA.

Pammel Community Council

Administrative problems of the married student housing community are handled by the group's own elected government, Pammel Council, in cooperation with the University Department of Residence. The council is composed of nine councilmen, one from each of the Pammel and Hawthorne Court zones, and a mayor who is elected by the community as a whole. Pammel Council tried to promote better relations with the Ames Chamber of Commerce by meeting them in their auto safety check. The council also provides the maintenance of a three man police force for the Pammel Court area. This police force is concerned mainly with enforcing traffic laws and regulating solicitors, as well as having full police powers.

CITIZEN of the year award is presented at Pammel's spring dance. Charles Gibley receives the award from Roger Hanson.

STUDYING plays second fiddle to a transistor analysis taking place between Stan Smith, chemistry graduate student, and his son. Stan received his doctorate this year.

Nearly 1,000 married students and their families are housed in the university housing provided at Pammel and Hawthorne Courts. This concentration of a large proportion of Iowa State's married students enables them to develop their own integral community. The community has all the features of other small communities; including a grocery store, laundry, and recreation hall as well as having its own governing body and newspaper, the bi-weekly Pammel Court News. And, of course, a playground is indispensable to any community with as high a concentration of young children.

STUCK at the Pammel laundry with their families' wash, Demetrius Papageoriou and Paul Taiganides try to speed the process by helping each other.

Married life may enrich, but it also complicates life for the students who undertake it. Getting meals, doing the family laundry, and other household jobs must be fitted in around studying, writing term papers, and taking finals. In spite of the difficulties married life entails, about one-fifth of Iowa State's students evidently have decided that the advantages outweigh the disadvantages.

PRESENTS and a visit with Santa Claus were provided for children at the Pammel Court Christmas party.

THE FOUR PREPS appeared in Great Hall to give a concert winter quarter. This was also the occasion for announcement of Bomb Beauties.

Student Union Board represents the student body on the Board of Directors of the Memorial Union. The student board consists of two members from each of the five colleges and one representative from both Cardinal Guild and Orchestra Service. Members are selected in all-university elections; qualifications specify that only juniors and seniors can serve on the board. Members of Union Board attended the region eight Student Union Board convention at Kansas State University in December. At the convention, Bill Murray, an Iowa State Union Board member, was elected vice-president of the region, which includes Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, and Missouri. At their weekly meetings, the Union Board members plan such Union activities as News Forum, Books and Coffee, Dinner with a Prof., Reel Reviews, Club 2000, and Varieties. Union Board also plans the quarterly registration dances, a fall quarter mixer and an open house night for foreign students.

Louis Armstrong who came to the campus spring quarter to give a jazz concert, and the Four Preps, who gave a winter quarter concert, were brought to Iowa State through Union Board's efforts. For most of the activities Union Board sponsors, however, local Iowa State talent is used. For instance, Varieties uses the wit and acting ability of the members of the various residence groups. Club 2000 employs the skill of the university's music groups, and Dinner with a Prof., Books and Coffee, and News Forum rely on the talents of the faculty members.

COMPETING for flash act sweepstakes at Varieties, the Sig Ep trio won the applause of the audience for their folk singing although they didn't carry away the trophy.

Student Religious Council

Religion in Life week is the largest single project undertaken by Student Religious Council. By setting aside a full week for a time of emphasis on religion, the members of SRC hope to give some students a chance to take time from their busy schedules to consider the significance of religion to them. "Do More than Exist - Live" was the theme for this year's RIL Week. The week, which started off with "all out to church Sunday," included morning radio broadcasts of matins, chapel services, discussions and convocations. These convocations included special convocations for men, women, and freshmen as well as the three all-university convocations. Regular activities such as Books and Coffee and News Forum also adjusted their programs to fit in with the program of emphasis on religions. Residence groups participated in the RIL Week with nightly discussions and vesper services.

RECEPTIONS were held for the speakers following the major Religion in Life Week convocations. Ezra T. Benson elaborated on a few points he made in his speech.

LARRY SIME PRESIDED over the religious book display during RIL Week. The display featured a book by Dr. Trueblood, speaker at the opening convocation.

PROFESSIONAL SINGER and former athlete, Episcopal minister Rev. A. Balfour Patterson, Jr., spoke at Religion in Life Week's closing convocation.

DR. ELTON TRUEBLOOD, professor of religion and philosophy at Earlham College, gave the opening convocation speech. Classes were dismissed for the hour of this convocation.

REVIEWER for Books and Coffee during Religion in Life Week was Rev. George Graham, minister of the Iowa City First Baptist Church.

SRC helps coordinate campus religious activities

In addition to Religion in Life Week, Student Religious Council has several other responsibilities. Many of these come under the general category of coordination of religious activities of the ISU student body. The membership composition itself is a big factor in this coordination, as the council is composed of representatives from the various churches. SRC also held weekly chapel services each Thursday at 6:45 p.m. in the Memorial Union, sponsored a clothing drive spring quarter for World University Service, and sponsored a convocation fall quarter with Brook Hays as featured speaker.

LUTHER COLLEGE CHOIR, which has been featured on two national radio broadcasts, sang at the final convocation.

The Christian Science college organization at Iowa State is one of many throughout the world. Weekly testimonial meetings are held every Tuesday evening in the Memorial Union. Each year the organization sponsors an all-university lecture concerning Christian Science. The group also shows films about Christian Science and helps with the sale of the Christian Science Monitor.

Unmarried students who belong to the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church may become members of Gamma Delta, International Association of Lutheran University students. Students who don't belong to the church, but who are interested in the organization are welcomed as associate members. Gamma Delta tries to encourage the development of Christian faith through its program aimed at improving members' knowledge of the Christian religion and of the Lutheran Church. At the group's regular Sunday night meetings, half hour vesper services precede supper and the evening's program put on by members. Projects of the group included the support of a scholarship program for Indian students interested in church work, making of minor improvements and repairs at the church and student center, and adding to the record library in the student lounge. Money for these projects was made by the members at Veishea refreshment stands.

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship

Several members of Iowa State's interdenominational organization, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, attended the national Inter-Varsity Fellowship convention at Urbana, Illinois, during Christmas vacation. The regular year's program for the fellowship consisted of Bible study, discussions, conferences, prayer groups, socials, and weekly meetings.

Sigma Theta Epsilon

Men's Methodist service fraternity, Sigma Theta Epsilon, performed various services around the Methodist Church from pinch-hitting for the janitor when he was sick, to addressing Church newsletters. About 800 students belong to Newman Club, the national Roman Catholic student organization. A full day retreat started the fall activities for the group. At this retreat members engaged in silent meditation and listened to a speech by Father O'Rourke, the national executive of the rural life conference. Later in the fall, members participated in another retreat. This one lasted for the full weekend and was held in conjunction with the other Iowa college Newman Clubs.

On the light side of the activity scene for Newman Club members there was a treasure hunt and dance and an imitation of a gambling party, Nugget Casino. The annual semi-formal dance was held winter quarter. At this dance, the Arthur Murray dancers provided intermission entertainment. In addition to the social activities and retreats, Newman Club members met regularly for Sunday night suppers and had the opportunity to participate in philosophy and theology classes for the laity.

A unique merger on the college level of the National Lutheran Council churches resulted in the formation of University Lutheran. This student congregation brings together eight Lutheran synods which are presently negotiating general merger relationships. As University Lutheran is a student congregation, student members are responsible for maintaining the church and managing: Worship services, Sunday evening programs, publicity, study groups, janitor service, and social events of the church.

Iowa State's University Lutheran Congregation has grown since its establishment in 1960 to a membership of approximately two hundred and fifty students, and plans are being made to expand the facilities of the organization by building a chapel at the site of the University Lutheran Center. In addition to handling the regular work involved in the maintenance of such a church group, the members worked with children at the Lutheran Children's Home in Ames and published a monthly newsletter.

CAMPUS BAPTIST CHURCH

CHAPELS in the student centers provide places for meditation; Japanese and American students kneel at the cross.

CHURCHES NEAR CAMPUS and those in downtown Ames provide students the opportunity for regular worship.

GOALS of the fellowships' educational programs include development of a broader understanding of both the individual denominations and other religious philosophies.

COFFEE HOURS, open houses, parties, and after class get-togethers bring students to the various student centers for relaxation and fellowship.

TIME in the daily schedule of campus ministers is reserved for counseling students.

Welcome is extended to any Iowa State student who wishes to participate in Community living

Campus Christian groups seek to develop a maximum sense of togetherness and oneness for all students and staff. The various aspects of programs contributing to this development are traveling seminars, Bible study groups, and group-study analyses of current issues, great literature, and drama. Members of Covenant Community chose to live together as a close-knit group to round out their college experience. In living together, members have enjoyed meals, prayer, discussion, and study sessions together for the second year.

BAPTIST STUDENT FELLOWSHIP provided Covenant Community, a living environment in which the members live together as a close-knit group.

FELLOWSHIPS UNITE for retreats on which the members discuss and analyze issues of the university and the church.

ATTENDING RETREATS gives fellowship members time to worship and study undisturbed by the distractions of campus life.

Retreats stimulate individual depth

Retreats provide an opportunity for students to get away from campus to think about the numerous ideas that are presented them every day. Experience in international, interracial, and interdenominational relations is acquired by students during study, worship, and recreation on these retreats. Student leadership is also given a chance to develop in the informal setting of a campfire or hillside worship service. Opportunity is also provided for students to meet prominent faculty members and noted theologians on common ground for discussions.

CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS are a part of church-sponsored summer work programs, which also include training in youth counseling, migrant ministry, settlement and social work.

OHIO UNIVERSITY at Athens was the scene of the last "Outreach Conference" attended in highest percentage by members of Iowa State student fellowships.

YWCA-YMCA

"To Live—For What?" To discuss this important question, joint groups of Young Women's Christian Association and Young Men's Christian Association retreated to the Des Moines "Y" camp. The groups spent two days discussing various aspects of faith, love, and justice. They also held a leadership conference where the groups learned about techniques in group dynamics. International Friendship programs took form giving international students a chance to become better acquainted with Iowa and its people. Throughout the year, explorer groups discussed such topics as hot spots in current affairs, faculty-student relations, and Bible study. Both groups have regular meetings at which guest speakers are featured. Members remember that their purposes are to "seek to understand Christ through study, worship, and service and to serve their fellowmen on campus, in the nation, and throughout the world."

MORTAR BOARD members present a panel discussion at the YWCA; the Y year's program, after beginning with a special welcome meeting for freshmen, includes many such discussions.

AREA SECRETARY of the United Presbyterian Church, Rev. Emerson Abendroth, spoke at the men's convocation sponsored by the YMCA during Religion in Life Week.

CONSERVATISM AND LIBERALISM were the topics of discussion for government department staff members, Mrs. Egenes and Dr. Teters, at a YWCA meeting.

SELECTIONS sung by Singers at their spring concert ranged from sixteenth century sacred songs to contemporary folk ballads.

The Iowa State Singers, directed by Robert M. McCowen, is an all-University activity which is open to all students by audition with the director. Singers is a local group which was organized in 1947 to give the ISU students an opportunity to participate in a choral group performing music of all periods. It desires to build in its members a lasting technique for singing in ensembles, as well as improving individual voices and music reading ability.

Three hundred and fifty students participated in Singers this year, with seventy-two belonging to four singers. Combined Singers groups presented Mozart's "Requiem Mass" at their Palm Sunday concert. The Homecoming Barbeque program and the Union Board's Club 2000 both employed the talents of Singers. Singers' performances also highlighted the annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony and the Christmas Festival of Music.

THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL OF MUSIC climaxed twelve weeks of practice for members of the special festival chorus who joined with Singers to supply the vocal music.

INSTRUMENTAL music for the Christmas Festival of Music was provided in part by Symphony Orchestra.

Iowa State Symphony Orchestra

The Iowa State Symphony Orchestra, composed of students and adults of the university community, is a symbol of cultural activity and performance at Iowa State. With two-hour rehearsals each Thursday evening, the orchestra prepares a concert for each of the three quarters of the university year.

The spring orchestra concert featured Herb Shriner as guest artist in a program entitled "Pops Americana" and was presented to a capacity audience in the Armory. The orchestra also works with the other music groups to present the Christmas Festival of Music. In addition to the concerts, an annual tour is taken by the group. This year's tour included concerts at Spencer and Eagle Grove with soloists featured on each program. Dr. Edgar, former head of the Music Department, this year completed his twenty-seventh year as orchestra conductor.

PRESENTED in state gymnasium on February 4, the winter quarter concert featured violin soloist Ilza Niemack. Quarterly concerts help keep orchestra in practice.

VEISHEA CEREMONIES were opened by varsity band under the direction of Frank Pierson. The band was joined in several numbers by the Iowa State Singers.

Concert and Varsity Bands

Ninety of the finest instrumentalists on campus make up the Iowa State University Concert Band. These members are chosen by competitive auditions based on playing ability, sight reading, accuracy, and other musical traits. Meeting three times a week keeps these musicians in top shape. The band functions as a concert unit during the entire year, playing the finest instrumental literature. During the year, strains from the band can be heard floating from Club 2000 Concert, lending an extra tone to the Christmas Festival of Music, giving the Religion-in-Life convocation a harmonious tone, and dressing up winter and spring quarters with formal concerts. The band takes an annual tour. Various television and radio broadcasts throughout the year make use of the talents of the members of Concert Band and their ability to make "easy listening."

Marching Band

The Iowa State University Marching Band was the featured demonstration group at a high school band festival in Carroll. The band is a unit of one hundred twenty men which provides programs and half-time entertainment for all home football games. The band also makes annual appearances at the Homecoming Pep Barbecue and the Veishea parade. A small pep band from this same group provides music for pep rallies and basketball games during winter quarter. The band rehearses three times a week in preparing football shows, which include precision drills, dance routines, and pattern formations. All music is especially arranged for each performance.

Theatre

One performance a quarter is put on by both Lab Theatre and Iowa State Players, two of the five theater groups at Iowa State. The other groups are Children's Theatre, Theatre 324, and Film Theatre. Players productions differ from those of Lab Theatre in that Players uses only student actors, produces plays that are proven popular successes, and students are admitted to their productions on their activity cards. Lab Theatre combines outside talent with that of students, experiments with operas and 18th century comedies, and charges admission. Norman Kaiser, Frank Brandt, and M. B. Drexler handled the cast direction, and Edmund Lynch was technical director for all productions, except for the direction of the music for the Mozart opera, "The Marriage of Figaro". This was taken care of by Richard Koupal.

ATHLETICS

Football . . . Hoppmann leads the nation in total offense

The Cyclones opened the 1961 season firing against Drake for a fourth straight shutout. For more than three scoreless quarters, the Bulldogs equaled the Cyclones in power and speed. Then the contest swayed. It was Drake's ball, fourth down. Drake's Cass Schichtle went back to punt on the Bulldog 24. Center Tim Walker's pass was too high and wound up in the hands of ISU's quick-thinking end, Steve Sturek. The Cyclones scored and then struck for two more touchdowns and won, 21-0. In the second game, the Cyclones effectively used a new variation of the single wing to slow down the Oklahoma State Cowpokes. Dave Hoppmann threw a 49-yard pass to End, Larry Montre, who carried the ball all but one yard for the final touchdown. Captain John Cooper stopped the Cowboys from scoring in the final minutes of the first half with a tackle on his three yard line. Iowa State won 14-7.

"DON'T GIVE ME the credit," Hoppmann said, "Give it where it belongs, to the great guys who are blocking. I'm just following them past the tackles, that's all."

FACING NEBRASKA's
defensive line,
Joe Burden utilized skilled tactics to pile up yardage.

GRIM AND TENSE football players line up to

TAILBACK, Dave Hoppmann did a great job in the backfield position. Hoppmann led the nation in total offense yardage.

"WE HAVE A DUTY to our athletes to see to it that they acquire the education they need to become successful citizens of their future communities." Coach Stapleton believes education makes good football players as well as good citizens.

Iowa State rocked the Oklahoma Sooners with three touchdowns in the first quarter, but needed a last minute fumble recovery to win 21-15. Steve Sturek, 156-pounder, earned the name, "Man-Mountain Sturek," as he outfought two-hundred pounders. Randy Kidd, sophomore linesman, highlighted final minutes of play by giving strong resistance to opponents. Dave Hoover played the entire game and stamped through the Sooner line for the first T.D. An interception by Center Jon Spelman, a 42-yard run by Hoppman, and a final carry by Ozzie Clay led the Cyclones to a second touchdown. With Larry Schreiber's three conversion kicks, ISU led 21-0. The Cyclone's break came early in the third quarter when Oklahoma failed to handle Gary Ellis's kick into the wind. The ball rolled away after it had been touched, and Guard Carl Proto was there to grab it.

CAPTAIN JOHN COOPER leads his team onto the field to face the Missouri Tigers. Cooper made twelve tackles against Missouri.

IT TAKES more than one Bulldog to take down speedy and powerful runner, Joe Burden.

Limerick leads Big Eight in total passes received

A fake kick and a two point conversion by O.U. pushed the score to 21-15. A 43-yard punt by Ellis and a fumble recovery by Hoppmann helped the Cyclones survive the few minutes left in the third quarter. With 40 seconds left to play, Kidd fell on the Oklahoma fumble 29 yards from the ISU goal line. Two stalling plays ran out the clock and completed the day of victory for the Iowa State squad. At Homecoming the Cyclones rolled over K-State 31-7. Dave Hoppmann ran 271 yards for touchdowns, passed 40 for another, and piled up a gain of 311 yards. Dave Hoover drove 67 yards, and Hoppman made his one completed pass to wingback Dick Limerick who ran for a touchdown. Schreiber kicked the point, and ISU owned its highest total in a Big Eight game since a 33-6 victory over Kansas in 1954.

FLASHY SOPHOMORE tailback, Ozzie Clay, runs past Drake linemen for a touchdown.

FULLBACK DAVE Clayberg stops big Missouri halfback, Tabin.

ROUGH AND TOUGH guard Dan Celoni awaits action. Celoni is ranked with the all-time greats of Iowa State.

JON SPELLMAN, number one center for the Cyclones, landed on the bottom of the pile as Dave Clayberg kept trying to drive through the line.

Traveling to Boston, the Cyclones faced the husky Eagles. Dick Limerick and Carl Proto were cited for playing the outstanding game of their college careers; Limerick was an excellent receiver, catching seven passes for 139 yards; Proto had extra duties to contend with, since all-star guard Dan Celoni was out of action. The Cyclones fell behind the Eagles 14-10. As the Cyclones gave their last home show, Hoppmann and Nebraska's Bill (Thunder) Thornton, the Big Eight's two top running backs, met. Hoppman retained the leading spot, moving his total to 872. Meeting Tulsa U. at Oklahoma, Dave Hoover rambled for three touchdowns, and Joe Burden broke loose for a 84-yard run.

AGGRESSIVE, hard working tackle, Don Andersen, jumps into action as he gets final instructions from Coach Stapleton.

HOPPMANN PASSED TO a teammate just in time! Hoppmann finished with a record of 1638 yards to his total offense.

Basketball . . . Success for ISU in annual Big Eight Tourney

Coach Glen Anderson started his third season as head basketball coach at Iowa State with a twenty-man squad reporting for drills. The squad included three regulars back from 1961 — guards Gary Wheeler and John Ptacek, and forward Marv Straw. The season was officially "opened" when the Varsity fought the young, but strong, freshman team. The Varsity whipped Coach Gompert's yearlings. Beginning their competitive season, the Cyclones lost to Texas Western, but regained a balance by winning over Marquette, 72-66. Vince Brewer led all scorers with twenty-three points on seven field goals and made nine free throws, eight in a row in the second half. Marquette started off with an early lead in the first half. In the second half, Gary Wheeler and Vinnie Brewer shot the Cyclones to an eight point lead, making the score 60-52 with only 4:53 left in the game. Not giving up, the Warriors came back to close the gap, a two point margin, with less than a minute left in the game. Then hoopsters Gary Wheeler and Gary Kleven sank two clutch free throws. The Cyclones won their first game of the year.

CAPTAIN JOHN PTACEK goes high into the air to keep the ball away from Missourians. Iowa State defeated the Tigers 85 to 73.

VINNIE BREWER concentrates on the line of fire to chalk up extra points for the Cyclones. Brewer received the first winter sports award, Athlete of the Week.

*Senior Gary Wheeler moves to fourth place

A BIT OF FANCY footwork and Gary Wheeler avoided the opposition. Wheeler tied for most valuable player in the East-West Shrine all-star game.

In the third game of the season, the Cyclones jumped off to an early lead and were ahead of Toledo 47-35 at half-time. Then, sharpshooting Jay Bail of Toledo was called to the floor. He scored eleven points in the second half to put Toledo ahead. Although Toledo edged by in a final score, 64-68, Iowa State turned in its best statistical performance of the yet young season. The cagers hit 100 per cent of the free throws and 50 per cent of their field goals. At Villanova, the Cyclones fell to defeat. Traveling to Illinois, a last-half falter meant defeat. Iowa State came closer than any other team had so far in the season to downing Illinois, but again disaster struck in the second half, as center Bob Stoy fouled out and gave Illinois a big rebound advantage. Marv Straw led all scorers with 24 points to lead the Cyclones in points per game. Sparking a new winning streak, the Cyclones topped nationally ranked Drake University with a continuous lead ending 59-50.

SOLIDLY SUPPORTED by teammates, Vinnie Brewer wins possession of the ball while Colorado stands helpless.

Cyclone team sparks winning streak

Returning to home hardwoods, the Cyclones trounced Indiana 83-70. The two consecutive victories served as good warm-ups for the Big Eight Tourney held in Kansas City, Missouri. There Iowa State beat Colorado 62-52 and Oklahoma 49-46, then lost to Kansas State, 69-67, in a closely fought battle. Coach Anderson's crew finished third in the Big Eight race. At Norman, Iowa State lost to the Sooners but hit back with a victory over Oklahoma State. Home once again, the Cyclones exploded for their biggest scoring spree of the season, beating Nebraska 84-72. ISU lost to Colorado by only three points, then took revenge on Nebraska for a 84-52 victory. Marv Straw again led the scoring for a total of 21 points. Vince Brewer followed with 19, Rich Froistad 10, Gary Kleven 12, and John Ptacek for highscorers in the night's events. The whole team shared in the victory against Missouri. The Cyclones completely dominated the Tigers to win.

A KANSAS STATE GUARD eyes Wheeler, as Bob Stoy watches the ball for a possible pass.

ISU cinches third place in Big Eight Conference race

In the second meeting with Drake, the Bulldogs made up for their previous loss and beat Iowa State 73-63. Gary Wheeler advanced to fourth place in the ladder of all time Iowa State scoring leaders. Vince Brewer rose to eighth place. In the next three games, the Cyclones burst through Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska for consecutive victories. The Cyclones fell to a three game loss with Colorado, Kansas State, and Kansas. Iowa State ended the season with thirteen wins and twelve losses.

In the 157-pound division, Virgil Carr defeated John McIntyre of Nebraska, 15-0, but was defeated by Phil Kinyon of Oklahoma State by a close 2-1 result. ## Swimming . . . Eight Cyclone records rewritten

Led by All American Paul Witherell, the "best ever" Cyclone swimmers swept their first two meets with Nebraska and went on to pull a surprise upset on 10th ranked Southern Illinois. A great team effort was climaxed as the 400 yard freestyle relay team (Patterson, Hostetter, Wellman, Witherell), cheered on by 500 enthusiastic fans, won by inches to bring home the victory. The tankers easily outswam the Air Force Academy and Colorado and were not halted until they met Minnesota and Michigan State in a hard-fought meet. Michigan (1961 NCAA Champs) gave the Cyclones their next loss but were pushed to record-breaking time in six events.

ACCLAIMED THE GREATEST Cyclone swimmer ever, Paul Witherell holds more Cyclone records than any other man.

Traveling south, the Cyclones lost two more to SMU and Oklahoma in meets marked by close races and broken records. The tankers finished their dual season by soundly defeating Loyola and Denver. The Cyclones will miss the services of veteran swimmers Mike Elson, Pete Hostetter, and Paul Witherell, but with freshmen like Dan McQuillen coming up, prospects are for another record-breaking year.

Baseball . . .

weather dampens high expectations

THREE-YEAR-VETERAN Larry Van Der Heyden was called from the outfield to fill in a Cyclone catching vacancy.

CAP TIMM STATED this was the worst season he has faced in his twenty-eight years coaching baseball here. The cold, the wind, and the rain, limited outdoor practice.

Coach Leroy "Cap" Timm had high expectations for a successful season but between weather and illnesses it was a hard and disappointing struggle. Timm, keeping the team's spirit up, continued prepping for the 1961 season opener with Minnesota. Heavy pitcher for the Cyclones was senior Denny Hagen who is now signed with the Chicago White Sox minor league. Seniors sharing the mound with Hagen were Ron Walter and left-handed Nick Bruno. Throughout the season, Leon Johnson and Dick McConnell gained experience as hurlers. Cited for outstanding defensive play was shortstop Gary Ellis. Seniors playing their last season were Gary Everist, Ralph Staudte, and Bob Bateman. Promising newcomers included Mike Marienau, third base; Dan Celoni, right field; and Wes Weber, pitcher. The Cyclones wound up the nineteen game schedule in seventh place of the conference.

Track . . . shot put, discus, and high jump bright spots of season

The Iowa State track team had one of its most dismal seasons last spring. The thinclads were trounced in their three dual track meets and fared no better in the Big Eight championships, winding up in the cellar. Through all this darkness however, there were some rays of light. Dick Pilgrim, both in the shot put and the discus, had some creditable performances with a best of 157 feet 5 inches in the discus. Larry Eilert, team captain, had a best mark of 6 feet 3½ inches in the high jump, and Chuck Runge won his three broad jumps.

ISU harriers finished second in the triangular meet with Nebraska and Drake, but Coach Burl Berry stated it was the team's best meet of the season. In the second meet, the Cyclones faced the Missouri Tigers. Iowa State failed to get a man in one of the top five finishing slots. Kent Smith finished sixth with a time of 16:20. Rodger Rice of ISU finished seventh at 16:47. Traveling to Minnesota, Iowa State tied the Gophers 28-28. The top ISU runner was Karl Brown, the only senior on the squad, who finished second. Kent Smith of ISU finished fourth. Returning home ISU hosted Kansas State and Mankato State. K-State won with a team score of 23; Mankato finished second with 47 points; and ISU last with 51 points. The Cyclones returned from the Big Eight meet at K-U. Kansas won the conference meet followed by Colorado and Oklahoma State (who tied for second), Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas State, and Nebraska; Iowa State followed, in that order. The Varsity squad was made up of only three lettermen, Karl Brown, Bill Lynn, and Charles Darby.

The Iowa State soccer team had a perfect season this year winning all three games on its schedule. Ken Downing, left inside, was the overall leader in scoring, with six goals. Demetrius Papageorgiou was second with three goals. Ed Iragagorri and Stathis Papageorgiu each counted for one score. Art Lowe, goalie, let only three opponents goals slip through in the three games.

Golfers . . . exceed hopes, declare Oklahoma rough

Iowa State's golf team opened with a sound win over Missouri and continued scoring wins throughout their highly successful season ending with an 8-1-1 record. The Cyclones came out on top at the Drake invitational, an Iowa all-collegiate competition. The Cyclones' two main upsets of the season occurred at Colorado. There, ISU tied Kansas U. then went on to be defeated by host Colorado. Oklahoma carried off the conference championship with Iowa State trailing only eight strokes behind. The contest left the Cyclones in fifth place of the conference.

Coach Frank Gompert was optimistic about his sophomore dominated squad. "This is a young group and we will improve all the time." The Cyclones ended the season with a 2-6 conference and 5-9 overall season records. June 19-20 saw I.S.U. as host to the NCAA Tennis Championship with contestants coming from schools throughout the country.

Cheerleaders

After two weeks of practice, four boys and eight girls were chosen for the cheer squad at spring tryouts. These cheerleaders roused support for the football and basketball teams at games and pep rallies. Members were also in charge of a clinic for high school cheer squads and attended most of the other athletic events. At the end of the year, members received an "I" Club blanket as a reward and partial payment for their efforts.

Cyclone Sabres

"On Guard" is the call to arms for the thirty members who belong to Iowa State's fencing club. Men and women enrolled in a beginning physical education fencing course or its equivalent are eligible for membership. Purposes of the club are to develop sportsmanship and to better condition the mind and body in timing and physical endurance. Perfection of the fencing skills and the advancement of the sport of fencing are additional goals.

Intramural Board

Intramural Board is the policy making, scheduling, and organizing board for intramurals. It was organized in 1914 as a part of the Women's Athletic Association. The board includes three officers plus a representative from each of the women's residences. The group also assists in planning open houses and various demonstrations throughout the year.

Women's Athletic Association

Women of Iowa State have a chance to participate in and further their skill in varied recreational activities by joining the Women's Athletic Association. WAA held a fall orientation program where demonstrations were presented by the trampoline, modern dance, Naiads, and riflery clubs. The group also held a Veishea open house with demonstrations and displays.

Pep Council

Promoting better enthusiasm for and support of Iowa State's athletic teams is Pep Council's chief objective. The council conducted pep rallies for the Homecoming athletic teams; a new stunt introduced at one rally was the impressive burning of the ISU letters. Lead pipes were shaped into eight-foot ISU letters which were then covered with burlap and set afire. Pep Council conducted a weekend migration to the football game at Kansas University on October 14. Over one thousand student tickets were sold, the largest number ever; Council provided the funds necessary to send the Pep Band on the migration. Each week a committee of Pep Council representatives and the coaches voted for an athlete-of-the-week. From the men earning this weekly award, the athlete-of-the-year was chosen by the student body. Last, but not least, Pep Council had charge of "Cy," the Cardinal mascot, played by Don Hazen.

THE CARD SECTION more than matched the number of home games, by the number of routines they performed. The score was fifteen to four in favor of the card section.

FOOTBALL CAPTAIN, John Cooper, basketball sharpshooter, John Piscec, and track runner Karl Brown, make big plans for "I" Club initiates.

Varsity 'I' Club

The membership of Varsity "I" Club is maintained by those who have earned a letter in a varsity sport. Candidates are required, however, to go through pledge week and initiation before becoming members. The purpose of this club is to create closer relationships between the letter winners of the various sports, to provide an organization which will establish recognition of the athletes to the students and faculty, and to award an "I" blanket to those members who have met the qualifications. Last year the projects included a Veishea sales stand manned by members and pledges selling food to hungry visitors. In the fall the club met with the 1931 letter winners and welcomed them to the Homecoming game. The ever-industrious pledges earned money for the club by selling Homecoming buttons at the game. Also in the fall, an informal coffee was held with the Council.

Intramurals

Five thousand men and seven hundred women participated in their respective intramural programs. Because of the greater number of participants in the men's intramural program, the men's program has a more complicated organization than does the women's. Men's intramural planning is handled by intramural council made up of representatives from four subordinate councils: MRA, fraternity, ward, and graduate-staff. Women's intramurals are controlled by one intramural board composed of representatives from each residence. Although men have a larger program—twenty activities to the women's nine, women do have advantages over the men in their intramural program. For instance, the women's residences are able to enter as many teams as they desire in any of the tournaments while the men's residences are limited to two teams for each major sport.

LAY-UPS like this helped the Welch Hall girls defeat the Chi Omega team in intramural basketball play. The Welch Hall team continued its winning ways to reach the finals.

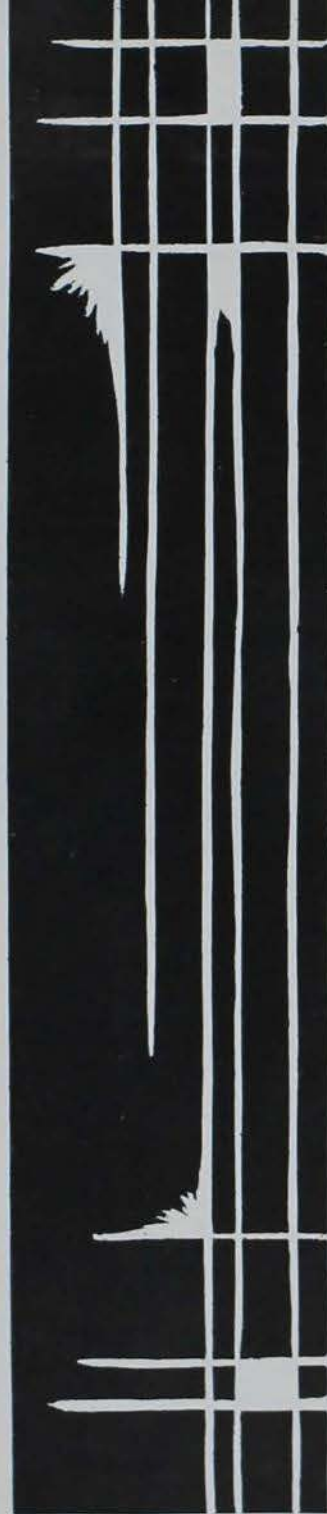

DOUBLE ELIMINATION tournaments for badminton doubles and singles were participated in by over fifty girls.

Ward

Active? Quite. The list of Ward sponsored activities grew longer and longer throughout the year. Starting the season off pleasantly, the women's residence association and Ward collaborated to sponsor a mixer, held in the WRA recreation room — function complete with dancing and refreshments. Once again, in winter quarter, the WRA and Ward systems joined, this time with the men's residence association, to throw the annual Sweetheart's Ball at which Marlene Jensen was crowned queen. After two major social functions in combination with other residence associations, Ward took out on its own to conduct some purely Ward functions. Members enjoyed numerous card parties in the Union, chilly but toasty hayrides, tobogganing parties in the snow that paralyzed all other forms of transportation, picnics at Brookside (when the weather turned sunny), and a steak fry.

CAUCUS time. Harry Stimson, Ward president, officiated at the Ward caucus during the nominating convention.

Tutors, scholarships, forums, dances, and a newspaper, all these are under the auspices of the WRA. Incidentally, WRA stands for Women's Residence Association. This year the tutors have an added sanction; in addition to being more reasonable in charges than free-lance tutors, all of them have been approved by the faculty. Scholarship is also promoted in another way; each spring, a one hundred fifty dollar scholarship is awarded at the Officer's Banquet. Aside from the academic, the association promotes well-rounded individuals through activities councils and forums. Informative sessions on Cardinal Guild, Veishea, and Homecoming were planned and executed throughout the year. Twice a month the WRA Mirror is published with the intent to unite the eight residence halls. Women also unite socially; the social highlight of the year was the formal, "January Jubilee," at which couples danced under red and gold mobiles on which trumpets proclaimed a joyful evening for everyone.

ACTIVITIES chairmen meet monthly to discuss possible opportunities for WRA women's contribution to the campus.

All the girls of Birch Hall got together one night last fall, and songs started coming to their minds. Within a short while, Birch had four new songs. This, after several practices, naturally led to a serenade which included several of the men's residences. Both sides, the participating and the receiving, seemed to enjoy it greatly. Another creative addition to Birch Hall was a new sweatshirt, with a front emblem designed especially by a "Birchite." Also on the creative side were social events, with a year full of unusual exchanges such as watermelon busts, bowling, roller skating, and miniature golf. Highlighting social life was "Dimensions," a formal sponsored by Birch. Reigning over the event was queen Jane Arnold, who saw that all her subjects enjoyed an evening of fun. The year ended as final week rolled around bringing quiet hours, late parlor-studying, and vacation.

THE SUPREME COURT of the WRA resulted from the positive votes cast by residences. Karen Nelson managed Birch polls as Bertha Shaw voted.

Elm Hall

STRETCHING crepe paper was all part of the fun as the girls of Elm, with the aid of Alumni Hall, stuffed "Cy."

"The Spider Women" of Elm Hall told fortunes and sold fortune cookies last fall at the Blast in an effort to earn money for charity. Another group project followed this event as the girls constructed a gigantic Homecoming display of "Cy" which took second place in the WRA division. Last spring the dorm also collected honors. Elm women sang their way to second place in SorDor competition. And they could boast of their active participation during Dames Daze, which earned the dorm another second place. In spring women's intramurals, Elm girls participated in softball, volleyball, and golf. Many of the girls also represented the dorm in individual sports. Seven girls from Elm were tapped for Beacons, WRA sophomore honorary. As a group the Elm girls sponsored a faculty variety show to raise money to erect Christian Peterson statues between Oak and Elm Halls. Between studying and their many activities the girls enjoyed listening to their new stereo, which was purchased last spring.

The approach of Veishea sparked a flurry of activity for the coeds of Freeman Hall as they prepared their float, "Bell(e)s of Iowa State" for the parade. Their entry cleverly depicted important bells in the life of ISU women — the telephone, campanile, and wedding bells. Dressed as flappers of the Roaring Twenties, the Freeman team won the costume award for the canoe races. Other spring-time achievements were the capture of the coveted Dames Daze trophy for the hall and individual with the most dates, and third place in intramural sports. A party and overnight resulted from the purchase of the TKE house at the Campus Chest auction in the spring. A similar evening followed this fall when the Acacia house was bought. Two open houses were held, one after the football game on Parents' Day, the other on Homecoming week-end. "We Swallow All But Defeat" was the theme of the Homecoming display. A swirling red and gold cyclone was shown swallowing all but the purple and white socks and shoes of a Kansas State player. The week before Halloween, secret pals were assigned to each girl. Favors were done and small gifts given with an air of mystery until identities were revealed on Halloween night.

OUT IN FRONT were these Freeman Hall girls in their 1920's dresses. No, they did not win the race on speed, but their dresses won the prize for the most original costume.

East Linden girls had several honors bestowed upon them during 1961. Mortar Board tapped Karen Deichler, Roberta Meyer, and Lois Davidson. Roberta Meyer also reigned as ISU's Homecoming queen last fall. The usual pace of a dorm was stepped up in May as the girls decorated for "A Night With Neptune," their spring formal held on the terrace of Linden Hall. Karen Takitani was a highlight of the entertainment with her hula dance. "Let's Can Kansas" and "Tuxedo Junction" appeared as the Homecoming display and Veishea float. First place in the WRA division was awarded them for that float, which featured three large penquins standing around a junction post. Three years of top scholarship yielded the WRA upper-class dorm scholarship trophy. Life in East Linden was also filled with bridge parties, popcorn parties, a joint tea with West Linden honoring their housemothers, and practice for Sor-Dor.

West Linden Hall

CY THROWING out the cats won a first-place award for West Linden women in WRA Homecoming display division.

Sailing through Veishea "On the Good Ship Lollipop" the girls of West Linden donned sailor outfits and carried large lollipops as they participated in the annual parade. "West" also captured second place in the Veishea canoe races. The Linden Hall terrace was the scene of their spring formal, "A Night with Neptune." Carrying out the sea theme, nets were draped from the second story windows and covered with fish, octopuses, and sea horses. A stolen treasure, closely guarded by a large octopus, lay in the middle of the dance floor. Music was provided by the Jim Gehl Combo from Des Moines, and five girls of "West" offered a humorous skit for entertainment. "West" was determined to "Throw Out the Cats" when they constructed their Homecoming display. A huge Cy was built emerging from a hut with a cat.

VOCAL quality as well as proficiency with a needle were requirements for Oak Hall's Sor-Dor entry. When they were not practicing, members could be found sewing their costumes.

In a social mood, Oak Hall burst forth with the Rose Formal, the spring dinner-dance. The women held a tea for their new house mother, Mrs. Harold Near, and had open houses for Homecoming and Parents' Day. Undaunted, they had a Homecoming display, a Varieties act, Veishea open house and float, and sang in Sor-Dor. Then they sold popcorn to get records, went caroling, held a fireside, and had open houses between floors. In sports Oak went out for softball, basketball, and won third place in the volleyball tournament. Unspoiled by this activity, the gals continued gleefully in sub-informal activities directed at the newly-pinned and the newly engaged. Activities ranged from the classical short-sheeting and showers (with water) to the contemporary nail polishing soap, and sewing towels to towel racks.

Roberts Hall

MUSIC and literature go hand in hand at Roberts. Marianne Milstead, Lois Maland, Barbara Britton, and Sheral Loomis relax in the library to the tune of their favorite records.

"The Still of the Knight" became a reality when Roberts Hall teamed with Loudon House to produce their 1961 Veishea float. Roberts girls appeared in blue dresses and sang "Alice Blue Gown" for the annual Sor-Dor. Their 1961 Homecoming display was a large moving roulette wheel painted with ISU and K-State emblems; gambling music added to the effect. Roberts went all out to join in the joyous spirit to celebrate the yuletide season. They sponsored a Christmas fireside where Santa Claus made his traditional visit and gave "White Elephant" gifts which the dates brought for each other. Also in season, the girls arranged "floor hops" where each room on a floor was decorated with a dominant theme; all other girls in the dorm visited this floor. Every girl brought a Christmas gift for a child, and gifts were given to a children's home in Des Moines. Roberts girls enjoy music and get together after dinner.

Scholarship, activity, leadership, and singing honors were won by women of Welch during the past year. A traveling trophy was retired to Welch after they won it for the third year in a row. Two women were tapped for membership in Mortar Board and five were selected for Beacons, the sophomore women's honorary. Welch also won first place in the dormitory division of Sor-Dor and the sweepstakes trophy. A prehistorical theme was applied to their Veishea float, "Surrey with the Ferns on Top, B.C." The float was constructed with the help of Knapp House and featured a huge dinosaur pulling a cart with a cave man and woman riding inside. Homecoming found the women of Welch hoping that the Cyclones would paralyze Kansas State. Their display, "Pair O' Eyes 'Em," presented a large wildcat being hypnotized by an "I" swinging from a goal post. Sidewalk cafes and a Parisian atmosphere marked the spring dinner and dance, "April in Paris." Members of the dorm gave skits to add to the evening's entertainment.

OFFICERS of Welch Hall Chorus, Mary Miller, Judy Reno, Betty Saunders, Norma Thompson, and Paulette Mitchell, seated, chose music for the group which won Sor-Dor.

Men's Residence Association

DYNAMIC president of the MRA, Don Willeke, coordinated programs and services of the entire association.

The Men's Residence Association was born out of need and a desire to provide opportunities for self-development for undergraduate men living in Iowa State residence halls. From a small, pioneering effort in 1946, the MRA now provides a "home away from home" for 2,200 men in Friley-Hughes, Helser, and Westgate Halls. Programs and services providing leadership, recreational, social, educational, and special skills development are originated, financed, and administered by a student government whose foundation is forty Houses of approximately fifty-five men each. Each House is rich in individual tradition and accomplishment. This confederation of houses was coordinated by a ten member Executive Council and was headed by MRA President Don Willeke this past year. The council administered MRA-wide programs and services and acted as the MRA's voice on campus. Vigorous action by this year's Exec Council was reflected in a record $18,000 budget.

Service Chairmen—Lina Schultz, John Fitzpatrick (orientation co-chairman), Jim Hupton (chairman of magazine commission), Joe Burris (chairman of cultural events commission), Bob Greenlee, Bob Wakefield (co-managers of station KTSU).

JIM BIRK, MRA scholarship chairman, and scholarship commission members review a new scholarship program, designed to give MRA scholarship a big boost.

FORUM and communication centers are provided by house officer councils. House social chairmen find many an occasion to consult Mrs. Mary Baker, who advises the group.

Reflector

REFLECTOR Publications Board members Steve Held and Dave Wirth check policy with editor Carl Pelzer as part of a general reorganization for the MRA newspaper.

THE MULTILITH press belonging to the MRA printing service serves the printing needs of all MRA organizations. Dick Fahrenkrug became an expert operator.

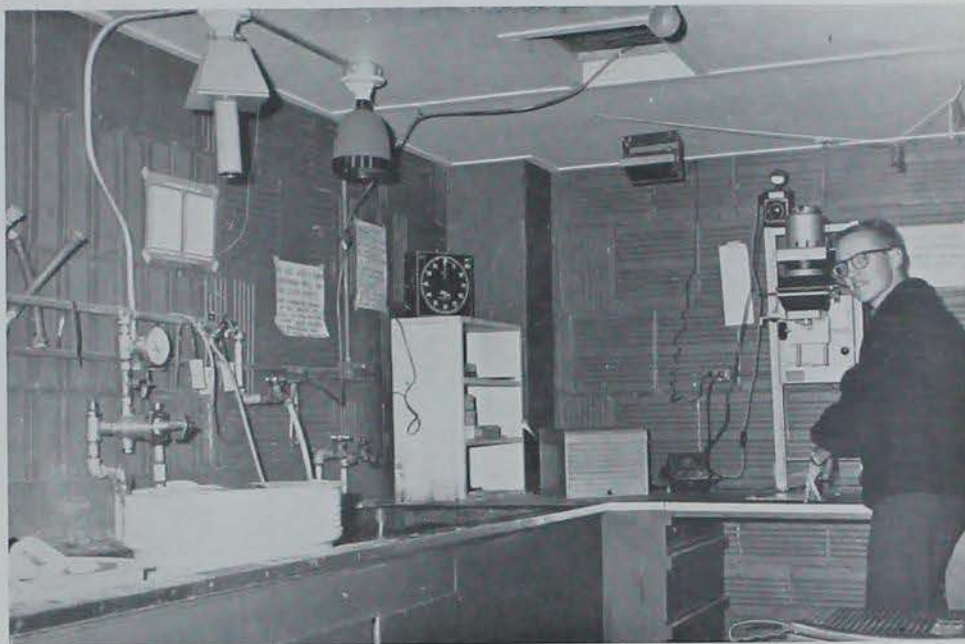

To keep the MRA informed of events and developments of special importance to MRA men, the MRA Reflector, is published. Reorganization in the past year has led to the formation of a Publications Board to facilitate and strengthen the newspaper's operations. Drawing on the various skills of journalists, photographers, and cartoonists, the editors publish approximately fifteen issues a year. Carl Pelzer assumed editorship at mid-year when Bob Bleich resigned. A special printing service operating a modern multilith press speeds printing and cuts costs.

A POINT of order is often raised at Toastmasters club as members meet weekly to develop speaking skill. A traveling trophy is awarded to the best speaker.

Toastmasters Club

COMPLETING the Camera Club darkroom facilities is a new enlarger. As a member, Steve Watson takes full advantage of using the well-stocked lab.

Camera Club

The aim of the MRA Camera Club is to present an opportunity for and to further a knowledge in photography for the men of MRA. The club offers instruction classes, print contests, quarterly "model shoots," and informative programs with movies, film strips, slides, speakers, and exhibits. The thirty percent increased membership has the benefits of over $600 worth of new equipment including a thermostatic water control, a new enlarger and all the accessories necessary to print and develop Agfa Color.

Weightlifters Club

Whether it's just plain healthy exercise or a disciplined body building program, Weightlifters Club offers a well equipped workout room in Hughes Hall for MRA members. The addition of an Olympic bar and special types of weights are examples of a continuous equipment expansion. Speakers and demonstrations highlight the meetings conducted by President Terry Highley. Members compete in mid-western meets, and Rex Liu and Steve Carey each received first place awards in representing the club.

WEIGHT ROOM does not connote scales to the members of weightlifters club. It does mean the workout room and storeroom for the club's valuable equipment.

SPECIAL KISU remote broadcast crews covered the color and proceedings of the MRA nominating convention. The KISU microphones are present at many special university events.

KISU

"This is the voice and choice of the MRA and the WRA. . ." says a KISU announcer during a station break in a evening's broadcast of study music. A new Gates master control board and a Magnecord tape-recorder join with two Gates turntables in helping him and the station maintain professional quality. An extensive record library contains one of the most complete classical music collections in the world. A Board of Control headed by KISU co-managers, Bob Greenlee and Bob Wakefield, and a staff of forty-five men and women broadcast WHO F. M. during the day and programs of show tunes, classical and light classical, and jazz music until 1:00 a.m. News broadcasts of both campus and national news, and campus announcements are a regular part of the broadcast schedule. Special events programming includes, for example, all Iowa State basketball games, many campus musical concerts, interviews with visiting personalities such as Ronald Reagan, and campus political debates and conventions. These features and the regular programming are broadcast to all residence halls on campus.

DJ'S Steve Watson and Diane Morris are only two of the dozens of people who help broadcast music and special features to Iowa State residence halls.

Library

A full house is the usual situation in the Charles E. Friley Memorial Library during the six nights each week that it is open. MRA men use the library as a quiet study spot, to check its reference materials, and to catch up on the latest best sellers. Freshmen like the convenience of having the almost complete freshmen reading list right in the halls. The library has Dr. Friley's complete private collection with its outstanding collection of English literature. Jim Dinsmore and Jim Holcomb are library co-chairmen and Mrs. Thule is the advisor.

Intramurals

Thousands of dollars worth of sports equipment get heavy use by the members of the MRA for both spur-of-the-moment recreation and the extensive organized intramural leagues. Besides the familiar basketballs, volleyballs, and tennis rackets, such things as handballs, pool balls and cues, and toboggans may be checked out at the unit desks in the halls. Spirited rivalry among Houses for trophies mean hundreds of house intramural teams engaged in competition.

RARE VOLUMES from Dr. C. E. Friley's collection, books on the freshman reading list, and a quiet place to study are attractions at the M.R.A. Library.

A LEAPING catch! Now, with a little help he can go all the way. Organized intramurals attract a large number of men.

LARGE quarterly dances are part of the MRA social scene; "Golden Frost," was the fall celebration enjoyed by all.

MRA Programs

INTENT delegates to the M.R.A. nominating convention hear Craig Crisman accept the nomination for M.R.A. president.

"APRIL FANTASY" carried aspects of reality as outstanding men were chosen to be members of Chessmen.

JIM CABLE, chairman of the Main Cabinet, counts votes for a controversial proposed resolution.

Main Cabinet

The Main Cabinet of the MRA forms the second major branch of the men's residence hall government. The past pages have shown the administrative branch, some of its leaders, and a cross section of its activities. Main Cabinet, with a representative from each of the forty MRA Houses, serves as a legislature, determining association policy and creating its laws and regulations. Jim Cable served as chairman until January when John Stiegelmeier was elected chairman for the next year. The load of business and the size of the MRA make Main Cabinet committees necessary to study situations and to bring recommendations to the floor of Main Cabinet. The eighteen thousand dollar budget is the most important concern of the finance committee. Constitution, internal affairs, and steering committees also have important roles. One of the outstanding pieces of legislation was a Student Conduct Act containing a unique student bill of rights.

Head Residents

Head Residents may well feel proud of the part they play in developing a vigorous organization which strives to serve individuals. An HR, as he is usually called, serves in each of the forty Houses; the qualifications and testing for the positions are rigidly administered by Residence Department officials. Out of the final selections during spring quarter come men who are conscientious, responsible, and equipped to handle the duties of a Head Resident. The most important function of the HR is the personal counseling he is trained to give, and the ability to be a real friend to every man in the House. As an advisor, he stays in the background leaving the running of the house to the elected House officers and to the men. As an employee of the Residence Department, an HR takes care to see that physical facilities are in top condition. Weekly meetings keep Head Residents abreast of the information and techniques used in performing their duties.

MRS. MARIE GESLER, Westgate Hall resident advisor, administers from the Westgate unit desk.

Residence Advisors

Residence advisor is the title given to each of the four MRA House Moms. Mrs. Kathryn Thul, Mrs. Marie Gesler, Mrs. Mary Baker and Mrs. Cecil Martin add a woman's touch to the halls — serving as advisors to individuals and groups, and acting as chaperons to a busy round of social functions throughout the school year. In addition each residence advisor serves a unit desk and lounge area. Here questions are answered, recreational equipment checked out, and visitors welcomed. Many men take the opportunity to drop in and chat with their House mother and this chat may often include a hand or two of bridge. Puzzling social problems will get a sympathetic ear, and the perplexities of sewing on buttons are speedily solved by these ladies.

AS RESIDENCE advisor, Mrs. Mary Becker, with the help of Chairman Stan Smalley, answers questions from Social Council.

DIRECTOR of Student Affairs, Millard R. Kratochvil, chats with Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Baker at the M.R.A. spring tea for campus residence advisors.

FRILEY-HUGHES

WISHING ON stars is tradition now, since it brought a second-place trophy for Veishea.

HI HO Silver! Linn Schultz holds the control mechanism of Cy for the Homecoming display of Pearson House.

Pearson House

Highlighting the social life of Pearson men during the past year was the combination spring picnic and party held at Walnut Woods State Park in Des Moines. Several smaller parties held throughout the year rounded out the social calendar. Three feats of construction brought two trophies to the showcase. The Blast sweepstakes trophy was awarded for the "Blue Bunny" booth, constructed with the aid of East Linden. The innocent blue bunny housed a dance band, night club atmosphere, and a chorus line. A second place trophy was gained at Veishea for the Disneyland interpretation of "When You Wish Upon a Star." The final construction feat required high altitude adaptation as the men climbed to stuff a gigantic Cy pulling the Kansas State wildcat to the goal line. Appropriately, Cy was saying, "C'mon, C'mon, Let Me Show You Where It's At."

CONVERSATION, liquid refreshment, and just plain relaxation cooperate in making the Pearson Den a mighty popular place.

Orchids flown direct from Hawaii decorated the Holst Hotel ballroom when the men of Bennett presented their spring dinner and dance, "Hawaiian Gardens." Other decorations included fish nets, foliage, and trellises. Music was provided by the Skylarks, and members of the house offered flash acts as entertainment. A special exchange was held with the Delta Zeta sorority at the LaPizza House in Des Moines. "The Moonlight Gambler" was Bennett's entry in the Veishea parade. Three house members rode on the float representing a gambler for matches, a gambler for love, and a gambler for gold. A member of the Delta Zeta sorority was featured as a bar maid. Bennett, active in intramurals, placed in the Class A division for softball, captured first place in the Class B volleyball tournament, and formed teams in track, swimming, bowling, and basketball.

Beyer House

FIRST PLACE in the MRA division was the result of concentrated, coordinated, and calculated effort by the men of Beyer House.

Excitement reached a screaming pitch as the Atlas blasted off carrying with it the dread Kansas wildcat. Cy smiled contentedly as he watched the wildcat rocket disappear. The men of Beyer House smiled, too, for their Homecoming display was a rocketing success. Their Veishea float, "Show Boat," was another success, paddling them to first place in the MRA division. The men not only used muscles to build Veishea and Homecoming displays, but also to bring Beyer House the baseball trophy for Class C intramural competition. To educate the men on the customs of various countries, Beyer invited its four foreign students, representing Iran, Nigeria, Cuba, and China, to speak at the fall quarter house dinner.

Caine House

Remember November when the howling winds and freezing cold shifted from the North Pole to our campus? This was the setting for the Caine House hayride. Under the layers of scarves, slacks, coats, mittens, more scarves, boots, jackets and more scarves could be found a few frozen smiles and red faces. At the end of the hayride, everyone huddled around a blazing fire toasting marshmallows and fingers. The weather didn't seem to freeze spirits, though, because winter quarter brought a tobogganing party and caroling. Other activities included a miniature golf party which seemed easy until someone said that the balls were supposed to go in the holes, a skating party which was fun until they found out that they were supposed to roller skate standing up, and a dancing party (yes, they knew what to do at this one). Anyway the year was fun, and remember — it's not the outcome, it's the effort that counts.

ONE ball for all five? Well, anyway, one is enough when it is the Strikers League bowling trophy for 1961.

BRIDGE tournaments occupied entire weekends of fall quarter. Skilled players competed as unskilled kibitzed.

Ever want to be an African king and be carried around in a plush sedan chair? This was the secret desire of the men of Cessna House, so they built two of these for their Blast booth. Some of the more willing men dressed up as plush African-sedan-chair-carriers and hauled couples around the deep, mysterious jungle — namely the armory — for a night. Nowadays, the favorite pastime around Cessna House seems to be playing bridge. BRIDGE is the answer to any question from “what are you doing tonight” to “what did you eat for breakfast” to “have you done any studying yet.” Just one more interesting sideline — the spring picnic was a roaring success. The steaks and potatoes were cooked well and delicious — if you happen to like steak and potatoes without any seasoning. At least they remembered the food.

Every man from Chamberlain House attended the "Playboy Party" which was held at the Westgate party room. The Playboy Penthouse was decorated with bunnys, playboy balloons, and the Chamberlain House playboys. A house member offered a monologue of "The Jamaicans" and, as a special added attraction of the party, the boys voted and crowned one of the dates as "Playmate of the Night." Exchanges which included picnics at the Ledges were a lot of fun this year, too. Besides miniature golf, the men participated in intramural softball, football, and basketball, bringing trophies for each one back to the house. In their spare time, the men started a choral jam session, watched t.v., hunted, fished, or just shot the breeze. Yet activities and studying are of importance to the Chamberlain men, for they retain a large representation in the honoraries and clubs.

Converse House

SIDEWALK superintendents everywhere, but only one actual member working as these men of Converse House men decide where to dig the post holes for their Homecoming display.

Unwieldy chicken wire, floral sheeting, and furious last-minute alterations on "Sayonara," the Converse-Elm Hall Veishea float, tried the patience and stamina of all, but the effort was made worthwhile by the capturing of the Color and Design Award for Combination Floats. Then the men of Converse completed their "Steam-Powered Wildcat-Smasher" for Homecoming festivities this fall in the same photofinish manner! Besides participation in all-university activities, the men enjoyed a variety of social events throughout the year. These included picnics, a hayride, house dinners, and the annual house party whose theme was a "Ski Lodge." In addition, many individuals kept in shape by participating on the Converse bowling, softball, volleyball, basketball, and wrestling teams. Scholarship growth was not forgotten, however, as the house purchased two new test filing cabinets and augmented their existing files.

Dodds House

"Spring Fever" infected all of the men of Dodds house and was the theme of their 1961 spring formal held at the Nevada Country Club. Candle light, spring flowers, and music of the Skylarks kept the men of Dodds and their dates in the spring fever mood. Intermission entertainment was provided by house members. Blue programs with red tassels allowed dates to keep track of their Dodds men. Their 1961 Veishea float was titled "El Matador." Other fun activities included bridge, sports, and tobogganing. Dodds held spring Class E bowling championships, fall Class C volleyball championship, and the fall Class B runners-up ranking. Boasting MRA Internal vice president, Don Nelson, the house also has three members in the national honorary, Tomahawk: Fred Johnson, Dave Ackerman, and Larry Ebbers. President was John Fitzpatrick; housemother to men of Dodds House was Mrs. Thul.

OUTDOORSMEN ALL. Many a pleasant fall evening was spent rubbing twigs together to produce a roaring campfire.

MODERN ART? This bundle of wire is in the process of becoming the Homecoming display for Fairchild House. The structure in the center is destined to be Cy.

Fairchild men enjoy exchanges and attended several of them with members of Drake University. Picnics rate high on the list of "favorites." The annual spring picnic was held at the Ledges. Approximately 40 members and their dates attended. Softball and volleyball held afternoon interest, and this perfect day was topped by the evening picnic. Fairchild holds an annual freshman introduction picnic in the fall. The informal spring house party was a picnic held at Inis Grove. The fall house party was held at Lynn Fuhrer Lodge. "Give The Wildcats All You've Got," was the theme of Fairchild's Homecoming display. It showed Cy, in deep anticipation, standing on the cross bar of the goal posts with his tail moving. Fairchild men actively participated in softball, football, bowling, volleyball, and basketball; passively, cards and television are favorites.

Having been first or second in MRA scholarship for six consecutive quarters, Franklin House was given permanent possession of the first place trophy in the fall of 1961. An activity unique on campus was the Franklin Forum. House members would prepare by reading a particular book and meet to discuss it in the home of one of the University's professors. Socially, Franklin's year was highlighted in the spring and fall by steak fries for the men of the house, and in all three quarters by date parties. In the spring a formal dance was held; the fall found the men and their dates at Boone's 4-H camp for a wiener roast and informal dance. Some outstanding individual members of the house included the presidents of Science Council, Lampos, Phi Mu Alpha, and University Bands. Spring quarter graduates included two National Science Foundation Fellowship winners, a Woodrow Wilson Fellow, and four honors students.

OKAY, now where's a match? These men from Franklin House hopefully wait for a sizzling steak while the not so optimistic fellows engage in a game of limbo.

Godfrey House

JIM VERMEER is upholding a Godfrey House tradition by presenting a mug from the 1961 graduating seniors to the house president, Winston Schwyhart.

From the spring steak fry held at the Ledges to the winter party at the Nevada Country Club, the men of Godfrey have enjoyed a very active year. Inis Grove was the site of Godfrey's stag party where softball, sizzling hot dogs and a good time were enjoyed by all. Under the able leadership of president, Winston Schwyhart, the men of Godfrey have made many notable achievements. In the spring they won the Class D softball championship in competition with other residence halls. Their athletic ability was again exhibited in the fall when they won the Class C intramural football championship. Scholarship, however, was not neglected. In the spring Godfrey placed third among the MRA houses in grade point and, as a result, was honored at the MRA scholarship dinner and presented with a traveling trophy. The men of Godfrey entered several teams in the Veishea canoe races, one of which was almost victorious failing because of the loss of a paddle at the crucial moment.

Harriman House

The general spirit of the men of Harriman House is shown throughout their activities. Veishea was a time of special fun for the members. The men extended a personal and warm welcome to all visitors and parents by erecting a towering sign, "Harriman House Welcomes You" on the Friley archway. After assuming the role of perfect hosts they carried their duties to completion by serving their guests coffee and doughnuts. Work calls for reward, and Harriman men weren't about to forget their surprise treat. This year a special pizza party was given in honor of the top one-third of the house that "booked enough" to improve their grades the most. The house members rightfully anticipated Iowa State's victory over Kansas in their Homecoming display, "In Like a Wildcat, Out Like A Kitten." The theme depicted a revolving cyclone following a ferocious Kansas wildcat entering the stadium and a defeated kitten leaving.

AFTER an all-night session, the wildcat and kitten were added to this partially constructed display. This was the first Homecoming display presented by Harriman House in many years.

HEARTY appetites are satiated at each of the Kimball House dinners. Overeating is an excuse for not housecleaning.

"We sweep our rooms once a quarter whether they need it or not," says the social chairman of Kimball. This is the cleaning-duty required by everyone once a quarter in order to set an example for the other men. Their single sweeps also made it possible for their rooms to pass the quarterly room inspection for fall quarter. In the past the majority of the rooms failed to pass inspection, and the house as a unit flunked the inspection. Now the men are proud of their inexhaustive efforts to set a new example, "one quarterly sweeping." On the social side, keeping the thought in mind that they really wouldn't have to get all dressed up, the members of Kimball decided to name their fall party, "Dogpatch U.S.A." With kickapoo joy juice in the pot and dogpatch characters, the party was complete, almost. The final touches were added by the outhouse entrance built inside the door and a dogpatch cave.

Academic and not-so-academic efforts are seen in this year's perspective of the men of Knapp House. Not-so-academic efforts produced a frightful-looking dinosaur which pulled a chariot full of cave-men in the Veishea parade. The float, built in partnership with Welch Hall, was centered around a "Surrey With the Ferns on Top" theme. A house auction, held as a money-making project, featured the buying and selling of various articles among the men. A miniature golf and dance exchange with Welch Hall highlighted fall Orientation Days. During Homecoming, signs on each man's door cheered our team onward, and highly polished doorknobs greeted visitors. Knapp men were especially proud of the Phi Eta Sigma traveling trophy awarded to them for achieving the greatest improvement in spring grade point of any organization on campus.

Lange House

SYLVESTER and Tweety's saga, "The Kit and the Pendulum," won first place in the MRA division of Homecoming displays.

Lange House men weren't actually trying to impress Homecoming visitors with their literary knowledge of Poe. Nor were they trying to advertise their favorite cartoon characters, Tweety and Sylvester. Their specific aim was to have an original idea for their Homecoming display. The combination of Poe with cartoon characters did sound a little doubtful, but the resulting display captured first place in the MRA division. The men put their heads together and came up with the theme, "The Kit and the Pendulum." Sylvester, who represented Kansas State, was bound tightly with ropes, and his tail was conveniently sticking in Tweety's gilded bird cage. Tweety, representing Iowa State, was taking advantage of the situation and sawing Sylvester's tail in two. Tweety was victorious for the men of Lange House and for Iowa State, too!

Lincoln House

When the men of Lincoln House take time out from the stress and strain of studying, they seize the opportunity to play cards and chess. Bruce Gasser, supported by his enthusiastic housemen, bagged the heavyweight wrestling championship of the MRA. Social life encompassed a spring exchange with the Lutheran Nurses of Des Moines, an early autumn coke exchange with Elm Hall, and a winter dance. "Three Coeds in a Fountain," the theme of the Veishea parade float, consisted of a big bubbling fountain, complete with effervescing water that geysered high into the air. Constructed with the assistance of Oak Hall, the float featured three ISU coeds sitting inside the fountain. Another display, for Homecoming, depicted our ever-faithful Cy digging a six-foot hole in which to bury a fighting Kansas Wildcat. Other tombstones alongside the grave symbolized our past Homecoming victories.

Lindstrom House

HAS ANYONE seen a stick? The men of Lindstrom roast weiners for the girls of Crawford Hall at Drake. This was the grand finale of their hayride exchange.

Moonlight, moonshine, and corncob pipes — all three combined made an unusual spring party for Lindstrom House members and their dates. Although they didn't actually indulge in moonshine, the socialites enjoyed a comfortable informal evening in their hillbilly costumes and smoking their corncob pipes. This fall the men continued their informal fling. They especially enjoyed a fall football game exchange with a Drake University dorm, Crawford Hall, and decided to ask for the pleasure of the same company again. For the evening of the second exchange, the men planned a hay ride. After riding several miles in the brisk fall air and acquiring numerous scratches from the rough straw, it was decided a stop should be made for refreshments. Time out for hot dogs and a toasty fire — then they were on their way home, scratched, fatigued, cold, but happy.

Tired feet and aching muscles were the effects that two Meeker House men felt last spring as they completed a walk from Ames to Des Moines. But the men didn't mind this at all, for they had accomplished a mission that was to mean much to them and to the other members of their house. The purpose of the walk was to help raise money for adopting a child from Formosa. The men earned fifty cents for every mile they walked. Another way they raised money for this project was through an auction in their house, from which they earned $134. Besides men with calloused and aching feet, Meeker House also had some good thinkers. To prove this — their idea for a Blast booth brought them a trophy for selling the most tickets. The booth featured a lighthouse where kidnaped students were jailed (students were kidnaped only upon request, of course).

HIGH qualifier in the MRA pro league during fall and winter quarters was this Meeker House bowling team.

Niles House

DR. ROBERT BARNES of the office of student affairs spoke to Niles House men on "The Importance of Being a Student."

Niles House, alias "the Penthouse of Friley Hall," certainly lived up to its name this year. Niles House was alive with parties the year round. During spring quarter, "Spring in the Woods" was the name of their party which was held at the Lynn Fuhrer Lodge. As the name of the party suggests, the theme was a spring woods scene with dancing to popular taped recordings arranged to supplement the useful whims of spring. "Squaw Valley" was the name of their winter party which was also held at the Lynn Fuhrer Lodge. The lodge was decorated as a winter ski-resort with house members and their dates dressed in skiing apparel. Then in the fall, they emerged into the sparkle of autumn with a fall party at the Nevada Country Club. Niles House came forth with many outstanding individuals.

Noble House started spring of 1961 out right by having a steak fry at the Ledges. Softball aroused appetites for the open-fire steaks. This was followed by dancing to music from a portable size hi-fi phonograph. The men of Noble House were very active in intramurals and enjoyed inter-house competition as well. They participated in bowling, basketball, volleyball, tennis, football, softball, table tennis, and bridge. Bowling and bridge were the predominating favorites. Many men of Noble House also enjoyed playing musical instruments and practicing their favorites, jazz and dixieland. In addition, Noble House has started a new tradition. Each year the MRA has an inaugural banquet honoring the old and newly-elected executive council members, the president, and the main cabinet representative from each house in Friley. Noble House handles all of the details and arrangements for this banquet.

FORMER RESIDENTS of the rec rooms now live in houses of the MRA such as Harriman House which placed second in the division for this Homecoming display.

Each fall quarter the recreation and conference rooms of Helser Hall are the homes for approximately one hundred students for the first several weeks. The crush of men waiting to get into the men's residence halls is so great that provision is made for these men to live in the halls as they wait for rooms to become available. Temporary Housing took on aspects of the United Nations this fall as students from Canada, Egypt, Colombia, England, Cambodia, Hong Kong, Iran, Panama, and most sections of the United States were represented. The MRA provided an orientation committee headed by Hal Hoover which helped these men adjust and become acquainted with university life. Events such as a large fall picnic were part of Temporary Housing. Two head residents served as counselors to the men, and the MRA threw open all its regular services and programs to them. The men appreciated the comradeship that developed, but by the end of fall quarter those newly-remodeled rooms in Hughes Hall looked good.

Spinney House men were exceptionally active in intramural sports this year. Although no "first places" were taken, the boys rated high in everything and enjoyed all sports. Several house members acquired individual honors. Among them were Dean Gerber, appointed to Pi Tau Sigma, an honorary mechanical engineering fraternity, and Dettel Friedriksen and Ronald Bailey who were initiated into Phi Eta Sigma. Social activities also played an important part in the lives of Spinney House men. Fall quarter began with a softball exchange with Roberts Hall. Thirty Alpha Chi Omega girls were bought by the fellows at the Campus Chest auction, and a dance was held with them in the MRA television room. For outdoor entertainment, members and their dates enjoyed a brisk hayride in the sharp cold air of November. After brief exposure to the creeping cold, they welcomed hot refreshments.

GUARDING President Hilton's favorite cake from the Blast auction were hunger-infested Gerald Lage and David Mashwitz.

RECEIVING FIRST-PLACE MRA scholarship traveling trophy for spring quarter toil is George Metzger, president.

A "Grapho Analysis" booth at the Blast to raise money for Campus Chest began the year's activities for Stange House. This unusual theme featured handwriting analysis which revealed an individual's personality traits. As a reward for the unusual design, the booth received second place. Meanwhile, all of the men were striving for high grades in order to keep the top MRA scholarship and the most-improvement-of-grades title, which they received in 1961. The men of Stange did not let work spoil all of their fun, though. Many breaks were taken for a ping-pong tournament or jazz session, a short bridge game or intramural game. With entire participation, Stange came out on top in intramural points, both per man and per house. Stange men also devoted some of their time to activities. Sam Bowen served as president of Lampos and Science Council and was a member of Pi Mu Epsilon.

Stanton House

Last fall, eighteen new freshmen got their first glimpse of college when they moved into Stanton House. Day by day these boys learned more about college life. Their residence helped them in becoming acquainted with and adjusted to this new environment. It offered them a place to study, people to share their problems and joys, a training in social life, as well as an opportunity to participate in physical activity through intramurals. The first real "get-together" they had with other members of the house was a picnic held at Brookside Park during Orientation Days. Throughout the year, along with other members of the house, the men enjoyed such social events as a miniature golf exchange, a skating party at Ogden, and a Christmas party. Next year these men will be ready to receive and help new freshmen as they enter college.

Stevenson House

The men of Stevenson House purchased a new trophy case in hopes that men would take the initiative to win something to fill it. Stevenson's first attempt to bring home a trophy was the spring intramural season. The men boldly entered softball, volleyball, bowling, and track competition with high hopes. But, alas, in spite of their high hopes and mighty efforts, defeat was their fate. Undaunted by their defeat, the men joined in the fun of building a Homecoming display. After much hurried activity sawing, pounding, and painting, the display was finished before the deadline. The display depicted a forty-foot strength tester. As "Cy" hit the lever, a Kansas wildcat shot to the top and hit the bell. The idea for the display did not win a trophy, but the men are still hoping for better luck next year.

ERECTED, BLOWN down, cracked and put up again. But the men of Stevenson House didn't give up, and they finally attached to the top of Friley their 1961 Homecoming display, "Test of Strength." Whose strength?

HELSE

The shamrocks and blarney stones were brought out of cold storage last March when the men of Carpenter House held their St. Patrick's Day dance. The South Ballroom of Memorial Union was decked in traditional green and white for the event, and everyone, as the Irish say, was "on top o' the world." Although they didn't actually "jig" to the music of the Skylarks they had a lively time trying to imitate the Irish dance. Carpenter men came through with top honors at the Campus Chest Blast. Their booth, Carpenter Coward Corps, a take-off on the Peace Corps, won first place for the best theme. All persons who tried to join the worthy organization were given significant tests, exempted from draft, and released from R.O.T.C. The Carpenter House intramural specialty this year was swimming, and the men came through with first place in their field.

MATCHING the torn playing card to find a partner helped "mixing" at the Theta exchange held in Westgate Lounge.

The traditional welcome banner visible to everyone passing Helser Hall during Veishea was hung from the windows of Helser by the men of Foster House. The men made the banner themselves. Also keeping the men busy was the "house blast" held during spring quarter. Although this was a stag party, a wonderful time was had by all. Football and volleyball provided recreation. The men of Foster House are also very active in intramurals, participating in track, bowling, softball, and ping pong. They captured the championship in bowling. To create some fun, a "foolish week" was held. At the end of the week a "Fink of the Week" was elected—the man who committed the most foolish acts during the week. Foster House was represented in many honoraries. George Ham received the Order of Chessman Award. George and Dick Ackerman were initiated into Alpha Zeta.

Fulmer House

It is a much sought after goal to receive the "Athlete of the Week" trophy in Fulmer House. Any person receiving this treasured trophy must have accomplished unusual feats or done heroic deeds. In one case the trophy was awarded for the Veishea canoe races. Fulmer's members were determined to win the race through their own skill and bravery. Their team, the "Phoenician Blinds," dressed in togas and dark glasses paddled wildly to reach the goal line. After some difficulty in starting, running into other contestants, and soaking themselves with water, their efforts gave them second place. Because of their heroic attempt they were awarded the prized trophy. Upon occasion this honored trophy is awarded to a coed who through her exhaustive efforts and pursuit has landed a man in the house and becomes pinned.

BUT WE NEED a Christmas bulb down here — there's always a joker in every group, even the men of Fulmer House who are decorating the tree for their annual Christmas party.

POLYNESIAN PARADISE for Helser Hall—such entertainment resulted when Halstead House purchased the KD's at the Blast.

After a long hard year coping with books, the men of Halstead House came to the breaking point last April and let down their hair in a rousing hillbilly party. Among the more seriously affected house members were those who participated in the chorus line, and observers reported that the hillbilly trio was a smash hit, also. However, studying strain cannot be blamed for the fate of the men. It is generally known that the Tri Delt's did their part in adding to Halstead's social life. With the Tri Delt's serving as hostesses, the men enjoyed a savory barbequed steak fry followed by a dance in the lounge. Halstead House men gave thanks to the Kappa Delta's for playing hostesses at a Polynesian Paradise exchange. The men purchased this party at the Campus Chest Auction and agreed that it was a good buy.

The Jones House men can well be proud of their scholastic record this year. During spring quarter they placed first in points per man in the MRA, and second in scholarship during spring quarter. Not only is scholarship important to these men, but also sports and having fun. They were runners-up in Class A volleyball and third in Class A softball. This netted them third place in activities points for spring quarter. Besides sports they enjoyed bridge and watching T.V. One of the major events of the year for the men was a spring picnic held at the Ledges. Entertainment and fun was provided by an inter-house softball game and wiener roast. Jones House also had a tea following the Homecoming game for house alumni, dates, and friends. Also in September members and their dates went on a hayride.

SIMPLY CONCENTRATE, calculate, and analyze; presto the tree takes the look of Christmas. Busy in tree concentration are these four men of Jones House, Bill Ryan, Al Held, Ed Lowenberg, and Eugene Lovstad.

Slinky gun molls, nappy double-breasted suits, and shoulder holsters were the order of the day as the prohibition crowd gathered for fun and frolic at the Livingston House "speakeasy." With the Campus Aires providing the music and magician, Dick Weiss, mystifying all in the dimly lit atmosphere, the evening was a tremendous success. Members agreed it was the best house party ever! Homecoming dawned cold and gray and proved a perfect invitation for the doughnut-munching, cider-drinking guests at the open house which Livingston held after the game. Guests mingled and discussed each exciting pass of the game and homecoming festivities completing an exciting autumn afternoon. The men of Livingston, sports enthusiasts all, participated in softball, football, bowling, and volleyball intramurals. Tom Watkins led the way to a coveted second place in the MRA track meet, winning the pride of his fellow house members as well.

WELL GUYS, now what? How about a pivot? This is just a sample of the constructive spirit that Livingston House displays in campus activities.

Louden House

Turning the tables on their dates, the men of Loudon House adopted the roles of chefs and broiled steaks at the spring party held at the Boone County 4-H Camp. Steaks, dancing, and games made the evening such a success that the steak fry has become an annual affair. Also in the spring Loudon House's entry in the Veishea parade was "In the Still of the Knight" featuring a knight in full armour beside a fuming "still." Capturing second place in Class A football proved to be the highlight of intramurals with many Loudon men also participating in track, basketball, and wrestling. Each year Loudon, Carpenter, and Woodrow houses collaborate in planning "Carlowood Capers," their winter house party. House members themselves, traditionally furnish the entertainment. At a Christmas party for needy families of Ames, Loudon residents provided gifts. A new member of Loudon House this year, Bob Atkinson, presided over Freshman Cardinal Guild.

MEN of Loudon House and their dates drop in on Mrs. Cecil Martin, housemother at Loudon, for an informal chat. Mrs. Martin is showing Don Sherman, Nina Dickinson, Mary Ryan, and Jim Hayward photos from an album.

AFTER DINNER MUSIC? These men of Merrill House gather round for some informal singing at any opportunity.

From the looks of things Merrill House has had a mighty restful year. Social life rode along on even keel, peaceful gatherings being most popular. Hayrides, football exchanges, sledding parties, and the like were the most strenuous activities in which Merrill men participated. The activities enjoyed in the dorm proved almost conclusively that fighting the pull of gravity was more than the boys could endure, except for the time the men took it upon themselves to advertise their restful haven and posted a large sign, "Merrill Penthouse." Otherwise, bridge, hearts, monopoly, t.v., jam sessions, and similar pastimes filled their hours. In order to remove any suspicion that laziness entered the picture this year at Merrill House, let it be noted that studying was the chief occupation, which is, of course, as it should be. The Merrill men weren't lethargic, just contented!

The scene was the Sheldon-Munn Hotel in Ames, the theme "Cervacia," the dance music by Max Jontz, and the men of Norman House dancing for hours at their winter semi-formal. Norman men also had a dance exchange with the girls from Bartlett Hall of the State College of Iowa. A watermelon bust with Freeman Hall and a dinner exchange with Roberts Hall were other events on the social calendar for the year. A slow winter quarter was spiced up by the annual auction. Anything of value was sold with hot and heavy bidding on each valued possession. The auction netted over one hundred dollars which was used for their spring dance. "Helmet K-State" adorned a 12-foot grave and 16-foot gravestone at Norman House's Homecoming display. Teaming with West Linden, Norman House presented a thirty-foot gaily colored tugboat with the theme "Good Ship Lollipop" for the Veishea parade. It represented a child's dream of the Lollipop ship with a candy cane smoke stack and lifesaver portholes.

DINNER EXCHANGE, slides of Europe and recreation combined to make an enjoyable evening for these men of Norman House.

Richey House

"TOP of the MRA to you." These men helped to make Richey House top in MRA intramural competition.

The men of Richey House must plead guilty in the first degree to the charge of being socialites with the intent of having a good time. Their spring house party, "Beatnik Ball," can be used as prosecuting evidence. At the time of their first offense all couples wore beatnik costumes and sat on the floor while drinking expresso coffee. In addition to this each person freely expressed himself on the expression board. At the scene of their second offense, their Christmas dance, the offenders were found having a good time dancing to the music of the "Skylarks" and opening Christmas gifts distributed by their own Saint Nick. Richey house men committed their third offense spring quarter when they stole the show by winning the Class B championship in volleyball. At the time of their capture Richey men were caught diligently working with Roberts Hall girls in order to finish their Homecoming display.

Stalker House

Homemade ice cream was the featured food attraction at a Stalker House party at the Ledges last spring. Another favorite party was a square dance in the Helser Hall recreation room with appropriate costumes to make this dance complete. Stalker men built a trophy case which may have been inspiration for the den just in time, because Stalker won the MRA intramurals track meet trophy. The Stalker Christmas party featured "personality presents." Names were drawn, and the giver had to find and give a ridiculous Christmas present to fit the recipient's personality. Stalker men participated in bridge and chess tournaments. A double quartet from Stalker House entered Sinfonia. The quartet emphasized singing quality, but all of the Stalker men enjoyed serenading. Homecoming weekend was the time for Stalker's annual steak fry dinner at the Lynn Fuhrer Lodge. Everyone is welcome at Helser, and this is emphasized by a big "Welcome" sign hanging in Helser made by Stalker House.

ARTISTIC SOULS labored over a sign which they hung from Helser Hall during Freshmen days, Homecoming, and Veishea. It reads, "Welcome to Stalker, Citadel of the MRA."

PARENTS, friends, and football talk met in the Woodrow House den following the football game on Parents' Day.

"Woodrow Welcomes You." Not only was this the slogan of Woodrow House, but it took more concrete form as Woodrow residents took up hammer, saw, blade, and nails to construct a sign for the north side of Helser hall. This sign, the result of many bruised thumbs and paint-splotted clothing, was duly displayed at Homecoming. To construct such a sign required various talents, and if there is anything the men of Woodrow have an excess of, it's talent. There were Woodrow residents skilled in bowling, partying, cards, and administration. Bowling headed the list of athletic activity, both in the spring and fall, as was evidenced by the fact that Woodrow had two bowling teams. Partying this year took the form of football game exchanges, quarterly house dinners, the parents' day coffee and doughnut session, the annual house Christmas party, and the spirited spring picnic. Residents also took part in card tournaments interspersed with t.v. programs.

WESTGATE

It could be said that Baker House members had a very poor sense of values, but not after close investigation of the situation. Why would anyone give a bushel of cobs, a box of used razor blades, or some hub caps as gifts? Namely because it is a ridiculous gift exchange time when the Christmas season arrives at Baker House. It's a general practice that everyone receive a gift to fit his character. So, aiming to please, the members gave the geologists of the house their very own rocks. What to give the head resident was a problem, but finally they decided the ideal present would be a salt and pepper shaker and a silverware set from the Friley dining room. Some of the luckiest house members were presented with car license plates from their own cars. However, Baker House did settle for some normal fun, too, including fireside, hayrides, and tobogganing parties.

"LAYOUTS behind glass" is the dream of these three, Harry Sexton, Lowell Wedemeyer, and Bob Letz, who are busily planning layouts for Baker's new picture board.

WAS the outcome negative or affirmative? This representative for Boyd House is casting a vote in the second ballot at the first MRA nominating convention.

The scene was a quiet village nestled on the shore of a South Sea Island. A voluminous moon shone down creating an island paradise. Suddenly a series of sharp notes cut through the air! What was this instantaneous intrusion? None other than the men of Boyd House swinging their dates to their spring swing, "Quiet Village." After their swinging party the Boyd men mustered enough energy to enter their sports-minded members in intramurals. They went sprinting out to the softball field to meet their challenging opponents, but in spite of their most concentrated efforts, defeat followed close behind. Defeated in softball but not in spirit the Boyd men next entered the track intramural competition and lightened their heavy hearts by taking fifth place.

Griffith House

Pretty typical—or so Griffith House men consider themselves. They might be typical if “typicality” implies dictatorship of the head residents. The thought of a dictatorship is frightening until the men clarify their statement and say they don’t resent it at all. If the head resident gets brave and starts waving his stick over the men too firmly, the men feel justified in playing a few mischievous tricks. Spring quarter the members decided it was time to organize and really do an original trick. They debated and finally decided to fill the head resident’s room from floor to ceiling with newspaper. Upon the head resident’s graduation, they showed him their appreciation by dipping him in the Union fountain. Last winter as a special Christmas gift to the head resident they couldn’t resist the thought of giving him his own snowman in his very own room.

Sage House

HUNGRY after house meeting? Sage House men solve this problem with their usual popcorn session.

Sage house men feel that Westgate would be non-existent without their house. What house could make a greater contribution than to be the "Foundation of Westgate"? Abandoning ambiguous usage, let it be known that the fellows are a close-knit group, and a relaxed atmosphere fills the house with warm friendliness. All of the members are concerned about the happiness of each other. In fact, they are so concerned that sometimes they try to cheer up a member by dousing him with cold water. This joyful event spontaneously ignites a water fight throughout the rooms of the whole house. It takes but only a short period of time before all of the members have the floors soaked with water and by this time the head resident has arrived to see what is causing the calamity. Nothing was really going on, they just thought the floors needed a thorough cleaning.

Alumni Hall

CARL FOSTER and Bion Hitchcock undertake the responsibility for displaying the dozens of Christmas cards received.

The Breeze House in Ankeny was the location of Alumni Hall's recognition banquet for graduating seniors. Featured at the banquet were a guest speaker and "swan songs," brief talks by each senior telling about his life at I.S.U. A hayride followed by a dance highlights fall quarter each year for Alumni Hall residents and their dates. Blue Mist, the winter formal, was held in Hotel Kirkwood in Des Moines. Dancing to Jack Oatts' band and a commercial skit depicting life at I.S.U. by house members were enjoyed by all those attending. Receiving fourth place in the men's residence division was Alumni Hall's Veishea float, "Honeycomb," featuring a large bee and a honeycomb. Alumni Hall men were active in intramurals winning the Class A football championship. The men also participated in track and basketball. Tobogganing was a favorite sport for many residents and a chess tournament drew quite a few contenders also. Dance and picnic exchanges were quite successful this year.

MIDTERMS or final exams are the right occasions to make full use of the hall's test files. Chuck Stewart, Otto Haliburton, and Bud Griswold seem to be enjoying themselves.

FRATERNALLY gathered around the glowing hearth, these men take time out to reflect upon the day's activities.

MALE ballet dancers brought peals of laughter as they tour-jeted during intermission at the Alumni Hall Formal, "Caprice en Hiver."

ROOM 205, Memorial Union, is the site of many an officer meeting attended by Diane Tripp, secretary, Rachel Davis, president, Martha Whitcombe, vice-president, and Ronda Gezel, treasurer.

Panhellenic Council, governing body of the 12 national sororities represented on our campus, is comprised of two delegates from each sorority. This group adopts and enforces policies governing rushing, pledging, initiation or other Panhellenic activity, furthers scholarship, and cooperates in maintaining high social standards. Each year trophies are awarded to the active chapter and the pledge class with the highest scholarship rankings. Kappa Kappa Gamma received the active award and Alpha Gamma Delta pledges, the pledge trophy. A Pledge Debut presented new pledges to the campus. Fall officers from each chapter shared in a Panhellenic workshop. Following the program, discussion groups were held on common topics of concern. Pledges united under Panhellenic direction to carry out a work project for the community. Panhellenic Council gave money which they had earned to help establish a People to People Program in which American and foreign students will become better acquainted.

DEBUTANTES, each and every pledge. The Alpha Gamma Delta pledge class was among those presented at the first debut.

Panhellenic officers including the president, vice-president, and secretary are elected on a rotation basis. Once every twelve years each chapter represented on campus selects a girl for these positions. Panhellenic members represent the council on Pep Council, Cardinal Guild Senate, Star Board, and other groups representative of the student body. One of this year's charges included shortening pledgship from two quarters to one quarter. In order to be initiated in one quarter, a pledge must have at least a grade point of 2.25; otherwise, an accumulative of 2.00 is required for initiation in two quarters.

EXTENSIVE preparation, guided by Judy Wilkins and Bill Pardce, was required to publish the rush booklet.

FORMAL rush owes a smooth and logical progression to the labors of Mrs. Benson and Leslie Graham. Mrs. Benson is assistant director of student affairs; Leslie served as Panhellenic rush chairman.

The goblins had a date with the Alpha Chi Omega's to attend their Halloween party, "Witches' Wake." Upon entering the Camp Dodge Officers' Club goblins greeted Alpha Chi's and dates with a "boo!" while a crafty old witch flew around on her shaggy broom sharply cutting the air with shrieking and mocking laughter. In the background lay a graveyard with moaning voices haunting the room. In this graveyard hovered a tombstone complete with a corpse in a casket and a skeleton of death moving about draped in a black hooded cape. After this frightful but fun experience, each sister began packing in order to be ready to move to the new sorority house at 301 Lynn. The Alpha Chi's were probably the only ones anxious to return to school after Christmas vacation, for it meant the long-awaited new home.

JUST because she blew out one small candle, Judy Waskow is immediately surrounded by a mob of sisters as excited as she.

"Duz we win, Vel I guess, Tide will turn, cause Lux with us." This slogan, the theme of the Alpha Delta Pi's Homecoming display, can well be called the motto of A D Pi for the year '61-'62. The prince of their variety skit, Schnee Weiss, brought not only "lux" to Snow White, but also the second place trophy to the Alpha Delt's. With this trophy, the A D Pi's became the only sorority on campus to win trophies in Veishea '61, Blast '61, Homecoming '61, and Varieties '62. Besides working hard with Kappa Sigma on their Veishea float, the A D Pi's held a spring formal at the Hyperion Club in Des Moines. The formal, entitled, "Bleu Belcanto," was drifting with the fragrance of flowers, soft music, and dim lights. At the pledge Christmas party the girls made stockings for their dates which contained such things as shrunken heads, all-day suckers, cigars, etc. Chaperoning at this party was the A D Pi's new house-mother, Mrs. Grace Peck.

CHRISTMAS cheer is generated as Marilyn McCarnan, Sue Wrightfield, Carolyn Kamis, and Kathy Jones gather around the fireplace to sing and listen to Christmas records.

SNACKS from popcorn to pizza in their own kitchenette tempt Mary Lee Irwin and Linda Larsen.

MUSIC to their ears was the news that their "Donkey Serenade" won second place in the sorority division at Veishea.

Each year, some come and some go. Those coming don't know exactly what is ahead of them and those leaving wave good-by rather hesitantly to the forty girls that they have come to know so well in the past four years. This is the realm typical of Alpha Gamma Delta, as it is for every other residence on campus. Many things about college are forgotten when a student leaves, but the Alpha Gam's this year won't forget collecting cigarette packages to win a colored television set for their house, working and practicing together to win first place with their Varieties skit, the gab sessions, sunbathing in the backyard, or the close friendships with sisters. And, they will remember how happy they were when they got to move into the new addition to their house, their "Togetherness" party, the work that seven of their sisters did to be featured as Varieties girls, and the sharing of both the good and the bad times.

Evergreen boughs and snowy white carnations set the scene for the Chi O's traditional winter formal, "Carnation Christmas." The Chi O's entertained their dates with a dinner, open house and dancing. And when Santa came to an after-hours Christmas party for pledges and actives, he brought gifts for "Toni," the Italian war orphan, sponsored by the Chi O's. The spring "Patio Party" and Dad's weekend supplemented by exchanges and serenades rounded out the social calendar. The Chi O's proved themselves scholars as they captured first place in sorority scholarship rankings fall quarter. Not forgetting activities, the Chi O's cheered as Linda Johnson, Jeanette Cramer, and Ann Davison were tapped into Mortar Board. Four Chi O's held Veishea Central Committee positions. Barbara Mensing, Homecoming co-chairman, found able assistance with two more Chi O's filling Homecoming Central Committee posts.

PREPARATION for Sor Dar entries provide only one call to gather at the piano after dinner; in truth, no urgent reason is required.

Leap year? No, but a slight anachronism didn't keep Sadie Hawkins and cronies from appearing on the I.S.U. campus this fall at the Tri Delta pledge fire-side. The "Little Abner" theme was completed with straw, cornstalks, and the ever famous Dogpatch out-house. An inspirational moon shone down creating a wintry wonderland for the Tri Delt winter formal, "Crescent Christmas." The atmosphere of holiday merriment was heightened by the selection of the Tri Delt man of the year. Singing, knitting, bridge, and playing the uke are favorite recreations at 302 Ash, especially in the newly decorated second floor lounge. When Veishea rolled around the Tri Delt's were right on time with their perky, syncopated clock float which featured Swiss girls and boys dancing through the doors of a cuckoo clock.

DO NOT OPEN until Christmas proved an irresistible challenge for Diane Schell and Becky Burrell — although they did rewrap this gift quite acceptably before returning it to the tree.

CHRISTMAS CARDS, a part of the holiday spirit, bring a glow of cheer to these DZ's and their housemother, Mrs. Fridley.

THE PROMISE of new dorms and a larger parlor brought these DZ's out on a wintry day to inspect the new addition.

Gold fish in a bowl? That's not so unusual. The DZ's gave them as favors at their spring dance. Couples glided "Up A Lazy River," stopping on their way to admire the rustic paddle-wheel, and laugh at the colored "mammy" and "pappy." The unusual favors are typical of the flair which the Delta Zeta's have for originality and enthusiasm. "Pasquelles" was the novel theme of their fall dinner-dance held in true Italiano style with dimly lit tables, checkered cloths, and spicy Italian food. Named outstanding chapter in their province, the DZ's have excelled in intramurals, service projects, and campus events. International friendship was extended by the DZ's with the adoption of a small Greek boy whom they have furnished with clothing and toys. Last fall brought much excitement to the house as construction was begun on the new wing, which should be completed by fall of 1962.

"Gri-Ate K-State" brought the first place trophy in the sorority division to the Gamma Phi's this fall for their Homecoming display. On each side of the Homecoming trophy stands the Sor-Dor first place trophy in the sorority division and the intramural trophy. Although the pledges keep these trophies shiny, they also find it their duty to redo the house in a massive redecoration project for their annual winter costume party. In addition to their informal get-togethers, the Gamma Phi's swing into spring annually with their "Pink Carnation Ball." It was here that their pledges had to prove their worth and give a small entertainment program. Unaware that tyranny was about to envelope the party, the actives sat by, calmly waiting for entertainment. A pledge mistress of ceremonies announced that they would bestow awards upon the more deserving actives. The entertainment proved questionable when they gave awards to the most eligible bachelor-girl, a swing for the "swingiest" girl on campus, and a letter to the best (non) athlete of the year.

A winter wonderland of snow presented an effective setting for the Kappa Alpha Theta "Barn Party" held in the Theta "green barn." To achieve their old fashioned "Barn Party" atmosphere the Theta's set about putting straw on the floors, set wagon wheels by the doorstep, and put up numerous mail-boxes outside their door. To start the party off with an unusual technique, the Theta's jauntily rode around on a hayrack and picked up their dates in their farmerish costumes. The Theta's got the wheels rolling and built a Homecoming display sporting high enthusiasm for Iowa State. "We've got 'em on de Fence" depicted a Kansas cat straddled over a picket fence. The Theta's enthusiastically entered a skit in Varieties competition. Their skit, "Coffee, Anyone" featured a personality sketch on the various types of coffee cups found in campus situations.

LADIES to the center and form a star. Theta's and their dates enjoy a square dance at their "Barn Party."

ACROBATS, clowns, and menagerie attracted Veishea visitors to come to the circus, and attracted a first place sorority trophy.

Kappa Delta

WHAT? "Little Nell" in a Polynesian Paradise! It happened in the K D skit for Halstead House.

Much color was added to the Veishea parade last year when the Kappa Delta's urged parade watchers to "Come to the Circus." Clowns, acrobats, and bears (two legged ones, at that) escorted a large red circus wagon with a large elephant and giraffe sticking out its top by the Union to the armory via East Hall and the Home Economics building. A red model A Ford pulling the wagon added to the gaiety and spirit of the occasion. The girls of Kappa Delta were in an even more gala spirit when they learned that their float had won the first place trophy for sororities. When Blast booth time came, the Kappa Delta's donned their sarongs and muu muu's and entertained with their "Polynesian Paradise." The men of Halstead House liked the act so much that they bought it. The "Roaring 20's" came to life for the Kappa Delta's during fall quarter when they used this as a theme for a party. To keep in the atmosphere, straw hats and canes were given as favors.

"Blue Hawaiian" music floated through the door as guests arrived at the Kappa house for their fall house party, "Polynesian Paradise." To get the total island paradise effect the Kappa's rallied together the artistic people in the house and set them to work. The efforts produced native lanterns lighting the sidewalk, an indoor fountain (with goldfish), a complete wall mural of white capped waves and a sandy beach, fish nets, palm trees, and ocean shells. Adding the final touch to the paradise scene were the grass skirts, sarongs, and cutoffs with brightly colored shirts. After eating dinner on the floor in the oriental manner, the guests stretched their legs to the music of Mickey Montgomery. As the saying goes, "The party is over," and for the Kappa's it was time to get back to work. They were especially proud this year to be presented the sororities scholarship trophy for 1960-1961.

In true college spirit, the Pi Phi's participated in almost all campus activities throughout the year. One of the big honors of the year for them was having Leslie Graham chosen as Veishea Queen of Queens. The joint effort between the Pi Phi's and Sigma Alpha's produced a first place, combination-built float. "Little Toot" went steaming through the parade to claim its title of success. The Pi Phi's played their part in the Blast, too. Jackie Hash was chosen as Miss Legs for the occasion. Working with the AGR's, the Pi Phi's built their Blast booth so well that it was awarded first place for construction. In honor of the founding college of their sorority, the Pi Phi's celebrated with the "Monmouth Duo" dance. They presented their dates with engraved lighters as a remembrance of the evening. A Valentine dinner was one of the Pi Phi's most successful projects for the year. At the dinner they served Italian spaghetti and garlic bread. All the money they cleared was donated to "People to People," the project to promote Iowa State-foreign student friendships.

"MOUSE," shrieked Glenn Miller. She need not have worried for only a cultured mouse could find entrance into the house.

STUDYING is pushed to the remotest corners of the mind whenever an after-dinner bridge call sounds.

JAZZ in stereo—the whole house enjoys selections from the extensive jazz collection.

The silhouette of an old castle looms against the sky. The clanking of chains is heard as the heavy wooden door slowly opens with a shrill and haunting squeak. Again the clanking chains are heard with shuffling footsteps. Inside, cobwebs wave with the rustle of the wind as a glowing light seeps from under another door. Suddenly, the huge wooden door closes with a crash of finality! But, further investigation will show that it is only the traditional Halloween costume party, "Haunted Castle," given by the Sigma Kappa sophomores. The upper-class Sigma Kappas, not to be out-done by the sophomores, also sponsored a more formal party, "Legend In Lavender." To make it an extra special night, the dance was held at the Marshalltown Country Club. Star mobiles designed to make that favorite date starry-eyed and brandy snifters for souvenirs were the unique attractions of the evening.

Interfraternity Council

"To provide an organization which represents the member fraternities and the fraternity system at Iowa State University. To provide an organization which serves the member fraternities and the fraternity system at Iowa State University." This is part of the preamble to the new Interfraternity Council constitution enacted on April 27, 1961. Since that time, IFC has been placing heavy emphasis on these twin goals of representing and serving the fraternity system at Iowa State. During 1961, the IFC-IFPC tax committee obtained a twenty per cent reduction in the valuation of all fraternity and sorority property in Ames. Savings to Iowa State Greeks from this action will total over $17,000 per year. The Fraternity Buyers Association, incorporated in the fall of 1961, has also served its members well by savings of ten per cent and more on thousands of dollars of food purchases.

MEETINGS, meetings, meetings! Every Wednesday noon IFC Administrative Board has lunch in the Cyclone Cellar to review, to discuss, and to plan new programs.

GOLDEN AGE dinners entertained the senior citizens of Ames at Christmas. Nearly all fraternities participated in the new service project.

Interfraternity Council achievements included the administration of a near record rush program, completion of a scholarship tutorial program for several houses, establishment of two new Christmas service projects, presentation of an all-pledge convocation, a freshmen leadership banquet, and fraternity seminars in areas of scholarship, publications, pledge training, and finance. At the close of winter quarter and the end of the terms of office of Jack Hansen, president, and of Bob Vasko, vice president, Wayne Murphy, junior representative to Guild, and Val Lembke, senior representative to Guild, William Zerman, former National Interfraternity Conference undergraduate secretary, held a fraternity leadership seminar for all fraternity presidents. "Just as it is the goal of IFC to serve its member house," Zerman stated, "so should it be the goal of each fraternity to serve the men in its chapters."

JACK HANSEN, IFC president, and Don Willeke, MRA president, discuss several points following their IFC-MRA discussion-debate, the first of its kind.

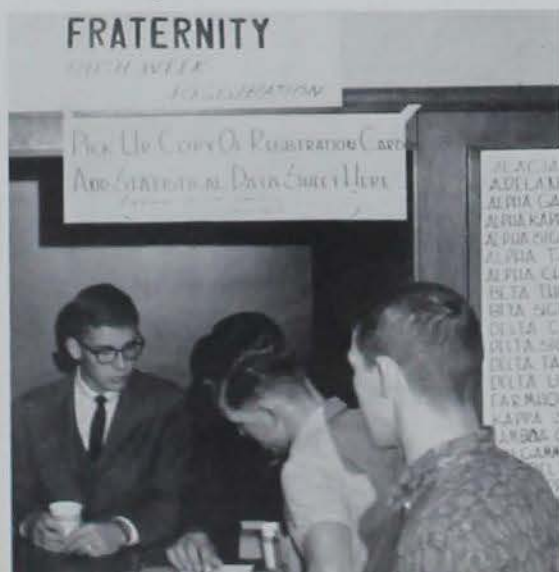

EACH WINTER the pledge council sponsors an all-pledge dance; Gamma Gamma awarded freshman leadership scrolls as part of the program.

JIM RULIFFSON, Interfraternity Council rush chairman, addresses the convocation which kicked off rush week '61.

With actives first in scholarship spring quarter and pledges second, Acacia still remembered fun. Spring brought the Black and Gold Formal; fall meant the annual "Nite on the Nile" party with the basement as the inside of a pyramid, complete with murals. Winter quarter a "Ports of the World" party emerged with special stops at Hawaii, a Japanese garden, Russia, and even a Spanish cabaret. In a mad burst of journalistic inspiration they conceived the "Des Funct Register" for Homecoming. Alumni and friends were invited to open houses at Veishea and Homecoming, and a display was set up for Veishea. Acacia warbled its way into first place in Sinfonia's second division, too. Fired up by all the merry activities they produced Class A softball and football teams. In their spare time they participated in the IFC Christmas party for mentally retarded children and washed windows for the Eastern Star home in Boone.

The Adelante's welcomed spring with their "Hawaiian Holiday" held in the Cloud Room at the Des Moines Airport. Although they didn't actually do the hula, the Adelante's and their dates had fun dancing to music by the Skylarks. The party, however, did not use up all of their energy, for the Adelante's rallied and placed second in Class A softball intramurals. The brilliant colors of fall were tempting invitations for picnics and hayrides. Such events were scheduled but on the appointed evening, the sky opened and it poured rain. Of course, it was decided to hold the picnic part anyway in the basement recreation room of the house. Unfortunately, the rain was so great that the basement had turned into a swimming pool. Turning the hayride-turned-picnic-turned-indoor party into a swimming party was considered but soon thrown out. The men teamed together to win the second place trophy for Class B football intramurals. The Adelante's were especially happy to come back to school this fall to move into their newly purchased annex.

THIS "labor of love" takes place as Ray Petersburg and Jim Nelson clear trees from the lot next door, which the Adelante's bought to make room for a larger parking area.

SAMPLING the Christmas wrappings during a pause in the Christmas party are Ross Rekemeyer, Muff Rust, Wayne Haines, Jim Kearney, and Jay Fitzpatrick.

GRUNT AND GROAN was all Jim Kearney needed to lift the weight with one hand, as long as he had brotherly support.

The Crow's sailed into the social scene with the "Jolly Crow's Nest" party transforming the house into a ship's deck complete with nets, portholes, and water. The Crow's Nest (pronounced basé-ment) was occupied by assorted Crow's and dates in South Seas costumes. As the urge to cut loose hit them again they blossomed forth with a "Soirée in Paris" decorating the Boone Country Club as a French street with, of course, a sidewalk cafe. Coming down to earth they proceeded with open houses for Parents' Day and Homecoming. For Homecoming a large red and gold snake wound around the front porch proclaiming, "We'll crawl all over them." Then for Veishea they dwelled upon the evils of smoking with a replica of a large pack of cigarettes (actually it was a real pack stolen from a very large forestry major named Bunyan) and an ashtray. Fall quarter Crow's were the Class D football champs in fraternity and all-college play.

Alamand left and around you go, grab your partner — dosed! Out of place? Not a bit at the Farmer's Ball given by the AGR's last spring. Costumes? The more ragged and rural the better as everyone let loose and had an old-fashioned good time. Such spirit and enthusiasm is characteristic of the AGR costume parties. Prompting this same spirit was the fall house party which brought back stages of prohibition and the charleston as everyone came in roaring '20's style. Cries of "Boop-Boop-Be-Doo," and "so's your old man," added flavor to the conversation and authenticity to the atmosphere as everyone had a bang-up time. In direct contrast in tone was the winter formal, planned effectively and creatively around the theme of the Alpha Gamma Rho's pink rose.

Receiving a national charter by a new fraternity is something to celebrate; the Alpha Kappa Lambda's did just that at their "Valentine Dance" at the Ames Country Club. Against a backdrop of valentine trees, the AKL's and their dates viewed the presentation of the sweetheart pin to their housemother as the first sweetheart of AKL. There were also speeches by national AKL officers as a tribute to the new charter. This event will be annual with a Founder's Day dinner-dance every year. The AKL's had a swinging theme for Homecoming with "Cy" hanging a Kansas State wildcat from goal posts and the notation, "A Swingin' Time For All." The AKL's studied especially hard spring quarter and were awarded the IFC trophy for greatest scholastic improvement for that quarter. A week prior to initiation for their "Help Week," the pledges carried out a service for the city of Ames and worked on the house.

HOLDING FAST to their scholarship improvement trophy are scholarship chairmen Phil Crowley and Ron Gruber.

ENTHUSIASM is the keynote of Alpha Sig song practices, although they are not always serious.

MISTLETOE, anyone? Alpha Sig, Perry Sumner, doesn't mind a stretched tie, as long as the foe is pinmate June Eyerly.

It was a dark night when a tall shadow carrying a large club crept across campus. He slung a sack of dinosaur bones across his leopard skin covered shoulder, knocked his date on the head, and dragged her to the Alpha Sigma Phi Flintstone Party. It wasn't in a cave, but everyone left loaded with miniature brontosaurus and some old bones which were doubtless taken from the carcass of a dying vet med cow. Their spring formal is traditionally "Black and White" with the theme carried out in dress, decorations, flowers and even favors, black and white shower robes. Besides parties (there are other things you know) they wiled away the hours by bringing in two first-place intramurals trophies, one in golf and one in billiards. Springtime is the time when a young man's fancy turns to food. The Alpha Sig's thought this was a good excuse for their weekly steak fries.

The usual dinner-time walk-in had a new twist at the ATO house last fall. When the actives and their dates appeared, the hungry pledges retaliated by walking out with the cook and food! Actives, however, naturally couldn't let the pledges triumph, and quickly remedied the situation. In the spring the ATO's had another turn around. For an evening of south sea adventure the house was transformed into a grass hut, the perfect site for a calypso party. Couples were colorfully clad in Hawaiian garb; the atmosphere was complete when guests were served hollowed pineapple halves filled with punch. Homecoming at 2122 Lincoln Way found the caption "I thought I saw a puddy tat" outside, while inside the ATO's were hosts at an open house after the game. In moments of relaxation, color television and group singing come into the ATO picture. As many house members own guitars, harmonious hours are spent in informal songfests.

A drive around the I.S.U. campus during Homecoming last fall turned out to be no ordinary outing if the jaunt included North Hyland. Upon passing number 158, a huge wildcat in the middle of the road let out a piercing scream of pain creating a very unique Homecoming display. The same creativity and enthusiasm which characterized the Homecoming display is typical of the Beta Sig's in all they do. It has brought them numerous honors throughout the year such as softball and volleyball championships and high scholastic achievements. The highlight of the Beta Sigma Psi social season was the traditional Gold Rose formal held this year at the Wakonda Country Club in Des Moines. The couples spent a memorable evening dining in the candlelight and dancing to the music of Don Hoy's Esquires. White pillows were given as favors, and Ginger Obma was chosen to reign as Gold Rose Queen. The fall dinner dance, another annual affair, was given the romantic theme of "Moon Mist" as Hotel Sheldon Munn was transformed into a starlit city park.

DUMBO'S FLIGHT into the air almost grounded some Beta Sigs who spent two nights preparing the float for Veishea.

NOT FAMOUS yet? These Beta's get together nightly to form an octet and practice after dinner.

SKINNING the cat proved to be just what the Beta's needed to earn them first-place in the fraternity division of the Homecoming displays.

"Let's Skin 'Em Again," the theme of the Beta's Homecoming display, turned out to be doubly appropriate. The team came out with a victory, and the Beta's took top honors in the fraternity division. The twenty-eight-foot Cy sat contently on a Wildcat while sharpening his knife for the kill. Observers watched with a chuckle as Cy's eyes followed them and his ears wiggled mischievously. Hours of late labor in the Beta workshop produced Gapetto, Pinochoe, and Jiminy Cricket in Gippetto's workshop. This represented their Veishea float with the theme "I've got no strings." Building at the Beta house didn't stop with floats and displays; much of their house was also remodeled last summer. The Backwards Party, the spring formal, and the Beta Bar-B-Q were a form of building, too, in the creating of friendly relations. All of this plus their Alum Weekend, Parents Weekend, singing, bridge playing, and — whew — taken into consideration, they might be called a bustling, busy bunch of Beta's.

Elmer Fudd never does bag Daffy Duck, but the Delta Chi's Homecoming display, "We're bagging the big game," bagged the Chi Omega trophy, the Purple Shaft. The spring volleyball championship, Class B, was also awarded to these Elmer Fudd builders. In late March, the Delta Chi's were hosts to a regional conference. The seven chapters represented studied the various aspects of chapter operation. A banquet was held in the Sun Room at the conclusion of the conference. The Delta Chi's are a rare chapter on the I.S.U. campus, for they are privileged to be able to celebrate their house-mother's, Mrs. Schwendener's, thirtieth year with them. Mrs. Schwendener has kept a remarkable scrap book of the Delta Chi past graduates and their children. In order to assist the chapter's jam sessions and the "Liberaces" among them, the Delta Chis purchased a new grand piano for their music room.

Survivors of World War III took refuge in a house turned fallout shelter. A serious theme? Yes, of course, but the Delta Sig's made the best of it at their fall party, "Fallout Shelter," finding all sorts of entertainment possibilities while in seclusion. Out in the open again, they resumed the biweekly spaghetti dinners with hearty appetites. Spaghetti digestion was thoroughly accomplished one weekend as all members took out on a horse-back riding exchange accompanied by the Chi O's. Undoubtedly a few other things were shaken down as well, but nothing seemed to be permanently damaged. Vocal cords certainly weren't; for the first time in many years, the house entered Sinfonia, and came out in the top four finalists. The Delta Sig's were among the most active supporters of the Cyclone football team, and no wonder! Five active established a healthy record as members of the team: Dave Hoppman, Dick Scesniak, Duane Marcellus, Bill Smith, Gary Ellis, and Larry Hannahs.

MELLOWED AFTER a "Dinner by Grimm," brothers gather 'round George Custodi and his harmonica.

Clashing with the Theta's proved to be a way for the Delt's to get away from the usual-type Wednesday night exchange. Everyone attending the exchange wore clothing that would surely have won him the title of "best dressed person on campus" — ranging from red plaid shirts matched with yellow checked pants to pink skirts complemented by maroon dotted blouses. The clash didn't stop the Delt's from having a harmonious evening of fun. Once again, they used their creative minds to dream up a breakfast exchange with the Alpha Gam's to announce an engagement. The highlight of Spring quarter for the Delt's was the Orchid Formal in April. The central decoration was a gold tree with sixty orchids and a white orchid at the top for their housemother. Judy Hamilton was chosen by the men to reign as queen.

Although the K State cat probably still feels like he has been dunked, the D U's certainly do not for their Homecoming display. "Looks like we'll dunk 'em, donut?," received third place in the fraternity division of 1961 Homecoming. The D U's can claim that Daisy Mae, of their Veishea float, really did bring luck to both Lil' Abner and to them, for in the following year they received trophies in Varieties, second place, and in the Christmas Door Decorations Contest, first place. Besides being useful for building things, muscles and brains combined to bring them the championship of Class C Volleyball and Class B football. Socially, the three main events have been their spring party, "Bandstand I.S.U.," their fall party, "Deutschland Divided," and their annual Winter formal, "Club D U," which was held at Hotel Fort Des Moines. This year the D U's extended a warm welcome to their new housemother, Mrs. Peterson.

Black and white striped uniforms, dark, shady-looking characters, high collared overcoats, water pistols and black beady eyes — characters from both inside and outside the "pen." Sing-Sing on campus? Well, almost — it was the "Farmhouse Prison Panic." This annual event gives the men and their dates a chance once a year to let out their hidden Al Capone complexes. The party was held in their new house which was just finished and dedicated this fall. Fall quarter also brought a first place ranking for scholastic achievement in fraternities. Winter quarter found the escaped convicts playing toga-clad Roman citizens for "Rome, Sweet Rome," a satire which brought FarmHouse the first place in Varieties. Spring quarter, when a young man's fancy turns (just where is a question still being determined), presented a fountain and a bubbling brook — "April Fantasy," the spring formal. This was the year in a nutshell or a black and white striped suit or a trophy or something, but anyway an important one.

HOMECOMING held a double meaning for the members of FarmHouse as they took occupancy of their new house and ate one of their first meals in it during the Homecoming season.

IT'S BEAR truth, that Jim Pellett, John Scott, and Kent Muller have cultivated the attentions of an important house member.

PLEDGESHIP may even involve entertaining the actives, dutifully performed by Don Ogg and Lonny Rodd.

The fall started out with a bang, or maybe we should say, a splash at the Kappa Sigma house when they held a beach party during rush week. The general whereabouts of the beach still remain hidden from civilization, but the Kappa Sig's have revealed that they roasted a side of beef and ate it (wonder what they did with the other side). The costumes changed abruptly for the Western Dance held in their corral. And, as their special entertainment for the night they had a special singing group, "a la Kingston Trio," who magically disappeared after that night and turned up the next day looking strangely like three Kappa Sig's. Perhaps the most important event during the year — besides the beach party — was the planning a new addition for the house and the re-decoration of the present recreation room. Other events during the year included an intramural volleyball championship, the winter Black and White Formal, open house on Parents' Day, and, oh yes, has anyone mentioned the beach party?

Lambda Chi's completed their new house in December, 1960, dedicated it in March, and now have space for 66 members. The first social event held in the new house was the fall dance party with a Spanish setting, Spanish costumes, and brandy glass favors with the coat of arms. Winter quarter everyone was "imprisoned" in "Lambda Chi Alphatraz" for the annual winter party. Walls were painted to resemble a jail, and favors were prison-type cups with the name on them. The Lambda Chi's had a Christmas party for under-privileged children in cooperation with IFC. "White Rose," the dance named for the house flower, ushered in spring and was held at the recreation center at Camp Dodge. Miss Nancy Hillig was crowned Crescent Girl amid white roses and changing lighting effects. The Lambda Chi's celebrated their new house opening with four teas spring quarter — a house-mother's tea, a faculty tea, an all-greek tea, and an open house.

INTRICATE wiring, scheming, and stuffing produced the animated Disneyland display which won the Phi Deltas the Homecoming Sweepstakes trophy.

A Phi Delt favorite of the year was their fall dance, "Pajama Games." In keeping with the theme, the Phi Delt's and their dates wore costumes of pajamas of all descriptions. Their pajama party might be termed unusual because the Phi Delt's left the house when the party was over and their dates stayed overnight at the Phi Delt house. For an extra insight into who the beauties are on campus the Phi Delt's put their bid in early and were more than glad to play hosts at the annual Bomb Beauty tea for the selection of this year's Bomb Beauties. The Phi Delt's put their heads together and came up with the theme of "Fantasyland" for their Homecoming display. For their brilliant co-ordination of Disneyland characters and meticulous works of art, the Phi Delt's were awarded the Homecoming Sweepstakes trophy. Beside this trophy sits the Sinfonia Sweepstakes trophy, a proud declaration of the musical ability of the men.

Phi Gamma Delta

A KNOTTY PINE rec room provides a good place for informal gatherings; however Phi Gams take care that jam sessions do not obliterate studying.

BLACK STAIN is rapidly becoming a tradition for Phi Gams at Veishea as they concoct variations on a theme of South Africa.

"The great outdoors" served as a very appropriate setting for the Phi Gamma Delta spring party. Although there were no palm trees and a sandy beach for the Hawaiian theme, the Phi Gam's did their best by building their own straw hut, a barbeque pit, and favoring the girls with sarongs and leis. The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Phi Gam "Grass Skirt Girl," Linda Larsen. The Phi Gam's came forth with a Veishea float featuring a cannibal queen riding royally in a sedan chair pursued by fifty cannibals. A genuine action-packed spectacular, the float featured fearless white hunters bravely warding off the savages with blank cartridges. The theme of the float was none other than, "The Quiet Village." Obviously the Phi Gam's are a sports-minded group. They can chalk themselves up as campus wrestling champs, winners of the Class C second class football division, and avid participaters in track, wrestling, basketball, baseball, handball, and swimming.

Phi Psi's actively participated in athletics as they captured first place in the spring and fall track meets, placed third in overall points in intramural competition, and won the points-per-man trophy in the spring. To keep out of shape they held various parties. In the spring they spent a week-end at Clear Lake where they skied, sailed, swam, went boat-riding, and held a huge barbecue. Winter brought their semi-formal, the Jeff Hop. And in the fall their house became a Japanese garden with a pool, a rice paddy, and a Geisha house for the "Teahouse of the November Moon." Meanwhile they built a Homecoming display, and a Veishea float. When that all was over, they modestly returned to more serious and traditional pursuits—the continuous bridge marathon and the ever-present football, basketball, or softball game on the front lawn.

"You're under arrest" was a familiar phrase when invitations were issued to the annual fall party, the Phi Tau Prison Riot. Dates for the party were picked up by the so-called Ames Police Force and taken to the Ames Municipal Court where the pledges held a mock trial. The house was decorated to resemble a prison with cots in each cell. Party favors consisted of a ball and chain. The spring formal was held at the Cloud Room at the Des Moines Airport. Amid the dreaminess of the theme, "Phi Tau Fantasy," Kathy Kinnamon was named Phi Tau's dream girl and was given a loving cup. Phi Kappa Tau's Homecoming display was Cy playing a bass fiddle with the strings made from Wildcats. Phi Tau's participated in football, volleyball, track, ping-pong, and bowling. They also enjoy bridge and singing. After study hours, the men like to gather in a room to enjoy singing with guitar accompaniment.

JIM WEIBORG, Richard Hart, and Mike Cole get together for a jam session whenever things are slow, although these sessions occur much more often than "slowness" warrants.

DOWNRIGHT relaxation staves off before-dinner hunger pangs for Ron Petrosky, Hilton Ryder, and Mike Stricker as they lounge in front of the fireplace.

BEFORE DINNER appetites may require Bernie's restraining hand, although Jerry Peltier and Don Pfeiler generally manage to talk her into a snack.

The Phi Kap's worked industriously last spring quarter to make possible the construction of the handsome statues by Christian Peterson between Oak and Elm Halls. In a well managed campaign for funds they raised over three thousand dollars which provided half of the necessary sum. Even while concentrating on the Christian Peterson drive, the Phi Kap's had time to plan their beautiful spring formal held at the Ames Country Club. Beach towels bearing the crest went to every girl as a memento of the evening. In the fall and winter quarters two annual dances were held. "The Fisheaters Ball," traditional fall house party, found couples dressed hillbilly fashion and house decorations matched the rustic costumes. For the winter party, "Pirates Ball," the atmosphere became one of mystery and intrigue as everyone swaggered about boasting tales of high adventure in true seafaring fashion. A fraternity of Catholic men, Phi Kappa Theta provides both social advantages and an opportunity for religious enrichment through participation in church sponsored activities.

Pi Kappa Alpha men introduced their new housemother, Mrs. Beryl Tague, at a housemother's tea during winter quarter. The annual Pike's fall party in November featured a Roaring Twenties theme with a still and a champagne bath for decorations. Favors were pledge paddles and costumes were a mixed variety of Roaring 20's dress. A Dream Girl Formal was held spring quarter at the Commodore Hotel in Des Moines where Diana Thomas was chosen "Dream Girl, 1961." Winter quarter was highlighted by a Hawaiian party. Favors were Hawaiian leis made of orchids, decorations were strictly Hawaiian, and costumes ranged from grass skirts to sailor suits. Pi K A's Homecoming display featured two large rabbits with 24 smaller rabbits suggesting that they "Reproduce Last Year's Score." One service project undertaken this year was to help clean up the 4-H camp at Boone. A new addition to the chapter-house is in the planning stage which will increase living capacity by twenty-five or thirty men.

The evening before the annual "Rose Ball" dinner-dance, the pledges gave their traditional steak fry. Financially unable to afford professional entertainment, they decided it would be more fun to present a skit featuring their own talents. Every year at the annual dinner-dance it is the custom to choose a Pi Kappa Phi Rose Queen. Excitement and anticipation finally came to a climax when Jean Mason was crowned. Early winter quarter the men of Pi Kappa Phi celebrated Founder's Day. This marked the thirty-second anniversary of the founding of the Pi Kappa chapter on the Iowa State campus. For their Homecoming display the Pi Kappas erected an enormous football shoe grinding a cigarette butt with the caption, "Stomp Their B..." For Veishea, the float portrayed John Henry, the Steel Driving Man.

MUSIC for easy listening and dance exchanges can be found in the living room, which is used by actives and pledges.

RELINQUISHING its academic atmosphere, the library succumbs to after-dinner bridge sessions. The library does occupy an important position in its own right; at graduation, the seniors contribute books of their choice to its shelves.

TWENTY DEGREES below outside, but warmth radiates from the hearth to include Sig Alph's and dates at a cozy fireside.

How about being Huckleberry Finn for an afternoon and floating down the wide Mississippi on a large raft? Well, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon's tried it, except the raft was small with swarms of people hanging on as if they were afraid that they might accidentally be pushed off at any moment. The spring raft party was held on, in, and under the muddy Des Moines River. A Beatnik Party was held in the fall at Camp Sunnyside in Des Moines. The S A E's had previously worked planting shrubbery and clearing up the grounds as their service project for the Iowa Crippled Children's Home. The Beatnik Party took little costuming. Everyone came in his normal attire — sunglasses, beret, tattered levi's, and beard. Modern paintings adorned the walls and mutterings of original poetry could be heard echoing over the snap of fingers. Other S A E's accomplishments included winning the intramural All College Crown for the second year straight, a second place in Sinfonia, and the holding of their pledge sorority tea.

Fall rolls around and it is time again for the annual Sigma Chi Watermelon Bust. Each year all of the sorority pledge classes are invited to compete in such events as the balloon stomp, egg toss (not hard boiled), and the limbo. Not to forget the housemothers the Sigma Chi's thought up the seed spitting contest. The housemother that could spit a watermelon seed the farthest won the coveted prize. The rest of the party was topped off with the presentation of the trophies for the event winners and the new Miss Watermelon Bust was crowned with a watermelon rind. Everyone's attention was then turned to the consumption of juicy watermelon. Their Varieties skit, "War of the Four Roses," featured the leading men, Henry the Fifth, and Peter the Pint. For their exchanges the Sigma Chi's try to be original in their themes. One of the favorites was the theme of the feud of the Hatfields and the McCoy's. Dressed in hillbilly clothes the Hatfields and McCoy's settled their differences over the table.

So they did have the first color T.V. on campus. So they do stack bricks in front of the doors of houses so that people have to go out the windows. So what? The Sigma Nu's are normal sometimes, too. Winter quarter brought a "Bootlegger's Ball" with a roaring twenties theme. The short, short dresses, long, long beads, and double-breasted suits walked through a false apartment and into a tunnel to the red and white checked tablecloth basement. Favors were machine guns; this is normal? Old clothes, wild ties, sunglasses, farm hats (how do you tell a farm hat?), and corn cob pipes were the costumes for the fall "Sod Buster's Ball." In the spring they have a raft party or ball as the case may be. Thanks to the help of four Ames children Sigma Nu earned a public appeal honorable mention award for their Veishea float "Carousel." One last thing — they like to spend their spare time playing bridge and watching the color T.V., of course.

DOG APPEAL is exuded by house mascot, Buddy, as he sits surrounded by his friends in the Dungeon (recreation room).

CONFLICT of interest is hinted in Bob McCloud's expression as he plans ahead during an exchange with a pledge class.

IT'S Twistin' Time on the Sig Ep balcony as Fran Lebens, Tuck Vosburg and their dates gyrate to the rhythm set by Bob Scott.

"Around the World in 80 Days" not only swept away the Veishea sweepstakes float award, but the Sig Eps adapted the motto for their whole year, "Around the Campus in a Whirl." "Social events and philanthropic projects caused the whirl of activity; the brothers dressed formally for a quartet of annual events — the Saddle and Gun party, the Thanksgiving Feast, the Christmas Overnight, and Queen of Hearts ball. Dates were allowed at all events but the Thanksgiving feast which is traditionally stag (so members do not have to restrain their appetites?). "Dates" invited to the Christmas party included the Housemother, Mrs. McKone, who served as accompanist for caroling (thus Sig Eps economize on entertainment). Entertainment is even more economical for larger social functions; included in the house is the most highly demanded trio on campus, the Sig Ep Trio, which, incidentally, won a first place in Varieties. Entertainment took a different form — a Slave Auction, but its ultimate purpose was philanthropic; by selling their own labor, members raised funds for their Campus Chest contribution.

As an excuse, but a very honorable excuse, the Sig Pi's spent many hours building their Veishea float instead of the wearisome task of studying. To insure that the rain would not drench their float while being built, they put their heads together and came up with the idea that a plastic tent would be the best protection. In keeping with the Veishea parade theme, "Mile of Melodies," they entitled their float "T for Two" and featured the novel idea of a black Model T car. Some of the other men of Sigma Pi have proved their talents in other areas by winning the Class A bowling trophy for last spring quarter. Determined to keep the trophy, the Sig Pi's are defending their title for bowling again in '62. One of the more memorable times of the year is when the Sig Pi's hold their annual "Orchid Ball" in the spring. The exciting anticipation of its coming makes it a favorite of the year.

Teke's turned snipers the first week in October. Following the Snipe Hunt for clues around Ames, they celebrated with a steak fry and dance back at the house. When snow prevented snipe hunts, the Gamma Phi's and Teke's held a joint ski party at the 4-H camp at Boone. A pair of gold fish was one of the most practical gifts given to dates at the Teke's annual Christmas party featuring an exchange of ridiculous gifts. Firesides were held with FarmHouse and Sigma Alpha Epsilon to promote brotherhood among the Greeks. The annual Bar-room Brawl was held at the transformed chapter house, the theme of the costume party being "The Blind Pig," with the roaring twenties features. Festivities stayed on an even keel, supervised by Mrs. Genevieve Kehm, the new housemother. Teaming with the Chi Omega's, Tau Kappa Epsilon won second place in Veishea floats with "Bali Hai." It featured two sections of grass hut, Bloody Mary, and the troops. Teke's Varieties skit featured a satire on Veishea.

READY and primed for action are the Mad Hatters, Theta Chi intramural football team.

WATCH HIM, he plays a wicked game of table tennis! Jack Grimes and Gary Pryor look on as Andy Thompson socks the ball across the net.

"The Old West," a dance given by the pledges during spring quarter, found the members of Theta Chi dressed in the costumes of horse opera heroes. True western saga was portrayed in a skit involving a brawl and gunfight between "Mat Drillon" and "Maverook." With the assistance of Sigma Kappa sorority, a float of several large petaled lilies was constructed for entrance in the Veishea parade. Three SK coeds were seated within the flowers to carry out the theme "Sweet and Lovely." Walt Disney characters were depicted throughout the Theta Chi house at the fall quarter party. The theme, "Saturday Night in the Comic Section," was portrayed by papering the recreation room with comics. The highlight of the evening was the pledge skit, a man-on-the-street interview concerning the question of women's hours. Second place trophies were awarded to the members for volleyball intramurals and Christmas door decorations. East Berlin refugees found safe haven at Theta Chi's Brandenburg Gate Hotel. Decorations for the winter party included heavy barbed wire barricades, and a preacher was on hand to perform marriage ceremonies so couples passing over the border could legally enter the hotel. Life in a co-educational fall-out shelter was shown in the evening's skit. Favors were German steins.

The Theta Delt men were especially proud to be chosen the hosts for a week to the Russian cultural exchange group last spring quarter. Because the Theta Delt men could master so many languages the Russian group felt right at home. Obviously the Theta Delt men are a scholastically-minded group. This year they boast of a new scholarship trophy setting on their shelf for the highest scholarship of their national fraternity. Iowa State University's two candidates for Rhodes Scholar were both Theta Delt men, as was one of the candidates for the Fulbright scholarship. To fill their social life, the Theta Delt men keep themselves in a social whirl with their annual "Carnation Cotillion," a "Swamp Party," exchanges, and firesides. Each year at their "Carnation Cotillion," the Theta Delt Sweetheart is chosen by the men. This year their sweetheart was Sandy Hart.

Not to be found without their routing caps, the Theta Xi's industriously organized and built a Homecoming display, "Let's Tee Off the Wildcat." This original idea featured Cy teeing off using a wildcat as the golf ball. Using some of their ingenuity for studies the Theta Xi's boast second place in scholarship of their national fraternity. During the year the Theta Xi's usually find time to squeeze in some social life. One of these marked occasions was none other than their winter party, "Bowery Brawl." As their specific theme they decided upon the quaint old atmosphere of a saloon. To be sure that atmosphere was achieved, the men included a bar with mirrors behind it, a specialty of the house, rot beer, card tables, and spittoons. To complete the picture a band played special honky tonk music in the background.

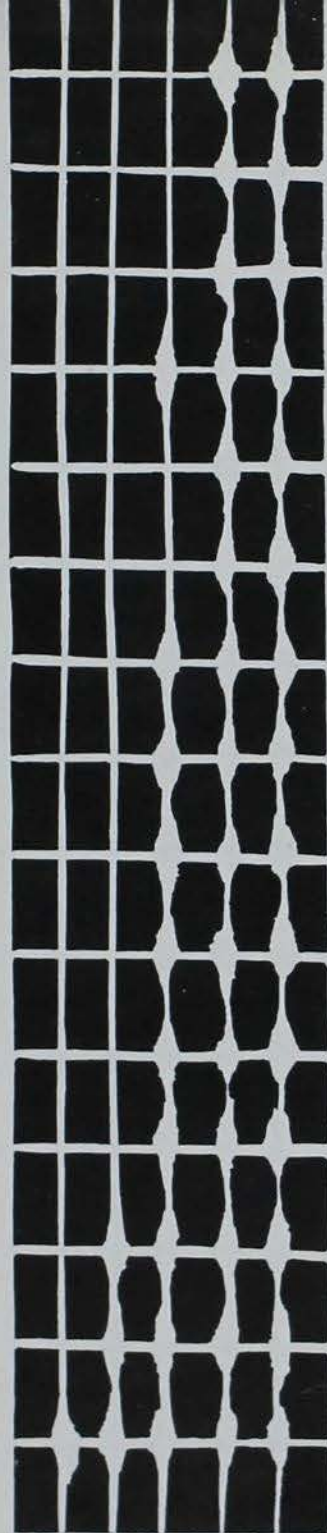

ON TIME for Saturday breakfast of rolls and donuts are Gene Honert, Jim Selander, Marvin Hixson, and George Watson.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

There is a trend. Although the majority of graduates of the College of Agriculture are trained to be farm operators and managers, research workers, and educators in the science of agriculture, there is yet a definite trend toward a greater number of opportunities in business and industry for graduates from all agricultural curricula. Agricultural graduates receive starting salaries on a par with graduates in liberal arts, business administration, and the biological sciences. They have the broad educational background that lends itself to expansion in many areas. Some of these areas are: in research — new uses and methods, processing, new products, and by-products; in industry — pesticides and herbicides, textiles and fibers, buildings and utilities; in communications — publications, photography, television, and advertising; and in agricultural services — chemicals, quality control and grading, and foreign agricultural service.

GRADUATES in agriculture with a horticulture major may select work in turf grass management, vegetable crops, ornamentals, floriculture, tree maintenance, or fruit crops.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

In demand — Iowa State University graduates of the College of Engineering are in great demand by business concerns all over the country. Evidencing this is the fact that last year 585 companies sent representatives here to interview prospective employees. They conducted over 10,000 individual interviews which resulted in an average of four job offers per man. At present, twenty percent of the engineering grads take jobs with Iowa firms, and this figure is increasing. Engineering careers are dynamic and stimulating. Over half of the aerospace engineers are headed for careers in missiles and space, and many electrical engineers will be working on the intricate electronic devices that guide and track the missiles.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES await Jon Skinner, Ed Miller, and Dick Horton as they consult the interview schedule.

COLLEGE OF HOME ECONOMICS

Suppose one were to take a tour of an average sized city somewhere in the U. S. It would be surprising to see the diverse jobs in which ISU home economics graduates would be found. Passing through the downtown section there might be an experimental foods lab which employs home economics graduates for research on food and household equipment. Right next door a jewelry store where graduates may be experimenting in jewelry design. The largest department store in this city has buyers, designers, and sales promoters including special personnel who manage the advertising and style shows. A newspaper from the corner newsstand contains an article on family life written by a home economics journalist. Around that corner is a large finance company which hires home management graduates to deal with the creditors and their problems. Youth organizations, welfare centers, nursery school and research centers offer jobs in the field of child development.

BREAKFAST AT TIFFANY'S may not come true, but these jewelry design seniors may someday be fashioning for Tiffany's.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCES AND HUMANITIES

ON CAMERA! Experience gained in camera operations, presentation, and floor direction will serve Mary Pat Read, Judy Desart, and Ruth Ohde in actual job situations.

"Elbow room, cried Daniel Boone." Soon the student of the College of Sciences and Humanities may wish to utter the same cry. The previous year of high enrollment, 1948, saw one thousand less students enrolled in the College. In 1959 the College's enrollment surpassed that of the College of Agriculture, and it is now running close behind the College of Engineering. The new Humanities majors offer hope to the Iowa State male because English alone has drawn one hundred females. The aim of the College, to give the student a variety and depth of knowledge, is recognized by today's students as that which will help them understand the world about them, the nature of themselves and other human beings, and the possibilities for their own intellectual development. The core courses, which help to fulfill this aim, include selections from the four main areas, physical, life, and social sciences, and humanities.

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

AS a full fledged veterinarian, Chuck Gonyo will be performing many a oopherohysterectomy himself. Here he assists instructor, Dr. Pearson.

When the word veterinarian is heard, the picture immediately comes to mind of the man who helps nurse our livestock or pets back to health when they are sick or injured. This man has chosen to go into private practice — the most popular field among graduates. There are, however, many other categories of service providing opportunities for vet med degree holders including various levels of government service, research, commercial enterprise, military service, and education. Many of the graduates will be attracted into doing research work at the world's largest animal disease laboratory located just outside Ames. Others will work with pharmaceutical companies in research, production, quality control, and the sale of biological supplies. Still others may be attracted to positions with feed companies or with one of the large meat-packing houses. The veterinarian in any of these areas will help to protect our rapidly growing populations, to advance our space-age sciences, and to make life more livable on all counts.

If there is one thing an editor learns throughout a year, it's how to deal with crises. Minor crises — losing a picture or signature, or discovering a missing copy block or photo at deadline time — were daily occurrences at times of stress. But the ingenious and dependable staff always came through to solve these problems quickly and efficiently. Perhaps this is an odd way to say thank you to the staff and many other persons who willingly cooperated as the book fluctuated in and out of the normal distresses — perhaps this is a strange thank you, but even Yogi's cookies, numerous cokes, and the thank you's cannot reveal the gratitude of an editor for an incomparable staff.
