NOW AND then he gazes at the campus pondering what it would be like without people . . . without college youth. Forty years . . . how quickly they pass with a job that is also a hobby. M. D. Helser's work? People . . . Personalities . . . Individuals. In his position as Dean of the Junior College for the past 22 years, and in his many campus and community activities, his leadership has been inspired by this surging zest for living. To this man, whose services and sincere friendship are always extended to everyone, we dedicate the 1955 Bomb.

foreword . . . .

TO THE population of the world, this past year has brought confusion of purpose, conflict of ideals and a hesitancy to lift its eyes to the future.

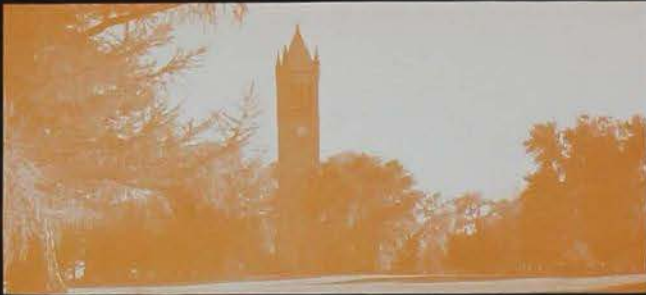

To our age group, which must bear and nourish a more stable world, it has brought tension and indecision.

To the college student, faced with these confusions and conflicts significant to him for the first time, the year has brought memories . . . intangible, yet sturdy, secure, lasting.

Facing the chaos of the future, the student reaches for order from the past and finds it in the knowledge, the skill, the understanding gained through his schedule of classwork and activities.

To secure these memories, to insure their lasting, is the purpose of the yearbook. The 1955 BOMB is based on the most sturdy, the most regular essence, the Seasons. A tangible background upon which to build an intangible story . . . the story of a year.

Our story, but for you, the students, would be a story of any year in any college. The significance of this year lies in your actions, your beliefs, your decisions. This book is the framework about which to weave the threads that will make this YOUR story and YOUR Bomb.

Autumn Comes to Ames . . .

IT WAS late summer . . . and yet it was not. Fall wasn't officially due for several days, yet collegians sported warm tweeds and wool sweaters. Cottons and summer slacks seemed out of place. It was fall quarter . . . a new start . . . familiar faces, new faces, old twosomes, new twosomes . . . the feeling was definitely one of wools and tweeds.

Suddenly it was fall, and classes were underway. Evening dusk sank into quick blackness; it became less tempting to leave the nightly study desk as autumn breezes sharpened. This was to be "the year of tremendous gradepoints." Remember? Yet who wanted to study when he could "gab" with friends?

Chem seemed just a bit easier after a hash over with an understanding roommate. Friendships had their beginnings . . . and grew.

Problems were solved. Crowded housing conditions saw partial relief in a new dorm, West Gate, to be opened the next fall. A long-range housing plan was set up to compensate for the future's expanding enrollments. Enrollment numbered more than 8,000 with the engineers in majority. Little wonder the campus teemed with tripods and intent, stooped figures.

One of the most controversial problems of the year centered on parking. Solutions ranging from using Blackbird Hill to filling Lake LaVerne caused unending comment, but no answer evolved. Tickets continued to appear on illegally parked cars; fines were paid (willingly or not), appealed, hopefully by some, perhaps with success. With campus jobs harder to find, each penny counted. Enrollment increase had created a job scarcity.

Mild fall weather lingered till Thanksgiving; homeward trips were planned before the roads got bad. The Missouri U. vs. Iowa State contest, the sixth migration game, added to poorly attended Saturday classes. It seemed good to get away from study drudgery that weekend.

Nevertheless, the mild weather of fall served for much more than off-campus trips. The campanile, faithful guardian of precious college minutes, assumed a new significance for many girls, who, during the tolling of midnight's arrival, were initiated to the official status of co-ed.

Iowa State girls, whether coeds or not, did not lack eligible men. As in past years, the masculine population outnumbered the feminine nearly three to one. Cardinal Guild realized the plight of males and tried having dorm telephone hours extended. The extension of Sunday night hours till 10:30 was also a welcome plan.

And what would fall quarter have been without an initiation mixer? The traditional "Freshman" Mixer gave way to an all-college mixer where upperclassman men were no longer considered party-crashers. This was part of the Pep Jamboree, which set the spirit for the freshmen's first ISC football game.

But throughout the quarter there were also classes and labs, reading assignments and projects, "shotguns" and "quizzes" . . . education was an accumulation of a secret sense . . . the power of knowledge. It was the culmination of fact seeking and problem solving and amounted to the storage of valuable knowledge for future use.

With Thanksgiving's end, fall quarter rapidly approached final week and Christmas. The air hummed with familiar carols, buzzed with gift secrets and came alive with anxiety over final grades. The ground soon chilled and became hard to the foot; campus trees lost their colorful autumn regalia. Fall quarter ended . . . winter was here.

Iowa State College*

Mixing business with pleasure while relaxing over a cup of hot coffee, Pres. and Mrs. Hilton chat with a Homecoming alumna.

IOWA STATE'S future will be under careful guidance as a result of the long-term plan initiated by President James H. Hilton during the past year. The plan lists step-by-step improvements for construction and alterations of campus buildings and dormitories. The addition to the Science Building and the construction of West Gate Dorm were two steps in the plan. Hilton's request to the 1955 Legislature for additions to the Home Economics Building and Library, a new animal industries building and an enlargement of funds for merit salary increases were also parts of the extended program. His proposal for an Iowa State College Center for students' activities sprang rapidly into existence and is receiving enthusiastic support.

President Hilton's genuinely sincere personality plus a cooperative nature and democratic standards have helped to further his relations with the faculty, students, alumni and general public.

WHEN Dr. Hilton arrived at Iowa State in July, 1953, he created a new administrative position, that of Provost. In November of that year he selected Dr. James H. Jensen to fill the new post. Dr. Jensen's responsibilities include, in broad terms, the assistance to President Hilton and the substitution for the president on his absence. Provost Jensen makes decisions involving instructional policies and personnel problems of the college. He studies the problems of efficient utilization of all college facilities. These activities familiarize him with most staff and student organizations and enable his office to act as a clearing house for their varying needs and problems. The creation of the Provost's position permits the President's office to serve more adequately the needs of the staff and students and at the same time expand relations with people of the state.

Planning for ISC's Future

DEAN Helser, engineering just doesn't seem to be 'my line' but I still want to continue my college work," the bewildered student stated. After a bit of intent conversation, the student was eased by the Dean's suggestion. . . . "Well, come back after you've taken some ability and interest tests; then we'll be better equipped to discuss your future."

Many students with individual problems are assisted by the Personnel Director of Iowa State, M. D. Helser. Scheduling counselors, mapping out classification and acting as liaison between the president and students are among the Dean's numerous duties. The Dean is a chief administrator as well as coordinator.

Dean Helser, a member of the athletic council for the twentieth year, is also a member of the General Curriculum Committee and the Alumni Hall Board of Trustees.

YOUR grades may be unknown to almost everyone, but there's one man who's in on that secret. He is Dr. Arthur M. Gowan, Iowa State's Registrar since 1951. Systematically arranging the details of registration, Dr. Gowan makes possible the relative ease by which students enroll each quarter. Dr. Gowan's interests in Iowa State extend to such extra activities as being chairman of regular openings on weekend nights before mid-terms and finals. Seniors were permitted in the stacks for the first time in the college's history.

THE new West Gate dorm will house upper-class women by the fall of 1955. Later, probably in 1956 when the new Linden Hall is finished, men or graduate students will occupy West Gate. Construction plans for all new campus buildings are handled for the college by Boyne H. Platt, Business Manager and Secretary of Iowa State College. Platt supervises college accounting and purchasing departments as well as the ISC physical plant. His direction also extends to the book store, printing department and central store.

BOYNE H. PLATT, College Business Manager

LAST time I had a cold they gave me pink pills, and this time they're yellow," commented one student to another. "You're lucky, I always receive a cold shot!" came the hasty reply. Treatment for colds is just one of the many services performed by the supervisor of the college hospital, Dr. J. G. Grant, and his staff. Nearly 40,000 patients received pills, shots, X-rays and other medical care. During the past year about 30 Iowa State students benefitted from one of the hospital's unique features, a reducing or special diet table.

BEWILDERED students scurried between buildings. Small knots of students congregated on campus sidewalks. Most were headed for or in search of the Armory.

Many sore feet and much confusion later, most of the year's crop of freshmen had found its way into the Armory. Weighted down by literature describing everything from the Ward System to Iowa State's intramural program, the new students filed noisily to their seats for preliminary speeches, an introduction to Iowa State's songs, then the tests. Freshman Week was here again!

Freshmen Busy, Bewildered

"May I cut in?" said a firm voice at his side. "Hey, I just started dancing with her!" A disappointed freshman stepped aside for the new arrival, a smooth, well-dressed blond with a fraternity pin barely visible under his charcoal sport coat. The girl smiled broadly, and the two of them danced off towards the middle of the crowd. The freshman craned his neck towards other parts of the dance floor. "Wonder what happened to that redhead I had my eye on a minute ago . . ."

And so ended another minor skirmish in the battle which was the All-College Mixer. As the Campanile struck 11:30, the couples—two by two—and the stags—six by six—strolled out of the Union towards their respective residences.

"Oh, no, not Saturday classes again this quarter!" . . . "I can't believe it—only two eight o'clocks!" . . . "Where can I ever put in P.E.?"

The State Gym swarmed with busy registrants. Groans and shouts of delight echoed from the "Choose your desk and flip for the top drawer!" Returning coeds prepare to settle in the room that's to be HOME until next June.

There's no getting away from work at Iowa State. These new freshmen have been here only 1 day, and already they are taking tests.

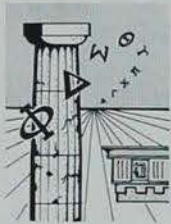

rafted ceiling, as students caught first glimpses of their new schedules. This was it — the plan of action for fall quarter. The dissatisfied trudged over to join the long, weary lines on the benches, while others wound their way through the maze of ropes to the tables for the endless chore of filling out forms.

Old friends, not seen since June, added to the din with their exuberant cries of "Hi" and "How was the summer?" It was good to see everyone again! Plans for more extended reunions at the Registration Dance rapidly unfolded . . . one last fling before hitting the books.

Back to school. It wasn't so bad after all. In fact, it was downright great to be back with all the guys and gals. And the schedule wasn't really so rough.

Free Bowling? Well, not all the time, but during Memorial Union Open House it helps acquaint new students with Union activities.

MUSIC from the band floated out over the crowded, dimly-lit dance floor. The boy nodded toward the stage with a jerk of his head, "Not a bad band."

"Huh-uh," she replied. "I think this Panhellenic and Interfraternity Council pledge dance is a great idea."

"So do I," he echoed. "Did you pledge during rush week?"

"Sure did. The sororities used a new rush system this year. They started rushing a week early so it didn't interfere with Freshman Days. I'll never forget those first 2 days of open house! My feet hurt so! And you fraternity guys lining the sidewalks when we walked by — if we didn't feel like fools when you made cute little remarks like 'Say, look at the shape in the red dress,' or 'Hey, honey, your slip's showing.'"

"Well, don't blame me, I wasn't even a pledge then; those were the actives giving you the once-over. We didn't rush like the sororities — all we did was visit the various houses, shoot the breeze and get acquainted . . . even went to the football game with a couple of the fellows. We didn't have to visit every fraternity either. All the fraternities keep right on rushing through the whole year.

"This year we started having open rush, too, beginning in October.

The boy glanced down at his watch. "Want to go over to the house before going back to the sorority?"

"Sounds fine," she replied. "Let's go!"

The house was brightly lighted as they pulled into the driveway. Several couples sitting in the living room watching TV glanced up as the two entered.

"Want to go down to the rec-room and dance?" he asked.

"Let's stay up here and watch television. We really don't have too much time."

A little later couples gradually began drifting off. "I suppose we'd better go," she said. "It's getting about that time."

The front porch light was blinking as they dashed up the steps of the sorority house a little later. "Have to run now — wouldn't want to be campused," she said. "Bye."

She hurried into the rec-room, crowded with pajama clad girls sitting on the floor. A babble of giggles and voices gradually grew into a sorority song as more voices joined in. The song broke off in the middle — "Serenade, serenade!" — the words swiftly sped around the room. In a confusion of voices and a hurried grabbing of coats the girls filed out on the porch. A fraternity song rose from the cluster of men in front of the house. Their masculine voices blended in harmony as the girls shivered in the crisp, wintry air. A barber-shop quartette number brought an extra burst of applause. With one last song, the group dissolved and the boys started off down the street. "Good-night, thank you . . ." echoed from the porch as they left. Then it was quiet.

Sorority rushees listen attentively to the speaker at the rushing convocation. Their name cards form interesting geometric patterns. President of Panhellenic Council addresses the new crop of rushees at the rushing convocation as sorority presidents listen attentively. Eager, and perhaps just a trifle nervous, these freshman girls begin a long 2 days of hopping from sorority house to sorority house.

"You can't hardly get them no more" as the ADPi's echo Georgie Gobel's statement while they watch his show on their television set. Autograph books went out when plaster of paris was invented. These artistic ADPi's are trying to add a little beauty to this bare cast.

"HOW do you like that?" the two boys griped to their dates. "We tramp all over the campus for half the night, and when we do find the treasure it turns out to be fake money!" Following this pre-fireside treasure hunt, ADPi's and their guys returned to the house to dance, pop corn and roast marshmallows amid corn stalks, pumpkins and other harvest decorations.

"Holiday Inn" found the Alpha Delta Pi house converted into a night club Christmas setting designed to satisfy every mood. Classical and jazz music were featured in different rooms.

The land of "Pretend," a fanciful world of abstract shapes and gently turning mobiles in black, silver and aqua, descended on the big house on Greeley. The winter quarter formal was preceded by a dinner at the Lincoln Lodge in Boone.

"One . . . two . . . three . . . !" Two arms and two legs flailed helplessly for a second or so. Splash!! A cheer went up from the bank as an ill-fated ADPi swam back to the shore to dry herself by the fire. The ADPi's Hunt Fake Money afternoon of swimming and boating at McFarland's Lake was climaxed by a large picnic dinner. After filling themselves, the ADPi's and their dates migrated back to the house for dancing.

Sore muscles and hours of practice were rewarded last spring when the sports-minded ADPi's captured the Women's Intramural trophy awarded by WAA. The award is based both on skill and participation. The ADPi's are proud of their near 100 percent participation, a goal long sought.

"No Monkey Business at ISC—Our Tail of Achievement." A large, perky monkey with a tail of notable linear dimensions passed slowly before the judges' stand. For their original "monkey business" the ADPi's carried home the second place trophy in the sorority division of the 1954 Veishea parade.

Dads claimed dates with their daughters as the ADPi's entertained for Parents' Weekend. After the football game, parents were guests of honor at an ADPi open house. Dads took over the house for the night, while the moms and daughters stayed elsewhere. The girls must have been good hostesses, for at Sunday noon dinner they were presented with a television set — gift of the moms and dads.

"SAY, this is really a neat theme," the fellow offered, "but weren't you afraid it would rain?"

"Oh no," she laughed, "the weather man had strict orders for a perfect night."

A fountain of colored rays lighted the Alpha Gamma Delta backyard as the girls and their dates danced under the stars. It was the Alpha Gam spring formal, Magnolia Mist. Softly tinted spray touched their faces as they viewed the scene.

"Well, I'm glad he obeyed orders," he said. "Say, we'd better get over to the punch table before the melonballs and cake are all gone."

"The way to a man's heart," murmured the Alpha Gam, as her date led her through a gate in the magnolia-entwined picket fence to the punch bowl.

Alpha Gam's Share Christmas Joys

With fall came Homecoming and a 15-foot stork carrying two miniature football players. He hovered over a layer of pink and blue clouds, while beneath him a placard declared that "We're Expecting T-win!"

"Silent night, holy night," echoed through the hospital halls, as Alpha Gam's and Pi Kappa Phi's joined their voices.

"Let's sing 'Up on the House Tops,'" whispered someone: "there are three little boys in the room down the hall."

"OK," returned a companion, "and then we'd better hurry on over to the children's home before the kids go to bed."

"Gosh, it really makes me feel all light inside when we sing to these kids, and the weather man was swell to give us the snow we ordered . . . just right for caroling."

"Yes, but it is getting kind of cold, and that cocoa back at the house will taste mighty good," suggested a Pi Kap, pulling his fur-lined hood tighter around his ears . . . and it did.

A blue-tailed mermaid flopped her shimmering tail in greeting as a couple walked in the door to the "Castle Under the Sea." A startled fellow exclaimed, "Should have brought my fish-net!"

"Oh no, you don't," admonished his date, "we are going in the big hall and dance!" She led him to the living room where a combo, anchored next to a clump of sea weed and a school of sunfish, played floating melodies.

"An apple a day will keep the doctor away" must be these Alpha Gams' motto as they take a break and enjoy one of those "spreads."

Pledge duties are a part of being a pledge, and these Alpha Gam's are keeping busy making out attic slips for the actives' attic boxes.

"And what do you want for Christmas, little boy?" asked Santa Claus. "Make it a big beautiful doll," came the eager reply.

THE dining room of the Chi Omega house was filled with smothered giggling and scraping of chairs as the girls sat down to dinner. A tiny blonde unfolded her napkin and glanced toward the kitchen door. "We're having our meager meal of the month tonight, aren't we . . . the one to save money for the polio fund in memory of Nancy Rich, the pledge who died of polio last summer?" she asked her companion.

"Uh-huh," came the reply as the girl smoothed the napkin on her lap thoughtfully. "That's our main project for the year . . . along with Nancy's Memorial Contribution Award for the most outstanding pledge who best lives up to the Chi Omega ideals."

Chi Omega Saves For Polio Fund

As the waiter placed a plate in front of the blonde girl, she studied him with interest. "Don't you think he looks like Chuck? — the fellow I took to our Spring Spree? How we enjoyed dancing on the terrace!"

Sue glanced up at the waiter and shrugged her shoulders. "I didn't notice, Kay; it was a little dark out on the terrace."

"A little dark — good excuse — you were just pre-occupied with Bill. Didn't you go to the Omega Olympia this fall with him, too? I thought I saw him there dressed as Bob Feller."

"Uh-huh — wasn't that party hilarious — especially when Bill and Joe boxed, and I was ref —"

The blonde choked on her milk, laughing, and put her glass down. "What a match — fixed if I ever saw one. I have a feeling the referee was prejudiced. Those guys were real boxers — should be on TV — they'd make WOI famous."

Sue glanced up from her plate and nudged her companion. "You're creating a traffic jam — better pass the rolls. I hope we get through early; we have to practice our Variety skit, 'Mail Order Groom,' tonight. Have you seen it yet? You'd be surprized what rural characters you have for sorority sisters, ordering men out of Sears and Roebuck!"

"If I don't get busy and ask someone to our Christmas formal, 'Candlelight Christmas,' I'm going to be reduced to tactics like that," said the blonde jokingly as she folded her napkin, placed it in the napkin ring and glanced expectantly at the hostess.

These two girls are eagerly reading their mail. Wonder if one of them heard from some tall, dark and handsome Princeton Man?

Girls! Are you sure you can hear that record over the Sig Ep's hot jazz combo? These gals are accustomed to music at all hours.

Forming a huge Christmas tree Chi O's and dates soak up some romantic atmosphere at their fall formal, "Candlelight Christmas."

The regular clicking of needles and chatter of conversation is broken up by an unwanted dropped stitch and a nasty phrase or two. Reading a magazine standing up may produce only curious glances from the sisters rather than the desired posture improvement. A new variation of the tried but true Chopsticks is given as these Tri Delt's limber their fingers on the piano during the noon hour.

"WHAT'S with you Tri Delt's — expecting a hurricane?" said a tall fellow to his date as he parked his Ford in front of the Delta Delta Delta house.

"Of course not . . . don't tell me you've heard of a haunted house that didn't have boarded doors?" replied his date.

"How do you expect us to get in — go down the chimney?" retorted the fellow.

"Look! We'll have to climb the fire escape," said the Tri Delt pointing up.

"Anything for a party," he quipped. Later . . . "Hey, those Charles Addams cartoons are really slick," the fellow commented as he surveyed the "Haunted House."

Parents' Weekend brought fun that changed the interior scheme of the house — the addition of a 21-inch television set. In return for a glimpse at "collegiate" Ghosts Invade Tri Delt House life, their grateful parents chipped in to buy the Tri Delt's a new TV.

Silver sparkle, pine boughs, artificial snow and sequined snow balls turned the chapter house into a "Winter Wonderland" for the annual winter formal.

The Christmas season was marked by the annual Tri Delt-Kappa Sig party for Ames orphans. As the Santa Claus passed out presents one of the children was heard to exclaim, "Is he really from the North Pole?"

Portraying angels, the pledges dressed in white sheets and halos via coat-hangers to entertain the actives at a Christmas party. After the pledges showed their idea of "The Night Before Christmas," the girls exchanged comical gifts.

Tri Delt's concentrated their efforts to present "Screen Sensations" for Union Varieties during winter quarter. The result was a take-off on Oscar Awards, which spotlighted scenes from winning movies.

Daisy Mae and Lil Abner, Blondie and Dagwood came to the Tri Delt house depicting famous lovers at the "Spring Fever" fireside. The pledges, playing hostess, presented an old-fashioned melodrama in pantomime.

Spring brought a change to the exterior of the house as ground was broken and construction begun for additional sleeping rooms.

"SAY, that's a sharp idea," commented a redhead, as she and her date sauntered past the Delta Zeta house.

"Homecoming for All" — why can't I think of slogans like that?" she asked her date.

"Let's see — the slogan before the parade of soap boxes is 'We've a FABulous crew; we'll BREEZE through C. U.; the alums set the TREND; we'll CHEER to the end; Homecoming for ALL!'" murmured the girl.

"Yes, I think the DZ's really deserved to win first in sorority decorations division," said her date.

The Wild West was the scene as the DZ's brought "Prospectors' Paradise" to life. Presentation of "The Persecuted Maiden" gave the guests a chance to hiss the villain and cheer the hero. Gold Rush decorations using picks, shovels and a saloon, complete with checkered tableclothes, gave an atmosphere of the roaring days of the '49ers.

Turning from the gay to the sophisticated, "Fascination" provided the theme for the annual winter formal. Midnight blue predominated as sparkling icicles and stars hung from the ceiling, and Don Hoy's Aristocrats' dancing music set the scene.

The singing Delta Zeta's placed first in Sor-Dor for the second straight year last spring and permanently attained the traveling trophy. The chorus members wore white formals accented with light blue ambassador sashes as they sang "Holiday for Strings."

Veishea, 1954, brought first place in the sorority decorations division when "Birth for Achievement," featuring a scholarly chicken hatching from an egg, rolled past the judges' stand.

Tourists of every description took the "Tour de France" when the DZ's held their spring party.

Delta Zeta's 'All' Victorious

Varieties gave the DZ's a chance to perform on the stage. "Morning Madness," a musical pantomime, was set in a small drugstore and featured a soda jerk and his patrons . . . stenographers, scrubwomen, waitresses, factory workers and a policeman.

Those ever-lovin' pledges use elbow grease to keep the shine on one of the DZ trophies. What would we do without 'em—pledges that is. That certain handsome fellow, good music and above all a new formal will set the mood for what will surely be a wonderful evening. DZ's and their dates will surely be seeing stars at their annual formal which from the looks of this scene must be only hours away.

Barbara Smith, Gamma Phi pledge, jests merrily with her date on the night of the sorority's annual winter formal dance.

Adding a bit of Christmas cheer, this cute little gal is going to make the whole Gamma Phi house look like a Christmas tree.

These Gamma Phi's are really 'mixing it up' as they try that latest recipe in Foods 205. I wonder if they'll have a standard product?

THE judge's voice resounded over muffled whispers in the crowded room of the Gamma Phi house. "An Oscar for the best costume goes to the couple dressed as 'Rear Window.'"

"I thought they'd win," whispered a girl to her date, "but Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs was a cute idea too."

"Uh-huh, and I thought the seven couples who picked 'Seven Brides for Seven Brothers' as a movie title were original," he added.

"You know it's true—the theme of this fire-side, I mean," he continued. "What are you talking about?" queried the coed, as the crowd now began drifting to the dance floor and the popcorn booth. "Gentlemen Prefer Gamma Phi's . . . this gentleman, anyway," he said with a smile.

"Crazy, as usual," she laughed up at him. "Come on, let's not waste such good music."

Gamma Phi's Splash to Win

But dancing was only one of the Gamma Phi's recreations. Splashing their way to the women's intramural trophy, 16 Gamma Phi's won that honor for the fourth consecutive year.

Christmas carols filled the air as the Gamma Phi's, joining their voices with the ATO's, wished a 'Merry Christmas' in song. "Pass those cookies again!" and "Please, just one more cup of hot chocolate," were conversational bits which could be picked up at the chapter house while half-frozen carollers tried to warm up after their chilly outing.

Spring meant vacation time to Gamma Phi's and their dates as they took a "Crescent Cruise" at the annual spring formal. Each couple discovered how Captain Kidd felt as he "walked the plank"; the front steps of the house were converted into a gangplank. The cruiser for the journey was anchored in the front yard of 318 Pearson. Those falling overboard were saved by a giant ring life saver which served as a picture frame for snapshots of the couples.

"Play ball!" was the cry heard at the Gamma Phi house this spring. With a WAA official behind the plate to call, "Ball," "Strike" or "She's out!" the Gamma Phi's donned their baseball garb and trooped to the diamond in high spirits. Their efforts were not in vain — they placed second in intramural softball.

ENCOURAGING cheers rose from the milling crowd edging Lake LaVerne, "Look out — they'll tip your canoe over," cried an alarmed girl from the bank. A deft shove with a paddle sent one canoe full of girls spluttering and screaming into the cold water.

"Hey, look — the Theta's are ahead!" yelled another girl as she pointed to a canoe paddled by three determined coeds.

"Come on, kids. You can do it!" called a red-head from the bank.

As the first canoe crossed the finish line, cheers from the crowd mingled with the booming loud speaker on the judges' platform. "The winners — Kappa Alpha Theta!"

September, with its first hints of fall, saw the Theta's working on plans for their Homecoming decoration. A large gold and white scroll with a colored quill pen and gold ink bottle provided background for a petition, "Our Will to Win," signed by the students and alumni of Iowa State College.

Theta's Prove Paddle Power

Actives, pledges and their dates wore clashing colors and their clothes backwards at the fall fire-side, "Theta Scramble."

The Theta's and Phi Delt's were busy as co-parents of a Polish war orphan adopted through the Foster Parents Plan. Both groups raised the money for the orphan's support by selling food, shining shoes and showing movies on Europe.

The "Six Shooters," Theta sextet, spent many fun-filled hours of practice polishing up songs to entertain guests at the house and students at the Homecoming "Chuckwagon Jamboree."

The entire house took part in the Vodvil skit "Manhattan Mayhem" . . . selected from the Varieties shows of winter quarter. The skit portrayed a day in the life of a redcap in Grand Central Station. Besides the singing red caps, a group of country "hicks," a chorus of Harlem dancers, a movie star and the sight-seeing Beaver Patrol were depicted for the audience.

Spring brings back memories of the "May Carousel," formal dance. The dining room was converted for dancing into a spring dream with pastel flowers and white garden fences. A large maypole decorated by pastel streamers formed a lowered ceiling.

A group of Theta's, a piano, a song and lots of fun spell Saturday afternoon spent in the usual casual "let-your-hair-down" manner.

Dean LeBarron is always enthusiastic when there is a discussion of Home Economics — especially when her listeners are also in H. Ec.

Bridge fiends like to congregate for a session of that fascinating game after dinner. These gals are really playing for blood! Who's trick?

"Then I said—and he said—and I was sure he said—I told him—so he agreed to go to the formal—and I said—" (Sigh)

When pledges finish this Saturday duty, there will be no excuse for not finding much-wanted old tests in the file during final week.

"We're Having a Heat Wave," these KD's are wishing and singing as they gather around the piano on a cold winter's evening.

WHAT! A draft notice! But I'm too young!" a startled fellow gasped as he opened his invitation in draft notice form to the KD's fall fireside. "Recruits to Boot" was planned by the sophomore class.

With a screech of brakes, a bus pulled up in front of Camp Sunset where inductees were led out by their top sergeants, the KD's. Once inside the door, the students of military were issued fatigue hats and mustered into the living-room for the evening's entertainment.

Kappa Delt's Draft Dates

"Dior's New Fall Flat Fashion" by I.S.C., a huge Vogue Magazine with a flattened buffalo on the cover, stood on the Kappa Delta's front lawn. Rewarding long hours of hard work, fashion-loving judges awarded the KD's the second place trophy in the sorority Homecoming decoration division.

A November tea welcomed the KD's new house mother, Mrs. Julia Kuhn. Mom Kuhn left sunny California to return to her native state.

Singing Christmas carols around glowing embers, the KD's relaxed with their dates after trimming the Christmas tree. That season was climaxed with an afterhours party when all girls exchanged gifts. The appearance of a jolly Santa Claus completed the evening.

Happy faces of the under-privileged children as they played games and excitedly opened festively wrapped gifts were all the reward needed by the KD's and Lambda Chi's for the work on their annual co-sponsored Christmas party.

In the spirit of stretching friendly hands across the sea, the Kappa Delta's were awarded second place in Greek Week participation for collecting warm garments to send abroad.

Cadet blue and silver background furnished a dreamy atmosphere for the White Rose Ball, winter formal held in the ballroom of the Sheldon-Munn Hotel. Following dinner at Lincoln Lodge in Boone, the band of Armand Adams added the final magic touch to the KD's annual dance.

With a swish of the paint brush, another corralled date was branded by a KD at the Diamond Jubilee, spring western fireside.

"Hats off to our Dads" printed on grey paper hats served as invitations to all KD Dads for a week end of fun at the Kappa Delta house.

HELP! I'm falling in the mud hole," gasped a Kappa at the annual spring Sigma Nu Relays.

"Don't you dare let go of the rope . . . a dunk in the mud won't hurt you," yelled an excited team-mate.

As cheers rose from the crowd, a mud-covered Kappa screamed, "We won!"

The autumn winds blew the Kappa house upside-down and inside-out. On Halloween Eve all the girls dressed backwards for dinner. To add to the confusion, the KKG's, straddling turned-about chairs, defied Emily Post by eating their meal in reverse order, dessert first! Following dinner the girls gave amusing Halloween skits which climaxed a hilarious evening of nonsense and fun.

Fall quarter wouldn't have been complete without the KKG's entertaining their dates at a hay-ride fireside climaxed by a warm lunch of "Kabobs 'n Stuff."

Shrieks of "I knew it was you!" or "I didn't have the faintest idea!" rocked the room at the traditional after-hours Christmas party, as each girl learned the identity of the secret pal who had been leaving her little presents and clues for a whole week.

After Christmas vacation, ambitious Kappa's kept busy with plans for their winter dinner-dance held at the Sheldon-Munn Hotel Ballroom. Decorations were tuned to the theme of "Crystal Candlelight."

With their books tucked neatly away and studies temporarily forgotten, the Kappa's and their dates danced under a blue ceiling covered with silver stars and a crescent moon in the "Sky Room" at their annual spring formal. Silhouetted against the picture windows at the Kappa Kappa Gamma house, the skyline of a city provided a setting of intrigue and romance.

"Never a dull moment!" might well have been the theme at Kappa Kappa Gamma as the girls took part in an exciting year of studies, extra-curricular and social functions. The mad flurry of engagements and pinnings kept the house bubbling with excitement, and the anticipation of another 5 or 10 pound party provided an atmosphere of suspense and mystery.

Relaxing after a cold winter's evening of sledding, these Kappa's are prepared to enjoy a warming snack, buffet style.

A crisp autumn day, leaves falling to the ground and these three girls busy raking them sets the scene for a busy Saturday afternoon.

Bundled up, these guys and gals are waiting for the horse and sleigh to show up so they can see the countryside in the old-fashioned way.

If she's not in class or the Union, but is an I.S.C. coed, there is an excellent chance she'll be in a phone booth. Hurrah for Mr. Bell.

With the coming of fall, the leaves really did. Pi Phi's seem to have heap big smoke, but no fire as they engage in an October past-time.

It could be a chemistry assignment, but—no, it seems far too interesting. Perhaps they are admiring "his" latest photograph.

THE crowd of people lining the street pushed forward to see through a darkness illuminated by flickering flares. Scattered cheers rose—changed to roars as a handful of girls peddled their tandem bikes nearer the finish line.

Suddenly the loud speaker blasted — "And it's the Pi Phi's over first!"

"We won! We won!!" squealed an exuberant girl as she and her companions pressed forward to hug two exhausted cyclists.

"The trophy for the Homecoming Tandem Bike race is ours!"

More fun for the Pi Phi's came with Halloween. Masked members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, caught in the spirit of holiday mischief and mystery, invaded the sorority house. In the informal party following, fellows teamed against girls in a splashing duck for apples.

Pi Phi's Take Tandem Trophy

Later that evening the Pi Phi's held a holiday fireside for their dates. Pumpkins and cornstalks decorated the house, and the juniors entertained the group with a "Halloween Bluebeard" skit.

Parents and daughters huddled together at the chilly Drake football game, but thawed afterward at the Parents' Day open house.

Highlight of winter quarter was the sorority's annual formal dance. Following a casino theme, "Dart Club" featured mock gambling games in the recreation room. Here couples tried their luck with dice and cards. The nightclub atmosphere also provided a perfect setting for dancing and dining.

The Pi Phi golden arrow pointed the way upward in scholarship. The pledges won the trophy for 1954 sorority pledge class scholarship, and the actives, not to be outdone, followed the example set for them and won the Panhellenic scholarship trophy for 1954.

At Easter the Pi Phi's and Delta Sigma Phi's gave a party for a group of underprivileged children. A rollicking Easter egg hunt was followed by ice cream and cookies for everyone.

Members took their dates to dinner the evening of their spring formal, "Gaité Parisienne," and later danced on the terrace. The Pi Phi's found the light-hearted atmosphere of the dance a perfect note on which to end the busy school year.

A SHRILL scream split the darkened room of the Sigma Kappa house . . . a startled girl grabbed her date as a ghostly moan issued from a white clad figure crouched behind the door.

"Not ghosts too! . . . those haunted foot prints all over the house were scary enough," exclaimed the girl.

"'Mystery Manor' sure fits your party, all right," the fellow chimed in.

"I can't tell who anyone is with those masks and costumes on. Hey, there's 'Dial M for Murder' over by the davenport!"

It was Halloween in the Sigma Kappa house.

In December the actives and alums held a Christmas tea and gift sale for the benefit of their Maine Seacoast Mission. Needles flew for months in making hucked and embroidered towels, cut work linens, unusual tea and luncheon sets, baby clothes and aprons. On the morning of the sale, the Sigma created door decorations for all rooms. A prize was awarded to the SK's whose door was voted best by guests. After gift purchasing and a tour of the house, visitors were served coffee and cookies near the Christmas tree.

In a maze of a snowflaked and mistletoed Christmas wonderland, Sigma Kappa girls entertained their guests in "Sigma Snowland" at their traditional Christmas dinner-dance. A skit prophesied the gifts the girls and their dates would receive.

Happiness radiated from faces of those in the old people's home when the SK actives and pledges entertained with "Bingo, Button, Button" and other fun games in February. The girls found it a thrill to support their new national philanthropy, gerontology.

Winter meant snow, and snow meant tobogganing to the Sigma's and their dates at a winter fire-side. After a lively and exhilarating evening out-of-doors, the couples returned to the chapter house for dancing and enjoying the warmth of the fire-place.

A crystal ball, suspended among lavender streamers, and silhouettes dancing on a silvery backdrop transformed the Sigma Kappa house into a romantic ballroom for its last big social event of the year, the spring formal, "Legend in Lavendar."

These two must be awfully hungry to get this dressed up for one small apple. The occasion - Sigma Kappa Masquerade Parade.

Sigma Kappa's and their dates dance in a romantic "Sigma Snowland" surrounded by the Christmas tree, snowflakes and mistletoe.

GLANCING quickly over the shivering crowd of enthusiastic contestants, Jane spotted some of her sorority pledge sisters. "Hey, let's find out when we're supposed to offer our talents. Look at those kids practicing for the three-legged race. Golly, aren't these Greek Relays fun?" . . . Jane nudged her companion.

"Let's get a pair of gummy sacks and practice. How about it?"

Then a car with a loud speaker blared, "Sorority pledges in the stilt race will please line up at the north end of the athletic field."

Panhell Pilots "Look, the boys are lining up for the tug-of-war. Let's go over and watch," Jane chattered.

Greek's Week

"I bet those boys'll have rope burns after this episode," shouted her companion as cheers of support rose from the crowd and the Delt's pulled the Phi-Delt's over the white line.

Through quarterly meetings with the Interfraternity Council, the Panhellenic Council helped plan and co-sponsor Greek Week . . . a special week devoted to improving college residence relations.

Bi-monthly meetings of the 11 sorority presidents and representatives to Panhellenic Council were not all social. Out-going letters addressed to Korea filled sorority mailboxes as the group supported a Korean War orphan through the Foster Parents' Plan.

Spring meant awards to the Pi Beta Phi's as they were presented with the 1954 scholarship trophy, awarded each year to the sorority with the highest scholastic average.

The 1954 pledge scholarship trophy was awarded to the Phi Beta Phi pledge class at the annual spring tea in honor of all sorority pledges.

All the sorority pledges met three times during winter quarter for get-acquainted chocolate hours.

The sorority pledge classes are governed as one body through the Junior Panhellenic Council, which consists of one representative from each house.

Panhellenic, founded nationally in 1891, continued its efforts this year to maintain a high plane of fraternity life, encourage good scholarship, promote high social standards and adopt and enforce rules governing Panhellenic activities on the Iowa State campus.

All sorority pledges will be enjoying Chocolate hours a week from Thursday if Junior Pan-hell's big plans go through as scheduled.

Interfraternity Council and Panhell meet together to discuss plans for the Party-Hop and work on a service project held Greek Week.

IFC meetings call for the undivided attention of its members. These fellows must be seriously considering winter kidnap prospects.

Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council members held joint meetings to lay plans for Greek Week and the annual Greek Relays.

QUICK. Run to the car or you'll be drenched," an escort advised his date as he raced forward.

"What lousy weather for party hopping. At least the weatherman could have been a little more considerate," he bemoaned.

"Let's go to the ATO house next. I hear the entertainment is fabulous," the coed urged. "We'll have to hurry . . . according to schedule the next skit begins at 9:15."

IFC Promotes Party-Hopping

. . . and, as the entertainment there ended, Joe exclaimed, "Hey, it's nearly ten. Let's speed over to the Sig Ep house."

Caught in the whirl of evening activities, the couple danced on the balcony and watched the crowd below. Meanwhile, a 'bartender' provided some refreshment in the form of a couple welcome cokes.

Acacia Jail House provided an hazardous array of mud puddles from car to front door. After completing this "obstacle course" and listening to a concert of piano solos, the coed commented, "Say, isn't that guy a whiz on the keys?" Joe answered, "Yeh—and say, we'd better be whizzing too,—you know how these housemothers are about locking the doors at the stroke of 12:30"

Greek Week, which features the Party Hop along with Greek Relays and a service project, collecting clothes for foreign relief, was co-sponsored by Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils.

The IFC, composed of all fraternity presidents and an executive committee made up of a member selected from every fraternity, meets weekly. This year the Interfraternity Council welcomed a new fraternity, Alpha Sigma Phi.

A committee appointed by IFC this year compiled gradepoints of fraternity members and independents and analyzed differences.

Weekly meetings brought together two representatives from each fraternity pledge class.

This executive group planned the all-fraternity pledge serenade for women's dormitories and sororities in honor of freshman women and sorority pledges.

Collaborating with the Junior Panhellenic Council, the IFPC laid the ground-work for the annual fraternity and sorority pledge dance winter quarter.

Dick Barck was about to add one point to his ping pong score when photographers caught this shot. It wasn't posed—it's the real McCoy.

Here I am and here you are, and it looks as if everyone is wondering, "Where is the show?" At any rate this seems to be a "fun-fireside."

THE dining room of the Acacia house was filled with the clink of silver against china and an indistinct babble of voices mingling together. A tall blond boy leaned down to a little girl with stubby brown pigtails sitting beside him. "How about some more turkey? You want to grow up to be a big girl, don't you?" She pressed her hands firmly over her mouth and swayed vigorously from side to side. "No, no—I want to see Santa Claus now." She smiled broadly. "Is Santa Claus bringing me a present?"

Acacia's Stage Roman Holiday

"Mm-hmm. You and the other two kids will all get presents from him. Then we'll play some games. All through?—here, I'll help you down."

"I can get down all by myself," she said proudly, sliding off the chair.

"Aren't these kids cute?" commented the boy to a fellow next to him as he smiled at the little girl.

"Uh-huh—I sure think entertaining these local underprivileged children is fun. I get a kick out of them—they get so excited—see that little boy?—he's looking up at Santa with such wide eyes."

The Acacia's turned into handy-men for a day this fall at the Eastern Star Home. The whole home buzzed with laughing, joking and the bang of hammers as Acacia's put on storm windows, raked the lawn and washed windows. But their day didn't end there—they entertained the ladies afterward with a program . . . everything from quartets to ukeleles.

The Acacias did find time to hit the books once in a while too. They were second in scholarship among the fraternities over a 10 quarter period.

The ballroom in the Sheldon-Munn Hotel was filled with soft music and swirling formals at the annual spring formal this year.

Spooks ran wild at the Acacia house the night of the Seance party. Eric, luminous heads glided about the darkened room, and icy fingers sent chills down the backs of the hardy souls who braved the mysterious atmosphere of recalled spirits and supernatural creatures.

Old Rome lived again as the Acacia's reverted to the past. The fellows and their dates, dressed in Roman costumes, ate their meals from stone slabs at this unusual affair.

Adelante's Go West at Party

"Hey, what did you think of the boys' 'Us Cyclones Hate Yo' Buffaloes' Homecoming display? Golly, I'd like to get my hands into something like that again. But . . . oh, the speaker is going to be introduced now."

"Yep, President Hilton is going to talk about the future of Iowa State. There's another good Adelante for you."

The clatter of tableware and scraping of chairs subsided as the President of Iowa State College began his talk at the annual Adelante Founders' Day banquet.

A crisp, fall evening was the time; old-fashioned hayracks the scene; the Adelantes and their dates the cast; and a fall party the production. The show was a smash hit. After a tour of the Ames countryside, the crowd returned to the house for an encore in the form of roasting marshmallows and dancing sock hop fashion.

Santa Claus came to the Adelante house at Christmas time to help entertain mentally retarded children from Wilson school in Ames. Slides picturing the Christmas story were shown and narrated, and the children listened to a recording of "The Night Before Christmas." Squeals of excitement greeted the appearance of Santa, who distributed games, toys and bags of candy and peanuts to wide-eyed youngsters.

A million dollars in play money was given to each Adelante and his "podnuh" at the entrance to the western saloon at 304 Welch Avenue. Swinging doors opened into the barroom, where "set-ups" of pop were served all evening. A rinky-tink piano clattered with western tunes. In the gambling room, cowhands and cowgals squandered their million-dollar pokes in an evening.

Knights of Adelante and their ladies danced to the smooth music of Don Hoy's Aristocrats at the spring house formal, "Castle in the Clouds." A large medieval castle loomed before the guests as they approached the entrance to the Ames country club.

These modern Jim Thorpes are warming up with a game of ping pong. From the looks on their faces these two Adelante's are ahead. "You name it and you can have it." But who'd want it but a Vet Med major or an Adelante? This monstrosity was at one party.

"HEY GANG, let's move to the cemetery," gasped the Alpha Chi Rho as the four couples raced forward.

"No, not the cemetery — that's the next clue. We should be headed Birch Hall way," his date replied.

"Do you really think we can find a date for John in 10 minutes?" the fellow questioned.

"I sure hope so, or we'll probably lose the witch hunt," the coed exclaimed. "Say, do you know what the winner's prize will be?"

"Since it's Halloween eve, the winners will get first chance at the cauldron of bubbling cider, and, if you promise not to tell . . . I'm the six foot-two witch that's going to do the pouring," the Alpha Chi confided.

Wedding bells and rice highlighted Thanksgiving vacation when the Alpha Chi's traveled to Des Moines to sing "I Love You Truly" at the church wedding of one of the brothers.

"Let's go for a strike . . . I.S.C." decorated the Alpha Chi's front yard at Homecoming. A football player 12 feet high dressed in an Iowa State cardinal and gold jersey was in position for a strike. Giant-size bowling pins featured Buffalo heads . . . symbol for the Colorado opponents.

Alumni joined the members of the house at Homecoming and Veishea. Open house was held at Homecoming, and a buffet barbecue was held during Veishea following the Saturday parade.

Gay voices rang under a harvest moon at the annual hayride in October. The Alpha Chi's and their dates returned to the chapter house to find steaming cocoa waiting.

Mrs. Whalen, the Alpha Chi Rho residence director, was honored in February at a tea given by the chapter members.

Santa Claus arrived at the Alpha Chi Rho house one afternoon during the Christmas season. With him he brought a nonsensical gift for each of the boys.

A false ceiling and a back-drop of sky-scrapers silhouetted against a night sky changed the Ames Country Club into a penthouse for the annual Garnet and White spring formal. The Alpha Chi's took their dates high above the imaginary city to dance to Carl Nebbe's band at the penthouse.

Dreams of the wild blue yonder excite these boys' imaginations as they admire this model airplane before its initial flight.

Singing away those blues, these Alpha Chi Rho's and their lively housemother are pounding out some hot music on the old piano.

Alpha Chi Rho has witch hunt

Working your way through college? Probably the actives are catching up on their sleep while pledges prepare for Sunday dinner.

These two AGR's are really interested in something. What could be that fascinating? Maybe the latest issue of Esquire has arrived.

It looks as if these fellows are catching the late, very late show on television. Must be after date-time on a Saturday evening.

"OH . . . hold on tight; this hill's steep," cried the girl, burying her face in the back of the boy just ahead of her, as the tall fellow gave the loaded toboggan a shove and quickly hopped on.

"Don't worry . . . not with big strong AGR's to take care of you," said the boy behind her teasingly. "Hey . . . lean right, not left . . . want to fall off?"

AGR's Capture 2nd in Grades

Squeals from the girls rose as the toboggan whizzed swiftly down the hill in a flurry of showering snow. It slowed gradually, then lurched to a stop in a snow bank.

The boys and their dates climbed off the toboggan, laughing and brushing off snow. "If it wasn't for the climb back up, this tobogganing party would be perfect," said a boy as he picked up one end of the toboggan.

"Brrr . . . I'm freezing," a girl exclaimed, as she turned up her warm coat collar just a bit higher.

"That hot cocoa we're having when we get back to the house is all we need for a warm-up," the boy remarked.

By raking leaves and washing windows, Alpha Gamma Rho members made the house shine in preparation for company, for Homecoming found the house overflowing with 200 guests dancing to the music of Four Knights and a Day.

The special entertainment by the AGR pledges at the annual Christmas fireside climaxed fall quarter.

Between shoveling away mountains of snow and sprinkling icy walks with cinders, the AGR's found time to plan the annual "Pink Rose" formal held in February. Following a dinner at Lincoln Lodge in Boone, the couples came back to Ames to dance to the Seven Sharps at Hotel Sheldon-Munn. The AGR Dream Girl was crowned during intermission.

With spring came the annual Farmer's Ball, a western-style alumni reunion. Guests gathered 'round the barbeque pit the pledges had dug in the back yard, and the chefs went to work. After the western barbeque supper, levied men enjoyed the dance at the chapter house.

Alpha Gamma Rho ranked second in scholarship among the 60 men's residence groups during the 1953-1954 school year.

A house party coming up, fellows? These Alpha Sigma Phi's are doing their share to make the decorations a big success. Rembrandt?

Could it be that the Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy has arrived on the scene, or better still, the active masters are just driving the slaves.

Just one more hand and then we'll really hit the books. After all, an education would be neglected without a fair knowledge of bridge.

"I DIDN'T realize that Iowa State could be so dead before school starts," the Alpha Sig remarked to his painting partner as he dipped his brush in a dripping paint bucket.

"It's probably a good thing. We still have a way to go before our house is ready for rushing in 2 weeks."

"Sure was nice of the alums to finish the downstairs for us . . . the way we're going, we can get this room whipped into the best of shape by supper."

"Oh, no we can't. Remember, the floors have to be sanded."

Alpha Sig's Mark 1st Year

Vigorously swishing on another stroke of white paint, the worker inquired, "What do you suppose Alpha Sig's first year at Iowa State will be like. We can bet it'll be a year to really look forward to."

When Homecoming rolled around, Alpha Sigma Phi members had remodeled the old "white house" and settled at 2717 West Street.

After the Homecoming game, Alpha Sig's, alums and their guests gathered at a banquet in honor of the presentation of the fraternity charter. The national president of Alpha Sigma Phi, Frank Burns, was present at the banquet and open house the following afternoon.

"My painting pants will make perfect cowboy breeches for the Wild West party," the Alpha Sig reflected. Harvest pumpkins and cornstalks decorated the chapter house for that affair. A fake bar greeted the Indian-costumed guests.

A phonograph record was the admission requirement for couples at a winter quarter party which followed the Colorado-ISC basketball game. It featured an old-time, melodramatic pantomime skit complete with boos for the villain and cheers for the hero.

Alpha Sig mothers sent Christmas presents for the chapter house. Gifts included ashtrays, lamps and decks of cards.

The white columns which front the chapter house helped provide a Roman setting for "Toga Party." Alpha Sig's and their dates mimicked Romans by wearing make-believe togas and head wreaths.

"SAY, do you have any more white paint? I'm all out," commented the boy as he looked up at his co-worker standing on a ladder slapping paint on the lodge.

"Yeah . . . just a minute and I'll be through," replied the boy, as he gave the wall a final slap of the brush and climbed down the ladder. He thumped the can down and glanced about.

ATO's Donate Service to YM

"Man, that fellow over there is really going after the leaves with that rake . . . must be one of those Drake ATO's."

"We're just more ambitious than you ATO's from Iowa State, that's all," joked the other lad.

"Seriously though, this YMCA Camp has really shaped up since we came.

The noise those guys are making pounding in posts will have everyone in Boone wondering what's coming off. They aren't used to being invaded by the ATO's."

The Drake and Iowa State ATO chapters teamed up again for a spring formal at the Hotel Fort Des Moines. White orchids at the door for the girls, and the music of Don Hoy all added up to another successful duo.

"All off for Boone," echoed a call through the ATO fraternity house fall quarter as the boys and their dates headed for a "Hard Times Party."

Saint Nick was able to spare a few minutes of time during his busy Christmas season to come to Ames and join the ATO's at their Christmas party. The North Pole guest presented each girl with a gift from her date. Presents ranged from sneezing powder to an old flower pot.

The Christmas season meant song time to the ATO's who, joined with the Gamma Phi Beta's, made caroling tours of the hospital and homes for shut-ins.

"We had a cool and crazy time," was the report overheard about the winter formal, "Silhouettes in the Snow."

A large light and dark blue arch over the outside door formed the entranceway. The winter atmosphere was brought indoors by large snowflakes suspended from the ceiling. As the girls entered, they were given corsages of tea roses by Mrs. Christian, the housemother. The true ISC spirit was revealed in the favors, miniature replicas of "Cy," the new Iowa State mascot.

Diverted attentions! Foreign situations, music, recent movies or the top 10 tunes provide conversation for casual Sunday evenings.

A perfect ending for a hayride . . . a group singin' around blazing campfire. Bet this is a chorus of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes."

Here are the "It" boys of ATO in an ever-popular fireside skit. The question is, "Is it a preview of Dior's pajama fashions for spring?"

"I've never been to Solar Inn," the coed exclaimed. "This food really hits the spot . . . am I ever starved. Our intramural baseball game with Birch Hall this afternoon surely gave me an appetite."

"Don't fill yourself up now 'cause we'll be having more refreshments at the Country Club," her date cautioned.

"Say, what did you say the theme of the dance is?"

"It's called 'Modern Moods,' and just wait till you see the decorations. A 6-foot wax candle is on one end of the dance floor, and miniature painters' palettes are scattered on the walls," the Beta Sig diagrammed.

"Sounds great . . . I'm really looking forward to dancing to Wallace Olson's band," the girl replied. "Hunting for a match? Better make use of the hurricane lamp cigarette lighter you just gave me."

The Beta Sigma Psi's started Homecoming plans early. Besides working on their house display, they converted the dining room

The Beta Sig members, their dates and alums danced in the "football stadium" Homecoming night.

Parents of Beta Sig's were invited to attend the Drake game in October. Highlight of the Parent's Day program was the establishment of the Beta Sigma Psi Mother's Club.

The pledges treated the actives and their dates to a hayride fall quarter. Afterwards, everyone warmed up with hot chocolate and a colorful sock hop at the chapter house.

With winter quarter came additions of a new rug, lounge furniture and a recreation room . . . which all helped to brighten snowy days.

The Gold Rose formal topped the Beta Sig calendar of social events. A steak dinner at the Hotel Holst in Boone preceded the Ames Country Club dance. Stan Reyman's orchestra played before a luminous waterfall backdrop, while a white picket fence and a trellis entwined with gold roses completed the decorations.

The Beta Sig's did not neglect to "hit the books." They ranked seventh in scholarship among the 30 fraternities over a 10 quarter period. They topped Class D in fraternity basketball.

Modern Moods by Beta Sigs

Those popular bull sessions discuss everything under the sun. Wonder what it is this time. Who will win the next world series, maybe?

Cleaning the house is a perennial pledge duty. This Beta Sig is taking his work seriously. Maybe he realizes it will help him later!

"It can't be! — But the tea leaves say you're going to meet a rich millionairess." This fortune-telling miss has everyone mystified.

These busy Beta's are having an informal conference over the next move. Say, fellows, how about a trip to the ice box?

TOM, Tom the piper's son, stole a pig and away he run!" — that's just what the Beta's did. About 40 years ago, they stole a pig from the Dean of Agriculture and have been celebrating that mischievous prank ever since with their annual Beta Bar-B-Q, complete with a pig and all the trimmin's.

The Beta house was a scene of retrogression during winter quarter, as the pledge class entertained their dates at a caveman party. Chest-pounding tarzans and walking stalagmites were common-place sights, as imaginative Beta's created many unique costumes.

Beta's Stage Miami Triad

Thousands of paper napkins paid off for the Beta's, as their life-size elephant and "The Greatest Show of Achievement," her five young 'uns, copped first place in the fraternity division of the Veishea float contest.

In April the Beta's and their dates tossed aside their studies while they danced to the music of Carl Bean at their spring dinner-dance in the ballroom of Hotel Fort Des Moines.

"Oh-no — it's starting to sprinkle! What weather for a barbeque . . . come on, we'll have to eat inside," exclaimed the boy to his date as he held out his hand and glanced to the sky. The two slipped quickly through the crowd of people hurridly filling their plates and entered the Beta Theta Pi house.

"Umm — these hot dogs taste good. After sitting in the cold watching the football game, I've a whale of an appetite," remarked the girl.

"Can't eat too much, though. I'll never get my formal zipped tonight."

"Well, that's the last morsel for you. We can't miss the dance — not with Chuck Forester playing," teased the boy.

"Who's that fellow?" queried the girls as she glanced toward the door.

"Huh? Oh, he's a Sigma Chi. We're having this Miami Triad with the Sigma Chi's and Phi Delt's since all three of our fraternities were founded at Miami University in Ohio."

"This has been quite a day. I'll be glad to get some sleep tomorrow," commented his date.

"Sleep? . . . What luck! The Beta pledges have to get up early in the morning and entertain all the sorority pledge classes at breakfast."

Pledge duties in the fall will forever consist of raking leaves, fellas. Next year you'll be on the other end and can stand and watch.

Absorbed as these fellows are in this game of chess, they're likely to miss that one o'clock. Or maybe they'll leave it—"checkmate."

THE girl, attired in a short, long-waisted flapper costume, paused to look at the marquee above the doorway.

"Hernando's . . . do we have to knock three times and whisper low to get in?" she questioned turning to her date.

"Guess we'll get in without any trouble," he replied. And then—"Say, what do you think of the romantic atmosphere . . . dimmed lights and mellow music?"

"Wonderful," she answered, sitting down at a table covered with a red and white checkered cloth. Leaning forward, she fingered the melted wax that had trickled down the bottle only a few moments before. Looking up at her date she smiled. "I like that red striped vest. With a raccoon coat you'd be equipped in real 'style.'" She then glanced toward the front of the room. "Where's the band? All I see are stands and instruments."

"Oh, that's just for atmosphere . . . we're really dancing to records. Say, that sounds like a good one . . . how about a Charleston, doll?"

"Uh, uh . . . let's be dead beats and do a '55 jitterbug," she laughed as they headed for the crowded dance floor.

During fall quarter the actives entertained the pledges and their dates with "Hobo Heaven." Hoboes attired in patched pants, worn-out coats and similar, typical hobo dress sat on bales of straw and hay. Corn stalks stood in corners, and the whole house assumed the rustic atmosphere of a hobo haven.

Homecoming found Delta Chi alumni celebrating Founder's Day and discussing Delta Chi history with actives and pledges.

A new tradition was established in the Delta Chi house during winter quarter as the first initiation banquet for parents of initiates was held.

The social whirl continued into winter quarter when the Delta Chi's presented "Starlight Serenade." The house was decorated to resemble an outside terrace as glittering stars hung from a make-believe sky ceiling.

The Delt Chi garden and lawn should really blossom this spring as it's 12:20, and these boys are still studying horticulture.

This jazz fiend has really acquired himself quite an audience. Before long he'll have to hire Great Hall. Go! Mad man, go!

The Iowa State victory song resounded during Homecoming as the Delta Sig's decoration, Calliope-playing man, really hit the beat.

BETTER luck next time!" a pledge hollered across the hot coals of the smoldering fire.

"Mmm, is this steak ever good . . . and say how's that burned weiner of yours?" the pledge queried.

"Quit rubbing it in. Remember your grade point was only two-tenths of a point higher than mine. Next quarter you'll be buying me the steak, and you can have the weinies," the Delta Sig active assured.

"This steak fry-weiner roast is sure a swell idea. It makes high grades worthwhile," the pledge quipped.

"Bet you a dollar I can beat your average next quarter," came the pledge dad's retort.

Guests at Pierre's Sidewalk Cafe party entered the Delta Sig house the hard way . . . via the fire escape entrance on third floor. Boarded windows, cobwebs, murals, candlelight and — Apache costumes completed the Delta Sig Has Grade Contest French speakeasy effect. The all-male can-can line and a quartet were featured acts of the intermission floorshow.

Girls from every port and sailors of different nationalities were present at the Delta Sig Sailors' Ball. Neptune's Castle, the scene of the winter quarter party, was decorated by underwater murals and dry-ice fog. Passport programs were filled out at the door, and the girls were required to give their measurements to the "officials" before they were admitted.

The Rhythmairre's played for the annual spring Carnation Ball held at 218 Ash. A large active pin, trimmed in gold with white carnations, presented the theme for the dance. Large bouquets of white carnations, the Delta Sig national flower, were delivered to each women's dormitory and sorority house the day of the dance. Awards were presented at the formal to members selected as "Big Man on Campus," "Best All 'Round Fraternity Man" or for "Highest Scholastic Record."

The previously mentioned parties are national events and are held at approximately the same time at Delta Sig chapter houses throughout the country.

The Trozos, a small magazine published annually by the members of the active chapter, circulates to all Delta Sig alums from Iowa State. The magazine contains pictures and written accounts of the activities of the chapter.

Turn-about is fair play, and are the Delta Sig pledges having a ball. Get a load of this active lighting the pledge's cigar.

"HEY, how 'bout helping me roll out this piece of sod?" a Delt asked his co-worker.

"Okay, but you'll have to give me a hand with the roller," the fellow agreed, walking over to the tightly rolled hunk.

"Man — if this isn't a 7-day, 72-hour marathon — this sodding of bare Iowa soil. Do you ever suppose anyone will classify this as lawn?"

The Delta Tau Delta's opened their first year in their new "shelter" at 2121 Sunset. Moving crews shuttled back and forth between the new house and the old with furniture in pre-registration work week.

Delt's built tables, painted and put other finishing touches on the un-lived-in house, while the

Gamma Pi Mother's Club spent a busy day and a half installing new curtains and drapes. Modern dining room tables finished in white-grained black and study tables with wrought-iron "hairpin" legs were built by the boys.

At the end of rush and freshman weeks, the Delt's began to show off their new house to the college. With week-to-week open houses, innumerable guests included students, faculty members, alumni, parents and girl friends.

Alumni hailed from all directions to attend the pre-dedication house warming and formal dedication November 6.

The ex-Delt home, dark and empty on the other side of town, proved to have unlimited and unique value. It was used as a workshop to build the Homecoming decoration. It was also a natural spot for the "Lucky Pierre" party.

The Delt's decided to change this annual costume party from a spring to fall event, so the college was treated to two "Lucky Pierre's." No matter where it's held, crowds of French "apaches," chambermaids, sailors and aristocrats head for Pierre's.

The "Orchid Formal" climaxed winter quarter. Following dinner at the Ames Country Club, the fellows and their dates danced to Vance Dickson's band. A giant-sized gold Delt crest formed an awning over the band, and purple and white streamers formed a false ceiling.

The Delt's year was completed with hay rides, songs, jokes, tobogganing parties and dixieland.

Dancing to divine music at the Delta Tau Delta's new house are the Delt's and their dates plus numerous party-hoppers.

A Delta Tau Delta member proudly shows a guest one of the rooms in the Delt's new house during their fall quarter open house.

"Hot Rod," the racing magazine, is the accepted reading material for well-bred young ladies. The question is does she understand it.

Delt's Build Modern House

Homecoming was the time for entertaining alums and parents visiting the DU house. Here a DU shows off some of the house's trophies.

Work, work and more work is all a fraternity expects of a pledge or so this DU pledge thinks as he keeps the sinks spotlessly clean.

"Science with Practice" is the motto of these avid bridge players as they concentrate on which way to get those elusive tricks.

THE match scratched and flamed; the glowing tip reached its mark. The piece of paper glowed — then fell to a small heap of gray ash.

"It's taken many years," the Delta Upsilon alum said to the blond-haired student standing beside him.

"The mortgage was 26 years old, wasn't it?" the student asked.

"Um—Humm. And I'm really glad you boys decided to burn the mortgage at Homecoming."

"We thought more of you alums would like to come then — to catch up on Iowa State football!" the boy said as they walked toward the house.

Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae donned their finest rags for the annual DU "Dogpatch" party at the chapter house. Long, shaggy beards and bare feet typified the hillbilly couples as they stood before the "parson" and were joined in "howlin' wedlock" at a "two-bit" ceremony.

The DU's, digging deep into their pockets to contribute to Campus Chest, were first to report a 100% contribution, topping the assigned goal by 135%.

The Kappa Alpha Theta sorority joined with the DU's in sponsoring their annual Christmas party for a group of Boone underprivileged children. Shrieks of delight echoed through the house as Santa Claus joined the party and passed out gifts to the children.

During winter quarter, the DU's and their dates journeyed to "Club DU" at Younkers tea-room in Des Moines. The annual dinner-dance followed a blue and gold theme and featured the music of Don Hoy's orchestra.

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to — sports. The DU's proved no exception.

Delta Upsilon Burns Mortgage

Last spring they repeated their sweep of the golf and tennis crowns and added the horseshoe championship. The house, boasting 100% participation in intramurals, finished in 6th place for the year.

The DU's exercised their vocal cords at song practices and sang their way to second place in Sinfonia, annual fraternity singing contest.

Shouts of "Hey, toss me a shovel!" and "OK, muscles, get to work!" resounded as a sizeable DU squad aided in the spring clean-up at Camp Hantessa, Campfire Girls' camp south of Boone.

SAY, why dirty a clean handkerchief on a trophy?" one FarmHouse member remarked to his intently dusting companion.

"Well, the trophy really isn't too dirty, but after winning this scholarship cup quarter after quarter, I've a yen to keep it shining as well as to keep it for coming quarters."

The Ames fraternity has also won national acclaim among related chapters for its outstanding scholastic record.

But all work and no play was not the general rule. FarmHouse men and their dates, dressed in cut-aways, hoop skirts, burlap bags and patched jeans, traveled to the Deep "Cotton Pickin'" South for another successful annual Farmers' Frolic during fall quarter.

With the yell of "the South shall rise again," everyone from carpet bagger to Rastus picked up refreshments at the Cotton Club and beat it over to Uncle Tom's Cabin. For the Southern Gentlemen, there was dancing in the Magnolia Room; the Share Croppers howled to some real southern fried entertainment in the Cotton Patch.

Confederate money flowed freely from the hands of the gamblers, and, later in the evening, Show Boat gals were talked into a dark, mysterious trip through the Everglades.

In contrast, spring quarter found FarmHouse couples climbing a "Stairway to the Stars." Decorations centered in a glittering staircase winding its way up a black velvet backdrop. Stars hung from the ceiling produced a heavenly effect.

Another annual event planned for spring was the steak fry. The Ledges was the scene of this outdoors party last year.

Farmhouse Wins Scholarship Cup

When the FarmHouse Five Plus Two arrived on the scene with some jive and a cra-z-z-z-y beat, Skid Row was "real gone," ending the whole affair with rehearsed pandemonium.

FarmHouse men follow their motto, "Builders of Men," by participating in many divisional clubs, intramurals, college committees, honoraries, publications and church fellowships.

Nothing like relaxing after that delicious Sunday dinner. It's good to take off the tie and chat awhile before hitting the books.

"Everybody sign the list for favors for the dance." Two more FarmHouse members affix their names to the ever-growing popular list.

"WHAT am I supposed to do?" asked a girl attending the Kappa Sig western party.

"You have to climb over it, or you can't get inside," replied her date pointing up at the 12 foot corral the fellows had rigged for the gals to climb.

"I can surely understand why you called this a 'Bar-Nothing' party — leave it to you to think of a corral. Here goes!" she said, carefully placing a foot on the wooden rail.

Kappa Sigma's Take Sinfonia

"Hey, over this way, her date motioned as they entered the door. "Don't you want our Kappa Sig brand on your leg?"

Hope your skirt is 6 inches above your knees, or we'll have to get out the scissors!" he exclaimed as they walked toward the brander.

"This really is in western style," commented the coed. . . "Sawdust on the floor and a barroom fixed with swinging door and rinky-tink piano."

The pledge formal, "Return to Paradise," highlighted the year for the pledge class. An orchid tree decorated with 200 orchids flown from Honolulu greeted the guests at the front door. After intermission each pledge picked a corsage from the tree for his date.

The "Black and White" formal dance of winter quarter honored Hoagy Carmichael, Kappa Sig man of the year. The party was held at the Boone Country Club.

The members practiced long and hard to win first place in the annual Sinfonia Sing. In winning the Talbert MacRae Trophy, the Kappa Sig's sang "I Wish I Was Single Again," "Men of Harlech" and "Russian Picnic."

The Kappa Sig's added another trophy by winning the all-college Bridge Tournament.

Pledges had their share of glory when they won first in the Greek Week Relays as well as the work project that was sponsored by the Greek Week committee. The fellows collected more than 1000 pounds of old clothing for the Korean War orphans and other needy Koreans.

At Christmas the Kappa Sig's joined the Tri Delt's in sponsoring a party for the orphans of the Lutheran Orphanage north of Ames.

"H-Bomb Hits, City Goes Underground" was the theme of the party sponsored by Kappa Sigma in conjunction with this year's Greek Week party hop.

Iowa State's style of "What's My Line" has the panel guessing what this blonde's line is as the Kappa Sig's entertain their guests.

"Shoot if you must this curly-haired head, but don't you dare take my sweet cider," seem to be the sentiments of this bartender.

The good old American custom of coffee drinking is followed by this Kappa Sig and his date as they sip the beverage and talk.

NOW, watch this. Seven, seven, come seven . . . aha! There she be. What luck I've had tonight," exclaimed the Lambda Chi as he wiped the sweat rolling down his brow and gathered his winnings from the dice game.

"Yes, you've sure been lucky," quipped a fascinated onlooker, "and you're darn wise to quit while you're ahead."

This was a very special situation for the Lambda Chi's. It was just part of the fitting setting of the fraternity's Blue Room party at the Ames Country Club. The night club affair offered dancing and entertainment in the most fashionable of atmospheres.

Nineteen hundred fifty-four Homecoming had a new significance for the fraternity. With gathering alums, plans were drawn for a new chapter house foreseen to be a modern home at the present site.

Air is often mighty heavy after dinner at the Lambda Chi house. Debaters frantically attempt to be heard over the short jazz practices of the Lambda Chi Combo. The Combo appears often at college functions and bills a special feature — "the hottest jazz north of Cape Horn."

In spring, purple and white decorated the Sheldon-Munn ballroom for the fraternity's annual White Rose Formal. Two hundred white paper roses provided the illusion of a huge rose garden. During the evening a loving cup was given to the Lambda Chi Crescent girl.

In February the fellas and gals donned their p.j.'s and had a gay evening at "Crazy Daze," theme of the winter house party. The atmosphere was "for idiots only," and with books completely forgotten, the evening was a great success.

Traditional U.S.C. Country Club parties were supplemented by hayrides, firesides and small informal house parties during the Lambda Chi year. On one occasion the actives were allowed to relax, and the pledges took over the planning and preparation of a special party.

Scholastic efforts of the Lambda Chi's did not go unrewarded. The fraternity's mantle holds a bit of gleaming gold in the form of a scholarship trophy, awarded the Lambda Chi's for having made the greatest grade improvement during the 1953-54 year.

Watching television is a good way to relax and be entertained as these Lambda Chi's and their house mother have discovered.

Maybe these fellows haven't taken foods and nutrition, but they still can stir up plenty. Wonder if they got a standard product.

"Just one more song before we hit the road, ol' buddies." More likely these fellows will be hitting the brooms after the party.

Lambda Chi Gets National Award

French from the word go is the Phi Delt Hotel, theme for their annual fireside. This couple is registering at the 'main desk.'

These ambitious boys aren't content to wax the floor. If a brother needs his head waxed they'll be glad to do it. Call 165 for service.

Eating is a habit everyone has acquired through the years. These Phi Delt's and dates are no exception as they go through the line.

"HOW 'bout giving me a hand with these lights?" the Phi Delt asked as he squirmed behind a giant pigmy.

"Okay — want me to climb the tree?" his companion inquired. "Man, we could get swell lighting effects if we string lights in the tree."

"Using 'Pigny Potluck' for our theme was a great idea — my favorite character is that skinny pigmy at the foot of the tree," the boy commented as he gathered and wound the long light cord and then began draping it over the tree limbs.

"Personally, I'll cast my vote for the dried buffalo heads. Wonder what the Colorado team will think when it sees all our Homecoming decorations!"

And Phi Delta Theta captured first place in the fraternity division for the Homecoming decorations event.

Pledges entertained the actives and their dates at a bowery party fall quarter. Following the French theme, "Evening in Paris," guests arrived in costumes varying from that of a can-can dancer to a painter complete with pallett. Basement steps were transformed into a slide, and party goers were forced to take the slide to reach shrimp and the other refreshments in the basement.

The Iowa State chapter received the 1954 award given to the outstanding Phi Delta Theta chapter in the nation.

"Phi Delt Circus" took honors in Veishea Vodvil skit competition of 1954. The audience was startled when a noisy band, featuring the whole troop of entertainers, crisply marched from the rear of the gymnasium to the stage. Side shows, a girl on the flying trapeze and the traditional man shot from a gun lent circus atmosphere to the winning skit.

In intramurals the Phi Delt's finished third in the 1954 fraternity race. They won the Sports Triad and were runners-up in the Class A football event.

Chuck Foster's band played for the Miami Triad, which is annually sponsored by Sigma Chi's, Beta Theta Pi's and Phi Delt's.

Spring quarter was climaxed for the Phi Delt's by a formal held in the Savery Hotel in Des Moines.

"Hurry up with that turkey; I'm starved." All eyes are on the head of the table as hungry Phi Gam's prepare for their dinner.

Fiji footballers practice under "game conditions." Here the "referee" threatens a rule violator with penalties for further infractions.

AN Iowa State coed stepped hesitantly forward through a laughing and teasing crowd. Blushing, she seated herself timidly on the knee of jolly old Saint Nick. He cocked a very interested ear as she whispered falteringly.

"Ho! Ho! Ho! If you only knew what this young lady wants for Christmas," chuckled the cotton-bearded Santa. "Here's a candy cane just for you."

Each of the girls at the Phi Gamma Delta Christmas fireside revealed her Christmas wish in a confidential tone to Mr. Claus and received a candy cane in return.

An abstract interpretation of stairways highlighted the backdrop at the fall formal, "Stairway to the Stars." This November event featured dinner and dancing at the Sheldon-Munn Hotel.

The members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity joined forces with the Phi Gam's to present the annual Jeff Hop at the Ames Country Club in February. The idea for the semi-formal dance stems from the founding of both fraternities at Jefferson College in Pennsylvania.

Phi Gam's took Union Variety honors and entered Veishea Vodvil with their skit, "Design in Retrospect." A narrator related United States history from revolution to atomics.

The annual Fiji Islands Grass Skirt Dance was held in a native atmosphere. Ways were gained to the house by a ladder to an entrance hut. The ladder was approached by a path lined with spears topped by coconut "shrunken heads." An elaborate waterfall flowed down the stairs into a pool and then out the front door. Goldfish and colored underwater lights completed the array. The Fiji Queen was crowned in a lei ceremony. The house president threw a lei around her neck, kissed her, and then each girl in turn received a lei from her date in exchange for a kiss.

Phi Gam Fiji Queen Crowned

The Phi Gam's round out the year with a colorful circus. A canopy over the front door led to the "three ring" Phi Gam house in which merry crowds of circus people mingled to visit various concessions. The great prophet, Madam H. L. Rowe, revealed futures of party-goers. A wild beast from Borneo gained his share of awed and hilarious attention.

"WANT to ride in a genuine gondola, or would you rather stroll down one of the streets in Venice?" a Phi Kap asked the girl at his side.

"Well, that gondola ride sounds pretty good to me," the coed replied, "but be careful to keep the boat steady; I'm not a very good swimmer."

Of course, the Phi Kap's and dates weren't really in Italy; they were just attending the traditional spring formal, "Springtime in Venice." Jimmy Allen's combo provided the mood music, while the gondola provided a setting for pictures. The theme was topped off by a huge fountain on the Phi Kap front lawn.

Phi Kappa's Go Italiano, Ya!

Lighted cascades of water sprayed high into the air.

Phi Kap's spent long hours on their "Dial Achievement" float for the '54 Veishea Parade. The "dial" was sported by an immense, black, crepe paper telephone.

During fall quarter a newly re-decorated house was transformed into a "South-Sea Island." Costumes for the occasion were of a "waterfront variety." The event sported the title, "Fish Eater's Brawl." Islanders munched shrimp and other seafood specialties in the midst of fishnet and balloon decorations.

The Homecoming decoration, a tremendous hand-painted mural featuring a brawny ISC line-backer de-toothing a C.U. buffalo, bore the slogan, "Take the bite out of the Buffaloes."

A popular "western party" featured everything from faded blue jeans and loud plaid shirts to noisy cap pistols. A well-worn bar camouflaged the fireplace, while a swingin' door revealed wanted pictures of "desperate criminals" to all visitors.

Edging out all other Phi Kap chapters, the Ames chapter, for the third time, won the National Catholic Activities Trophy.

The "Jolly Roger" flying from the Phi Kap's TV aerial attracted "buccaneers" and "Peg Leg Petes" from all over campus to the "Pirates Ball," highlight of the Phi Kap winter social season. A huge hollow-eyed skull formed the entrance-way.

Many enjoyable moments at the Phi Kap house were spent just "lazing around" watching TV or playing a few hands of pinochle after hours. Fun, study and a spirit of brotherhood reigned.

"Hey, wait a minute, we should have taken the square root of the hypotenuse and then multiplied that times . . . no, it won't work."

"Come on, you guys, I've got a date in half an hour." Don't fret, buddy, the fellow right behind you had a date 5 minutes ago.

Sunday afternoons mean bridge for some, for others it's a trek to the library. Looks like the queen has this trick, unless he's trumping.

JANE burst into the room, threw off her coat and tossed the floppy blue dog on the bed.

"Isn't he cute?" she exclaimed. "I got him at the Phi Psi party tonight."

"He sure is," her roommate answered. "Did you have fun, Jamie?"

"I had a ball!" she said, and sat down on the bed to tell me about it. "The theme was modern jazz, and the whole house was decorated to fit it. Murals covered all the walls, and they used some of the most different lighting I have ever seen! Jack said they got the effect with ultra-violet lights."

"Sounds sharp — how was the band?"

"Terrific!" she replied. "And after the dance there was another band. They had a jam session that was really gone."

She gathered up her coat. "Can't forget my little Sportsman's Dance pup — G'night."

Besides the Sportsman's Dance last fall, Phi Kappa Psi members favored Iowa State girls with an all-campus serenade. And at 2 o'clock in the morning yet!

The Phi Psi's went French at their annual party, the Moulin Rouge, last spring. The first floor of the chapter house was converted to a Paris street. The Eiffel Tower and the Arch 'd Triumph could be seen in the distance. Dim lights, women in sleek, black dresses and men in berets completed the atmosphere. Refreshments were served in a French cafe in the basement complete with checkered table clothes and dripping candles. Phi Psi's combined with Phi Delta Theta and Phi Gamma Delta for the annual Tri Phi picnic at the Ledges State Park.

One of the top events of the year at the Phi Kappa Psi house was the Parents' Day dinner last spring. Phi Psi parents enjoyed dinner and a day with their sons.

The Phi Psi's copped second place in intramurals last year and won the Volleyball championship during fall quarter. They stayed in high gear during winter quarter annexing the Class A fraternity and all-college championships.

Winter quarter found the Phi Psi's combining with the Phi Gam's to give their annual Jeff-Hop, a semi-formal dance at the Country Club. Favors were ornate picture folders.

"Let's take it from here, and don't forget that minor chord in the ninth measure." Barbershop harmony is the order of the day.

Go, man, go. Man, that music must be real cool. Elsworth Brown and his band beat out a beat for these cats as they cool the dew.

From the looks of the gentleman on the left, he wishes his partner had passed. Oh well, what's 50 points; you can make it up in time.

Phi Psi's 2nd in Intramurals

Raiding the icebox is a favorite pastime of these Phi Tau's. "And when he got there, the cupboard was bare, and so they had none."

Monday morning headlines are extremely interesting, fellows, but don't forget your eight o'clocks. Someday you'll make it . . . we hope.

"LET me guess — you're Superman!" exclaimed the short red-head to her costumed date.

Trudging up the lawn he challenged, "You're wrong — try again."

"Could you be Captain Marvel?" "Right! And I can tell you're Marie Antoinette," the Phi Kappa Tau said motioning her around to the side of the house.

"Why are we going around here?" she asked.

"No front door for you tonight 'cause we're entering the hard way via the fire escape."

"That really wasn't so bad, but the hallways were so dark and eery. That entrance was a good way to begin your 'Halloween Howl,'" she remarked when they reached the lighted dining room.

"Hey, over here — I want to give you a Phi Tau garter," her date said pointing to a box filled with gayly-colored garters.

"Thanks. Say, isn't your dining room remodeled? — looks nice," she commended giving the garter a jerk up her leg.

"Yes, we're plenty proud of the new dining room. This is the first time we've used it for a party. How 'bout a dance?"

The Phi Tau's sponsored a Christmas party for several boys from a children's home. The younger boys anxiously untied many packages filled with humorous gifts. "Silent Night — Holy Night" — floated to the stars at the end of the evening's activities, as the Phi Tau's and children climaxed the evening with Christmas carols.

The "Rose Fantasy" formal dance highlighted the Phi Tau social year. Amidst a backdrop of roses, the "Dream Girl of Phi Kappa Tau" received a loving cup from the chapter. Other dates were presented with red rose corsages. The Sheldon-Munn Hotel's ball-room decorations followed the traditional rose theme.

Phi Tau's Hold Fantasy Formal

With winter quarter snow drifting outside, the Phi Tau's at 218 Welch ignored the season as they celebrated a brother's birthday. Each quarter their mothers send boxes of food for the fellows having birthdays during those months.

Fall quarter was the time for an old fashioned hay ride. Fellas and gals donned blue jeans for an evening of fun, hay fights and chilled cheeks.

A group around a piano for half an hour after dinner relaxes to the tune of "Goodnight sweetheart, goodnight." Sing on, good men.

Song practice can be a pleasure, say the Pi KA's, especially with the aid of an organ, chimes and those ever-encouraging comments.

"GOLLY, is that grass skirt really imported from Hawaii?" asked the Pi K A looking at his date's skirt.

"No — I borrowed it from my roommate!"

"You look so authentic; don't be surprised if you're selected as being the most representative of Hawaii," said her date as they walked through the door of the Pi Kappa Alpha house.

Gazing around the room the coed said, "I can just imagine what Hawaii does look like; your beach theme with the palm trees and soft lights seems so very real."

"Come on . . . how 'bout a tour of the house? All the rooms are decorated to follow the Hawaiian theme."

Before leaving on the 'tour,' he slipped a lei around her neck. "Did you know that each lei is made of 100 pom-poms? And they were flown from Hawaii!"

"Let's make this tour a quick one — I can hardly wait to dance to Wes Bettis and his combo," she said straightening her lei.

"Dream Girl," the Pikes' spring formal, was enjoyed by 100 members and dates. The evening's high moment came with the presentation of the

Hawaii Is Scene of Pi K A Party

1954 Dream Girl of Pi Kappa Alpha. A fountain on the chapter house front lawn greeted guests. Water shot up 6 feet, and multi-colored lights gave the fountain a dream-like effect. Realistic fog surrounded the room where couples danced to the band of Armond Adams from Marshalltown.

Madame Butterfly met Steve Canyon and Julius Caesar at the Pi K A fall costume party. The "Famous People" theme was followed in the chapter house where giant-sized stylized comedy and tragedy stage masks set the scene. Napoleon won the prize for having the best costume.

A 5 foot buffalo skull rested on the Pi K A front yard during Homecoming. Beneath the skull were huge cross-bones topped by a football helmet.

Pi K A's celebrated Parent's Day spring quarter. The Pikes' entertained over 125 guests at their annual picnic supper.

They built a "Welcome Alums" archway over Lincoln Way at Beech Avenue. The arch, made of two pylons, was decorated in Iowa State's colors, cardinal and gold.

Last minute touches to Homecoming decorations look like they might take quite a while. Better hurry, gang; time waits for no one. Man, get a load of that sweet trumpet . . . strictly from the heart of Dixie. Real gone jazz. Just hope there's no one asleep next door.

Whether it's bridge or music, the Pi Kap's take time out between classes to relax. Relax fast boys, it's five 'til one . . . classes you know. Just where did the last 5 weeks go? According to these fellows' schedule, the Homecoming decoration should be done. What!

MOST luscious picnic dinner I've ever eaten. I'm stuffed . . . positively," the slender blonde sighed sitting down and leaning back against a tree trunk.

"Come on, lazy bones — can't sit down yet — everyone's gone over to the pie eating contest," the boy teased, pulling her to her feet.

"Inhuman, that's what you Pi Kap's are," she lamented with a smile. A voice rang out, "Ready-Set-Go!" . . . deep masculine laughter and shouts blended with feminine squeals pierced the air. She grabbed his hand and pulled him toward the gaity. "Better hurry . . . sounds like they've already started."

Pi Kappa Phi's Paper Wins Award

They shoved their way into the crowd encircling the three teams. "Come on, you Pi Kap's — can't let these Pi K A's get the jump on you!" shouted the fellow.

"Oh look . . . that guy in the blue plaid shirt has a glob of chocolate pie in his hair . . . I'd hate to try eating a pie lying on my stomach with my hands behind my back," said the girl, wrinkling her nose.

The Pi Kappa Phi's have talents in other fields besides pie-eating. The President's Plaque won by their alumni paper, the Almicron, seemed quite at home among the Pi Kap trophies as it remained for the third successive year.

Rose corsages, rose centerpieces and music by the Seven Sharps in the Rose Room of the Sheldon-Munn Hotel all built up to the crowning of Mrs. McCanon, the Pi Kap house mother, as Honorary Rose of Pi Kappa Phi at their annual formal, the Rose Ball.

Shades of old John Silver — what's this? — a pirate party at the Pi Kap house. The skull and crossbones flew again over a salty, rough-looking crew of Pi Kaps and their dates, complete with eye patches and cutlasses.

No, the Pi Kap's aren't back to their second childhood — those snow men they built were for additional atmosphere for their snowball formal. The wintery theme extended throughout the house in sparkling snowflakes suspended from the ceiling and a backdrop of a skidding snowball — a suitable climax to a year of sparkling parties and activity.

THE clatter of dishes and the scraping of silver subsided as intruders entered the dining room.

"Who are they?" asked the girl looking across the table. "I've never seen such outfits at Iowa State — short pants with suspenders and hats with feathers sticking out!"

Her conversation was interrupted with "And you're invited to the Sig Alph Alpine Party."

"Say, wasn't their invitation to the tune of the 'Drinking Song' from the Student Prince? It's fun to have them invite us in song — really livens up the dinner hour!"

"This is the alpine mug with your name on it," could be heard booming across the room before the group of SAE's turned and left.

Sig Alph's and their dates boarded a train headed for north of Boone. Seventy members and their gals hopped the "Phi Alpha Unlimited" to travel to the "S. A. & E. Railroad Stockholders behind the Union. Barbecued chicken was served at this fourth annual spring train party.

Convention. The chartered two-car inter-urban trolley stopped for its passengers at "Track 99, Union Station"

The "friendly ducks" of Sigma Alpha Epsilon entertained their dates at a 'game' dinner and fire-side fall quarter. Invitations to the dinner came in the shape of duck silhouettes asking the SAE dates to join the "friendly ducks for a dinner of wild rice, duck and pheasant." All the game that was served was shot by chapter members. Following dinner, Santa Claus distributed Christmas gifts to the dates. The interior of the Sig Alph house was transformed into a hunting lodge, and the exterior decorations featured a lighted Christmas tree, Santa, his sleigh and reindeer on the roof.

Pledges and the active social chairman of the 11 sororities were feted by the SAE's during the fall. Chicken served as the main course for the buffet dinner, and the SAE Hillbilly Band entertained.

A movie billboard in the SAE front yard advertised "Red Garters Now Showing" for the spring party-hop. A hitching post stood in the front yard, and the walls inside the house were covered with backdrops picturing an old western town. Sigma Chi, Delta Chi and Kappa Delta combined with the SAE's to sponsor the party.

From the gleam in his eye, it looks like this month's issue of Esquire holds something of more interest than MacNaughton's.

"Davy, Davy Crockett, King of the wild frontier." You name it; we got it if it's a good old hillbilly tune.

Five'll get you ten that he's pecking through bright boy's fingers. At least this Sig Alph isn't sitting behind the eight ball.

COME on, you guys. We've got to win this basketball tilt. Go! Hit that basket," yelled a Sigma Chi from the sidelines.

One basket after another gave the Sigma Chi's a small lead in the intramural championship basketball game.

"Let's give this game all we've got. We'll snatch that intramural trophy from the Phi Psi's yet. They've only had it 4 years," one Sigma Chi player said to another at the half.

"We did it!" the Sig's yelled after the game. The 1954 Intramural Trophy was theirs.

Members of Sigma Chi were headed toward success again this year. They captured first place in Class A touch football along with successes in swimming, track and basketball.

"The girl of my dreams is the sweetest girl of all the girls I know — the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." The Sweetheart Dance of 1955 highlighted the year's social events. A dinner at the Breeze House in Ankeny preceded the dance at the Ames Country Club. Icy February winds and schoolwork were soon forgotten as the couples stepped into a room of stylized Valentine decorations.

The Sigma Chi's held the first annual "Watermelon Bust" for sorority pledges during fall quarter. Featuring all the watermelon the pledges could eat, the Sig Chi's sponsored a seed spitting contest. Queen of the event sported a watermelon crown.

"A present for everyone" was found to be true at the Sigma Chi Christmas party. Santa, who was present in "Santa's Workshop," gave Sigma Chi members and their dates a true feeling of the northpole.

"Hobo Holiday" was the name of the Sig Halloween party. Members of the fraternity picked their dates up in a hayrack and started for the open road. After a jaunt beneath the stars, the members of Sigma Chi and their dates returned to the house, previously decorated with hay and cornstalks. Movies taken at this party were later shown over WOI-TV.

A newly formed Sigma Chi combo gave many hours of enjoyment to the fraternity members. This six-membered group played for entertainment at college parties.

Mary Mollison rules over the Sigma Chi Sweetheart Dance with Marilyn MacIntosh and Carolyn Wessel as attendants. Mm, mm!

Ajax, the foaming cleanser, cleans the floors just spic and span . . . especially with lots and lots of pledge elbow grease to aid.

Queen of the Sigma Chi Watermelon Bust is quite an honor . . . I think. At least these girls seem to be pretty pleased about it all.

Sigma Chi Top in Intramurals

Take one bar of soap, add 10 gallons of water and season with six pledges . . . the product . . . one clean Sigma Nu porch.

Time out from the paper to enjoy a choice bit of conversation seems to be the idea as these men gather in the livingroom after dinner.

"Let's get this game on the road; I've got a final tomorrow that I've got to study for. Besides, this hand is for the birds . . ."

"THE mud holes get bigger and better every year," claimed a Sigma Nu pushing the shovel deeper.

"Yes, the Sigma Nu Relays was a great idea. I can hardly wait 'til I see the gals chasing the greased pigs!" exclaimed his companion . . . a pledge.

"Forgot this is the first year you've witnessed the big event. It's our annual peace offering to our sorority neighbors," said the active throwing a full shovel of dirt over his shoulder.

"I'm anxious to see the 'egg yagg,' 'shoe stilt race' and 'burlap bounce.'"

"You know, I was a freshman when they first started the Relays," he continued.

As the active pushed the shovel deeper into the ground, he urged, "Why don't you grab a shovel and help — remember, this year the mud holes are bigger and better!"

And the mud-caked, but victorious, Kappa's toted home the much sought after traveling trophy from the Sigma Nu Relays.

Gamma Sigma chapter held its 50th Anniversary Banquet in the spring at the chapter house. The alums were welcomed back with steaming platters of mushroom-smothered steaks. Following the banquet came the feature attraction — the burning of the mortgage.

Gals invited to the Sigma Nu "Orchid Formal" came home carrying pups adorned with a bracelet bearing the Sigma Nu crest. The annual dinner-dance was held in the Sheldon-Munn Hotel ballroom spring quarter. Don Hoy and his band from Des Moines played.

The pledges added their touch to fall quarter at their traditional hillbilly party, "Sod-Buster's Ball," at the Ames Country Club. Elsworth Brown's dixieland band played in the saloon setting. Tables with dripping candles surrounded the dance floor, and a false ceiling completed the atmosphere.

Sigma Nu Holds Annual Relays

The Sigma Nu's put in many long study hours this year to capture the Fraternity Scholarship Trophy. The award is made to the fraternity showing the most scholastic improvement.

A winter quarter "Arabian Nights" party and a Christmas party for underprivileged children made a well-balanced Sigma Nu social calendar.

"THAT must be the 'Sig Ep Six-Pac Combo' giving out with one of its Dixie-land renditions," commented the fellow as he and his date ambled past the Sigma Phi Epsilon house.

"Sounds like they're playing 'Jericho,'" the girl remarked. "By the way, did you know that their pianist is their housemother, Mrs. Carl McKone?"

"That's news to me — she must be a really great housemother," the fellow replied as they strolled on.

"I'll never forget the hit they made in their performance in the '54 Varieties . . . you know they won in-between-acts," the coed added while jerking at the ends of her scarf, pulling it just a bit tighter.

"The Six-Pac was great in Veishea Vodvil, too. It's hard to realize that all the music is coming from just six people."

"I wish the combo would play 'Basin Street,' — it's my favorite," the girl said as they continued their walk around sorority circle.

"Guess you've never heard them play 'Saints' . . . boy, that's a solid rendition."

"The Queen of Hearts Ball" was the climaxing event in winter quarter for the Sig Ep's. The house was appropriately decorated with miniatures of the Sig Ep pin, a golden heart. The "Queen of Hearts," short, blonde-haired Mariann Schone-mann, was crowned and awarded a trophy denoting her reign.

The Sig Ep's spring party, "Mountain Madness," attracted many "campus hill-billies." The balcony was converted to a haymow, and the party, sponsored by the new initiates, was fully equipped with live pigs and a still.

Sig Ep Features Six-Pac Combo

Fall quarter found Sig Ep's sponsoring their traditional "Saddle and Gun Club" party. The house, decorated in a gay night club fashion, followed the saddle and gun theme. The wine list featured such drinks as "Coffin Varnish" and "Swoose Juice."

The Sig Ep float, built to the theme "Era of Achievement," was a favorite in the 1954 Veishea Parade. The float, which featured an imitation of the original Wright Brother's plane floating on clouds of angel hair, captured a second-place trophy.

The famous Sig Ep combo is really hitting that down beat! Often the neighbors have enjoyed an 'improptu' jam by these six fellows.

A banquet fit for kings will be devoured by these 'starving' boys as they enjoy their Christmas dinner by shadowy candlelight.

These Sig Ep's feel like knights of the round table as they sit around this huge, medieval table and discuss the affairs of state.

ROUNDS of applause cheered the float as it crept past the judges stand.

"Wasn't that TKE float sharp?" the coed nudged her roommate as they sat on the curb viewing the Veishea Parade.

"You know their float is a reproduction of one of Alexander Calder's modern sculptures," commented the girl, shielding her eyes from the burning sun.

Tan Kappa Epsilon walked off with the sweepstakes trophy for the 1954 Veishea Parade.

The coveted prize rests in the trophy case of the newly remodeled living room. Modern furniture and bold colors blend with the abstract painting over the fireplace. A special feature was built into the fireplace wall — a Seaburg 100 record player with a speaker outlet in nearly every room of the house.

After a summer at the veterinary clinic, Benny, the dainty St. Bernard mascot, was happy to rejoin his brothers in the year's activities.

Pledge paddles, pennants and mugs decorated the house for the "Joe College" party held in the fall. An Indian "fakir" was featured in the entertainment, and favors were red and white striped flannel shortie nightshirts and caps.

A large Christmas tree and carols between dinner and dessert set the spirit for the Christmas dinner-dance. After turkey dinner, dates exchanged riotous gifts.

Two miniature bottles with the prohibition amendment attached on the scroll were invitations to "Prohibition Days," the theme of the annual "barroom brawl" held winter quarter. Because the front of the house was boarded up, guests knocked at the kitchen door, mumbled "Jake sent me" and entered the speakeasy lounge in the living room. A 'bar' was set up near the dance hall in the dining room, where the Wes Gates combo played for dancing.

On the serious side, Teke's observed their Founder's Day in January with a banquet at the house. National vice-president of the fraternity, Don Kaser of Des Moines, was the guest speaker.

In spring a Teke's fancy turns to — the Teke Sweetheart and "Red Carnation Ball." The annual formal affair was held at the Hotel Savery in Des Moines.

This looks cozy doesn't it? Nothing like a shortage of chairs and some good music to make one feel right at home, now, is there?

Getting on the 'victory train' was the theme for the TKE's Homecoming decoration. Here is the decoration in its early stages.

With a flick of the wrist the 'Seaburg 100' is playing one of the top hits. This record player is the latest addition to the house.

Those old ivories are dancing, and these boys are giving out with a little song as these Theta Chi's gather around for a song fest. Strange things and combinations appear at costume parties. This sophisticated lady has a date with an 'All-American' football player.

A SHRILL whistle sounded as the Theta Chi's took position.

"Let's make this one good for a touchdown — we need these points," echoed from the sidelines.

The Alpha Mu chapter and Drake's chapter, Gamma Tau, were tied in the annual fall football game.

"Good pass — now we're ahead!" boasted a Theta Chi from Iowa State.

And the Iowa State Theta Chi's stayed ahead to win the game plus the "Thunderbug," traveling trophy, which goes to the winning team.

French berets and turtle neck sweaters were used to advantage as the Theta Chi's and their dates signed the guest book and received play gambling money at the annual "French Riviera" party.

Theta Chi Wins "Thundering"

Spinning of the roulette wheel and card games were temporarily interrupted when the local police staged a mock raid.

Dennis the Menace showed what he would do to the Colorado Buffs on the Theta Chi front lawn at Homecoming. The display, under the title "DiFrancesca's Menace," saw Dennis replacing the football with a lighted firecracker in one of Colorado's pass plays. The firecracker was caught, exploded, and the Buff downed.

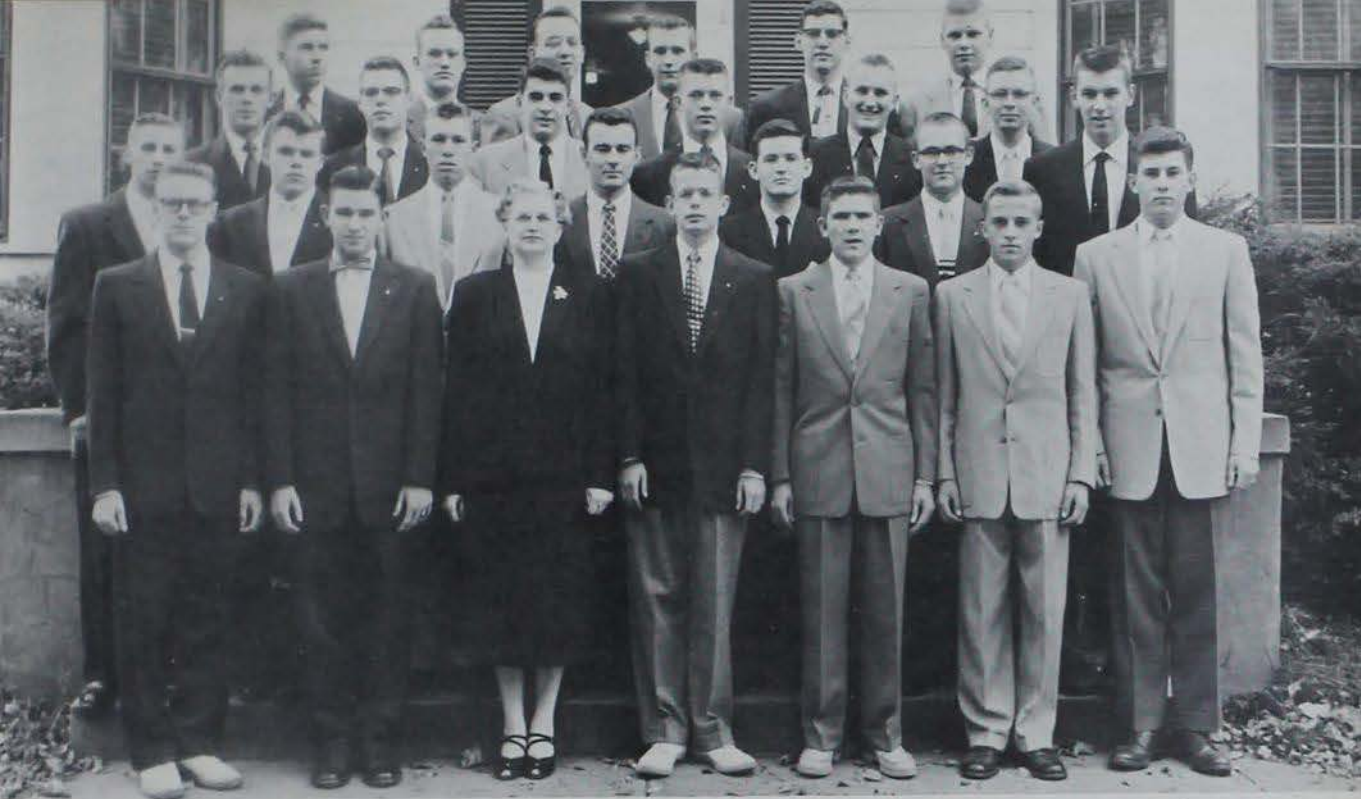

... "with this ring" ... "Hotel Theta Chi" found members and dates in a mock wedding ceremony complete with actual marriage licenses. Favors in the form of bath towels stamped with "Hotel Theta Chi" were given to Theta Chi's and their dates.

"The Sweetheart of Theta Chi," formal dinner-dance, highlighted the social season. A steak dinner at the house preceded the drive to the Sheldon-Munn Hotel where couples danced to the music of Bob Bourne. A Sunday afternoon picnic at the Ledges State Park climaxed the dance.

Active members of Theta Chi and alumni are currently working on a building fund campaign.

The Theta Chi's captured second place in Intramural Class A volleyball.

A surprise picnic in Brookside Park honored Mrs. Neel, the Theta Chi housemother who was leaving, and graduating seniors. The seniors were bid a dampish farewell with a toss into Squaw Creek.

"Dennis the Menace" is at it again. This time he trips the big Colorado player to stop a touchdown drive in Theta's decoration.

A good old gab fest with the fellows and the house mother is fun for all concerned. Soon studies will call and this group will break up.

What is it that is fun and exciting to play and that is also fun to watch? Why, bridge of course! These guys are really thinking.

DAGWOOD grinned and opened his mouth wide to admit his many friends.

"Oh! The whole Theta Delta Chi house is decorated with funny papers," exclaimed the little blonde as she stepped through Dagwood's open mouth.

Bathless Groggins, a twinkle in his eye, twirled his mustache as he walked past holding Blondie's hand.

"Say, isn't that Steve Canyon over by the green chair? He certainly looks impressed with Mary Worth!" her date commented.

"Which would you like? — candied catfish eyeballs or kick-apoo-joy-juice?" the Theta Delt questioned as they neared the refreshment table.

The Theta Delta Chi's won the prized Graduate Loyalty cup for the third consecutive year at the fraternity's national convention. The traveling trophy has now found its final resting place at the Theta Delta Chi house.

The Theta Delt's didn't settle for just one shiny trophy this year. The house at 217 Ash was runner-up in Class B football and won Class B volleyball.

In November, the house was converted to a German Beer Garden for the fall quarter costume fireside.

Party-hoppers saw "Ash Avenue goes Arty" at the Theta Delta Chi house spring quarter. Ultra-modernistic sculptured work greeted guests in the front yard, and the inside of the house resembled an art gallery. Abstract water colors, mobiles and modernistic clay sculptures added to the effect. Delta Zeta, FarmHouse and Sigma Nu co-operated to sponsor this Greek Week party.

The social season was launched with the "Black Magic" spring formal. Dick Day's band contributed its magic music to the dance held at the chapter house. Alternating blue and white crepe-paper streamers formed a false ceiling in the living room and the soft blue light completed the atmosphere.

Theta Delt's Awarded Cup

Parents and alums came from hundreds of miles in October to be present at the combined Parents' Day — Founders' Day dinner.

The social calendar was rounded out with a hay-ride and annual sister-daughter dinner. Guests included Theta Delt sisters and daughters.

UGLY Man Contest . . . we're going to win!" claimed a Theta Xi as the chapter plotted the victory campaign.

"I'll offer my car for the taxi service — we can drive around the dorms and sorority houses," said a tall blonde with a wide smile.

Theta Xi's Tie Ugly Man Race

"We're sure to pull in money that way. Boy, I'm positive we'll help the campus chest."

"The taxi service is a good idea, but why not have the girls bring their laundry to us and we can do it up in fine shape," suggested one of the Theta Xi's. "Well, . . . maybe we can do just their sheets — that way we won't be caught with any ironing."

"And remember the whole chapter is going to participate in the Saturday workday, and everyone will do without desserts for 2 weeks," the president outlined.

Their planning and hard work paid off, for Theta Xi's candidate tied for first place in the Ugly Man on Campus Contest.

The Theta Xi fireplace was converted into an igloo for "Fantasy in Frost," fall formal dance. The blue backdrop across one end of the dance floor decorated with falling snow was flanked by frost-covered trees.

Every couple at the Theta Xi Christmas fireside brought a present for youngsters at a local children's home.

Theta Xi quartet placed second in the Phi Mu Alpha sing when they sang " 'Lil Liza" and "Coney Island Baby."

The annual Founders' Banquet was held in the Union. Held by each of the 56 active Theta Xi chapters, the annual event honors alumni.

With winter winds howling outside, Theta Xi's turned their thoughts to the annual "Bowery Brawl." Preachers, bartenders, sailors and students dressed as beer mugs vied for prizes. A plaque was presented to the coed who the fellows claimed "had the least on."

Spring came to 315 Welch and with it "May-fete," formal dance. A pond was constructed in the front yard over which couples crossed via a grass-covered bridge before entering the house. The house interior was decorated with real and artificial flowers to emphasize the May theme. Couples waltzed to Walter Bappe's orchestra.

These pledges are busy working on the pledge project which was a map of the United States with all the Theta Xi chapters marked.

This Theta is going to have a cold bath in this lovely, white snow with the aid of a few of the brothers. Brrr— it sure looks cold.

THE girl walked in the door and sank to the floor, leaning back against the bed. "What a man! Umm-- that black curly hair!" "What happened tonight? — sounds like you had a neat time," said one of the girls looking up from the cards in her hand. "It's this fellow I met at Cupid's Holiday over at the Union.

Didn't you see us? Gosh, I was so embarrassed! He's been taking those dancing lessons that the WRA and MRA sponsor, and when they played 'Shake, Rattle, and Roll' he really jived it up.

Everybody stopped dancing to watch us . . . but he asked me to the Independent Students Dance next weekend anyway."

"Isn't that the night of our dorm's fireside, though?" asked one girl.

"Uuh-uh, that's the next weekend — I think I'll . . . hey, listen — it's a serenade!" she exclaimed jumping up.

They flipped off the lights hurriedly and clustered around the window, looking out at the group of boys standing in the dim glow of the street light.

"Oh, look — there's the guy I took to the All-Dorm Formal!"

"Thought he lived off campus. Didn't you meet him at the Ward Round-Up?"

"Yes, but he moved into Friley this quarter."

There was a burst of clapping as the boys turned to leave. The girls remained, leaning against the window sill as the boys' voices faded into the darkness.

Walking through one of the archways which divides Friley-Hughes Hall into sections, these fellows stroll into a 'winter wonderland.'

Like a mushroom in the springtime Westgate, the new women's residence, sprang up. Two ISC coeds try to picture the finished building.

Ideas and suggestions are exchanged at the Women's Residences Council meeting. Here girls meet to discuss problems and solutions.

"HI THERE, where are you headed?" asked the desk girl as she munched an apple, books spread out before her.

"Oh, I didn't see you there. I'm going to Dorm Council meeting. You have desk duty again?"

"Uh huh, until seven. Hey, what do you do at Dorm Council anyway?"

"Well, you know our representatives. You helped elect them a couple weeks ago after Christmas vacation."

"Sure, I know who's on it, but what do they do?" she asked around a mouthful of apple.

"We're supposed to be sort of middle men between coeds and the administration of ISC. We help to get your ideas across.

The MRA works with us in planning independents' parties — like the I.S.A. Ball and the exchanges. And you remember the All-Dorm formal 'Pearls and Wine.' Right now we're working to get milk dispensers and TV sets for the dorms."

HAMMERS pounded! Brushes splashed paint! Paper was stuffed! And, at last . . . a winning float. After many hours of planning and construction, Barton Hall girls came through to win first place in the women's dormitory division of Veishea floats. The theme, "Knowledge, Our Treasure," consisted of a pot of gold mounted at the top of a hill with pixies adorning the hillside.

Mid-quarter calmness was shaken by the sound of jazz music rising from the Oak Hall Rec room where Barton held its annual fireside. Decorations for "Barton Blues" consisted of blue notes against a background of glittering silver.

Entertainment for Barton girls and their dates was provided by different interpretations of the blues . . . Couples straggled from card tables and dance floor to crowd around the stage . . . the out-of-tune piano wailed the first notes of a mournful spiritual, and the buzz in the audience quieted as four girls swayed and danced the despair of the Negro slave, originator of the blues.

Barton women were represented in Freshmen Home Ec Club, Science Women's Club, plus belonging to most of the music organizations. Bartonites contributed generously to the WRA's Korean War Orphan and to Campus Chest.

"HOW 'bout an Hawaiian doll?" the proprietor of the campus doll shop urged Joe College in Birch Hall's winning Vodvil skit, "A Guy and 'IS Doll."

Joe nodded an emphatic "no" but thought he might try the French doll.

After looking at the flapper, ballerina and other exotic dolls, the dissatisfied fellow spied the doll of his dreams.

"There she is — The ISC Doll!" he exclaimed as Joe found the "doll" he was searching for in the shop.

Birch Hall was awarded the 1954 scholarship traveling trophy for the freshman dormitory with the highest grade-point average.

The new school year brought more honors to Birch. The dorm received first prize for Homecoming decorations in the

An informal bridge game with a bed serving as a table is good enough for these bridge fiends!

“GO! Elm Hall go!” cheered one of the backers from the crowded bleachers on the north end of the gym. “Don’t get your comic book wet!”

“Did we win?” asked a dripping girl pulling a towel tightly around her as she milled her way through the cheering crowd.

“Second place to Elm Hall,” announced the judge — and Elm girls went home triumphant.

Intramural entrants came home with third place title in the basketball tournament.

The Elm Hall girls have won again! What? Why, the upper-class dormitory scholarship trophy. The award for the 1954 school year was made at a dorm advisor’s breakfast.

Elm Swimmers 2nd in Meet

Winning 2nd in the dorm division at Homecoming, Elm’s display featured a Mother Goose story book. A stylized campanile projected from one side of the book, while the other side was decorated by a poem for alums.

Elm honored its new residence director, Miss Lundien, at a fall tea.

LET'S go on a tour," exclaimed a Freeman Hall girl.

"Okay, where shall we start?" asked her roommate. "All the Christmas room decorations are so clever!"

"Why don't we start on first floor. I saw a panda hanging on one of the doors."

bridge tourney

Soon the two girls had dashed down two flights of stairs and were looking at the panda.

"Look, the panda's red and white nightshirt is just like mine in miniature."

"Yes, but you don't have the stocking cap to complete the combination," replied her companion.

Two new trophies were added to the Freeman Hall fireplace mantel. They represented first and second places in the women's dormitory bridge tournament.

In Freeman's Variety skit, "Dreamland Dither," a girl in a crazy mixed-up fairyland encountered Little Boy Blue. Little Boy Blue jumped over a candlestick, and lots of other storybook characters, besides.

"HEY, don't go to bed yet—did you forget about the corridor party?" her roommate reminded.

"I completely forgot. Aren't the third floor girls playing hostess?" the Lyon Hall girl asked as she slipped on her robe.

When the two girls reached third floor one exclaimed, "Look, the whole dorm is up here."

Lyon Presents "Holly Folly" "Yes, and every room is decorated like a different holiday—what a clever theme!"

"Isn't it our floor's turn to play hostess next quarter?" the girl questioned.

Lyon Hall girls entertained their dates at a Christmas fireside, "Holly Folly." Mistletoe, branches sprinkled with artificial snow and winter scenes painted on the windows completed the decorations.

A dorm collection provided money for Christmas gifts for a Des Moines orphans' home.

Intramural basketball saw two Lyon teams competing for reserve champion honors.

Lyon Hall girls climaxed spring quarter with a traditional picnic outing at Brookside Park.

"EVERYONE ready?" the Oak Hall director asked as she started the down-beat for 'Wonderful Copenhagen'.

The Oak girls are not only musical, but also athletic. They won the basketball championship and placed second in tennis.

Oak Hall did it again when they topped the dormitories in scholarship spring quarter.

Parents were invited to an open-house late in October. Large jack-o-lanterns and colored fall leaves decorated the table, following the Halloween theme.

Complete concentration should yield these lassies good grades for that test. Perfectly at home, one of the girls even removed her shoes.

THE low drone of a vacuum cleaner filled the parlor of Roberts Hall, empty except for two cleaning women. One shut off the cleaner, straightened up and shoved a strand of hair from her face. "This is really a mess after the fireside the girls had last night." She stooped to pick up a card from the floor.

"They must have dropped that last night: they were playing cards and dancing. Land, the way they were stomping to that music I thought the ceiling would fall in."

Roberts Wins Golf - Tennis

With spring Roberts Hall turned to sports, adding the 1954 golf and tennis intramural championship trophies to its collection.

Roberts Hall girls carried out the true spirit of Christmas as they gave gifts to underprivileged children in Des Moines.

Roberts recreation room was the scene of a winter quarter 'Mardi Gras.' Multi-colored balloons, confetti and streamers completed the decorations. Dates were given miniature beer mugs bearing the ISC seal.

Having a chat with the jolly housemother is the enjoyable pastime of these Welch Hall girls as they share a mutual joke with her.

“WANT to see what we won last spring?” a Welch Hall advisor asked one of the new freshmen in her corridor.

“Sure — what is it?” replied the girl.

As the two girls walked toward the parlor the advisor boasted, “Welch Hall collected two second places — wait ‘til you see the Sor-Dor trophy.”

“Sor-Dor — what’s that?” questioned the new girl.

“It’s a song contest with all dormitories and sororities competing. Welch won the traveling trophy by placing second in the dorms. Wish you could have heard the girls sing “I Got Plenty ‘O Nuttin’” and “American Lullaby.”

Welch Captures 2nd for Float

“Didn’t you say you got another second place?”

“Yes — in the women’s dorm division of the Veishea parade. Our float featured a weather forecaster depicting the five ISC divisions. We called it ‘Forecast of Achievement.’”

Dr. William Murray, professor of economics, and his wife are the new hall faculty advisors. Welch girls honored them at a Valentine tea.

THE car swung sharply into the parking place, a box sliding off the back seat with a thud at the sudden stop. The boy turned to look at the street, confused with cars — honking, pouncing upon parking places, their tires making slushy sounds in the muddy street. now you can sure tell we have 1,400 fellows living here in Friley-Hughes Hall; this may be the largest men's dormitory in the world, but I think it has the smallest parking space." "Course, wouldn't miss it. Remember the dance this fall, 'November Nocture?' I could have danced all night to Vance Dickson's band. But I still liked 'April Fantasy' last spring the best — gives me spring fever to think about it."

"Want to wait in the car while I take my suitcase in? I won't be a minute."

missed part of the basketball game."

"Campaigning already? That's right, we do have our elections in January. You know, I'd like to run for representative to the Main Cabinet of Men's Residence Association. I guess this year they're having one representative from each of the 24 houses in Friley-Hughes. If I got on the Cabinet I'd like to be the Activities Chairman."

"What would you do?" asked his roommate.

"I'd sit in on the Activities Council meetings and be in charge of things like the Reflector, our newspaper, weekly movies and different clubs — and our radio station KMRI. By the way, why don't you turn it on? — should have some good music about this time."

"Running for one of the councils sounds interesting. What one do you think I'd like best?"

"Let's see, besides activities we have scholarship, intramural and social councils. How about social? They arrange dances like the All-Dorm mixer."

He got off the bed slowly, pulling down his sweater, glanced in the mirror and ran his hand quickly over his crew cut. "Well — guess I'd better dash — got a heavy date tonight. Be seeing you."

Intense interest mounts as the cards fall and lady luck chooses her partner in this game of Hearts in the Bennett House lounge.

“CONGRATULATIONS, Cliff! — man, your field goal saved the game!” exclaimed a teammate as they trudged from the dusty field.

“You know, I never thought Bennett would pull through with the MRA Class A football trophy,” commented the player as he tossed the ball to his companion.

“And now, after defeating Kappa Ward today, we’ll have to keep up the spirit ‘til we meet the fraternity champs.”

“I’m real proud of our house — half of Bennett is freshman; and do those guys keep plugging the team; that’s what counts.”

Bennett Takes MRA Football

Bennett House added the all-college Class C Softball Championship and MRA bowling championship to their football victories.

Bennett men disproved the old adage that athletics and brains don’t mix. The fifth floor men placed third in MRA scholarship.

Each quarter the house got together for a dinner and discussion period.

House religious discussions in connection with Religion in Life proved a success in Bennett.

"WE MADE a clean sweep," claimed a Beyer House fellow as he sauntered down the hall.

"Yes, after winning the MRA scholarship trophy, I feel great," replied his companion.

As the two fellows strolled past rows of closed doors, one commented, "Say doesn't this make the fourth quarter that Beyer has led the MRA grade point race?"

Beyer Tops MRA In Scholarship

"But grades aren't everything—that 1954 first place intramural trophy looks good to me."

"I think finishing runner-up in the 1955 Class A bowling league forged the way in putting Beyer in the intramural race," the fellow said as he pulled open the door to his room.

In February Beyer House members and their dates stepped through a red and white heart to enter the TV room and celebrate Valentines Day with a special party.

House paddles were given to graduating seniors and the retiring head resident at the senior recognition dinner during spring quarter.

Admiring the new trophy, these Beyer House boys feel mighty proud of their latest addition. Nice collection you have there, men.

"How about pink carnations?" The Military Ball is cause for busy phones in Caine House, and this date seems to be requiring study.

"IT'S A deal!" — agreed the members of Caine and Stevenson Houses after making a scholarship bet. "Losers will treat the winners to Frostees," the freckled-faced fellow from Caine shouted. "And I'm afraid you guys from Stevenson will have to empty your pockets at the end of the quarter 'cause we're out to win!"

"This will mean a lot of hard work, you guys!" encouraged the head resident of Caine. "Let's really show them what we can do."

At the beginning of winter quarter Caine fellows chanted "pay up." They'd won the bet.

Caine House, a new addition between Friley and Hughes, is home to 47 men. This fourth floor house was named for the late Alfred B. Caine, professor in the Department of Animal Husbandry.

Caine New in Friley-Hughes

The men of Caine, in their first quarter as a group, won fifth place in the MRA intramural standings and were highest among the new houses. Caine collected points for first in fall MRA Class B volleyball and second Class B bowling.

Comes the cry, "Shower party!" and Cessna House becomes the scene of much action. The victim seems to be putting up a big struggle.

"HEY, anyone have room for another man in his car? It's quite a long walk to the girls' dorms — of course, I don't mean I wouldn't walk. I think these exchanges are the most to say the least!" a tall broad-shouldered blond from Cessna House gleefully remarked.

"I've plenty of room, but I hope to meet a gal to go out with for the evening, so the ride is only a one way ticket," shouted a lively, expectant freshman.

"Now we'll see how well you absorbed the hints those four girls gave us at that discussion group a week ago at our quarterly dinner," retorted the blond knowingly.

Cessna Float Rates MRA 2nd

"Incidentally, don't forget our 'meeting' tonight. You know John got an office yesterday . . . and that means we'll have some extra fun. Remember the last time we threw a guy into the shower. Ha!"

And so life in Cessna goes on between Veishea and Homecoming activities. Cessna's Veishea float, a mechanical piano, won second place in the men's dormitory division.

WORK, work and more work, but 'Bump the Buffs' brought us a first place trophy at Homecoming," burst forth a brown-haired Chamberlain House lad.

"A large steam engine portrayed a coal car, and a cow-catcher was used to upset the buffalo, symbol of the Colorado squad. It had sound effects and all," the fellow told his visiting friends.

"The 'Cool Yule Trophy Trample' Christmas Party was the greatest, too. Thank Converse House for the party and traveling trophy as well, which incidently now rests in our den for the coming year. This 'fall classic' football game, an annual event, found Converse men at Chamberlain's mercy."

Chamberlain Is Largest House

All-college activities and scholastic work is stressed throughout Chamberlain House, the largest in Friley-Hughes.

And Veishea? "Iowa Showcase" showed the nation's latest medium of 3-D through figures and objects from representative Iowa places.

"For that Ipana smile of Beauty . . ." Could it be a Saturday night date? Or is it just one of those 8:00's that manage to creep up on us?

THE BOY and his date ducked under crepe paper streamers on the door to the Union Gallery. The fellow turned to the couple behind. "Not a bad dance you fellows from Converse had to put on for all of us in Chamberlain."

The other turned to his date. "The losers of the football game between our houses had to treat the winners to a party — and I'll bet you can't guess who lost!"

But Converse doesn't make a habit of losing; they won their second consecutive trophy when their Veishea float placed first in the Men's Residence Division. Its theme was "Brotherhood —

A Worldwide Achievement When?" featuring a blue globe with yellow continents out of which rose a stylized Beardshear with four men representing different races.

Converse Float Captures Prize

Keeping up the winning tradition were the bowling and softball teams which won their respective leagues this spring and the football team which won the Class C championship.

Work, work, work and learn, learn, learn . . . especially before winter quarter's final week. How many wish they'd studied harder!

Who's helping whom? This group combines talents and efforts in the solution to quite a teaser. Remember, though, "too many cooks."

THE only missing things that blissful spring day at the Ledges were the chef's hats and aprons. "Um, but the food is good," exclaimed the girls.

This time the fellows were cooking the food. "Steaks . . . nothing but the best," answered one dark, handsome 6-footer from Dodds House.

Spring fever caught Dodds fellows on many other picnics throughout the year.

Social life and long hours at the books conflicted during the short winter quarter, but intramurals held their place. Softball, bowling, basketball and volleyball points placed Dodds fourth in the MRA standings.

Dodds 4th in Intramurals

The Dodds scholastic contest carried the Ag's over the Engineers. Frosties were the winners' rewards.

At Homecoming Dodds became a scene of constant activity as work on the house decoration, the "Four Aces," progressed. The theme carried hearts for alums, clubs for activities, spades for knowledge and diamonds for friendship. Members of the house later directed and worked on divisional displays and Veishea productions.

THIS is great!" exclaimed one of the members of Fairchild House. "Instead of the west wing of Hughes Hall, we have the third floor of Friley-Hughes."

"How do you like the new tiled floors and the freshly painted halls?" asked a fellow leaning against the wall. "And this new hallway we're in. Did you know it was made by tearing out some walls?"

Fairchild Moves To New Location

After the rearrangement of Fairchild House, it seemed like new to the old members as well as the 38 freshmen who moved in fall quarter. An immediate get-acquainted picnic was held for the men in the house at the Ledges State Park outside Boone.

Joining together for intramurals, Fairchild was runner-up in Class B basketball. In addition they won the 157-pound wrestling championship and third place in swimming.

The year's activities ended with a picnic for the house members at the Ledges.

Home was never like this. Who would have believed there was that much pressure in a 59 cent can of Acro-shave? Wonder how it tastes.

Story time? No, just an after-dinner cigarette while catching up on the news of the day. Whoops, that isn't a Time Magazine after all.

A CHRISTMAS star glistened brightly in the Franklin House window. It caught the multi-colored light from the Christmas tree and tossed it around the room, adding a festive air. Whistling a slightly off-tune rendition of "Sleigh Bells," the fellows of Franklin House busily wrapped sweaters, stocking caps and socks in bright red and green paper.

Franklin Aids Korean Orphan

A tall, ruddy-faced brunette, who had been laboring over his package, placed it triumphantly on the top . . . "And here's the erector set; gosh, I wish I could see that little orphan boy when he opens this on Christmas. Even kids in Korea have a yen for erector sets."

The members of Franklin House turned from their Korean Orphan project to fall quarter finals and "really hit 'em." Results were second place in MRA scholastic standing for the second quarter in a row.

All was not serious study for the Franklin men as they put away their books and danced to Christmas tunes at the combined Franklin, Harriman and Lange Christmas Dance.

First Row: Sickels, Schauster, Sung, Hachberger, Collins, Dolecheck, Comstock, Reidel. Second Row: McGrath, Mathewson, Lubinus, Reed, Fay, Burgeson, Brink, Amlak, Wogen. Third Row: Minnihan, Lund, Atwood, Wray, Horrigan, Brance, Waddingham. Fourth Row: Smithson, Hagel, Beeler, Burbridge, Baldwin, Decker, Taylor (Pres.).

GODFREY House was strangely quiet and empty as the two young men strolled in from class. Looking questioningly at his Equadorian companion, the tall, stocky blonde shifted his books to the other arm and glanced down the hallway. "That's right, the new dining room opened today. Couldn't quite figure it, without that line of hungry men crowding our corridor. Sure am glad they finally got the new chow line going; it was really tough to get any studying done with fellows lining up outside the room."

"Yeh, but I'll kind of miss the excuse for ignoring that extra hour of studying before dinner."

"Of course, you could always say that you were figuring out a new curve on the bowling ball, you know. Boy, I sure hope we can

Godfrey Ranks High in Sports hold second place in the MRA standings.

"Yeh, that would look all right next to our championships in Class D football and classes A and B bowling," his companion said.

Godfrey's Veisheafloat, "Bear Down for Achievement," featured the UN Building atop the world holding the bear down.

With three fellows to one girl, these Godfrey men turn to pin-up girls. It's quite evident that Iowa State men still enjoy "paper dolls."

First Row: J. Lent, Field, Brain, Ross, Jones, Beck, L. Nelson. Second Row: Peacock, G. Lent, Kimberlin, Burke, Thomas, W. What has this misled prodigy against music? These Harriman House boys are going to make sure he's all washed up anyway!

"HOW many miles of crepe paper does it take to make a false ceiling, anyway?" queried the red-head as he fought his way out of the pile of paper he was stapling together and stepped down from the ladder.

"Plenty, that's for sure, but if we don't get this stuff up, there won't be any Christmas party for Harriman House men tonight."

Groaning his reply, the red-head stepped up on the ladder again and began weaving the crepe paper. "Those cornstalks really make authentic bamboo poles, don't they? For a Christmas party this is going to be quite a Hawaiian one!"

"Now we'll get our chance to see how the gals liked our serenade last night. We weren't always quite in tune, but the girls really seemed to enjoy our carols . . . especially Roberts Hall," interrupted a handsome navy ROTC man.

Harriman House Goes Hawaiian

"All I can hope for tonight is that my feet will last out. They're sure sore now; you'd think our intramural sports would've limbered me up."

Dig this crazy text book! It's funnier than the Green Gander. These lively Kimball House boys are really getting a kick out of T&AM.

UP AND over the net came the ball . . . splat, and it reversed its direction as it met the mighty fist of Kimball House's star spiker. "That does it, you guys; we've got the game in the bag now." Kimball House took the game and the Class A Volleyball championship for the third consecutive quarter.

"Boy, am I bushed. That game made me almost as tired as I was last Veishea when we finished our float."

Kimball Reigns in Volleyball

"Surely you couldn't be that tired," chided his Costa Rican roommate as they walked back to Kimball House and a hot shower. "You were really draggin' by the time we finished stuffing that last bit of the Iowa State Schmoos. Say, did you ever get the pictures back . . . the ones of that float?"

"Got a big eight by ten on my bulletin board," replied the lanky fellow; "it's all there, the schmoos, the boxes of Grade A, ISC products and the Motto, 'Something To Be Proud Of,' just as clear as you please."

First Row: McLain, Freeman, Reneker, Clauson, Snelter, Wright, Nederhoff, Goffin, Piper, Tubbs, Fuller (Sec-Treas.); Second Row: S. Peterson, Evenson (Pres.), Greske, Taylor, G. OUCH," he yelled as the smooth, flat edge of the paddle struck him. "All right, you guys, don't you think that's about enough?" complained a graduating senior from Knapp House as he received another strike with the paddle applied by a laughing freshman.

Gales of laughter drifted from the windows of Knapp House. Each graduating senior was being presented a paddle engraved with "Knapp House."

"I think I'll make a special trip back to ISC in 4 years . . . just to help paddle you!" retorted the senior — jokingly looking at the bold freshman.

Knapp Seniors Given Paddles

The stag Christmas party is just one of the get-togethers for fun at Knapp House. This year the Christmas party, held in the TV room, was made complete with entertainment, gifts and Santa.

Intramurals are well represented with 25 Knapp House members participating. Players won second place both spring and fall quarters in volleyball.

Seated in the new cafeteria in Friley Hall, these Knapp House boys are relaxing and enjoying their food. What's new fellows?

"SEE the little dipper!" exclaimed the short red-head to her date on the Lange House fall hayride.

"Look quick," urged her date. "There's a falling star. No, over there — ah . . . you missed it."

"I can't even see the big dipper. Where is it?" inquired the girl.

Changing the subject from stars,

Lange House the fellow went on, "Did I tell you
Is in "Plug" I'm living in the plug?"

"Plug! What's that? Sounds like basement quarters," decided the girl.

"The plug consists of four houses that make up the new addition and plug the gap between Friley and Hughes Halls. Hey, we're just about at the end of the hayride — next, it's chili and dancing in the Hughes Hall recreation room."

The 49 men of Lange House became quickly acquainted over plans for the 1954 Homecoming decoration. Ten foot tall florescent letters that spelled the word WIN was the plan that Lange members carried out.

Perhaps it is a study break or skit-practice but more likely just a typical "relax and goof off" session so popular among Iowa Staters.

"Okay, we'll be over to pick you up about 7:15." Two Lincoln House men eagerly arrange the last details of a most important date.

"I HEAR 65—65—65; do I hear 70—70—70 . . . 65 once — 65 twice, sold to the little lady in the green sweater."

The auctioneer motioned the good-looking fellow toward the highest bidder as another girl standing close by remarked, "Good! Now we won't have to carry our books to class this week."

"Anything for Lincoln's Ugly Man candidate!" the 'slave' murmured as he strolled over to his new 'owner.' "

"And you can measure the shortest distance from Roberts to the chem building, walk us to class tomorrow morning and — say, you're not busy Saturday night!" the girl commanded giving orders to her newly-purchased handy-man.

Spring found the men of Pierson and Lincoln Houses battling in a football contest at a stag picnic.

Lincoln Works For Ugly Man

In sports, all Lincoln's intramural teams were classified in Class A. Wrestling, basketball, bowling and softball helped spark Lincoln's intramural points.

The Pirates Prowl was a high spot on the Lincoln social calendar as were the Jolly Roger style mixer and the quarterly MRA semi-formal dances.

THE TABLE was not in use when the two fellows threw open the door and hunted for the ping-pong paddles and ball.

"Sorry, I'm afraid this just isn't going to be your day," the lanky blonde smirked tossing the ball high into the air and then catching it.

"Not my lucky day, huh?"

Lindstrom House Just wait 'til you see my New in Fall wicked curve ball!" the other replied as the two players began to 'ping' for first serve.

The Lindstrom House player soon forged ahead to win the winter quarter ping-pong singles tourney in Friley-Hughes Hall.

Lindstrom, a new house last fall, is one of the smallest houses in the men's dormitory, having 32 members.

Although new, Lindstrom soon established itself as being very active. Winter quarter not only brought the ping-pong victory, but also the dormitory Class B basketball championship. A snowy tobaggan party highlighted Lindstrom's winter quarter social calendar.

What would we do without that pause that refreshes? In Friley Hall, Lindstrom House men agree that there's nothing like a Coke.

Entertainment during intermission at the Snow Fling is deviating from mood of skirts and frills. Just in from the country, boys?

THE BALL whizzed through the air; there was a clean swoosh as the bat swung strongly against empty air . . . then the sharp, hard thud of leather against leather. "Strike three — and you're out!" bawled a voice. The bat made a dull thud and raised a little cloud of dust from the plate as the batter tossed it down and started toward the field from which the other team was straggling.

"Oh no — come on you Engineers, we can't let the Aggies beat us like this!" wailed a girl. Then she laughed. "Oh well, the Engineers were champs at eating the most ice cream anyway; you're not complete failures."

Meeker Tops in Softball

Yes, softball is in the blood of the Meeker House men. In the spring they more than proved it by capturing the Class A all-college softball championship.

Graduating seniors held the spotlight at a house dinner at the end of each quarter, when each graduate said a few words about his life in Meeker House. Their activities and the fun they had in Meeker will return to them whenever they wear the cuff links which they received as a remembrance.

THE CANDLES burned lower and lower as smoke rings filled the air at "Club Niles."

"The music is perfect and the crepe paper decorations are sharp . . . black and white surely carry out the nightclub theme," spoke up a pert little blonde.

Another brunette added quickly to the girl standing beside her, "I like that handsome bass in the quartet . . . uhm, that husky voice."

Club Niles Is Feature Party

"Cider, ale and women, women, women, women!!" a happy lad murmured. The "3-hats" and the "5-quartette" provided entertainment during the dance intermission. A skit take-off on the record "Bazoon" brought additional laughter to the party-goers.

The winter party was only one stepping stone in the stream of activities for Niles men.

Freshmen in the house were introduced to Veishea activities by working on the float. "Road to Success," featuring ruins on one side of the float and a model home on the other, was the theme of the creation.

Beauty care isn't only the worry of women. These two Niles house boys are really getting 'prettied up' for a public appearance.

This Noble House fellow is trying to turn back the clock. Cuckoo's time has come. Dig that crazy bird!

A WAY YOU go . . . Into the sea . . . We've had enough . . . Of your ROTC," — the by-now-familiar words echoed through the halls for Union Varieties.

"Which one were you? — One of the fellows ship-wrecked on the island or one that did the Sailor's Horn-Pipe dance," asked a spectator leaning toward one of the Noble House boys as they finished practice for the skit.

Noble House in Varieties

"Neither!" he replied. "Remember the hula dancers — you're looking at one of them now!"

"Your South Sea Island skit is great — but somehow I can't imagine you fellas being ship-wrecked on an island!"

Hamburgers, French fries and coffee were favorites in the wee hours of the morning when members of Noble House worked on their Homecoming decoration. Results — a giant Daily with the headline "Cyclones Beat Buffs."

Rare excitement came to the "House of Noble Men" in the spring — the house held a kite flying contest.

Noble was second in Class A and first in Class B bowling.

"OH NO!" murmured a boy as he pushed away the covers and rolled out of bed. "I wish that blaring bugle would stop making out with the noise."

"Come on, lazy bones, roll out — this is no time to catch those extra 40 winks! After all, we only get one chance a year to duck the seniors in the Union fountain," he said, playfully splashing water over his roommate's face.

The Pearson House tennis team fought its way to the finals in the fall intramural tennis matches. During the quarter the house adopted a new policy for birthday parties. A member with a birthday can save himself a trip to the shower by supplying enough home-made food to treat the house members.

Pearson House Adopts Shield

Pearson members designed and adopted a shield which they felt better symbolized the house than only a name.

House members won't forget the strenuous snow-ball fight between the two corridors of the house to see which one best deserved the title of "anex."

GANG! Over here—we just got a letter from Francesco," yelled a Stange House fellow huddled over the little piece of paper.

"When did we get the letter back from the translator?" questioned the head resident walking toward the group around the letter.

Stange Aids Italian Boy

Soon many members were surrounding the fellow holding the letter from Francesco D' Agostino, the 13-year-old Italian school boy that Stange House helps support. The house sponsors the war orphan through the Foster Parents Plan.

In intramurals Stange won Class B softball in the spring of '54 and captured the all-college Class D basketball championship.

Stange House members and their dates stepped through a paper valentine heart into a room with a red and white crepe-paper false ceiling. "Famous Firsts" was the title for the fall Stange House party in Hughes recreation room.

"Fang"—Stange's candidate for Ugliest Man on Campus, was the object of an extensive campaign. The group of supporters staged a fake kidnap on the steps of Beardshear.

THE WATER splashed and the canoe tipped side-to-side as the three "Spinnyites" of Spinnny House paddled their way forward.

"Look where you're throwing that paddle. I can't see through the water you're throwing," yelled a daring man from Spinnny.

"I can't help it 'cause this is the only way to get any speed out of this piece of bark," responded a fellow teammate.

As they rounded the end of Lake LaVerne, they saw their opponents tumble into the cold muddy waters and their canoes overturn.

Still the Spinnny three pressed forward with spirits high. The crowd cheered them on.

"We did it: I'm exhausted; I'm wet," one of the fellows whispered breathlessly wiping his forehead with a towel as they climbed up the bank.

Spinny Paddles To MRA First

First place in the MRA Veishea Canoe races for '54 went to Spinnny.

Serenading the dorms, intramurals, parties and exchanges added to the year of excitement throughout the house.

With pipe in mouth, these Stange House boys are intensely concentrating (studying?) in their lounge. Who goofed, fellows?

"Hey, now wait a minute, you said that if we stayed for song practice tonight you wouldn't set any for the next week."

Wonder if his spirits are as dampened as his clothes will be from this prank on a Stevenson House lad by his Friley Hall buddies.

"HEY—WHAT'S that?" a youngster asked looking at the house picture board.

"Why that's our new symbol," his older brother replied. "It represents scholarship, social and sports achievement; and we have chosen colors, too. They are blue and white!"

Stevenson Band For—Salty Dick

During fall quarter Stevenson House residents, over half of which are freshmen, inaugurated their new house in the newly built part of Friley.

Next the highly inquisitive child blurted out, "Hey, what do you guys do for excitement around here?"

Again the patient, black, wavy-haired student replied, "Oh, we had a Valentine Dance with crepe paper and all. After loosing by a slight margin to Lange House in a scholastic battle, we furnished the winner with frosties."

Stevenson House promoted their ugly man, "Salty Dick," by a house band, made up of a trombone, several cornets and a drum.

IT WAS A cold winter night, but in that small smoke-filled room jazz rang out loud and clear.

"Man, dig those crazy cats. That dixie-land swing really has it," throated a burley brunette as he pounded the floor with his foot in rhythm with the Stanton House Swingsters.

Stanton Seven Has Jazz Fest

Two energetic souls joined hands and barrelled around the crowded room, bumping into one person and then another.

"Look out for my arm, curly one, it isn't made of plastic you know," he blurted out amid laughter.

And music from the seven-piece combo rang on through the house echoing the memories of many house parties, dinners and exchanges.

In the wee hours of the morning, one by one they began to 'hit the sack' as their joy gave way to thoughts of the many hours of study and classes ahead.

Homecoming, too, had its place in the memories of Stanton House members. Hours of work by the fellows produced "Vince's Patient Medicine," portrayed by a large representative football player and Iowa State Cyclones.

That long, long drink of "cool, clear water" is a very welcome relief after a hectic afternoon of classes and tests and unionizing.

We agree that the ratio is overbalanced, but fellows, does it take five of you to get one date with those gals across the campus?

"TONIGHT'S the night . . . remember no dates!" commanded the upper-classman to the studious freshman as he gathered up books for his afternoon classes.

"No dates?—what do you mean? I have a sharp doll lined up for tonight," the freshman replied looking up from the chem book open on his desk.

"Sorry — buddy, you'll have to forfeit your big date tonight — this is your night with the Alumni Hall boys," the older fellow said jerking his arms into his grey suede jacket.

"What's so special about tonight, anyway?" the young boy asked slamming the chem book shut with a bang.

"Now don't tell me you haven't heard the news — this is the greatest party Alumni Hall has all year. We call it our Abstainer's party!"

"Abstainer's, huh? Sounds different to say the least! — what do we abstain from?" he said with a puzzled look on his face.

"No wine! No women! But loads and loads of song," the upper-classman replied with a broad smile as he rushed off to class.

The "abstainer" house song-sessions paid off for Alumni Hall. Their quartette copped first place in the Phi Mu Alpha contest.

Women's Residences were well entertained during the Christmas season when members of Alumni Hall serenaded.

The group pays the tuition for a Greek high school student. The 17-year-old Greek boy attends the Greek Farm School.

"Sweetheart Swirl," the Alumni Hall winter formal, was held in South Ballroom, Memorial Union. Couples swirled to music played by the Eight Sharps.

The front lawn of Alumni Hall was changed to a grave yard during Homecoming. "Let's Bury the Buffs" was the slogan for Alumni's second place winning decoration in the Men's Residence Division.

Intramurally, Alumni won the spring MRA track meet. A Valentine party, hayride, banquet honoring the seniors at Lloyd's restaurant in Marshalltown and Veishea float completed Alumni Hall's calendar of events.

"O KAY, stick 'em up, buddy" muttered a low menacing voice. "All I want's your money — the broad won't be hurt."

The other boy shoved his hat back from his forehead and grinned. "Pretty neat costume you've got on, too," he remarked admiringly studying the girl's slinky, slit skirt and a blouse that dropped off one shoulder. "You send me. CAUTION, Pammel Court speed limit 10 miles per hour — enforced." A weary student in a brown suede jacket, slide rule dangling from his belt, trudged slowly past the sign. He glanced about at the row after row of aluminum-sided quonsets with their small fenced-in yards. Here and there a TV aerial jutted up into a busy skyline already filled with telephone wires and stubby, smoking chimneys.

"Bobby, you come back here and put on your rubbers and scarf." "But Mom . . ." "Bobby!" "But I don't want . . . oh, all right."

"Hi." A woman in a blue house dress stood shaking her dust mop at a front door. The student grinned broadly and waved his response.

"Bang, bang, bang!" A 3-year-old, pistol-waving Hopalong Cassidy rattled past in a bright red wagon propelled by "trusty steed" — in reality, another 3-year-old.

Out by the car-washing stations, a 55-pound version of Max Burkett blasted for a TD through a small but determined opposing line.

Farther on, tired wash lines drooped under their burdens of dish towels, shirts and diapers.

The student turned in at a narrow, red brick walk. Scarcely noticing the tricycle lying neglected in the now-frozen flower bed, he picked up the mail from the box marked 700 Pammel Court and disappeared into the house.

AMID hot sulphur flares, dozens of trampled toes and the swish of another team crossing the finish line, Iowa State's 1954 Homecoming was off to an exciting start. Again the Tandem Bike Race preliminaries ushered in the annual fall festivities. Afterwards spirited students halted traffic on Lincoln Way as Cardinal Guild members led the way to the pep rally and bonfire in Beardshear parking lot.

Shouts of peppy cheerleaders, punctuated by the brassy blare of the pep band, stirred the crowd to fever pitch. Pep talks by DiFrancesca and the other coaches brought roars of approval. The bonfire toasted feet and kindled spirits as cries of "Go Cyclones!" resounded across the campus.

Pi Beta Phi out-pedaled Chi Omega at Clyde Williams Field Friday night, as both teams bucked a stiff prairie wind. Nearly 5,000 spectators attending the Jamboree shivered in the icy October air. The warming effect of hot beef sandwiches and coffee was more than nullified by the solidly-frozen ice cream which followed.

The wind wasn't the only thing from out of the West. Homecoming acts were presented on a huge stage built to resemble a chuckwagon. While a stiff-fingered piano player ground out tunes before the show, M.C. Howie Holst warmed up the crowd to the forthcoming gaity.

BUFFALOES, trains, pygmies, ghosts and soap boxes adorned the front lawns of residences as Iowa State dressed up for her returning alumni. By Friday night the results of many sleepless nights and long hours of student labor were ready for viewing. When the results were finally announced, Phi Delta Theta had taken first in the fraternity division with its pygmies boiling C.U. in a pot. In the MRA division, judges couldn't resist Chamberlain House's colorful train, complete with realistic sound effects.

The welcome mat was out for returning alums after the crowds had squeezed their way out of Clyde Williams field. They wended their way across the autumn-painted campus to the familiar residences, where coffee and doughnuts or buffet suppers were on the agenda.

WHEN the Saints Come Marching In," "Skokian" and other jazz tunes echoed lively through the combined ballrooms of the Memorial Union. The music of Ralph Marterie attracted record-breaking crowds to the traditional Friday and Saturday night Homecoming dances. The sight of many familiar alumni faces heightened the enjoyment of the dancing couples. Huge crowds surrounded the bandstand to get a better view of the renowned band master and his 'hot' drummer.

Rhythmic jazz with a jungle beat was the theme of the night, but sweet and lovely numbers were not forgotten. Crisp October air and a backdrop of modernistic fall leaves blended as couples sought relief from the heat of the dance floor in the Commons or lounges. During intermission the Homecoming Queen, Doris Woessner, and her attendants, Sally Bartels and Mary Jean Lockard, were presented.

As the campanile struck midnight on Saturday, 1954 Homecoming faded into fall memories.

"We want Trumpeter's Lullaby!" shouted the enthusiastic crowd, and Marterie complied despite stiff fingers and frozen valves.

THIS is the story of the re-birth of a Spirit.

It is about an undermanned but determined football team. Known as the Fighting Few, Iowa State's team had one far-from-secret weapon: Spirit!

The story starts more than a year ago when Vince DiFrancesca joined Iowa State's faculty as head football coach. Vince lettered three times for Northwestern, captaining the 1946 team. In 5 years at Western Illinois State, his teams compiled a 38-7-1 record, never losing two games in a row and winning a Corn Bowl championship.

The new coach chose his own staff: three-times all-American Alex Agase as line coach, backfield coach Jerry Carle, and coach Bill Heiss, head freshman coach Arch Steel and assistant freshman coach Chick Sutherland. "One thing I can promise is diligent work," Vince said. "Iowa State will have the hardest-working football staff in the Big Seven."

Vince & Co. guided gridders through a rough spring practice and started in early last fall where they'd left off. It was a rebuilding job with manpower scarce and enthusiasm dying after some lean years. Coaches sweat alongside the players in workouts, instilling a contagious new ingredient known as Spirit.

A Spirit Is Born —Vince's Gridders

Then came mid-September and the season opener against South Dakota State. Fans filling the stadium that warm Saturday afternoon wondered about the "new pep" at Iowa State. There Steel, Heiss, DiFrancesca, Agase, Carle.

The story to be told is one of a spirited football team. Cheerleader Norm Olson symbolizes the ISC enthusiasm that never let down.

An unusual view: Colorado's got the ball, Iowa State wants it, and all those Homecoming rooters on the east side want Iowa State to have it.

Enthusiasm was already hoarse but contagious. Sixty playing minutes later the Cyclones were still unbeaten, South Dakota State a 34-6 victim.

Week after week the team battled — against tiring heat, formidable foes, injuries, mighty thin ranks and some bad breaks. Yet the story shows there was never a letdown from beginning to end.

The season ended with 3 wins, 6 losses but no more cellar dwelling in the conference standings.

Louis Menze, director of athletics, stood as a prophet confirmed. He'd foreseen better things as a new regime began. Further predictions? "We'll keep right on improving. Vince DiFrancesca and his staff will have a better year in 1955 and still better in 1956."

Vince: "If I live to be a hundred — and that's a long-term contract in this business — I don't believe I'll ever have a better bunch of kids. If we end up with 10,000 scholarships at Iowa State, we'll never run into 40 hearts like those boys have."

"WELL, Vince, that's the first one," was the most frequent comment from Cyclone backers in the dressing room. They referred to what they had just seen: Iowa State 34, South Dakota State 6.

It was a promising start to the football season. The Cyclones made it plenty convincing as they romped for 27 points in a second half rampage.

Max Burkett sped 48 yards behind Elmer May's key block to the enemy 2-yard line on the opening play of the second half. The touchdown scored, he followed soon with another TD run, 85 yards. After that, Max retired with six ball-carrying trips that averaged 24 yards and a terrific linebacking chore to his credit.

Co-captains Weldon Thalacker and Max Burkett lead Cyclones through the "welcome tunnel" to victory over K-State.

The above testifies to the power of Colorado's team which spoiled the Iowa State Homecoming, 20-0. Barney Alleman leaves the gridiron.

But the first half was a different story for the nervous Cyclones. Diminutive Gary Lutz did some brilliant break-away running that might have made things look better except that his 73-yard dash was erased by a teammate's over-anxious play. Prior to this Lutz had stepped off one that counted on a quick starter.

From this uncertain start, Iowa State fairly blew the opposition apart in the third quarter.

"Vince, these boys started something. . . ."

SPIRITED Cyclones hogged the pigskin for three quarters, but that wasn't enough. Northwestern 27, Iowa State 14.

Traffic was strictly one-way in that long final period which caught worn out Cyclones losing two passes that melted a 14-14 tie.

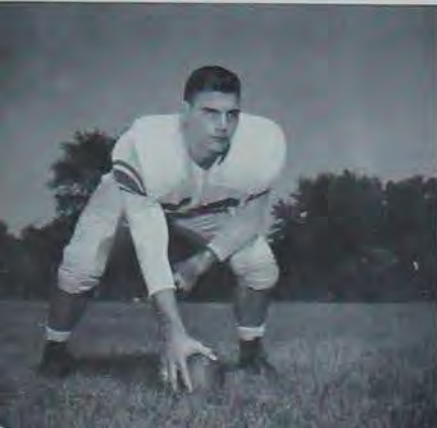

Brimful of hustle, the visiting Iowa Staters showed shirt-sleeved rooters how hustle beats muscle as twice they struck suddenly to knot the score, another time running out of downs on the 1-yard line.

A fellow named Callaway kicked off for Northwestern, and it was a clean kick that tumbled into the arms of Donn Lorenzen on the eight . . . just a little left of center. The Wildcats, pouring down in a single line, were split in one spot, and that's the spot Lorenzen headed for. In a flash he was through and somewhere between the 20 and the 30 started bursting into the clear. Keep that lead he did, and his 92-yard sprint ended Iowa State's second scoring drive.

ed against a tiring Cyclone outfit the last quarter.

"Okay, let's get our chins up," Coach Vince told a despondent squad in the dressing room. "I want to tell you guys something — there were 40,000 people out there today, and there's not a one of them who isn't proud of you."

SHIMMERING heat made the Nebraska horizon dance. And weary Cyclones again wilted in the fourth quarter.

Nebraska 39, Iowa State 14: The Cornhuskers broke a 14-14 tie and made four touchdowns look as everyday as the morning paper.

Cyclone forces had looked mighty good until that fatal finish. Recovery of one of Nebraska's four fumbles led to the first touchdown as Bruce Alexander lunged the last 2 yards through one of the biggest holes he saw in Nebraska's defense all day.

In the last 15 frustrating minutes, Orange Bowl bound Cornhuskers romped across the ISC goal line four more times. Dennis Korinek went over twice. Iowa State had just made one of its two costly bobbles as Korinek started dodging 70 yards to clear territory.

He and the Huskers were as hard to capture in a broken field as a ray of vagrant sunshine.

IOWA State's football players kept their heads and their courage through a disheartening first quarter, then applied a relentless and savage pressure that by game's end had blown Kansas apart at the seams.

The final score was Iowa State 33, Kansas 6.

Stopped this time, Max Burkett ripped the Drake line in cyclonic manner enough to reach payday twice as Iowa State romped 35-0.

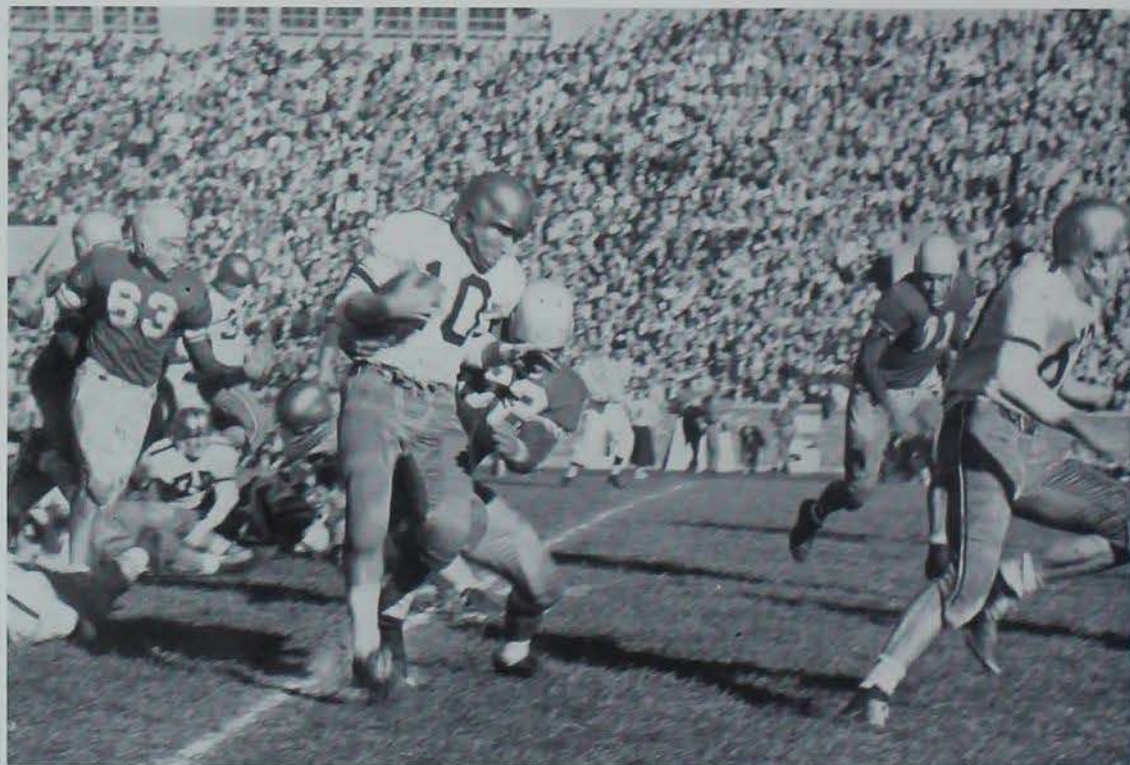

But it was not until late in the first period that Iowa State earned a first down. Things looked up when John Breckenridge began calling slick pass plays, and in the second period he personally carried the ball 9 yards, then pitched to Harold Potts with a couple of steps' edge on his defender in the end zone. Dick Callahan rushed in for a placekick, scuffed the ball, but it dropped just inside the uprights to put Iowa State in front to stay.

In 5 minutes the Cyclones repeated.

Instructing his quarterbacks to use long-count plays and few passes, Coach Vince saved the energy of the Cyclone squad until the final quarter when they supplied three touchdowns for a smashing victory.

DISPLAYING the power that made them one of the top rushing teams in the country, the Colorado Buffaloes spoiled Iowa State's hope for a Homecoming win Colorado 20, Iowa State 0.

A few seconds later those Homecoming fans noisily approved player-of-the-day Burkett's tackle of Colorado's John (The Beast) Bayuk.

There were no doubts as to Colorado's speed and ability. Resorting to passes only three times, the powerful Buff backfield headed by John (The Beast) Bayuk rammied head-down through the middle for consistent gains, blasting out a net gain of 319 rushing yards despite all defensive efforts.

The nearest the Cyclones got to a touchdown was in the fading seconds of the game when Jim Stuelke made a dazzling end zone catch of John Breckenridge's aerial shot. But he found it wasted effort because an interloper was discovered nearby.

an interloper was discovered nearby. As the game ended, the new mascot (Cy the Cardinal) reflected Homecoming rooters' spirits with a heavy tread and a drooping head.

Somebody said Max Burkett once had an off day. Maybe so, but it wasn't against Colorado. He played all 60 minutes, gaining most of the Iowa State yardage and displaying his all-around versatility on defense. That night at the Homecoming dance a "Player of the Day" trophy was to be awarded. "I hope it's Max," someone whispered. It was.

IT was a beautiful day in Missouri, and the Iowa State students who migrated for the day had lots to get excited over between the football game (Missouri 32, Iowa State 14) and a prison riot at Jefferson City 31 miles distant.

Mighty Mo's opening touchdown went almost unnoticed when some 50 highway patrolmen made a quick exit from crowd-policing duties to answer an emergency call to the riot scene. By halftime it looked like another riot might be going on before fans' own eyes. Missouri had piled up 197 yards to lead 20-0.

The Cyclones rebounded the last half, but too late. Quarterback John Breckenridge carried the ball eight times himself, including two vital sneaks for fourth-down yardage, then tossed a 29-yard scoring pass to Harold Potts. Another pass play counted when Jerry Finley hit Bruce Alexander on a rollout. The first try was too long, but the second was perfect for a TD.

COACH Vince DiFrancesca was happy, of course, about the score—Iowa State 35, Drake 0—but the fact that all of his players got in the game pleased him too.

It didn't take the Cyclones long to start rolling as they renewed Iowa's oldest big college football rivalry, which started back in 1898. Iowa State started on its own 46 and where a fumble stopped the drive. Max Burkett, "a tornado in cleats," crossed the goal line twice, Hank Philmon and Gary Lutz a time each before the half ended 28-0.

Tornado in Cleats Hits Drake, 35-0

Bulldog backers got their rare chances to cheer in the third quarter, but the threats were halted.

Donn Lorenzen, relieving Burkett late in the game, slipped from his 49 to the 36, only to have the gain nullified by an offside fine. A play later the Cyclones tried the same thing, this time Lorenzen going all the way—56 yards—to conclude the scoring.

with the skill of a mechanical computer and the enthusiasm of a child on Christmas Eve.

The team was Oklahoma, No. 3 in the nation and (yawn!) Big Seven champions for the seventh year in a row. The Cyclones fought valiantly, but the Sooners forced a follow-the-ball-if-you-can game, and ISC couldn't.

A slick offense afoot or by air, and the dragnet defense spread, gave Cyclones more than they — or anyone else — could handle: Oklahoma 40, Iowa State 0.

Five times the Cyclones probed into enemy territory, and twice they became downright serious — once early in the game when a touchdown would have tied the score. That time they got to the Oklahoma 13-yard line. Later they went all the way to the one. But the stingy Sooners were twice as tough when the situation became critical. Kurt Burris, everybody's all-American center, ruined the first drive, throwing carriers for a total loss of 13 yards in two plays.

The Iowa State team did play with pronounced determination. Only thing was, while Cyclones hit and hit hard, Coach Bud Wilkinson's perennially unbeaten Oklahomans 4-yarded along in usual split-T fashion, about as impossible to stop as a birthday.

Add the fury of Iowa State's tackling and six bobbles by strong Kansas State, and you have the ingredients for an exciting football afternoon that kept customers biting their nails.

The above formula worked for the Cyclones' season finale until the last 7 minutes, when the Wildcats unleashed a fleet halfback who charged 18 yards for the victory margin: Kansas State 12, Iowa State 7.

The game was more thrilling than a dime-novel Mickey Spillane, with favored Kansas State as unpredictable as Tallulah.

One of the Wildcat fumbles opened the door for the Cyclones' touchdown — their only penetration beyond midfield. Ironically, the lone ISC fumble had switched on the K-State scoring machinery in the first 9 minutes. Iowa State's line presented a bare midriff several times, and four times ISC had to stop the Wildcats inside the Cyclone 20-yard line.

An exchange of breaks, with the Cyclones suffering in the swap, ended the game.

When asked the greatest blessing of man, the Greek epic poet Homer replied, "A sound mind in a manly body."

Max Burkett is so blessed.

ceived Iowa State's highest honor by being tapped to Cardinal Key for "service to the college, leadership, high character and scholarship."

A Cyclone regular all four years, he earned all-Big Seven honors the last two and made the all-America scholars team.

Burkett had 528 yards rushing, just 16 short of Bill Chauncey's single-season Cyclone record. Barney Alleman ranked high over the nation for a 41.3 punting average in 23 times. His best was a 72-yard boot at Kansas State. Dick (Cateyes) Callahan raced onto the gridiron 17 times to place-kick the extra point after an ISC score; only once did he miss.

Neither the teams nor cheerleaders gave up hope of winning till the last.

Led by Jane Pennock and Larry Axelton, the energetic fellows and gals achieved their aim — to keep athletic pep at the highest possible point while observing all the rules of good sportsmanship, courtesy and good will.

TO BRING more and better athletics to Iowa State, to raise the morale and give incentive to our various teams and to promote interest among the student body in varsity athletics."

These words are taken from the 630 Club constitution and are typical of the attitude of each member.

630 Organization Boosts Athletics

An organization of 70 members made up of one representative from each residence, it is this group's job to choose the Athlete of the Week during each school week. Club members name an Athlete of the Year during Veishea.

The varsity football Athletic Banquet is sponsored by this group and is held each fall in honor of the football team. Members work hand in hand with the Ames Junior Chamber of Commerce in the presentation of the banquet.

Founded in 1946, the club is the youngest on campus. Steve Kostakov, retiring president, was succeeded by Lanny Patten.

After another ISC football victory, 630 Club members examine individual performance records prior to choosing Athlete of the Week.

ISC Tumblers Appear on TV

Formally organized with a charter for the first time this year, the Tumblers mixed workouts and projects for an interesting year.

The only chance most Iowa State students got to see the Tumblers "in action" was during half-time of the ISC-Missouri basketball game here.

Teams of six went out of town on several trips. They entertained the Fort Dodge Jaycees and patients at the Woodward State School. They appeared on the TV show, "This is Iowa State."

First Column: Arthur, Belt, Green. Second Column: Taylor, Krotz. Third Column: Pierson, Olson, Van Peurseem. Fourth Column: Oldham, Vanderbeilen, Simmons. Fifth Column: Newell, Navas. Sixth Column: White, Knowels, Martin.

SIGMA Chi fraternity footballers broke loose Bennett House's shackles in the fourth quarter. The 20-0 win gave the Sig Chi's the all-college Class A football championship.

After two incomplete passes, the first score came on Jerry Davis' 85-yard touchdown dash. The extra point was missed, but the Sig Chi's hit paydirt three more times in the waning minutes to win convincingly.

Phi Delt's Cop Fall Intramurals

The annual fall Sports Triad was almost monopolized by the Phi Delta Theta athletes. Winning the table tennis and horseshoe events, the Phi Delt's failed only in golf-putting.

Led by varsity tennis ace Ed Hoffman, the Phi Delt's breezed through table tennis comers. Some sharp 20-20 tossing of the horseshoes gave them another title.

But an Alpha Tau Omega quartet that included varsity golfer Dan Molyneaux, stroked its way through the competing field to capture the golf-putting event.

Across campus, on the east side, women had their own intramurals — no less spirited than the men's competition.

Filled with enthusiasm at the opening whistle, the Chi Omega's and Gamma Phi Beta's battled two overtimes for the women's volleyball championship. The Gamma Phi's finally edged a 29-26 win.

The Chi O's sported a 15-9 halftime lead, but the second half brought rotation that limited spikers, giving the Gamma Phi's a volleying advantage and eventual victory.

Nancy Winslow and her Gamma Phi teammates swam away with the pool title too, their 51.5 points topping the 15 teams.

Clowning Kappa Alpha Theta's won the comic book relay.

Singles champion in table tennis was Delores Scolaro, who defeated Mary Alice Fike in two of three games.

Carolyn Steger and Mary Jean Stoddard combined for honors in the doubles competition.

Spring competition among the women's residences featured tennis, bowling and softball events.

The men's and women's intramurals programs include almost every student on campus. Chi O's and Sig Ep's (bottom picture) gather around in a huddle for a "yeah-rah-rah" after winning in the mixed intramural volleyball tournament. The eyes of two coeds (top picture) indicate it's a tense moment in the table tennis doubles competition.

"Yes, given by the Wagner Opera Company."

"But I can never understand the foreign words."

"Don't worry, it's sung in English. And you ought to go for the oriental costumes."

Varied Artists Appear at ISC

"It sounds wonderful. I'd love to go. I really enjoyed that Count Basie concert you took me to. His piano style and original compositions were tremendous."

"It all goes to show we music lovers don't have to be limited in our tastes to one type."

"Since when were you a 'music-lover?'"

"No kidding, this guest artist series really appeals to me. And not just to me. Didja ever notice how many kids show up at those things?"

"It's wonderful. And what I liked so much, too, was hearing General Mark Clark's talk."

"You bet. He really had some nifty ideas on the Korean situation. I was interested in his idea that we fought a war of limited objectives when we could have fought one of unlimited objectives. War, Politics and Atoms was his topic."

"Yes, I really learned a lot from him. But if we're going tonight, I've got to get ready. See you in about an hour. OK? G'bye."

"I know how Bob feels. Studies interfere with intramurals for me sometimes, but they relax your mind . . ."

"You should try tobogganing or ice skating. Mike says the lake is real smooth. Hey, here he comes now."

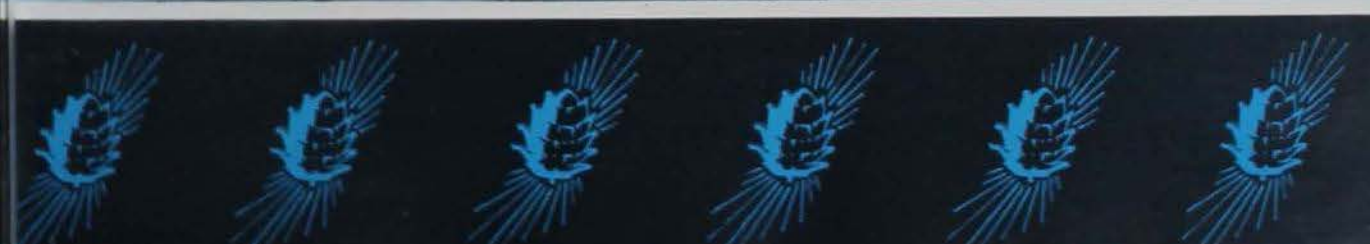

"Well, look at the card sharks! I've been looking for you guys. Want to go to Union Night Club next week with us? We went last time, and no kidding it was terrific!"

"Speaking of terrific — here have a chair — have you seen the nominees for the latest queen?"

"I'll say, but nominees reminds me, who can I draft for help on the all-college election campaigns?"

"What's your platform . . . down with cribbing? The Daily editorials have it all lined up for you." (Con't p. 196.)

"I'M NOT too worried about that. A college that begins the quarter with a Religion In Life Week as well attended as ours isn't as bad off as some schools. But it's good that there is general concern over the problem. I'll tell you what I am worried about. I'm in charge of decorations for our fireside next weekend and I'm stuck for ideas. Sure hope the fellows have some."

"You should see the decorations we've got rigged up for our formal. We've painted a simply terrific backdrop of . . ."

"Hi, gang!"

"Tom! Thought you had gone into hibernation since you started those play rehearsals every night."

"So does Carol. But she's just as bad with her Singers and Barjche practices. Need a fourth?"

"Sure . . . oh, forget it. Got a Veishea meeting now. No wonder the quarter flies when a guy can't even keep an hour for relaxation."

TWO-HUNDRED students bowed their heads in reverence as a steady, strong voice issued through the hushed silence of the South Ballroom of the Memorial Union. Then they silently, thoughtfully slipped away from the morning chapel service to go to classes. Just the day before, churches overflowed as "All Out to Church Sunday" initiated Religion in Life Week on the Iowa State campus and the first week of winter quarter.

"Windows," the theme for this year, was to provoke thought that would enable students to come just a bit closer to God. Vesper services held in the Memorial Chapel and Embers held in the residences served as thought collecting posts.

This slender steeple points towards the "Windows" of Heaven symbolizing the theme of Religion in Life Week.

Iowa State students reverently bow their heads in prayer at the beginning of the Religion In Life Convocation at State Gym.

A HUSH fell over the State Gym as the speaker stepped to the rostrum. It was the first of the convocations held during Religion In Life Week at Iowa State.

"People are oftentimes too interested in materialism." Heads nodded in humble agreement as listeners applied his statement to their own various lives. "I know through personal experience," continued Dr. Youngdahl, guest speaker for the week from Mount Olive Lutheran Church of Minneapolis, "that people today do not take time to listen to the 'still, small voice of God.'"

ISC's Religion In Life Week

A major part of the program for Religion In Life Week was the series of convocations at which Dr. Youngdahl built his messages around the theme "Looking Up." According to him, the world needs young people "looking up" in order to keep Christian ideals alive. Thousands of students, faculty members and townspeople came to these assemblages and left with spirits uplifted and many new things to think about and apply to their daily lives.

Religion In Life Week was planned by the Religion In Life Central Committee. This committee was elected by the Residence Representatives Council, consisting of one representative from each organized residence on campus.

The week was carried out with the help of the Iowa State Orchestra, Singers, small choral groups and church fellowships. Faculty members were present in each residence one evening of the week to lead discussions on personal responsibilities to God and self.

As the week drew to a close, many were filled with a new vigor to carry them through the quarter, and plans for the spring convocation were underway.

HURRY up, Sal, church starts in 20 minutes. We don't want to be late on 'All-Out-To-Church Sunday.' The publicity work of the Interfaith Council had made this once-a-quarter event known to nearly all ISC students. The Council consists of representatives from each religious group on campus. It sponsors Religion in Life Week, Leadership Workshop and the weekly Union chapel morning services along with other college religious activities.

The south bulletin board in Beardshear displays, by means of bold posters, campus church activities. The posters, combined with a mimeographed list of monthly campus religious programs, are part of the council's publicity. Interfaith Council is chief coordinator of student religious activities and stimulator of cooperation between its member groups.

"You see, that's just what I was trying to point out," came the reply. Free discussion prevails at Interfaith Council meetings.

"Say, isn't that an article about Religion in Life Week? There's Rev. Youngdahl's picture. Wasn't his convocation talk good?"

"HI BARBI, going to Bethany tonight?"
"Sure, Sue, and we're supposed to bring a friend along; the more, the merrier, you know!"

"Say, Barb, hear that you're working on the Church of Christ's Sunday program."

"Yes, and I'm also working with the study class which meets Thursday mornings at 6 a.m. in the Union. A number of students have found that Bible discussion is a good way to begin the day, even if it is early."

Bethany Bible Study at 6 a.m.

SUNDAY night means good food and fellowship at St. John's by-the-Campus Episcopal Church for the student members of Canterbury Club. Each Sunday meal is planned by a different group; club members, therefore, receive a variety of menus. A turn at shopping on Saturday, followed by the actual preparation on Sunday afternoon, gives everyone a chance to show off his talents at the cooking art. Canterbury programs are planned to incorporate the varied interests of club members.

The Gamma Delta's conduct stimulating discussions on religious and campus topics and present talent shows, movies and parties. Their annual Rose Bud Banquet honors graduating seniors. The Christmas Banquet is another of the Gamma Delta's big yearly events.

In the cool mornings on the ISC campus, Newman Club members can be seen going to the Student Center regularly for Mass.

THE banquet was finished. All other awards had been presented. Now a lull of anxious anticipation settled over the delegates to the National Newman Club Convention in Detroit, Michigan. Twelve delegates from Iowa State sat tensely wondering, "Will that glistening trophy be ours?" But finally the National Chaplain began speaking. "It is my pleasure to award this trophy to the most outstanding Newman Club in the United States — the Iowa State College Newman Club of Ames, Iowa!"

"We won, we won!" Amid claps and jubilant voices, the ISC delegates received their trophy.

on the "Meaning of Sex in Marriage." A panel of Roger Williams members aired views on the "Meaning of Engagement."

Eating a "cost" supper, singing spirituals and hymns and participating in worship services completed the Sunday evenings of Baptist youths.

Learning about other faiths helps to give each member better Christian understanding. Catholicism, Judaism and Protestantism were all studied.

The Roger Williams members are assisted by their new full-time student director, Betty Willis. Miss Willis, a graduate of the University of Missouri, attended Andover-Newton Theological school before coming to Ames. Over a "second cup of coffee" each Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning Miss Willis has become well acquainted with student members.

After dinner at Roger Williams the students chatter about the events of the past week. Friendliness prevails as members get acquainted.

"Hands on the knees!" instructed the leader at the after-dinner recreation. Good times are always had by these Westminsterites.

A TRIP to Chicago's slum area, Skid Row, Maxwell Street and the sponsoring of an ISC student, Carol Miller, as an ambassador to Bierut College for Women, Bierut, Lebanon, were two of the major activities of Westminster Fellowship this year.

New friendships mount as students seek to make religion an important part of their college life on Sunday nights from five to seven. And it's not just on Sundays that this student religious organization of the Collegiate Presbyterian Church is open to Iowa State students. Nearly every day holds an opportunity for fellowship and activity at Westminster Center.

Founded in 1913, this religious organization is ever working to promote an intellectually respectable, emotionally sound and constructively active religion.

Westminster For Presbyterians

Participation in the normal church activity along with a unique college experience helps Westminster students accomplish this goal. Group advisor, William H. Henderson, Presbyterian College Pastor, with the help of student leaders, directs the many projects which help to comprise a well-rounded religious program for ISC students.

TWO by two they went, the freshmen, the sophomores and the seniors, also. Up the ramp and through the door of Noah's Ark the students stepped to see what was in the vast store of Wesley Foundation fun and fellowship. Such was the situation at Wesley's first party of the year, open to the whole college, and a direct steal from the famous Bible story. And did students find fun and fellowship.

Following the race up Wesley's ramp came a variety of parties. "Go Wesley, Young Man, Go Wesley" was the theme of a get-acquainted party for freshmen. A scavenger hunt sparked the development of freshman talent and leadership, and winter quarter the busy frosh got their second chance at leadership when they competently directed the foundation and its activities for an entire week. From Sunday noon that group planned interesting discussions, quiet worship, exciting en-

Hands are raised, but not so willingly, in answer to the trick question of the week for volunteer dishwashers. If there are requests for people in yellow shirts, chances are that the ill-fated wearers will soon be dripping with warm dish water. Among their leadership responsibilities Wesley students take charge of the economic planning and the cooking and serving of meals each Sunday night.

The two national service fraternities represented in Wesley are Kappa Phi for girls and Sigma Theta Epsilon for boys. Kappa Phi's keep active by constructing unique favors for hospitals, taking care of the church nursery and sponsoring the local Camp Fire Girls. Religion in Life Week also gets a helping hand from these energetic and enthusiastic gals. Sigma Theta Epsilon members put their broad shoulders behind such projects as helping with church painting, aiding foreign students and performing general work around the church.

The famous Wesley Players offer entertainment to the church and other organizations.

"Come on, have another brownie; don't worry about the calories," says the Wesley student cook as he passes them around at dinner.

Problems of the campus, home town or world are discussed by the girls at the newest addition to the YW program, "Hour Groups."

"Keith, is that the chord we were using the other day?" asked Norm as the YM quartet members worked up a new arrangement to sing.

"MADAME, there's a special on cake mixes today. All profits go to the YWCA Centennial fund. You've a choice of brownie and angel food mixes. How about a box?" encouraged the coed behind the grocery counter. As she handed three boxes to the lady, she smiled broadly. The Iowa State YW pledged a $1,000 cash birthday gift to the National Centennial fund. The above sale was only one fund-raising project; others included a pancake supper and Christmas card, cookie and calendar-book sales. All backed Iowa State's part in the YWCA.

Centennial Year at YWCA

"Hour groups," — a newly-initiated part of the expansion program of the YW, made possible a larger YW membership. These discussion groups enabled coeds to participate in Y although they were busy at regular meeting times. The "Y" is divided into Freshman "Y," four commission groups and numerous committees. During Christmas vacation, 14 delegates attended the National YWCA-YMCA Assembly at Lawrence, Kansas, and helped plan "Y" policies for the next 4 years.

WANT a place to study tonight? How about voicing your opinion on some topic of the day? Or, why not hear a distinguished speaker? All these areas and more are integral parts of the campus YMCA. This group of more than 500 ISC men is dedicated to increasing religious activity on the college campus. The "Y's" actively engaged in activities ranging from a YMCA quartet to sponsoring convocations which featured important speakers. This year Professor Pak Chan headed a series on marriage problems. A freshman discussion group selected the topic, "You, in Search of Yourself," to discuss during the year. Such personal topics as campus drinking were included.

YMCA Keynotes Religion

Members of the harmonious YMCA quartet blended their voices at various banquets and regional "Y" meetings. During the week of January 23rd, under the direction of the General Secretary, Harold Reinhart, the quartet, plus "Y" members paid tribute to the national organization with a full schedule of programs over WOI-TV and KASI radio station.

WHEN they talk about "the team that Bill built," it is ISC's 1955 basketball quintet, as scrappy as any athletes Iowa State ever put on display.

Not yet the winningest team, Bill Strannigan's first edition of Cyclone basketball was perhaps the most colorful in school history. Fans came in record numbers to watch the Cyclones break a few records of their own, fighting the odds and bad breaks—but always fighting.

Their story is one of a team that won 11 games and lost 10, finishing fifth in the Big Seven Conference and third in the pre-season tournament.

Muscles strain as Linn tries for a double wrist lock on his groaning opponent. Pain, registered on the fighting contender, tells the rest.

Chuck Duncan out-streached the Kansas State center to start 40 minutes of play which ended with Iowa State on the short end by one point.

Off at the gun, this Iowa Stater hit the water and sped toward another victory for his team.

But there's more. A record for most points here, and one there, another, and then those things that records don't measure in "mosts."

"The Team That Bill Built"

Things like young men getting out of hospital beds, forgetting flu and playing their hearts out—and winning a game the experts said "can't be won tonight." Then there were the times they played their hearts out and still lost. A free throw with 3 seconds left. Sometimes defeat was worse, but you were still proud of them, weren't you, Coach?

A year ago Bill Strannigan accepted the challenging position as Iowa State's basketball coach.

How he rebuilds dying basketball teams and teaches stingy defenses is legend, and the 1955 season was just the latest chapter in his continued story.

His Cyclones were a short team as teams go these days. So he came up with some old and new ideas for his sharp-eyed speed demons. In the first place, you don't rest on defense—not and play Strannigan's brand of basketball. He's Scotch enough that he wants points yielded mightily grudgingly.

He taught a "hybrid" defense that employed the best features of a man-for-man and zone. The offensive patterns were weaves and a thing that looked like fox-and-goose rings in snow, where the players circle and interchange, then cut through the center — and score.

Or Chuck Duncan hooked efficiently from the center, or Gary Thompson moved behind a friendly screen and jumped for one of those falling-away-from-the-basket shots from afar.

Duncan broke every record in the ISC books and left little doubt that he was the best all-around center in the Big Seven, though one of the shortest at 6-5.

Busy little Gary was one of the conference's outstanding sophomores, changing a few records himself. If he wasn't dazzling fans and foes with acrobatic shots, he was doing it with ball-handling wizardry.

But these two had lots of help. There was Stan Frahm playing defense like the ball was his, and it usually was with half a chance . . . Chuck Vogt out-rebounding the tallest . . . Larry Wetter hitting the long ones when they counted lots . . . Jerry Sandbulte deadly on free throws . . . Don DeKoster under the boards. There were eight others too, challenging to get out on the floor and do their bit. Strannigan had the enviable, yet unenviable job of picking from 15 of "the fightingest kids I ever coached."

Continued next year, Strannigan says.

A "slow" attack ripped Carleton apart 78-60 for Iowa State's season opener as the Cyclones satisfied over 5,000 fans. Gary Thompson needed only 12 shots to cage his seven fielders; as a matter of fact, the entire team was efficient. Biggest surprise of the night was an unexpected starter — Chuck Vogt.

One hundred points against Creighton set an Armory scoring record in the young season. Gary and Duncan rolled along unchecked with 24 and 22.

Unbeaten Drake was next. It wasn't even a race as the Cyclones streaked to a 72-53 win. ISC got off to a 44-24 halftime lead and never let up.

Then came the Big Seven's pre-conference tournament, and a successful one it was for the Cyclones. Opponent No. 1 was Kansas, unbeaten and a perennial favorite. What happened couldn't have been sweeter revenge against a conqueror 12 straight times. Strannigan's scrappers upset Kansas 82-81.

Larry Wetter sinks a right-hand hook early in the Colorado game.

Kansas State players watch as Chuck Duncan dunks a fast-break basket. K-State went on to win 78-77 on a free throw with 3 seconds left.

The shorter Cyclones trailed most of the way, falling as far as 11 points behind late in the game. Duncan and Thompson were a couple of names that had a sellout crowd of 10,500 mildly crazy. It was a team victory, but this pair was mighty prominent.

Duncan hit 34 points and Thompson jealously hoarded the ball during the stall. If there's one thing Gary can do it's dribble — and he can do several things. He hit six free throws in a row during the last 3 minutes, too, giving ISC a 3-point lead. There were some tense moments left, but the main idea was to hold that lead, and it was held.

Two cold shooting spells and two tall Kansas State centers ended ISC's championship chances in the semifinal round, 70-60. Effectively silencing a dangerous Oklahoma one-two scoring punch, 71-64, meant third place in the meet.

Two mid-January losses were one-pointers that were decided on free throws in the final seconds. A standing-room-only crowd of 6,000 watched Kansas State win 78-77 with 3 seconds left; then most of the supporters returned a week later to see a 73-72 victory go to Kansas with 11 seconds remaining. Sandwiched in-between these two, however, was a record-breaking 105-76 romp over Oklahoma. Duncan dunked 36 points through the hoop that night — a new Armory scoring mark that lasted only a few minutes.

Shifted to center when Chuck Duncan fouled out, 5-10 Gary Thompson finished the Colorado game with 26 points. The Cyclones trailed by 16 points at halftime but almost overtook the Buffs.

One of the season's special highlights was a 77-59 trouncing ISC handed Kansas on Coach Phog Allen's home grounds. Chuck Duncan's 37-point burst paced the lopsided triumph, with the Cyclones scoring their final 18 points to Kansas' two. Duncan's total set a mark for him and is the most points ever scored by a Kansas visitor.

Hitting 67 per cent the last half, Iowa State made it two in a row over Drake. Neither team had been able to sweep the series since 1946.

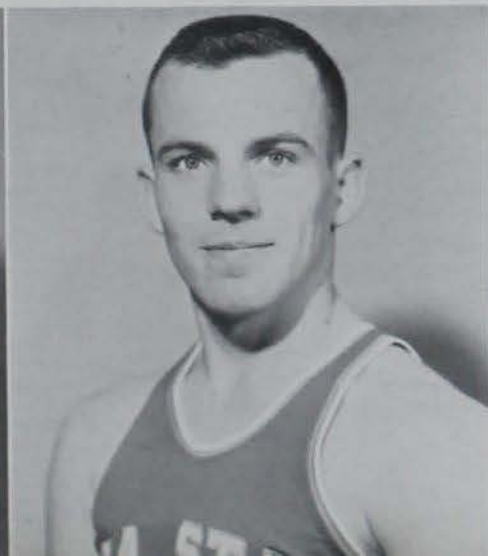

The Nebraska game should rank as one of the great ones in school history. Almost hopelessly riddled by a flu epidemic, the team wasn't given one chance in 10 of winning.

But that word "almost" is almost as unpredictable as any you'll find. There seem to be degrees of almost-ness, and it's mighty hard to measure when mass enthusiasm — or was it hysteria? — steps in.

By way of background, here's the pre-game story Saturday night: Star center Chuck Duncan had been in the college hospital 2 days and was under definite orders not to play. Stan Frahm got up from a sickbed and "looked awfully white." Don De Koster had missed a couple of practices, and Chuck Vogt "hadn't felt good the last of the week." And little Gary Thompson was assigned the pivot job.

Gary couldn't have done much better; seven others played heads-up and hearts-out basketball, and the fans were frankly in a frenzy. The 82-75 upset thrilled everyone but Nebraska.

The game started out with the Cyclones playing furiously and almost no one thinking it could last. "Almost" no one? There were at least eight who thought they could do it. Nebraska took over, but darned if those Cyclones didn't reel off 9 consecutive points.

Thompson cleverly twisted and maneuvered until he had 29 points. He missed his first 10 shots, then unerringly hit eight in a row. Sharing in the dramatic upset were Jerry Sandbulte, Stan Frahm, Chuck Vogt, Larry Wetter, Arnie Gaarde, Don De Koster and Barney Alleman.

Larry Wetter pumps for one of his long set shots. He made it too.

This is one of Chuck Duncan's 20 points against Kansas. One more point was needed as KU won, 73-72, on a free throw with 11 seconds left.

“PERHAPS my greatest!” Those three little words heap a lot of praise on the 1955 Iowa State swim team, because the words were spoken by Coach Jack McGuire. And Jack’s turned out some mighty good teams in the past.

He also thinks the team was the best Iowa State has ever produced, and although there have been some terrific ones, few fans will argue the merits of this year’s Cyclone tankers.

The team lost early meets at Michigan and Michigan State, then avenged the Michigan State defeat in a return meeting. Televised, this meet was a highlight of the season — a 54-39 win.

Then the Cyclones swam past conference foes in typical style, extending a dual win streak to 37.

McGuire assembled the fastest four-man relay ever to navigate 400 yards free-style in a 20-yard pool for the 72-19 dunking of Kansas. The quartet, composed of Jim Valleau, Pete Janss, Sandy Stewart and Jim McKeivitt, covered the distance in 3:24.7 to crack the old American and NCAA standards, both held by Yale. The record bettered the American mark set in 1943 by 2.3 seconds.

An Iowa State swimmer starts out on the last lap of his distance race.

Two yards—glub glub—to go for a pool record. The point-happy Cyclones set several on the way to the best season in history.

Speed master McKeivitt anchored the relay with a phenomenal :49.3.

At Nebraska the top performance was registered by Cyclone Capt. Bob Best who won the 200-yard breast stroke in 2 minutes, 30 seconds. This was believed to have been the best time in the nation this year. Best's mark broke a 2:45.1 pool record.

Swimmers 'Best in ISC History'

The relay team, by winning the 400-yard free style race, the last event of the afternoon, decided the 47-37 win over Oklahoma in the season's final dual. In all, it took eight meet records to down the stubborn Sooners.

Then came the Big Seven conference championships with Oklahoma reversing the outcome. Iowa State did have the individual star, however, as two-time all-American Jim McKeivitt won three races and came within six-tenths of a second of matching the NCAA record for the 150-yard individual medley. For the fourth year, Mike La Mair bettered the record in his back stroke speciality.

McKeivitt led the Cyclones to ninth place nationally in the National Collegiate swimming meet. Only the 1951 team has done better. McKeivitt placed second in the 150-yard individual medley behind world record-holder Al Wiggins of Ohio.

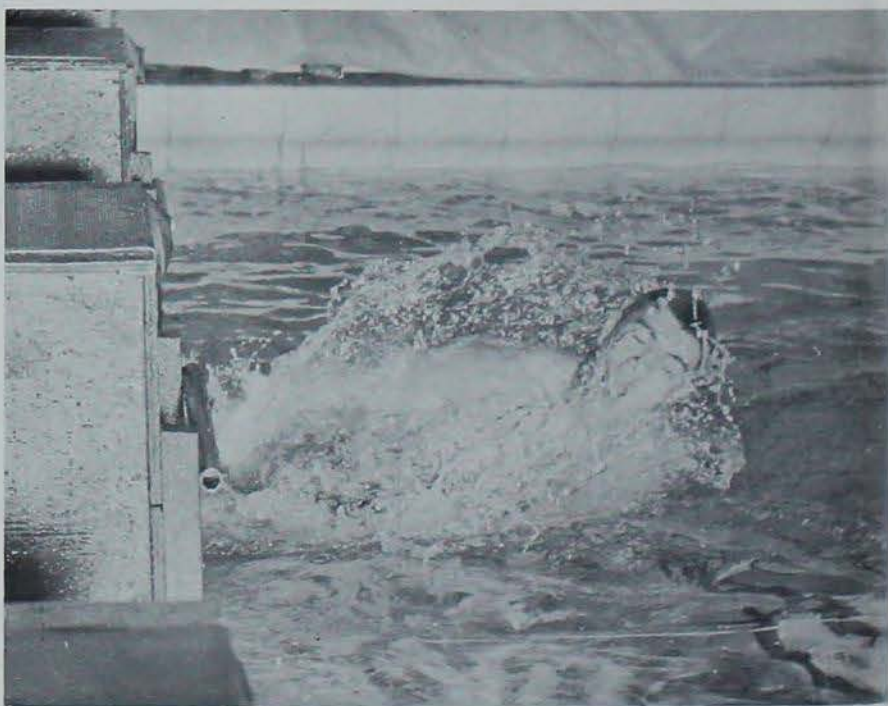

For dual meet competition, the Cyclones compiled a season's won-lost mark of 5 and 2.

Here's a guy who should know where he's going, because if he doesn't, it's a little late to do much about it. Jim De Young's diving.

This is the start of the end of a winning relay team. The anchor man begins his stint that results in more first place points for the Cyclones.

Just a splash and he's headed back for another lap in his sprint.

IN HIS 2 years at Iowa State, wrestling coach Harold Nichols has had the losing team in only one dual match. Oklahoma broke the 13-game win skein with a 22-5 victory of its own late in the season.

Except for the defeats to Oklahoma in dual and conference competition, the Cyclones with the "zip and go" trademark did right well.

SEASON'S RECORD

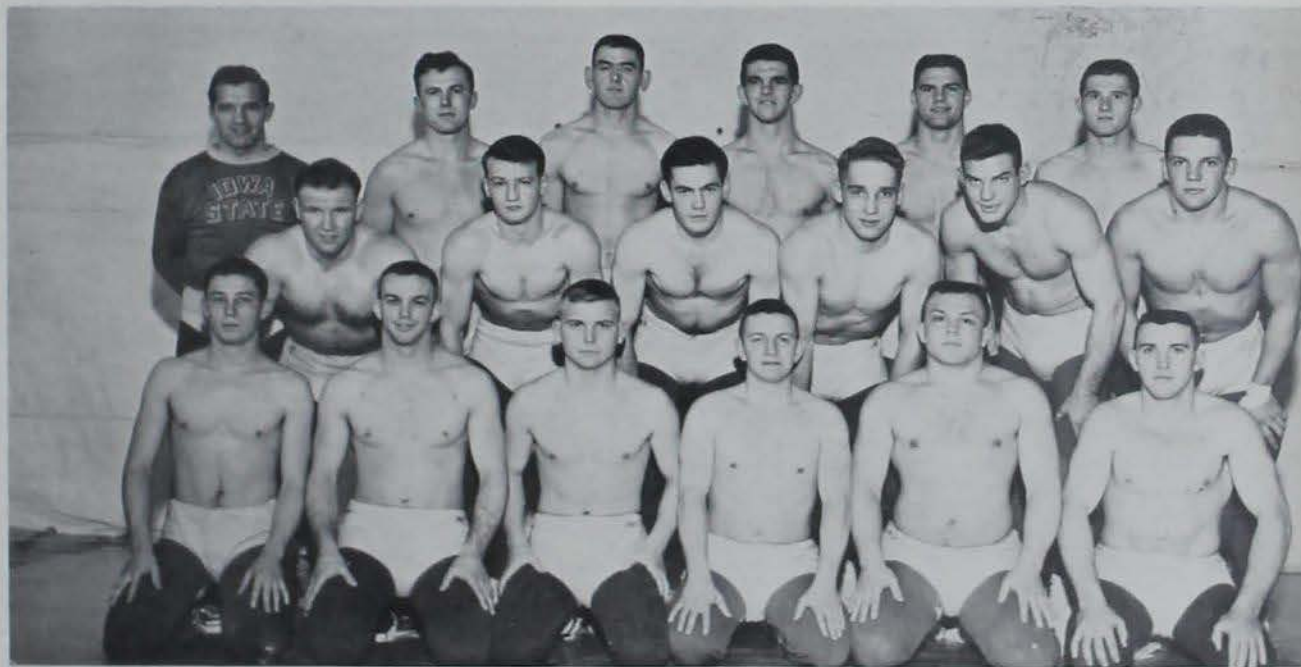

Iowa State, 14	Colorado A & M, 12
Iowa State, 25	Mankato State, 8

Another Success for the Matmen

Darrell Miller, 136-pound Cyclone wrestler, was the standout of the AAU tournament. He outpointed Dean Sheetz for the class title. After beating Sheetz (a former Big Seven champion), Miller was voted the most valuable wrestler trophy.

Two other Cyclones earned individual titles, but the unattached wrestlers did not bid for the team title. Gene Frank took top honors at 191 pounds. Don Jensen, heavyweight, won in the final match.

From the regional meet, Nichols took three of his top wrestlers to the National Collegiate meet at Cornell University for a bid at national honors. Don Hall, Miller and Kent Townley competed.

Townley, 132-pound champion of the Big Seven, had only a tie to mar his record during the dual season. Six of his seven wins were by fall. Miller won seven, lost one and finished second in the conference for his weight. Hall took over for injured Hugh Linn in the 130-pound class, finishing with a 5-2 record.

Bob Formanek, the Big Seven's 157-pound champ, suffered mouth injuries in the regional AAU meet at Omaha and was advised not to compete in the national meet.

During the frosh-varsity contest, Bob Champion and Gaylen Trasmier wrestle for a win in the 167-pound class.

THE Cyclone thinclads were beaten only once in dual meets during the winter indoor season. Coached by George Brentnall in the absence of Burl Berry, the trackmen had one of the most successful seasons in several years.

They were second in a triangular meet with Colorado and Kansas State and lost to Chicago but topped Minnesota of the Big Ten, Nebraska and Drake.

Five meet records were set during the season. In the Chicago meet Jim Stewart high-jumped 6 feet, 3 inches; Hank Philmon broad-jumped 22 feet, 1½ inches; and Hal Mullison cleared the bar spectacularly at 12 feet, 11 inches.

Records Set in Five Meets

Philmon turned in a 23 foot, 1¼ inch broad jump record at Nebraska, and high jumper Bob Clark went 6 feet, 2¾ inches in the triangular meet.

Consistent winners throughout the season were Clark, John Stodgell, Philmon and the relay team. Clark won the high jump three times and the shot put once. Stodgell won the 440-yard dash three times and the 60-yard dash once. Philmon was broad jump victor three times, and the relay team picked up first place points three times during season competition.

West Stadium won the all-college men's title, 41-39, over Phi Kappa Psi, the Class A champs. The coeds took their turn at the cage sport, too. They proved their combination of athletic skill with gracefulness detracts nothing from their womanly charm.

Roberts Hall took women's honors by a close 45-42 win over Elm Hall. Mahala Brown was the top pointer for the Roberts Hall girls with 21 points.

Billiards was another popular sport on the individual level. An unheralded freshman — Gary Carstens — shot his way to the ISC intercollegiate championship with a 96-66 final score over Ted Axland. Carstens went on to national competition.

West Stadium, Roberts Champs

For the women badminton was popular. Marian Rosebrough won the singles championship defeating Erma Nicholson. Miss Rosebrough teamed with Sue Cady for the doubles title over a pair of sorority sisters, Beth Holl and Sandra McFarland.

A GUST of the cold evening wind whipped the heavy west Union door shut behind the couple. "You've got 20 minutes before your interview," he said looking at his watch. "What shall we do to kill time?"

"Let's go down and watch kids bowl," she suggested. He nodded, and hand in hand they went through the door at the right. A ball plopped into While waiting for his date, the boy wandered through the halls of the Union. He stopped for a moment in the gallery to look over the latest exhibit, then on downstairs to catch the last part of a wrestling match in the TV lounge.

A few minutes later the two of them ambled leisurely down the stairs. "How did the interview go?" he asked.

"Pretty good, I think," she replied. "Maybe I'll get that Veishea dance job after all."

As they passed the doors to Great Hall he suddenly exclaimed, "Hey, I forgot to tell you, that dance tomorrow night is here in Great Hall at 8:30!"

IOWA STATE COLLEGE alumni are an important part of a great triangle partnered with Iowa State College and the ISC students. Contributions from several thousand alumni contributors makes possible something "extra" for the college that could not be budgeted from regular state appropriations. The Alumni Fund, started in 1932, is part of the Iowa State College Alumni Association. The Board of Trustees selects the most worthwhile objectives and informs the alumni of them. A WHIFF of printer's ink hit the group of wide-eyed girls as they entered the press building and halted in front of two bronze busts. From left and right came the sounds of clicking typewriters, the latest hit tunes and voices.

"Oh, there's the Gander office! I wonder if they have any of the jokes they don't print."

"Dick's Scientist work is in there, too."

The girls peeked in the office and then went on to the big room at the end of the hall.

"Golly, look at all the pictures! Do they ALL go in the Bomb? . . . I like the music here."

On their way out, they spied their goal.

"There's the Homemaker office."

A girl at the desk looked up. "If you're looking for Homemaker training, it's in the Daily office."

They scurried down to the other big room which was experiencing a rare moment of silence. A real newspaper office, though!

"Hey, kids, read that crazy bulletin board!"

The Homemaker editor came then, and the meeting started. One girl turned and smiled happily to her neighbor. "Sure do like the smell here!"

Journalism Students Find Work Here

It's deadline time again. Two of ISC's many journalistically-minded students check the bulletin board for those all-important assignments.

Two students enter the Press Building — only a small part of the constant stream of humanity passing in and out during the year.

An all-too-familiar sight to many Bomb staff members — the morning sun glistening from last night's coke bottles at four o'clock — A.M.!

The presses are constantly at work in the basement of the Press Building, as many books, magazines and newspapers are printed.

Journalism students receive practical training in all phases of printing and writing. Here a student works at the make-up table.

"Caught in the act" — one photographer snaps another taking an informal shot of a publications staff at work on a paper-littered desk.

AND FIRST, the editor's report," commented the president as he opened the Bomb Publication Board meeting. Eyes turned to the editor as the seven members representing their divisions listened to reports of the yearbook's progress. Dummies had been "sent down" . . . photographers were all caught up on final prints, but contacts were not coming in. "Just a little behind, but we'll be caught up soon."

Business manager reported that sales were "coming right along," and "we're pushing the record sales this month. Expenses seem to be running right about where we expected them."

The discussion turned from the progress of the current book to prospects for next year's editor and business manager. Then the members channeled their ideas toward the annual spring banquet.

The book soon will be to press. The custom has been to entertain the staff at a banquet when the Bomb is finished; do I hear a motion to that effect?" "I so move." "Meeting adjourned."

Everyone seems to be thirsty at the dinner before the Bomb Publication Board meeting when reports of yearbook progress are due.

"HEY, JO, we're almost out of paper. We'd better get some pretty soon."

"Better go in and talk to Hardnose Nelson next door."

Hardnose Nelson, more commonly known as Chuck, is the man who controls the purse strings for the Bomb. Assisted by a staff of seven, he administers the annual Bomb budget of over 38,000 dollars.

One of the main activities of the business staff at the beginning of the year is the signing of contracts. Contracts must be closed with companies to do the engraving, binding and cover. Also the staff must send out contracts for space in the Bomb to the individual residences and organizations.

Among the important activities of the business staff is their fall sales campaign. "Have you bought your Bomb yet?" — with salesmen in each residence and at many Freshman Week events such as registration and freshmen physicals, the poor frosh just don't have a chance to escape.

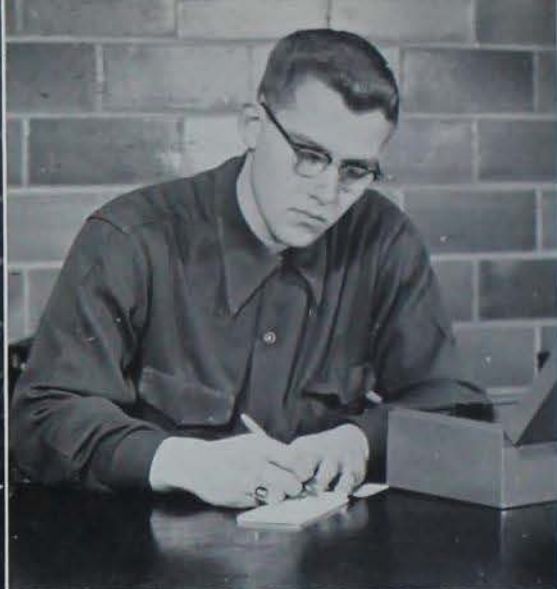

Due to the feverish efforts of their salesmen, the business staff distributes between 5,000 and 6,000 copies of the annual each year.

"Is this the right way to sort these slips, Ruth?" asks Mary during an afternoon of hard work by the business staff secretaries.

CHUCK NELSON, Business Manager

JON RAKOW, Assistant Business Manager

Towards the end of spring quarter the business office is flooded by the newly-delivered Bombs, crowding the staff into the hall.

Business Staff Controls Purse

This condition continues until, through pleas broadcasted, printed in the Daily or posted on bulletin boards, ISC students finally come and pick up their Bombs.

Then, with their work finally completed for the year, the members of the business staff can pat themselves resoundly on the back and close up the office for the year.

"And now what about that sales campaign for next fall? ..."

CRISP leaves sailed groundward, and the fragrance of an autumn fire drifted through the open window. Eyes of the Bomb Editorial staff were on the deadlines being explained by the editor. But it was difficult to linger long over a winter quarter deadline with plans for the fall reunion picnic, the football game Saturday or the Homecoming decoration so near at hand. "No sweat; we'll get it done in plenty of time," reflected in the staff's impatient and furtive glances toward the window. "Deadlines? Don't sweat 'em."

So the year began ... fewer and fewer were the leaves that drifted past the south window.

Bomb?" questioned one senior after another until after Thanksgiving; by then, all the senior pictures were taken, and the problem shifted to pasting them up.

The sports editor glanced up from his copy to watch the sleet as it pounded the window, closed now to the winter wind. He turned to the engravings editor, "Have you got the pictures for Dummy 12? I've got to get those cut lines done."

"Here they are, but I've got problems. We were supposed to have that cut of the baseball staff by tomorrow, and I can't find it anywhere."

While snow piled up on the window-sill, copy piled up in the section editor's files. Furtive "re-

Editorial Staff Meets Deadlines

Lights streamed through the Bomb office window as staff members pounded typewriters night after night and into the early morning hours. Few glanced at the robins perched on the window-sill as the final push to get that last dummy proof-read was on. Presses rolled . . . the staff cleared its files and left the office door ajar as they left.

It would soon be time for leaves to fall again.

THE VARIOUS student publications of Iowa State College are now being published with the use of new printing machinery. The purchase of the new equipment was facilitated by the action of the Daily Publications Board.

Procurement of machinery was made possible through collections from student publications, with one-third of the total coming from the student newspaper, the Iowa State Daily.

Daily Board Makes Purchase

The board is made up of five student members, one from each of the divisions, chosen by the student body at the spring all-college elections. These student members act as liaisons between their respective councils and the Daily. The two other voting members of the board are non-students.

The Daily editor and business manager, chosen by the board, are non-voters required to report Daily progress to that body.

Board membership is completed by Mr. Frank T. Berry, Manager of the Iowa State Daily, and two ex-officio members from the journalism department.

The Daily Editor and Business Manager check over the new budget set-up by the Daily Publications Board as a member watches them.

JACKIE WAGNER, Daily Business Manager

THE DAILY Business Staff is forever in search of ad salesman recruits, for selling advertising is essential to Daily support. The activity fund is also a contributing factor in the publication of a Tuesday-through-Saturday newspaper.

Sales of local and national advertising often make eight-page Dailies possible . . . instead of the usual four-page editions. Salesmen contact merchants, work out promotion angles, design layouts and take care of complaints. The business manager and three advertising managers lay out ad material in a fake copy, called a "dummy," the evening before distribution. Remaining space is then filled in with editorial material. This includes regular news stories and sports as well as features, social news and editorials.

Business Staff Promotes Ads

Classified ads are another part of the total advertising picture. Both students and Ames people run classifieds pertaining to everything from household equipment and clothing to lost and found items.

DICK REISEM, Editorial Editor of Daily

WHEN YOU hear the bang of typewriters and the ring of telephones combined with frantic cries for copy, you can only be in one place — the newsroom of the Iowa State Daily.

Here students take time between classes to write stories and to scurry around campus covering assignments received from the "beat sheets." Inside a semicircular table called the "rim" sits the issue editor. It is here that all copy is edited. A few yards from this "rim" is the desk of the managing editor. He assigns "beats" and is in charge of all reporters.

Editorial Staff Creates Copy

The editor has a private office. He decides the editorial policy of the paper and contributes his opinion to the editorial page.

Proof readers, who read the final copy "gallies" for correction, eat their dinner in the newsroom as they work. "Anyone for a hamburger?" is a well-worn phrase used almost every night as many staff members go out to dinner, only to return shortly to set type for the morning edition.

Reporters and the editorial staff finally leave the Press Building about 7:30 p.m. after the paper is finally "put to bed."

the editorship fall quarter. Gordon left in mid-quarter for duty in the United States Army leaving "Moon" with the combined jobs of editor and managing editor.

Winter quarter "Moon" was reappointed editor, and Jim Ross became managing editor. Dick Reism was selected editorial editor.

Spring quarter opened with a sophomore edition of the paper. The staff was composed of students from Journalism 221 and 222. Larry Campbell took over as editor for this quarter, and an editorial board was established. Board members wrote the editorials and helped plan editorial campaigns.

Typical of the humor prevailing in the newsroom is the sign hanging above the Daily office door . . . "The Iowa State Daily Worker, Ministry of Truth."

But the "Ministry of Truth" sign was not entirely in error. The Daily Editorial page served as a sounding board for student opinion, thus bringing out the "truth" by means of its well-filled "letters-to-the-editors" column. During the year student letters commented almost endlessly on all phases of the current problems of the campus — Veishea, "technocracy," the parking problem. Thus the Daily truly served as the "voice" of Iowa State students.

The Iowa Agriculturist is a closely-knit organization of students interested in agricultural journalism. THE MAGAZINE for engineering students of Iowa State College serves as a media to express individual ideas, to inform about new inventions and to explain about engineering in general. This year's technical articles concerned topics like future automobiles, developments in rocket propulsion, nuclear physics and modern photography. Satires and humorous themes by the "Old Dog" editor round out the content of this publication.

"Why don't we put that joke in the 'Old Dog' section of the next Engineer, Duane?" inquired Business Manager, Sandy Wolfe.

The editorial staff localizes the magazine's scope by writing editorials on current problems facing the Iowa State student. The editor, Duane Renken, wrote an editorial on the problems of student cooperation. Wayne Haegele, the events editor, presented his views on student instructor selection; and the production manager, Jim Klemme, emphasized the values of participation in extra-curricular activities.

Articles for the Engineer are written by anyone having a good writing aptitude and, more important, the willingness to spend extra hours at work. The "I. E." award is given to those staff members who have worked for the publication for three quarters or more.

Two awards of 25 dollars each are given to writers for the best technical and non-technical articles appearing in the Iowa Engineer during the year. These are presented at the annual journalism honors banquet.

Though the job of producing the Iowa Engineer is time-consuming, workers also found time for play. This year's newly appointed staff members celebrated the beginning of their respective terms-of-office with a picnic at the Ledges State Park in Boone.

Scientist staff members relax beneath the shadow of the ever-dreaded deadline schedule and survey the results of all their labors.

SENDING issues to South America is a monthly occurrence at the Scientist office. The circulation of this publication covers all of the western hemisphere in addition to members of the Iowa State College Science Division.

Publication of the magazine is made possible by cooperation of nearly 30 staff members, all students in Science, who plan and write each of the eight monthly issues.

The Scientist magazine features articles of the many science fields within the major science curriculum. Articles are intended to broaden the scope of readers in other areas as well as in areas of their own major interest. To keep Iowa State students informed about discoveries and job requirements of major science industries is also a function which the magazine attempts to fulfill. Campus highlights and human interest stories along with science fiction narratives provide interesting variety in Scientist content.

FAMILIAR campus sounds can now be heard on the "Cardinal Cuts" record which has been produced to supplement the Bomb. Now students will not only be able to see and read about the highlights of the year, but will also be able to listen to the major events of their college days.

A staff of 12 led by Chuck Nelson worked together to produce this extended play 45-rpm record. The 16-minute record includes the football notes, ISC Marching Band, Christmas tree lighting with the Iowa State Singers, Religion in Life Week speeches, the merriment and laughter with Varieties, the Concert Band tour, Veishea highlights and climaxing statements by Dr. Hilton, President of Iowa State.

HAVE YOU written a literary masterpiece lately? If so, turn it in to the Sketch Editorial Board. They will read it, pass judgment, and who knows — it may be published. Sketch consists of all-student creative writings. It is the only magazine of its type published at Iowa State. Poetry and prose, both light and heavy, can be found collected in this booklet. It honors the literary work of talented students and enables such to be enjoyed by all ISC students.

Sketch Features Student Writing

How can one become a member of the Sketch Editorial Board? Two members are selected by the English Department, and 12 are elected from the student body by the publications board.

Sketch sponsors a Veishea open house annually.

MUSIC CAME to Iowa State so frequently during the year that "Going to the concert tonight?" was asked as often as "Going to the Union?"

Soprano Irene Jordan filled State Gymnasium with her vocal talents and enthusiastic admirers of her works in opera, radio and the concert stage. Lovers of Victor Herbert discovered an evening of unequalled enjoyment of his show tunes and other unforgettable Herbert melodies . . . music for memories. Rafael Mendez appeared with the Iowa State Concert Band and put his trumpet to work thrilling listeners with brilliant clear tone and individual arrangements. Stylized progressive jazz was the word as far as Dave Brubeck was concerned . . . a quiet, reserved, effective improvised treatment.

DEAR Mom, School's really coming along fine now; sure am glad that I came to Iowa State; they've got just what I want. And, Mom, you were wrong about not being able to get any fine arts culture at a technical school. You should see all the music and dramatic groups that are here.

Why, there's loads of talent right among the kids themselves. They've got a real great-sounding choral group called Singers that is so popular and professional-sounding that you have to try out for it. I could never have made that, I'm sure, but you know how I like to sing, so I got into Festival Chorus. We're doing The Messiah at Christmas time.

And remember how you said all Joe's ability on the clarinet would go to waste here? Well, is he ever going to town. He's in the Marching Band and plays second clarinet in the Orchestra. He'll have to go some to gain the first chair. You should hear the great music they put out, and does that band ever look sharp on the football field.

Tomorrow night I'm going to try out for a play, but if I don't make that I'm going to see what I can do in Radio Workshop. Actually, there's so much to take in, I can't possible get around to it all. Right now I'm on my way to hear a good debate. I'll write later.

Love, Pat

With all the color and sparkle originally written into the music, a Victor Herbert Festival brought fine semi-classical music to ISC.

Robert McCowen counts the raised hands as the Iowa State Singers practice in the early evening for the dress rehearsal of SOV.

THERE'S MUSIC in the air whenever the Iowa State Singers get together. A man passing Morrill Hall stops to listen for awhile — to listen to what is going on inside. But he hears only a sampling of what the Singers actually do — preliminary scales and exercises as voices rise and fall in unison. "Just once more please, tenors." Bits of humor are inserted by Singers director, Robert McCowen — laughter is fun and so is music. But the casual observer misses all this — what he hears are voices blending together in "Bells of Iowa State" or dancing gaily through "Hoop-de-doo." "Sounds great — I'll have to be sure to hear more of this."

Figures clad in overcoats, scarves and mittens clustered together in the chilly autumn darkness, adding their musical interlude to the Homecoming Pep Bar-B-Que. Shivering and chattering teeth were not even noticed as over 200 voices joined in an enthusiastic rendition of "Dry Bones."

Harmonies From ISC Singers

A mammoth Christmas tree suddenly became a spectacle of blazing colored lights reflecting on new white snow. From the steps of Beardshear voices rose in joyous Christmas anthems. Amid flickering flashlights and sparkling snow, crowds heard the Singers welcome the Christmas season.

A sophisticated scene — tuxedos and black formals and a winter concert of musical favorites. "My formal wasn't finished until 10 minutes before concert time, but I guess I'm not the only one — sewing machines surely were busy last night." Hectic preparations certainly weren't noticeable in the professional presentation. The sidewalk lingerer of a few weeks before was amazed at the improvement. Music for everyone — "Brigadoon" selections, "Serenade to Music" by the whole chorus, groups and soloists.

The night before the beginning of spring quarter brought the Singers back from their spring tour of northern Iowa, and what stories they had to tell about parties, skits and concerts.

The reeds and French horns of the Symphony Orchestra blend during a soft passage; brasses wait out a musical rest in the score.

LATE ONE fall night the Iowa State College Symphony Orchestra returned by bus from its annual concert tour to northern Iowa and southern Minnesota. The suitcase-laden members started for home discussing the successful trip, which included a banquet and stunt night before the concert in Clarion. Skits by each of the sections and presentation of nonsense awards made up an evening of fun.

ISC Symphony Orchestra

Early in December the orchestra participated in the presentation of the "Messiah," under the direction of Dr. Edgar. Accompanying outstanding soloists, playing several concerts and presenting the spring Music Honors Banquet helped to complete another musical year.

THIS winter quarter the Concert Band for the first time charged admission to one of its concerts. This new policy raised money for a trip by the Marching Band to Colorado next fall to help spirit the Cyclones to victory over the Buffaloes. At each of the year's three concerts a varied program from classics to contemporary music is presented, Frank A. Piersol directing.

Concert Band Hears Mendez

The trumpet's clear high notes pierced the air of the State Gymnasium as Rafael Mendez was accompanied by the Concert Band. This handsome guest artist thrilled the ISC audience with his brilliant technique.

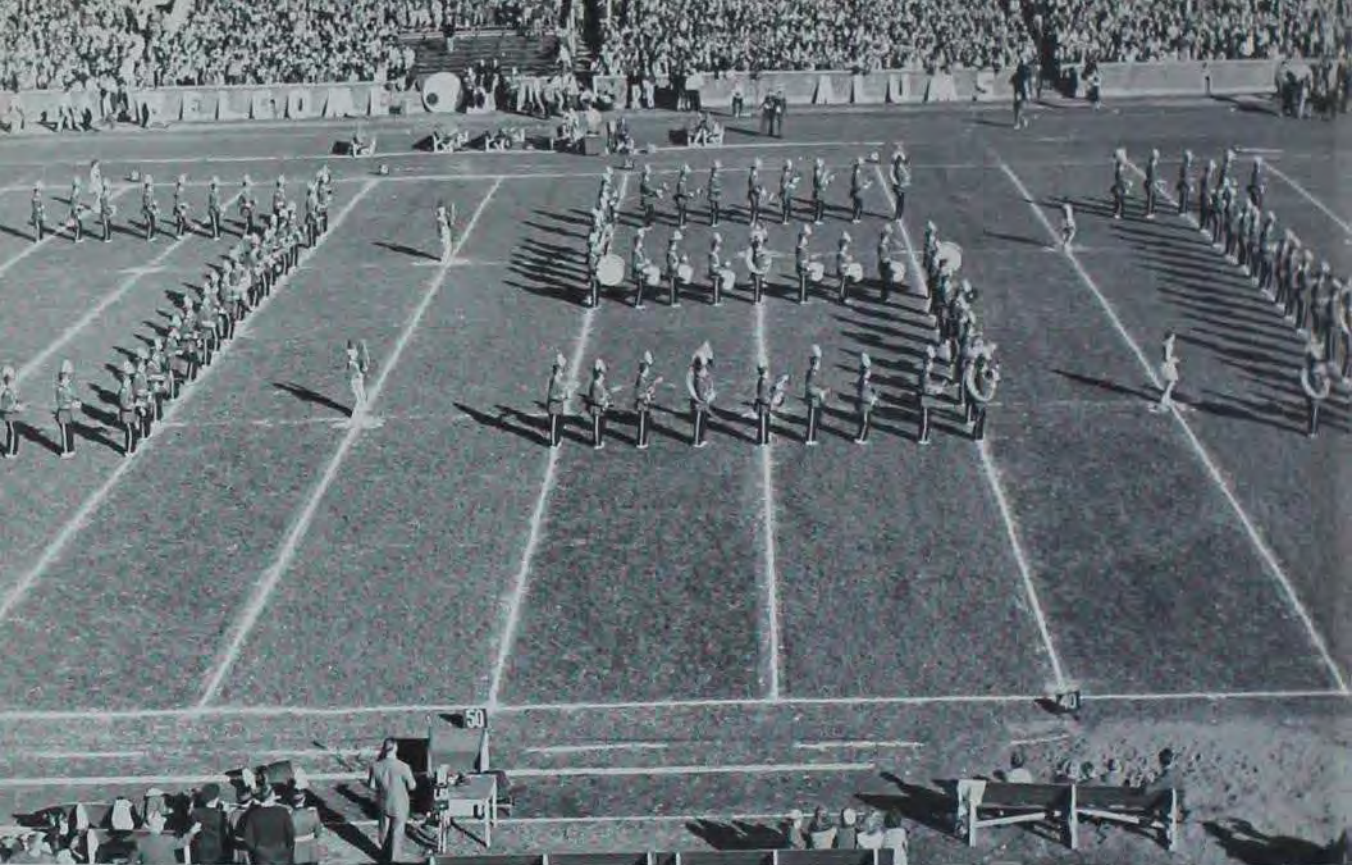

The Concert Band has both women and men in its three sections of woodwind, brass and percussion instruments. Its 80 members are selected after stiff competitive tryouts.

Tympani thunders as the tempo increases; the grand crescendo climbs to a finale, then ends abruptly as the audience applause begins.

The orchestra forms the background music for the Bach Concerto for two violins, being played by Leo Kucinski and Ilza Niemack.

Strains of "Oh we will fight, fight . . ." can still be heard from the football field as the Marching Band stands in the "ISC" formation.

"LADIES AND gentlemen, presenting the Iowa State Marching Band," the speaker announced at the stadium as the half-time entertainment began. "The band will do the formation of 'Cut Down the Old Pine Tree' in honor of the Fiftieth Anniversary of Forestry at Iowa State."

Iowa State Marching Band

The entertainment concluded with the band forming a huge birthday cake with the ISC Singers acting as frosting.

At the first football game of the season the Freshmen Marching Band was introduced. This band met for the first time on Thursday afternoon and was organized, drilled, uniformed and playing and marching with precision by Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

In their many-colored uniforms, about 2,500 high school band members marched onto the field during High School Band Day at ISC.

The college marching band, under Professor Frank Piersol's direction, has only five women members — bell lyre players and majorettes.

The members of Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha enjoy singing around the piano whether their music ability be vocal or not.

TWO LARKS are sitting in a tree outside Music Hall. Ah, listen to their music. Wait, they're not doing the singing; that lovely music is coming from Music Hall. It's the members of Sigma Alpha Iota, the women's professional music honorary. No wonder the music sounds good. These women are chosen from all Iowa State coeds for their musical ability. When practicing for All-State Day, they met and enjoyed blending their voices with other state chapters.

“THE Thirteenth Chair” is not a seat number in a Beardshear classroom. It was just one of several plays produced by Iowa State Players this year. Members of this group gain membership through two quarters of general work at the theater or by carrying out two major responsibilities in one quarter. Major responsibilities consist of holding leading roles in a campus play or assuming the manager’s job. Once a quarter Players hold business meetings. Other meetings feature speakers who keep the students informed on theater happenings. Miss Fredrica Shattuck of the Iowa State English Department spoke on the history of the ISC Lab Theater at one of these meetings.

“Our Town,” with its traditional gloom of death, was presented by Players this year. “The Man Who Came To Dinner” and stayed quite awhile was their third play. Only after about 5 weeks of hard work on scenery, parts, advertising and props are the plays open to the public. Frank

Not another phone call for his girl! How will the poor fellow ever get to propose to her if he is always interrupted in "The Telephone"?

A face-lifting is being given to the props this year by the Players. Some needed repairs and others had to be discarded. The sorting of the props, which are now stored behind the Green Room, will aid in their more efficient use in future plays. A new lighting system in the theater has been installed and put to use this year by Players.

Adding the finishing touches to the Green Room project, begun last year, is one way that the artistic talent of the Players has been used. This room is located beneath the theater proper.

In spring the group again sponsored the Dublin Players. Audiences at this organization's performances saw Shaw's "Juno and the Paycock" on Friday night and the "Devil's Disciple" on Saturday night.

Each Wednesday night Film Theater, another Players project, is enjoyed by students. American and foreign pictures are selected and shown. The price of a season ticket has not changed and six or eight films are shown for about one dollar and twenty-five cents.

The Iowa State Players travel to nearby towns at various times during the year in order to see a variety of different productions. The entire group often travels to Des Moines and the KRNT Theater to watch other actors in passing road shows. Such social gatherings help the Players become better acquainted.

The bareness of the stage facilitates frequent scene shifts in "Our Town." George, in an upstairs window, listens to the women.

DEBATORS this year has been competing in the Intercollegiate Debate contest with other midwestern states. The ISC team has traveled to South Dakota, Illinois, Nebraska and throughout Iowa to debate with other college teams. The "Recognition of Red China" was the intercollegiate debate topic. It was resolved that the United States should extend diplomatic recognition to the Communist government of China.

The Debators are not only interested in debating but in all forms of speaking. Discussions, general speaking, poetry reading and other forms are demonstrated and used at their weekly meetings. Some meetings are open to the general public.

Debators Discuss Red China

Debators "I" Award is presented spring quarter at the organization's annual spring banquet. The awards are presented in accordance with the number of points won in various debating activities during the past year. The outstanding members are chosen for membership into Delta Sigma Rho, national forensics honorary.

Practice sessions are held on campus before the Debators participate in actual debates. Before-hand preparation of "pro" and "con" sides is an item of great importance in carrying on successful debates.

The children's program is just one of the three types of programs prepared by Radio Workshop. Half-hour adult and experimental programs are also prepared by more advanced club members.

A Young Mans Fancy . . .

SALLY AND Jim walked hand-in-hand across central campus, she with a cardigan casually slung about her shoulders and he with a windbreaker tucked under his arm. Beardshear poured out its afternoon classes. Elated students through with classes rushed past on their way to assorted meetings, picnics, the library, to a show or perhaps home to study; those with classes dawdled along. Sally glanced about enjoying the fresh campus green. As a few of her misguided steps struck the lawn, a loud speaker blared: "Hey, keep off the grass!" Sally jumped.

Jim laughed. "That's just the P.A. system. They're trying to get the lawns in top condition for Veishea."

Veishea, she thought. What a wonderful thing. She'd never seen it before, but she'd been working hard on committees, floats and open houses like everyone else. She'd met Jim while working on that committee, in fact. He'd asked her to the Military Ball; later he'd surprised her by meeting her after Sor-Dor. What fun it would be to take in all the Veishea events with him.

Jim interrupted her thoughts. "How about some tennis?"

No excuses. I saw you playing in P.E."

"But I've really not learned yet," came the feeble protest.
"You're just looking for an excuse to see the sunbathers."

"It's tennis or be my partner for the Scotch golf tournament coming up," came the firm reply.

"Say, I'd like that. I used to play with Dad a little."
"Great. And tennis is just what you need to limber up."
Reaching the dorm, she ran in to change. "Well, roommate! See you're headed for another picnic."
"Yep, my divisional club is roughing it tonight at Brookside. By the way, your formal pictures are ready. I got mine and gave one to Joe; doggone, did you know that his formal is scheduled for the same night as Bob's? Boy am I mad. Hope you voted for Veishea Queen today. Gotta leave now. Bye."

"Sure did; be seeing you." Sally grabbed her racket and followed her roommate out. Golly, she'd have to make up her mind about the all-college elections, too. There were so many things going on spring quarter . . . so many things to do — and to think about. Who could ask for more wonderful weather? And studies? Well.

"Oh, Jim! I didn't think you'd be back so soon. Ready to go?"

"I'LL NEVER be able to smile. I just know I'm going to stumble, too."

"You'll do fine, and you look wonderful. Just be natural. Now don't keep your escort waiting."

After a final glance into the full-length mirror and the patting of a stray hair into place came a swish of petticoats and a clatter of high heels. The girl who descended the stairs was a picture of true coed beauty.

Just such a girl plus a hundred similar girls underwent careful scrutiny which finally led to the determination of eight Bomb Beauty finalists. The judges asked questions... she hoped they wouldn't notice her shaking answers. Everyone present was a campus beauty; the competition would be keen, and there was another group coming. Just one more parade past the judges . . . then home. She dared not hope, just wait.

Eddie Chooses Bomb Beauties

Judges deliberated slowly and with much care. When the final decisions were made, eight exuberant girls left the phones in breathless excitement. Their chances had jumped to 50 per cent. Now would be the real test of waiting.

But the waiting didn't involve just remaining by the telephone. There were numerous sittings for photographs and those television appearances sprinkled with modeling.

Finally, that Tuesday did roll around. Pictures of the finalists had been sent to Eddie Fisher who selected the top four. The four ladies of his choice were announced in a full-page spread in the Iowa State Daily. Four exclamations of delight echoed about the campus on that day.

Later on, the telephone wires buzzed . . . "Hello, Mom, this is your 1955 Bomb Beauty calling."

"How will we ever decide. They're all beauties." The judges ponder each contestant carefully as she parades before them once, then twice.

IT WAS just after noon. Lunches were over for the day. Open windows let in the first spring breezes, and sidewalks and lawns were becoming crammed with midday relaxers.

The sound of a jeep-mounted loud speaker penetrated: "Vote today. All-college elections today. Don't forget your activity tickets today."

And from that day, the student government, in the form of Cardinal Guild, came to rest in the hands of Dick Stanley and Dick Hansen. From that day the Guild office . . . just one of many rooms on the second floor in the Union . . . became a virtual second home to these student leaders, while the blue bulletin board that covers one entire wall became their daily newspaper.

With work underway evidences of progress came in four major areas. Guild had grown stronger internally by reducing 21 standing committees to 8 functional ones. The body finally was out of the red.

As the year grew older, final exam procedure for seniors was decided, the cardinal mascot was chosen and mailboxes were put in the Union for residences. Perhaps best-known were the new 10:30 hours on Sundays for women.

Then, that last and important function, to orientate new Guild members and finally, "Who'd like to help write the Guild report?"

Applause thundered throughout Great Hall as the booming voice of Louie Armstrong pleaded "Give me a kiss to build a dream on."

THE CROWDS packed their way into Great Hall and waited impatiently. Then he, with the familiar white handkerchief and shiny golden horn, appeared. Wild applause deafened; and soon clear, powerful notes from the trumpet-filled the hall . . . "Basin Street Blues." Toes tapped; heads and shoulders bounced to the beat. Jazz enthusiasts revelled in the performance of the field's expert, Louis Armstrong, Iowa State's guest artist. Velma Middleton, voluptuous vocalist, combined her low voice with that of the "Satchmo" for "Baby, It's Cold Outside."

Stern, Armstrong Thrill Audiences

From jazz to classics . . . Isaac Stern appeared to conclude the Artist Concert series. The mood shifted from foot-tapping enthusiasm to a more reserved, less demonstrative appreciation. A hush fell; true lovers of the classics were entranced by "America's greatest violinist." There was a certain restful interlude as Mr. Stern played selections by Mozart, Brahms and other music masters.

These were two great entertainers . . . each with a distinctive style . . . offering musical contrasts to the campus and bringing music and entertainment to everyone spring quarter.

Louie Armstrong, his trumpet and voice, were much in demand as was evidenced by his many radio and TV appearances.

"Dance? Love to, but I love to listen even more." Veishea dancers clammer for more of Ralph Flanagan's listenable music on the terrace.

COMBINED values of practical experience and classroom study prepare members of ISC's Army ROTC for responsible positions in the country's military reserve.

Six weeks of summer camp following his junior year give each man a chance to display his abilities under rugged field conditions resembling those encountered in actual battle. These training periods, varying in length and type, range from 1 to 3 days in length and include occasional night expeditions. Divided into different groups, the men carry out realistic battle procedure, including the setting-up of combat areas and actual firing. Advance groups scout strategic positions, set up guns and establish communications. Rotating assignments determine those who will be in charge so that each man receives experience in several positions. Studying accompanies combat maneuvers in order that the men may be better prepared for assignments. Country-wide representatives take part in this summer camp program, which includes over 175 students from Iowa State alone. Camp sites include such places as Fort Sill, Oklahoma, Camp Gordon, Georgia, and Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.

During the summers following their freshman and junior years, the regular NROTC students participate in 6-week cruises to foreign countries. Last summer the midshipmen visited the British Isles, France, Canada, Guatemala and Cuba, spending several days at ports in each country. During the summer after their sophomore years, the NROTC regulars spend 3 weeks in flight training in Texas, flying from there to Virginia for 3 weeks of amphibious warfare instruction. WITH HELMETS gleaming in the sunlight, white-topped boots pounding out an incessant staccato rhythm and snappy drill executions, the Pershing Rifle Drill Team again stole the show.

Its precision and sharpness enabled it to take the first place trophy at the Regional Convention at Iowa City, and the company as a whole added to the honor by copping second. Several men received distinguished service awards for their outstanding contributions to the chapter. Members of Pershing Rifles are hand-picked from all branches of ROTC according to their superior military and scholastic achievements.

The annual Pershing Rifle Ball was highlighted by the crowning of the queen and her attendants.

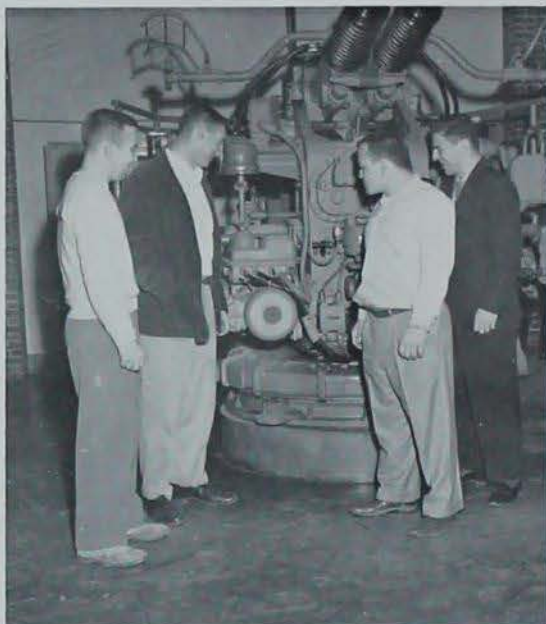

To stimulate alertness as well as to provide relaxation, Pershing Rifles presents distinguished speakers along with movies of various other drill teams.

The interest of four Scabbard and Blade members is held by the intricate mechanisms of this 40 mm, twin-mount, power machine gun.

WITH EYES directed straight ahead, four armed guards kept constant watch over Gold Star Hall on Armistice Day, 1954 was the first year that the 24-hour honor guard had been posted. In a special ceremony held at 11 o'clock that morning, Scabbard and Blade members carried out the annual tradition of placing a wreath on one of the gold stars in the Hall. Keeping the watch was part of the traditional "Buck Week" held before initiation.

Scabbard and Blade, national all-service military honorary, extends membership to advanced ROTC students on the basis of outstanding military aptitude, scholarship and campus service.

This spring Scabbard and Blade sponsored its annual Military Ball. The Honorary Cadet Colonel and her attendants were presented by the Sabre Squad. Members also served as escorts for all campus queens during the year. Max Burkett presided as Captain at the monthly meetings.

IT'S NOT often that central campus is bustling with activity at 6:45 in the morning. Arnold Air Society pledges found it quiet that fall morning as they performed flag raising, part of their initiation duties. They had a little more company in the late afternoon when they performed the flag lowering.

Arnold Society Pledges up Early

The Arnold Air Society is a national professional organization for AFROTC juniors and seniors. The group was specially honored last fall by the Air Force Society, a group composed of active Air Force officers. This group decided to adopt the Arnold Society as an auxilliary branch. In connection with that honor, the local group, O'Neil Chapter, now receives the official publication of the National Air Force.

The O'Neil chapter of Arnold Air Society was named after two pilots, sons of an Ames family, killed in action during World War II. Meetings are held twice a month in either the Armory or Union to take care of necessary business matters.

North Pole air attack routes play an important part as these future Air Force officers train for their jobs as our nation's guardians.

IN SPRING a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of . . . well, among other things, probably baseball, golf, track or tennis, if he's an athletic-minded Iowa Stater.

And those who thought about sports in varsity terms turned in some good performances.

Best was the baseball team's record with some surprise wins that pushed them to third place in the Big Seven Conference.

The tennis team did all right too, pulling a few surprises of its own. The netsters placed fourth in conference standings, but that was higher than expected from a team with only one experienced player.

The golfers weren't what Iowa State's golfers usually are, but they turned in a record with more wins than losses.

The trackmen couldn't win for losing 'til the final meet of the season, then showed the stuff that had been keeping them within a few points of victories all season long.

In Spring . . .
Sports Good

Spring means different things to different people. To intramural softball players it means many tense games at the intramural field.

TRACK-WISE, the Cyclones battled and performed in good style. They finished sixth in the loop meet and defeated Colorado in the final dual meet of the year.

All meets were close — so close that a single switch of winners in nearly any event would have been a deciding factor.

'Winner Switch Could Decide'

Two of Coach Burl Berry's performers set new Iowa State track records during the 1954 season. Harold Mullison, top pole vaulter in Cyclone history, cleared 13 feet, 4½ inches to set a new school standard.

Ray Hoffmann did all right too, running a 23.5 flight over the low hurdles to become the best Cyclone in that event. Hoffmann was top scorer with 63 meet points.

Coach L. C. (Cap) Timm advises five of his baseballers in the Armory until weather permits them to practice outdoors.

THE TEAM rushed to greet Bucky Weeden at the plate with hand shakes and back slaps. Just two innings before, the Cyclones had been on the gosh-awful end of a 7-1 score; now Bucky's run had beaten Oklahoma 10-9 in the final game of the season and landed Iowa State third place in Big Seven standings.

Dale Drum, sophomore lefty, won his first Big Seven game and delivered a two-run single in the eighth to tie the game and set the stage for Weeden's game-winning race home on a passed ball.

For the season the Cyclones won 11, lost 10, with a 7-7 record in conference play.

All this was done with a club of "hitless wonders" who batted .225 as a team. How was it done? Good coaching, good fielding, good control pitching, sheer fight. Those ingredients Coach L. C. (Cap) Timm mixed well, giving Cyclone fans a mighty interesting season — one that brought out more fans than any baseball season in years.

One victory stood out above the rest. It was a 4-1 win over Missouri's NCAA champs. The Missourians won three other times though, hitting to the left, to the right, down the middle, and mostly hard and far too often.

The Cyclones also beat Minnesota 2-1 in 11 innings but bowed 7-1 to Paul Giel as 2,000 fans watched the speedball nonpareil grace the mound with the smoothness and perfection of Pavlova.

That fighting spirit probably decided four games that went into extra innings. One hit was good enough for a 5-0 victory over Colorado.

Ray George was the top hitter with four homers and a .310 average, followed by most-valuable-player Bob Taylor. He fielded his territory around second base like an expert which, all in all, was right well.

Bill Postma's 4-2 mark was best among the control minded ISC hurlers. Leftfielder Stan Peacock was "Mr. Huckle-de-buck" for his hustle. He didn't break into the lineup until late season but batted .636 in conference competition.

THE GOLFERS had only a mediocre record as ISC golfers go, but Coach Jack McGuire says "The team was better than it showed."

Don Platt was the only senior on a young team that didn't get going in the first day of the conference meet and never caught up. The defending champions, ISC placed 4th in the Big Seven.

Golfers Not Up To Usual Par

In a triangular meet, the Cyclones were edged one point by Nebraska although Dan Molyneux had the best individual score and Don Webber was third.

The Cyclones ran into trouble in the Kansas meet as they scored only one-half point. The Jayhawks got 11 1/2 behind Bob Richard's low 70 score over the 18-hole course.

McGuire expects an improved record this spring with letterwinners Molyneux, Webber, John McGuinness and Bob Lee returning. This quartet scored under-par totals in the Grinnell opener.

Long before spring settles down to stay, the netsters complete a southern trip, then wait impatiently inside State Gym's confines.

THE TENNIS team fooled a lot of people but not Harry Schmidt, the veteran coach of the net squad. He said early in the year that as hard as this team worked it would just plain have to get tougher by the end of the season.

Season Tennis

In the Big Seven meet Ron Sley took top honors in the No. 5 meet, and Ted Hampe was second in No. 4. The team finished in fourth place — far higher than had been predicted.

For the conference schedule, the Cyclones won 2, lost 3. At the end of the season their mark was 8 and 5.

SPORTS and sportsmanship are the aims of the Women's Athletic Association. The WAA sponsors clubs to suit everyone's interests — archery, bowling, camp counselors, dance, hockey, officials, Naiads and racquets clubs.

Dance Club and Naiads, which give annual public performances of modern dance and synchronized swimming, select new members by try-outs only. The other clubs which meet weekly are made up of dues-paying WAA members.

The WAA Council, made up of presidents of each club, is the group responsible for coordinating the women's athletic program so efficiently. But it's not all work — far from it!

Each fall WAA puts on a play day for all freshmen women. Skits, games and refreshments are included on the afternoon program in which divisional clubs help plan to give freshmen a preview of WAA as an organization and help them become better acquainted with the upperclassmen.

At the annual WAA spring picnic, tennis and softball finals are played and awards presented.

Women's "I" Fraternity is a service organization. It sponsors an all-college mixed volleyball tournament during fall quarter, an all-college play night during winter quarter and ushers at the Women's Gym open house during Veishea.

ON YOUR MARKS . . . get set . . . go!" The tracksters were off.

Other familiar sounds of the spring were the crack of a bat, "Fore!" and the clash of metal on metal with each horseshoe ringer. Then too, there was the silence hovering over the fast action of a tennis match — all eyes following the ball back and forth, forth and back.

Everything from horseshoes to softball added to the light-heartedness of spring for fraternity, dormitory and ward athletes alike and for the women, too.

For the men, the intramural play field with its 21 softball diamonds was a mighty popular spot. But so were the fresh-air tennis courts and the air-conditioned bowling lines. And the golf course.

Fellows 'n Gals Intramural Active

Softball was the main spring sport. Alpha Tau Omega won the fraternity division, while Meeker House took honors for the dormitories and Nu Ward for the ward system.

STRIKE THREE, you're out!" The Lyon Hall girls leaped into the air, for the last Gamma Phi batter had just struck out in the finals of the women's intramural softball tournament.

Lyon Hall won the championship, 19-2, and pitcher Carol Hermeier performed another outstanding job.

Competition was keen on the bowling alleys too. The Chi Omega's took first place with a 1,808-point total.

Mary Alice Fike from Roberts Hall defeated Wanda Rogers from Oak for the tennis singles win. Elm Hall's representatives, Marge Woodruff and Estelle Tripet, teamed up to take first place in the tennis doubles.

Out on the golf greens, Roberts Hall came through with another champion, Nancy Risser.

Top: "Strike three!" or "How Not to Win Softball Games." Forty-two teams gather on the intramural field almost every spring afternoon. Middle: Bare feet, shins and even heads were used to kick the soccer ball around. A new experience for most of the crowd (?), the soccer game preceded the Homecoming football game. Iowa State and the State University of Iowa tied, 2-2. Bottom: Spring fever can be resisted no longer, and an eager student sharpens his tennis technique.

“LET’S GO to the Union for a cup of coffee.”

“Sorry, I can’t. Got a very important Veishea meeting.”

So off to the Union, but not for coffee. Up to Veishea office with its chaotic din of clicking typewriters, jangling telephones and urgent voices—“Are the high school letters out?” . . . “About that budget . . .”

Activity reached a fever pitch as the festive spring weekend drew near. “Only 5,000 more napkins, and the float will be finished!” . . . “There must be SOMETHING we can do about the parade traffic problem.” . . .

Veishea made its first appearance this year in the Applications Due column early in the fall quarter. Yards of names appeared on lists of committee volunteers. Paint dripped from stage sets to the littered floor and on clothing of inexperienced but ambitious artists. Half-finished decorations gave the campus a certain light-hearted air as all was nearing readiness for the world’s largest student-run festival.

THIRTY-THREE years ago the first Veishea parade made its appearance with floats pulled by matched horse teams. Horse decorations were as important as the floats. From simple displays on wagons evolved a parade of 90 artistic creations of chicken wire, papier mache, colored napkins and crepe paper accompanied by 25 bands and watched by over 100,000 people.

Before 1922 each division on campus had its own open house and carnival. A conflict in the time of two carnivals threw the whole campus into a turmoil. Friendships were even forgotten as the battle raged, so to settle the problem once and for all, the five divisions were brought together in a new 3-day festival named VEISHEA.

The Big Show, Its 33rd Year

As the years progressed, the spirit and purpose expanded. What started as a festival for open houses and displays has now become a showcase for the whole nation and a gigantic exposition with the number of new and entertaining events increasing yearly.

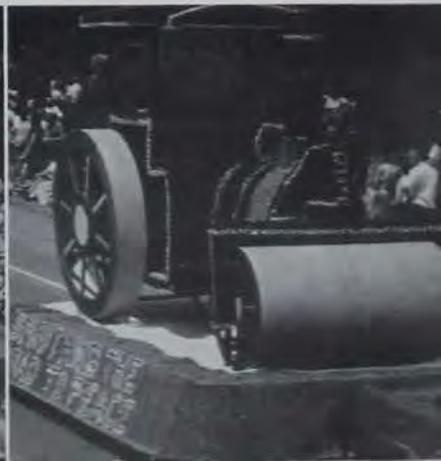

TV cameras and Brownie reflexes are loaded as mild weather brings shirt-sleeved parade spectators to await Saturday's big event.

OUT OF THE dust rode 61 cowboys from six colleges . . . all headed to the only college-sponsored rodeo in Iowa. Iowa State was trying something new: another Veishea main event.

For 2 days the fearless riders battled the brahmas with glistening silver spurs in the area east of the women's dormitories. Saddle-back bronco riding, bulldogging, bare-back bronco riding . . . these weekend cowboys didn't miss a thing to give the crowds a goodly amount of thrills and spills.

A crew of veteran cowboys from Nebraska furnished the equipment, livestock and good advice to give the event an air of authenticity. Veishea had grown once more, and a part of the West was added to its growing nation-wide appeal.

Photographic-minded spectators compare notes before it begins.

A round of applause in the stands . . . the lariat artist never misses.

A color guard . . . Western style . . . opens Veishea's newest event, a rodeo.

Animal Shows, Vodvil Tops

Prancing ponies, pretty girls, chariot races and slow plodding work horses . . . all were part of the 1954 Horse Show. Owners from the state and surrounding territory displayed their best samples of English and Western riding in the center of the armory. Trophies were awarded by beautiful girls to the lucky winners, while miniature races brought additional audience cheers.

MULTI-COLORED handbills created an authentic atmosphere for the Gaslight Gaities performances of Veishea Vodvil. A curtain picturing copies of old ads brought back pleasant memories to the older members of the crowd and were quite entertaining to the younger generation.

A whole circus — complete with lively clowns and a flying trapeze — comprised the winning skit by Phi Delta Theta. Birch Hall's perfect dolls came to life in "Strange Things Are Happening." "Time Marches On" aptly phrased the theme of Phi Kappa Psi's hilarious show. Perfectly synchronized dance routines characterized Kappa Alpha Theta's "Manhattan Mayhem." In-between acts and the master of ceremonies gave continuity to the productions.

complete with cowgirls, ten gallon hats and an excited, roaring crowd.

According to tradition, Veishea begins with an opening address.

Float builders, with napkins and nails, work untiringly side by side.

More paint mix; then Bonnie will have the SOV set done.

WHEN OLD Mother Hubbard went to her cupboard, it certainly was bare! All of her pie tins and brooms were being frantically paddled across Lake LaVerne as the hearty crews sped over the bounding main in the Veishea Canoe Races.

"Man overboard!"

"Relax, fella, they'd rather swim than paddle anyway."

As the races wore on, swimming teams became as prevalent as canoe crews. Sandbars in the middle of the lake became well populated with marooned craft. "Round the barrel and back again . . . just watch out for . . . oops, start bailing quick!"

And what high class races they were! Some of the teams even had valets to send them off. From the variety of weird concoctions worn by the various crews, the valets obviously had differing ideas of proper Gay Nineties yachting attire.

With shrieks of delight the "stronger sex" gained its place when Freeman Hall's feminine crew captured the all-college trophy to win the '54 Canoe Races.

The year's success was much the work of Bob Latta, chairman.

Time out from mobs . . . a family picnic on the campus lawn.

Tapping for Mortar Board and Cardinal Key provides one of the most cherished experiences of Iowa State College days.

"MY HEAVENS! He shattered that rubber ball into a million pieces!" But the physics student just smiled discretely as he prepared for another demonstration with liquid oxygen.

"Hey, that makes 16 different languages now!"

Open Houses Draw Crowds

But the modern language plaster head kept right on speaking, now in German, next in Russian, then Spanish, French, English . . . .

Wide-eyed crowds surged onward to the next display. What an amazing array of things to see. Eagerly the sunburned faces and tiring feet covered the campus to see the marvelous open house spectacles. It was hot, but a little heat could not stop enthusiastic viewers.

Then a pause for refreshments. Colorful stands swarmed by bright helium balloons straining from grubby fists lined the well-traveled walks and paths. Cooling pop and filling hot dogs — just the needed pick-up and a nifty way for many clubs and campus groups to get that necessary revenue. And, of course, what would Veishea be without the traditional cherry pies as part of the Institutional Management open house?

And then there were more open houses to investigate. "Didja ever see a two-headed calf like the one in this bottle?" . . . "They've even got colored television!" . . . Even the campanile offered a trip up into its melodic tower and had a sizable daytime attendance for a change.

The Queen of queens and her two attendants scan the parade.

Nancy Combs, Veishea Queen, is escorted to her car after the parade. Her attendants, Jean Murray and Dorothy Olson, will be next.

Foods majors have "Coffee in May" to attract open house visitors.

Physics marvels intrigue many comers who make light by touch.

Everyone likes an electric train . . . especially this engineer's train.

Modern art in design makes up part of Applied Art Club's display.

These two wide-eyed youngsters wonder if they ever can do it, too.

There's the gun and they're off in another heat of the Veishea Canoe Races. It must be early in the race; no one looks like they're wet — yet.

FRIDAY NIGHT . . . zero hour. Sixteen thousand faces turned toward the huge stage stretching between two 20 yard lines in Clyde Williams Field. Slowly light dawned, and festive color sparked the scene. Hundreds of S.O.V. workers relaxed now . . . for the first time in weeks . . . to watch their co-workers bring to life the fruit of their efforts.

Then with a bang, a real Fourth of July bang, the parade of seasons got underway in a year 'round Holiday. Ghosts, witches, skeletons, bats and dancing scarecrows suddenly appeared for Halloween in the eeriness of a black light number to Dance Macabre.

A miraculous change of sets by an ambitious crew during the reverent Thanksgiving portrayal prepared the stage for ice skaters, carollers and a Christmas tree . . . all part of a community Christmas celebration. The band struck a seasonal note with Anderson's Sleigh Ride and Berlin's White Christmas. Smock-clad girls, with powder puffs handy for shiny make-up, stole into the wings to watch the rest of the show. A valentine ball, and in a quick procession of months, it was Easter and time for the Easter Parade.

In what seemed short minutes the year of holidays ended. Ghosts and witches, ice skaters and carollers, put away or dismantled their many costumes on Saturday. Another Veishea, another S.O.V., faded as quickly as the Holiday program.

Girls beware of jousting tournaments when paddling around the end!

DADDY! DADDY! Here they come now!" Excited children of all ages lined the parade route eagerly straining to snatch glimpses of the Saturday morning spectacle. Tens of thousands from all distances came to see the artistic float creations.

And those involved? They breathed easily now; many and hurried treks to stores for crepe paper, chicken wire, boards, paste, paints, nails and napkins were past . . . no more evenings out at rented barns or garages till the wee morning hours.

That ever-expected rain didn't come. Weary students sprawled on the ground relaxing; but when the first float appeared they eagerly jumped up with cameras loaded. TV cameras recorded the story. Amazed spectators applauded and exchanged comments. Judges deliberated and debated among themselves. Their task was difficult.

Spectators wanted closer looks. Following the parade they scurried to floats parked by the dorms. Meanwhile, students waited somewhat impatiently for the judges' decisions to be announced.

Beta Theta Pi, Delta Zeta, Barton Hall and Converse House won firsts; Tau Kappa Epsilon took the Sweepstakes.

Heave ho! Another Paul Bunyan takes his turn at tossing the log during the Forestry Club's Veishea open house, "Paul Bunyan Days."

Dancing room was at a premium at each of the three Veishea dances as ISC students and guests flocked to enjoy the music of Ralph Flanagan.

The blare of the brass band, the crack of baseball on bat, the fun of the Easter Parade—it's all part of the SOV success, "Holiday."

MUSIC FROM a moonlit terrace . . . crowds in all corners . . . weekend visitors emanating pleasure and students showing signs of an extended weekend "vacation." . . . Not one dance but three . . . the climax of three full Veishea days.

"Dance?" "Love to . . . if there were more room." The Union terrace was jammed with shoulder-to-shoulder couples straining to catch glimpses of Ralph Flanagan and his band. Listenable . . . danceable . . . altogether enjoyable.

"And finally the winners . . ." Veishea Queen Nancy Combs awarded the open house and parade trophies during intermission at the Saturday dance. More dancing until 12:00; then the 1954 Veishea weekend peacefully ended.

Months of hard work on costumes, scripts and staging go into making Stars Over Veishea one of the favorite Veishea entertainments.

DORM COURT glowed with candlelight as Mortar Board members led the yearly Dormitory Induction Service. Each dorm president lighted a candle from the candle of Mortar Board president, Julie Brogan. The girls, in turn, lighted the candles of their own dorm members. As a fresh candle blazed anew, another girl accepted Iowa State's challenge to make the most of her college opportunities.

Members of Mortar Board, highest of women's honoraries, are selected on the basis of outstanding scholarship, leadership and service. Tapping takes place when a graduating senior places her Mortar Board on the head of a new member during a Veishea ceremony by the Campanile. The day of '55 tappings was changed this year in order to not interfere with the open house schedule.

Mortar Board sponsors Women's Day, when ISC women take over all student government and service positions. A Women's Day president, selected from the student body, presides over the event. Marjorie Kirkpatrick was this year's president.

"HEY, listen! Somebody's singing outside!" "We didn't have a serenade scheduled for tonight, did we?" "Not that I know of, but let's go out and listen anyway."

As the men crowded onto the porch of the house, the purpose of the unexpected serenade became clear. It was the traditional serenade by members of Mortar Board and Cardinal Key announcing to the residence that one or more of its members had been selected for membership in the highest men's honorary at I.S.C.

Not until the Saturday afternoon of Veishea were the choices revealed, when into the hushed crowd around the Campanile on that warm afternoon stepped cardinal-robed figures. With sudden slaps on the back, the new members of Cardinal Key were revealed.

New members of this all-college honorary were junior or senior men showing outstanding qualities of scholarship, leadership, character and service. The last man tapped automatically became the next year's president.

During winter quarter lists of all possible candidates are sent to faculty members, campus leaders and ministers for recommendations. It is on the basis of their replies that men are selected for tapping in the spring.

A week after tapping ceremonies, Cardinal Key sponsors the annual Leadership Day Banquet, a banquet at which special certificates of merit are awarded to all outstanding student leaders on the Iowa State campus.

With Ken Larson doing the honors, Dick Stanley, the last man to be tapped, automatically becomes the new president of Cardinal Key.

THE members of Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honorary society, are chosen from the upper one-eighth of the senior graduating class at Iowa State. Graduate students who have completed at least 1 year of study and three faculty members are also selected on the basis of their contributions to the college.

Phi Kappa Phi Honorary

The spring quarter initiation ceremony is followed by a banquet attended by all members, old and new.

In honor of former president, Dr. Edward S. Sparks, an endowment fund award is presented annually to a needy student member. Applications from the members of every chapter in the United States are submitted, but only one Phi Kappa Phi member may receive the Sparks Memorial Graduate Fellowship.

ENCOURAGING beginning freshmen rather than rewarding deserving juniors and seniors is the distinctive function of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman men's honorary. To be eligible for membership in this organization, a freshman must attain a 3.5 grade average for his first two quarters.

Phi Eta Sigma for Freshmen

Last fall Phi Eta Sigma members held a get-acquainted smoker for all men of superior high school scholastic standing.

Here new ISC men were given a pep talk on making their grades so that they would be eligible for initiation. A talk given by three members who attended the National Convention at Oklahoma A&M College conveyed ideas about high scholastic attainment.

Following the initiation ceremony in the Union, the new members elected their slate of officers and took part in a banquet.

"HAVE the Indians returned, or is a tomahawk necklace the newest fad on campus?" remarked one freshman to another. But it was neither Indians nor a fad, for the necklaces were being worn by the new pledges of Tomahawk, an honorary for activity-minded independent freshman and sophomore students.

In March, the Trophy Tavern was crowded with smiling faces of new actives sporting shiny pins. The formal initiation held earlier in the evening was followed by the hum of excited voices and the strains of popular dance music.

Tomahawk for Independents

Tomahawk has recognized achievement in activities and scholarship by independent junior college students since it was first organized in 1951. The organization provides services for many worthy campus programs.

IT WAS time to adjust long, black robes and straighten tasselled caps. In 4 years of college how many hours had been spent dressing for exciting occasions? There had been college dances, group picnics, costumes for Varieties, football games, a Saturday night show, classes, work sessions . . . but none of these held quite the excitement and fascination of graduation. Now past activities dimmed considerably in a new light . . . the light of the future. What type of life lay ahead? Only time could tell. The past was now a memory.

The Big Day —Graduation

Remember those first days as freshmen? How young and inexperienced that class seemed. There were plenty of "lost" feelings for awhile, but they seemed to be waylaid as the days flew by. There were so many people to meet, so many new friends to make, and, of course, the classes and the homework could not be discounted. The first year seemed longest, but suddenly the second year was there and moving swiftly. It was even better than the first had been. Everything was familiar. It was satisfying to be able to direct instead of be directed.

Junior year . . . and last year's sophomores were members of the senior college. Those words sounded good. Major work became significant. Dreams of one profession had often changed since the freshman year, for after 2 years of college, many viewpoints altered considerably. So many trips had been made to the counselor's office . . . deciding majors, changing majors or just discussing majors. Endless hours of basic courses had been disposed of. It was satisfying to conquer those basics (some were very interesting, some uninteresting, some easy and some plain tough) and add to that ever-increasing "requirements completed" list.

And then it was the senior year; but somehow the importance seemed trivial. The year was lost in bigger things . . . job interviews with company representatives, investigations into teaching positions, preparations of wedding plans. This was the year to make the most of college life; everything was a "last time" affair. Perhaps these were carefree days after all. Nevertheless, it would be good to progress. Although there were many experiences jammed into those 4 years, there were many more coming up. For some there would be more school . . . a masters degree, perhaps a Ph.D. A great many could look forward to interesting jobs after they'd received their coveted diplomas. Uncle Sam had his bid in, too, for the Army, Navy and Air Force. Some talked of trips, of going to places they'd always wanted to see. Trip number one on many agendas was to the altar, especially among graduating coeds. And, finally, amid a rustle of gowns, the murmur of an audience of well-wishing, proud friends and relatives and the formality and solemnity of the occasion, the door to college days closed and a brand new door, the door to the future, opened widely to admit hundreds of new Iowa State graduates.

THE CAMPANILE struck — 9:45 — and the College bookstore clerk rose and readied herself for the between-class rush. The battered white door flew open as the first of the mob dashed in.

"Gimme a pack of engineering drawing paper," said a tall lad with a slide rule dangling at his belt . . . "Four bluebooks for me," remarked the boy next to him as he plopped geology, econ and trig books momentarily on the counter . . . "A seeker probe and dissection kit," ordered another.

A girl, clinging awkwardly to her applied art project, rushed hurriedly on her way to mail a letter home, then scurried to meet her roommate.

Prospective engineers, scientists, veterinarians, home economists and agriculturalists cross paths daily — students now, but soon to enter their chosen vocational fields with sound professional backgrounds gained at Iowa State.

IOWA STATE COLLEGE, one of the first land grant colleges, takes pride in its agriculture program. The Agricultural Experiment Station, through its research efforts, adds much yearly to the improvement of farm programs throughout the country. Young farmers graduating from the division are ideally equipped to operate their own farms.

The progress of the '54-'55 year in agriculture has been significant indeed. "Tracer research," the "tagging" of elements so that their nutritive values may be studied, was newly undertaken. The $250,000 project, carried out in the Dairy Calf Laboratories and barns, has been participated in by graduate Animal Husbandry majors.

"Diethylstilbestrol," a new feed developed by the Iowa State Agriculture Department, has made possible a new feeding program for beef cattle. Rapidly accepted, the new feed was introduced in January 1954, and by September of that year it was marketed; already 2,000,000 head of cattle are fed under this new, "Diethylstilbestrol" feed method.

Agriculture in 1954-55

FLOYD ANDRE, Dean of Agriculture

During the year a group of northwestern Iowa farmers, businessmen, bankers and other interested persons acquired an outlying farm as part of the Agriculture Extension Service. The fourteenth farm purchased with non-college money, it will be used for college agricultural study and research. An additional 300 acres, situated  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the central campus, have been acquired for "tracer research."

A serious problem confronting the people of the country is weight control. The Home Economics Department, in conjunction with the Agriculture Department, sponsored a weight control conference, the first of its kind in the United States. Doctors, nurses, home economists and extension workers gathered from places as far as Washington, D.C., to discuss problems of weight control and relate the different contributions of food elements as concerned with the over-weight problem in the United States.

A new program, aiding young married couples establishing farms, was undertaken by the Agriculture and Home Economics Extension Services. Extension workers connected with this program, started in 30 counties, help young people decide their life objectives and establish their farms while in the meantime keeping in mind the most important goal of making possible the happiest of family units.

The Ag division, aside from its more academic side, gives a full share of its time to what might be called "more social" functions.

The Ag division's annual Harvest Ball was presided over this year by Queen Jane Grote.

Another large function is the Ag division's annual banquet. Featured speaker at this year's dinner was Dr. John Hannah, President of Michigan State College. Six hundred attended this traditional gathering.

"GIVE me a hand with these corn stalks, Dave." "Just a sec 'til I set this pumpkin down," came the reply.

hibited by this organization in order to better acquaint new students with the departmental organizations.

Ag Council is composed of two students from each department within the Agriculture Division, two Cardinal Guild representatives, one member from the staff of the publication, the Agriculturist, and a faculty advisor. Student members of the council are chosen to serve with various faculty committees. These committees include scholarship, student-faculty relations and career days, to name several.

Forerunner of today's council was the "Ag Club" formulated in 1897. A main purpose of the present organization is to teach cooperation and fellowship through unity, organization and leadership.

A recognition party is held to acquaint new members with old. This pleasant social get together is one way in which fellowship is carried out. If weather permits, spring and fall picnics are also planned.

President of the council serves on the Veishea Selection Committee and helps to choose the core committee for each Veishea. Another job of the council is to select a chairman for the annual Agriculture Open House.

Council meetings are held twice a month in the Agronomy Building. Four officers and a faculty advisor lead the council of 28 members.

"Keep working there pledge! No loafing!" The Alpha Zeta actives watched their new pledges clean the windows for a pledge project.

Another project performed by pledges was the cleaning and repairing of the building and equipment at the Lutheran Children's Home. The week of initiation duties was followed by the final initiation banquet. Entertainment was furnished by pledges, who sparked up the evening with new lyrics to the traditional chapter song.

Alpha Zeta is primarily an honorary agricultural organization. Its meetings are held once a week. Featured at these meetings are speakers on agriculture and closely related subjects. At all times the Alpha Zetas strive to carry out their established purpose: "to promote agriculture in every possible way."

The Horticulture Show is an interesting and varied collection of plants. It is well-attended by ISC students and people in and near Ames.

ONE OF THE most decorative and colorful fall campus events is probably the Horticulture Show sponsored by the Horticulture Club. Club members decorate rooms, enter arrangements in various classes and plan a program of entertainment. This year's program featured the Mitigwa Dancers, an Indian dancing group. Winner of the sweepstakes for his displays was Bernhard Storzjohann, Jr.

In addition to the annual "show," club members also sponsor a special Veishea exhibit for which they make and then sell colorful corsages. This function, planning and setting up, they perform in addition to their regular open house displays.

In the spring the Hort Club plans an annual picnic at the Ledges.

Organizational meetings are held bimonthly to plan club functions and to take care of regular business.

1954 Veishea kept Block and Bridle Club members active with the Horse Show production. These shiny trophies were awarded the winners.

FOR THE SECOND consecutive year, Block and Bridle Club was named the most outstanding departmental club in the Iowa State College Division of Agriculture.

Its activities are many. Annual events that are club-sponsored include the fall barbeque and initiation, the Little International Live-stock Show and barbeque, the Block and Bridle Banquet, the spring picnic and initiation and the Meats

During Veishea the group's members keep busy with plans for and the carrying out of the Veishea Horse Show and Animal Husbandry Open-House. Block and Bridle members also operate food stands during Veishea as well as during other campus events.

Office of the club is located on the ground floor of Curtiss Hall.

Founded in 1919, Block and Bridle Club now boasts a membership of 185. To promote higher scholastic standards among the students in Animal Husbandry is one of this club's most important goals.

"Stand still, bossy, like a good girl," pleaded the Iowa State coeds.

Dairy Industry students receive both practical and theoretical training. Here is a section of the bottling equipment used.

MILK POURING into a milk can represented the flow of milk that feeds our nation at the Dairy Husbandry Open House display at Veishea.

In order to show people what is included in a year's study of Dairy Husbandry at Iowa State, another display placed emphasis on the material covered in the 4 years of study in this major. During the Veishea parade hundreds of people quenched their thirst at the concession stand operated by club members.

Dairy Husbandry Club

One of the club's largest functions is its annual banquet at which a previously elected honorary Dairy Husbandry member is presented as speaker. Former and active club members heard Bill Hitz of Polk City address the banquet this year.

The club also participates in the Hoards Dairyman Picture Judging contest. Members judge pictures of dairy cattle and submit their listings to a central judging board. They are then rated. One other yearly club-sponsored event is the sophomore dairy cattle judging contest.

Monthly D. H. meetings feature movies and speakers. Relaxation and fun are not overlooked as students and faculty meet at Brookside during spring quarter to pitch horse shoes and play ball.

AT VEISHEA time Dairy Industry Club members join in the fun of making gallons of ice cream to sell in the form of cones to hungry Veishea crowds. Club members begin to make ice cream a month prior to Veishea; profits from the sales provide scholarships to four junior and senior Dairy Husbandry students each year.

Dairy Industry Club

"Rounds" of Iowa State's famous cheese are sold at Veishea to visitors, and the profits also are channeled in this direction.

At the club's regular meetings, outside speakers from all over the United States appear to talk about job opportunities in the Dairy Industry field. These speakers serve to fulfill one of the D.I. Club's purposes — to further the interest of the students enrolled in both 4 quarter and 4 year courses in Dairy Industry.

An informal dance at the Union along with several spring and fall picnics were among the club's social activities.

Foresters Copy Paul Bunyan

Roast buffalo was served at the annual Foresters' Game Banquet held during winter quarter. An interesting guest speaker and lots of good food made the banquet enjoyable to all attending.

Winter quarter brought with it a "Hoedown." The theme was "Logging," and the members were dressed accordingly. The guys wore jeans and plaid shirts, and the gals wore cotton skirts and blouses. There was entertainment, refreshments and square dancing to make it a fun-filled and eventful evening.

Tales of Paul Bunyan, the "King of the Tree-topplers," came back to life as the foresters put on their annual show in his honor during Veishea. All the games and contests of the old days were relived as forestry students turned woodsmen for the day. ISC foresters tried their hands at log throwing, bucking, falling and chopping. The "Son of Paul" award was given to the department's outstanding student at that time.

After a long, long day of roaming the woods and working, these hungry Iowa State foresters line up before that ever-popular chow table.

Farm Operations Club boasts a membership of about 200. Each year the organization has a banquet and a picnic for its members.

Farm Op. Club Has Candlelight Cafe

It meets on the first Wednesday evening of every month in Agronomy Auditorium. A speaker and leader in a particular field of agriculture is an important part of each program.

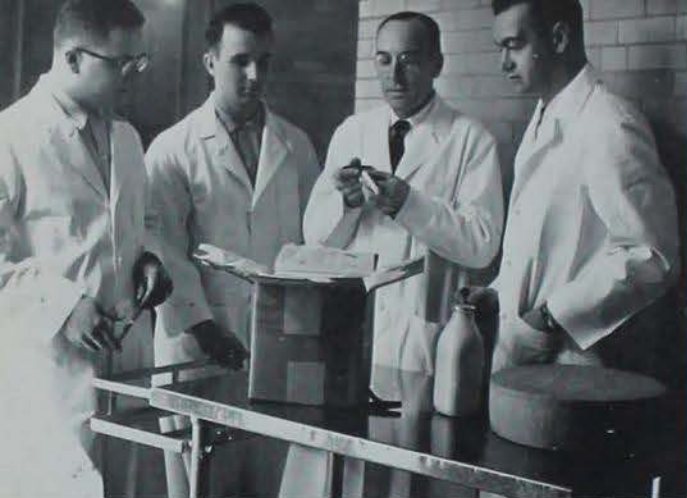

Farm Op members worked hard before and during Veishea. Many active fingers assembled a miniature model of the Agronomy Farm. The model demonstrated numerous activities. A concession stand in front of Curtiss Hall furnished hungry and thirsty visitors with refreshments and aided the club financially.

All teams traveled to the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, the main event on their tours. The Iowa State group walked off with a second-place, the highest placing of all college teams, just 2 points behind first-place Oklahoma.

THE LIVESTOCK Judging Team began its year by attending the Iowa State Fair during fall quarter. Later it journeyed to the Austin Meat Borrow Show in Austin, Minn., where it placed second. Another second-place award was presented the team at the Southwestern Livestock Exposition in Fort Worth, Tex.

The only actual competition of the Poultry Judging Team was at the Chicago International. The Dairy Judging Team turned in a record of hard work and careful discriminations in the dairy field.

Campus 4-H Club members look quite interested in the proceedings as final plans are laid for the annual hay ride during fall quarter.

An Agricultural Education Club member adds practical experience to his book learning as he practice teaches in a freshman Ag class.

CAMPUS 4-H has an ever-changing club membership. This club helps each of its new members become acquainted with the college and with activities around the Iowa State campus. Many of the members are friends from previous meetings at state 4-H functions. The Campus club completes its purpose when the members become orientated to college life and are able to more completely participate in all-college activities.

Campus 4-H Club For Friendship

Iowa State students who have won various trips through 4-H work gave interesting reports to the Campus 4-H members during one of their monthly meetings. Other topics for their combined business and social meetings was a talk on etiquette and another on opportunities open through the Extension Service for summer training jobs. The Campus 4-H members keep the Extension Service informed about what they do. This information is then carried back to the counties of each member. Thus the hope is to create interest in Campus 4-H in future Iowa State students.

WITH the coming of spring each year, the Ag Ed's sharpen up their batting eyes in preparation for the softball game between the upperclassmen and the sophomores and freshmen. Their spring picnic, held at Brookside, is attended by all the Agricultural Education members, their dates and the faculty members of this department. The organization's annual spring banquet features a noted speaker from the field of either agriculture or education.

For Veishea open house the Agricultural Education Club featured a quiz board which answered questions concerning the Ag Ed curriculum. A model of an Ideal Vocational Agriculture Department was a highlight in the open house as well as an F.F.A. exhibit from high schools in Iowa. The club featured a float in the Veishea parade and sponsored a concession stand.

Agricultural Education Club

The Ag Ed Club affords opportunities for those majoring or minoring in Agricultural Education to gain valuable experience in leadership, to assume responsibilities and to become better acquainted with their prospective professions.

the group also sponsored spring and fall picnics and field trips to observe examples of contemporary and antique landscapes.

fall the meeting was held in St. Paul, Minn. A trophy to the outstanding student chapter in the United States was awarded the Iowa State organization.

Each year 100 dollars from sales is awarded to an Agronomy Club member on the basis of scholarship, need and club activities. Bimonthly meetings alert members to agronomy developments.

Industrial Ed Holds "Crafts Night"

THE NEWEST activity sponsored by the Industrial Education Club is a weekly "crafts" night. Members, their girl friends or wives gather in the shop to work on hobbies. Members keep busy publishing the "Shop Shavings" newsletter and helping with the "Handyman" television show. Good fellowship among members is continued through man-of-the-week posters.

Each year the Industrial Ed Club sets up many displays for the exhibitors at the Industrial Education Conference. At Veishea, in addition to building a float, an open house showing metal, woodwork, leather and plastic displays is featured.

A MEMBERSHIP increase of 400%! The Agriculture Business Club, also known as the Student Society of American Farm Economics, has grown from 15 to 60 members. This growth is due to a change in the Division of Agriculture. The former Agriculture Economics course was revamped into an entirely new course called Agriculture Business. Under this new course appear four new divisions: ag economics, farm management, marketing industries and public service.

Ag Business Club Has New Members

The combination has "filled the bill" and is attracting students interested in agriculture from the business angle.

THE PICNIC tables were piled with fried chicken. What else would you expect the Poultry Club to serve? Classroom dignity was thrown overboard during the faculty-student baseball game and picnic.

Poultry Club Serves Chicken

At the annual, all-college poultry judging contest, sleek, proud birds strutted before an array of critical judges. Close scrutiny decided the kings and queens of poultryland.

Beauty and the beast — an Iowa State coed seems fascinated by one of the steers at the college beef barns. The fascination appears mutual.

IN THE FALL of '54 the Engineering Experiment Station experienced its 50th Anniversary. Iowa's experiment station, in conjunction with an Illinois group, claims the distinction of being oldest in the nation.

An important part of the Engineering Division, the experiment station promotes research. Major fields involved include electrical, mechanical, civil, chemical and ceramic engineering plus mechanics.

This year's $40,000 operating budget was obtained from state appropriations and industrial and governmental sponsors.

Nearly 9,000 persons attended 3-hour class sessions sponsored by the extension service. A specific area and recent development in which men have received special training is that of television service. About 300 Iowa technical persons received specialized training in the servicing of television receivers through the station. In fact, Iowa State has been recognized for its contribution to the television industry through its quality of television receiver servicing.

Director of the Engineering Extension Service is

J. F. DOWNIE SMITH,
Dean of Engineering

Dean J. F. Downie Smith. He supervises short courses, conferences, extension classes and various group projects. In addition he serves as Dean of the Iowa State College Engineering Division.

The Iowa Engineering Experiment Station is devised to allow a combination of research and teaching. Its 70-member staff includes faculty members and graduate students as well who coordinate their activities between teaching and research.

Several long-term programs have been recently initiated by the division through the experiment station. One is the development of cheaper and better highways. This program considers the use of shale for roads, designs of bridge abutments and the use of pre-stressed concrete beams in highway bridges. In this project the experiment station works in close conjunction with the Iowa State Highway Commission. Results of it and similar long-term plans will be forthcoming at yet a later date.

Remodeling and rejuvenation played an important part in the last year's outlook in engineering progress at Iowa State.

Marston Hall's Engineering Library, now undergoing extensive redecoration, will, when completed, be fully equipped with improved heating, acoustics and decorations plus new lighting and an entirely new arrangement of library material.

The eastern section of the Aeronautical Engineering Building is undergoing completion and will boast a fully modernized interior. New offices as well as a design and structures lab have been added.

In the laboratories of Mechanical Engineering, major removal of the old steam and refrigeration equipment and the installation of a $40,000 steam generating unit with two twin Westinghouse steam turbines has been accomplished.

But this is not the end of new additions. Still more "face-lifting" was undertaken as the department of Nuclear Engineering was redecorated during the past year and its offices in Marston rejuvenated.

In addition to the anniversary of the extension and redecoration, the 1954-55 year also saw the creation of a completely new laboratory. This laboratory, Bituminous Research, is designated and dedicated for the primary purpose of road building study.

THE ENGINEERS' Carnival and Engineers' Ball are highlights on the college social calendar. These are two projects planned annually by the Engineering Council.

Fourteen colorful booths were set up by the departmental clubs at the Engineers' Carnival. Games of skill and chance such as pitching the ring 'round the neck of a live duck in a pan of water, knocking a pingpong ball out of the air current with a b-b blown through a straw and placing a lead slug in a bowl floating in water were challenging to all participants. During the intermission a jitterbug contest held among previously selected couples was accompanied by the music of Ellsworth Brown. A girlie show, dancing for all and drawing for prizes completed the evening. Connie Carlmark, a coed in Architectural Engineering, was named the "Most Chivalrous Engineer" during intermission.

The "Naughty Knight" furnished the theme for the Engineers' Ball. Caricatures of this knight appeared throughout the campus and told of the second big social event sponsored by both engineering council and the Knights of St. Patrick. The 25 Squires of St. Patrick revealed their Lady, Doris Smith, as she was escorted to her throne.

Engineering Council

Engineering Council members are chosen by election from their departmental clubs. The council's main purpose is to integrate all engineering functions.

The Chem E Symphony Orchestra plays to a rapt audience of music lovers outside the Chem E Building to advertise its Veishea open house.

Tau Beta Pi members inspect the equipment in the M.E. lab. Tau Beta Pis are engineers outstanding in scholarship and activities.

"Open up that valve just a little more . . . a little more . . . okay, hold it there." Pi Tau Sigma members are hard at work in their lab.

THE FORTY-NINTH national convention of Tau Beta Pi was held at Iowa State in October. All 96 chapters were represented, and the national officers were introduced.

A family-style dinner at Camp Mittigwa near Tau Beta Pi Holds 49th Convention Boone impressed visitors with Iowa hospitality. Mr. Earl O. Shreve, electrical engineering graduate of Iowa State, presented the main address.

Tau Beta Pi honors engineers in the upper one-eighth of the junior class and the upper one-fifth of the senior class who have distinguished scholarship and have been active in campus organizations.

THE popular Kissing Booth at the Engineers' Carnival is sponsored by Pi Tau Sigma. This honorary of mechanical engineers is for the mutual benefit of and a closer bond of fellowship between ISC's ME students.

The annual publication of this national honorary is the Condenser. This magazine contains technical articles, messages from the national officers, proceedings of the annual national convention plus other news.

Pi Tau's Run Kissing Booth
The Pi Epsilon Chapter of the Iowa State group was formed in 1942. Six meetings plus picnics and a banquet are held.

With all the solemnity befitting such a dignified occasion, another Knights of St. Patrick pledge is knighthed with a slide rule.

CRIES of "faith and begorra" and "dear Saint Pat" are heard as the squires of the Guard of Saint Patrick bend low over the blarney stone. After bestowing a kiss upon its smooth surface, they are knighthed with a slide rule. From that moment on, they are the sworn enemies of the Aggies and especially of the Foresters.

Iowa State was the second campus on which was established a chapter of Knights of Saint Patrick, honorary engineering fraternity. Since its founding it has had a varied history of colorful events. Noteable was the skip week members once took around Saint Patrick's Day. This was a forerunner of today's Veishea, even featuring a parade from campus through "big Ames."

Knights Rival "Hated" Aggies

Besides their riotous rivalry with the Aggies, the Knights also do some serious and beneficial things for the college. This year they spoke to freshman engineering sections on various activities and opportunities at Iowa State.

FIFTY years of Eta Kappa Nu — 50 years of recognition of Electrical Engineering and the contributions it has made to our way of life. Far from an inactive honorary organization, Eta

Fiftieth Year Of Eta Kappa Nu

Kappa Nu uses its bi-monthly meetings to acquaint its members with future employment possibilities and experiences. Valuable ideas are mentally catalogued for future use. Yet social life isn't lost among highly technical discussions — these outstanding EE's turn out for an initiation banquet and spring picnic.

SUMMER Surveying Camp is the basis for the formation of Tau Lambda Rho, ISC divisional organization. Reminiscing about their summer camp experiences provides members a good opportunity to forget classwork and remember enjoyable times.

This organization, disbanded during the war years, was reorganized in 1949. Guest speakers and movies entertain and keep the members informed of the latest developments in the surveying field.

"Gosh, but that looks like a lot of work" — Veishea visitors stare in amazement at the American Institute of Architects' open house.

"Cooperate and graduate" — three hard-working M.E.'s get together to try to figure out the mysteries of a complicated-looking engine.

STR-R-I-K-E three! You're out! Come on, let's eat." The scene is the annual spring American Society of Mechanical Engineer's student-faculty picnic and softball game. This year the faculty once again forged on to victory, or perhaps the shrewd ME's figured that a little "apple-polishing" would be wise with finals 3 weeks away. At any rate everyone had fun, even though several profs had slightly stiff muscles for a few days. Another spring quarter activity sponsored by the local chapter is a technical papers contest open to all ASME members. Awards of $15, $10 and $5 are presented for the three top papers. These articles are then eligible for presentation at the Regional conference in April.

The ASME's attempted to conduct their Veishea open house in much the same manner as a class by making test runs on various types of student-constructed equipment and machinery.

The student branch is the annual guest of the Central Iowa section of ASME for a tour of near-by industrial plants.

SOPHOMORES in Architecture and Architectural Engineering are eligible for membership in the student chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Members of this group, both men and women, compared the highlights of their summer jobs and experiences at the year's first meeting. Monthly meetings with featured speakers were held in the Union.

AIA Sponsors Beaux Arts Ball

A panel of four Iowa State Architecture graduates discussed at one meeting "what an architectural education should include." Miss Marjorie Garbeld, head of the Applied Art Department, demonstrated watercolor techniques for a combined meeting of the AIA and Landscape Architecture Society.

In conjunction with the Iowa State Players, the AIA's put on the Beaux Arts Ball, annual social affair. Each couple costumed according to a musical or play title. The winners came as the "Four Poster."

Awards are presented to the outstanding Arch and Arch E. students each spring at the organization's banquet.

THE SENIORS gave a panel discussion at an early fall meeting of the student chapter of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. They discussed the various phases of Agricultural Engineering and the possibilities for employment. This meeting was designed to acquaint the new freshmen members with the department.

AS of Ag E's Have Discussion

At another of their bi-monthly meetings, Chris Hinkle from the Standard Oil Company spoke on lubricating oils and their uses for tractors, trucks, cars and machinery. Dr. P. C. Chan of the Iowa State College Hospital told of the population problems in China. A movie on rural telephone lines was shown at one of the organizational meetings.

The Ag engineers, their dates and faculty heard Rex Conn of the Cedar Rapids Gazette. He spoke on mechanization and agriculture. At the spring picnic in May the faculty played the students in softball.

THE "TRANSIT" is a bimonthly newspaper published by the American Society of Civil Engineers. The paper informs members of the group's coming meetings; new faculty members are highlighted.

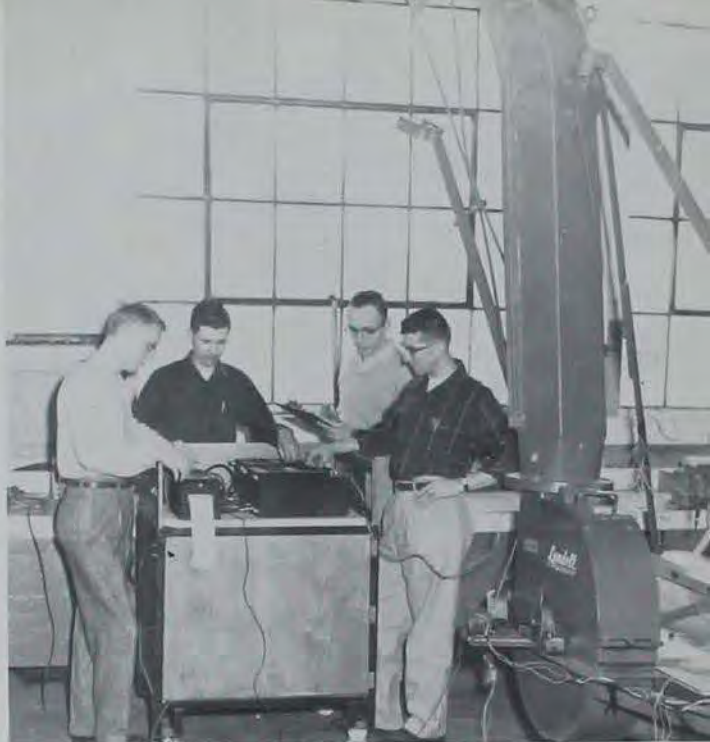

An increase in the Iowa gas tax for maintenance and building of roads was the point of view discussed by a representative of the Iowa Good Roads Association. A civil engineer spoke on the new toll road construction in Ohio.

At the first meeting, a smoker, the new members, sophomores in civil engineering, are welcomed by old members and faculty. A spring picnic is another social activity of the organization.

ASCE's Win Veishea Trophy

Winners of Veishea Open House — ASCE! For the fourth straight year the ASCE's retained the trophy for this honor. A large layout of a Chicago airfield, a highway design and a railroad switch were part of transportation, the departmental display. Model expansion bridges and a scale model of Fort Randall Dam demonstrated the type of construction learned by the civil engineers.

Fifteen members traveled to Moline, Ill., in April for the Iowa-Illinois sectional meeting of the society.

Wires seem to be hitched up to everything in sight as these four ASAgE members run tests on farm machinery during a lab period.

As one C.E. student squints through the level, his partner takes notes during a 3-hour surveying lab on a chilly autumn afternoon.

A GILDED "plumbers' friend" served as the scepter of the Queen at the Plumbers' Ball.

AIChE Has Plumbers' Ball

This spring dance was sponsored by the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. Students interested in the curriculum which leads to a degree in chemical engineering belong to and are affiliated with this national fraternity.

To promote the professional development of students, the group invites speakers from industry to the regular meetings. Some of these meetings are highlighted by faculty-presented skits portraying students. The students then offer rebuttal by portraying the faculty.

The annual spring picnic features a lively student-faculty softball game.

Evidently Chem E students must be acrobats as well as chemists and engineers. Here two Chem E's run tests on a distillation column.

“C’MON, have another steak,” was a frequent plea at the American Ceramic Society’s spring steak fry. This departmental organization has 100% membership with all ceramic engineers belonging.

American Ceramic Society

The Society’s Veishea open house was highlighted by demonstrations of the moulding of ceramic pieces and the enameling of jewelry. Student-made piggy banks and vases were sold as souvenirs.

A WORKSHOP in the Electrical Engineering Building is a new hobby room sponsored by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers.

Freshmen through seniors meet every 2 weeks for social meetings. At the first meeting, a Smoker, members saw a film on laying of an underwater telephone cable to Cuba. “Transiter Development” was outlined by Dr. Harold Anderson of the Naval Ordinance Lab.

Aero engineers use many devices to facilitate their learning of aeronautical principles. Here students examine an airplane model.

THE BALSA glider sailed smoothly through the air, barely ticked off the side of the motor-rocked aircraft carrier and, amid disappointed ejaculations, went into the water surrounding the ship. With the sinking of the plane, the next person stepped up to try his chances at landing a glider in the first prize winning booth of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences at the Engineers' Carnival. The Aero honorary, Sigma Gamma Tau, aided the members of Aero Science in creating this prize-winner.

Aero Science and Sigma Gamma Tau

The Aero Science organization is for aeronautical engineers of Iowa State. Through meetings they become better acquainted and informed on current events in aeronautical engineering. Speakers contribute to the educational betterment of the members.

Sigma Gamma Tau, Aero honorary, selects its members from the upper one-quarter percent by grade point of the junior class in aeronautical engineering.

A full-scale plane and aircraft engines filled Aero Lab at Aero Sciences Veishea open house display.

Two Aero Science majors examine the many parts which make up this nine cylinder radial engine from a Navy Gruman "Wildcat" plane.

GE Society for Good Programs

"It's an important field in itself. Just look at it this way . . ." The Best engineering department will probably never be decided, but the purpose of General Engineering Society is to promote the prestige and interest of this field.

Well-attended meetings are evidence of a carefully-planned program including "Architecture in Europe," "How to Give a Good Interview," "The Political Scene" and "Asiatic Policy."

AN OPTION within the General Engineering Department is Industrial Engineering. The Society of Industrial Engineers finds its members from this major field. The Industrial Engineers are concerned primarily with manufacturing as compared with the G. E.'s emphasis on administrative problems. Speakers from General Motors, Ford, IBM and other companies were featured at the bi-monthly meetings of the society.

Together with the General Engineering Society, the Industrial Engineers held a Veishea concession stand and open house.

TAU SIGMA DELTA is an honorary fraternity open to faculty and students enrolled in Architecture, Landscape Architecture and Allied Arts. To be eligible for membership, a student must be in senior college and be in the upper 20% of his class. There are 13 faculty and 13 student members this year. Each year the pledges sketch a college scene for a prize which is awarded to the best drawing at the annual spring banquet.

Tau Sigma Delta Awards Prize

During the year Tau Sigma Delta brings art to the campus by giving exhibits, discussions, demonstrations and talks pertaining to the subject.

This year's Chapter Master is John Schmidke; Scribe is Dave Wiemer and Recorder, Jim Schuleter.

Mechanical Engineering students check their apparatus carefully as they run tests on an internal combustion engine in the M.E. lab.

THE ODOR of paint and linseed oil stifled breathing in the Home Economics foyer. Paint-spattered canvasses carpeted the floor and scaffolds bridged the doors. The dark oak woodwork, so fashionable in Catherine MacKay's day, was refinished to a lightened limed oak. Coeds filed through the foyer, some commenting on the new interior work and others chatting about classes . . . tests. The inconvenience created during redecoration of the Home Ec foyer and the first floor was hardly noticed by most students.

Moderization was completed and the Home Ec women enjoyed the "new face" in their building.

Marjorie Garfield, head of the Applied Art Department, and Instructor Janet Navin designed the new modernized furniture for the Home Ec building. The Physical Plant shop followed these plans and built-to-order new display cases, coat racks, bulletin boards and benches.

angular built-in coat racks house coats, jackets and packages during classes and meetings. Benches accented with brightly-colored cushions add a new note of cheeriness to the foyer.

Freshly-cooled water is a feature of the installed water cooler systems strategically located for the convenience of everyone. The mosaic-tiled former water fountains on the first floor have been adapted to follow the decorative scheme by the planting of greenery in them.

Florescent lighting not only brightened the first floor halls, but many other halls and labs throughout the Home Economics building. Their installation has been part of the modernization program.

From all parts of the United States and Canada authorities in the fields of nutrition, medicine and public health met at Iowa State College in January for a Weight Control Colloquium. Those who attended believed that home economists have a duty to educate each member of the family about correct eating habits so that extra pounds can be eliminated.

Overweight is a problem related to all age groups, statistics show. This fact, along with national data showing that one-fifth of all Americans over 30 are eating too much and are endangering their health, aided in the discussions carried on during the colloquium. Professor Erce! Eppright and Professor Pearl Swanson of the Home Economics Division were the two in charge of this colloquium.

A "Graduate Day" acquainted seniors with the work of the graduate program of the Home Economics Division at Iowa State College. Outstanding seniors from Iowa State and other colleges were invited to this meeting in March.

The second Alumni Institute on June 9th refreshed the memories of Home Ec alumni and related to them the developments in this division since their graduation. The institute this year stressed child development and household equipment.

In March Margaret Warning became head of the Textiles and Clothing Department of the Home Economics Division. Miss Warning succeeded Mrs. Irene Buchanan who up until March was acting head of the T & C Department and also Personnel Officer of the Home Ec Division. Mrs. Buchanan is now in charge of the Personnel Officer's job.

BARBARA FORKER, Physical Education Department

JULIA FALTONSON, Assistant to Dean of Home Economics

DIRECTING functions for the Home Economics Department is a job handled by the girls who make up the Home Economics Council. Their purpose is mainly to create and maintain an active interest in the field of home economics through a great variety of functions and departmental clubs.

One of the jobs of the Home Ec Council members is to organize and carry out plans for the Home Ec Ball.

A sparkling black and silver setting formed a romantic background and sprinkled "Dream Dust" created a magical atmosphere for the Home Ec Ball.

Home Economics Day underwent reorganization as council, Omicron Nu and Phi Upsilon

Omicron combined to sponsor the first Home Economics Banquet. Mrs. Edna Kraft James was guest speaker, and outstanding Iowa State coeds were honored with scholarships.

"I met the most interesting woman from South America — I could have listened to her for hours." Iowa State's women from foreign countries found fascinated listeners at the United Nations Day Tea.

Home Ec Council Has Big Job

Twice-monthly meetings bring out ideas for further promotion of home economics. Style shows, field trips, interesting demonstrations and a long list of similar doings were well coordinated to help acquaint all divisional girls with the scope of home economics.

HOME ECONOMICS COUNCIL.—First Column: Sinclair, Woodard (Sec.), Schanche, Miller (Treas.), Hunter. Second Column: Bernau, Johnston, Mayer, Joslin, Kendall. Third Column: Lindemeyer, Henke, (V.P.), King, Madill, Franke, Swanson. Fourth Column: Jirsa, Armstrong, Anderson, Penneck, Brogan (Pres.), Fallinson.

Jane Pennock served on Home Ec Council, Cardinal Guild and the Cheery Squad. Arlene Steffen was president of Phi Upsilon Omicron and of Roberts Hall and served on Home Ec Council.

bimonthly with guest speakers, is supplemented by such activities as the Art Mart, Christmas Bazaar, Buffet Dinner and projects such as the present one — designing and making silk screened draperies for the Home Economics building.

Led by president, Theo Ann DuBois, and having as their advisor Miss Harriet Adams, Delta Phi's seek attainment of their goal of promotion of interest in art. Seventeen members belong.

Student members having at least a 2.5 all-college and 3.0 average in art classes are given high recognition for their art ability. New members are elected to Delta Phi Delta each spring.

GETTING acquainted with foreign students has been the specific project of Omicron Nu this year. All foreign women students were invited to meet with the group at Harriet Allen's Studio in the fall. Omicron Nu, national home economics honor society, recognizes high scholarship. Members are chosen from the junior and senior classes, from graduate students and from faculty. Membership in this group is one of the highest honors a home economics student can attain.

Omicron Nu's for High Scholarship

As an annual event, Omicron Nu gives a tea honoring sophomore students who have outstanding scholarship records. The group also acted as co-sponsors with Phi Upsilon Omicron and Home Economics Council for the Home Economics Day Banquet, the first of its kind at Iowa State. Another project was selling note cards at Veishea.

THE NATIONAL professional Home Economics honorary, Phi Upsilon Omicron, is a goal of nearly all Home Economics women.

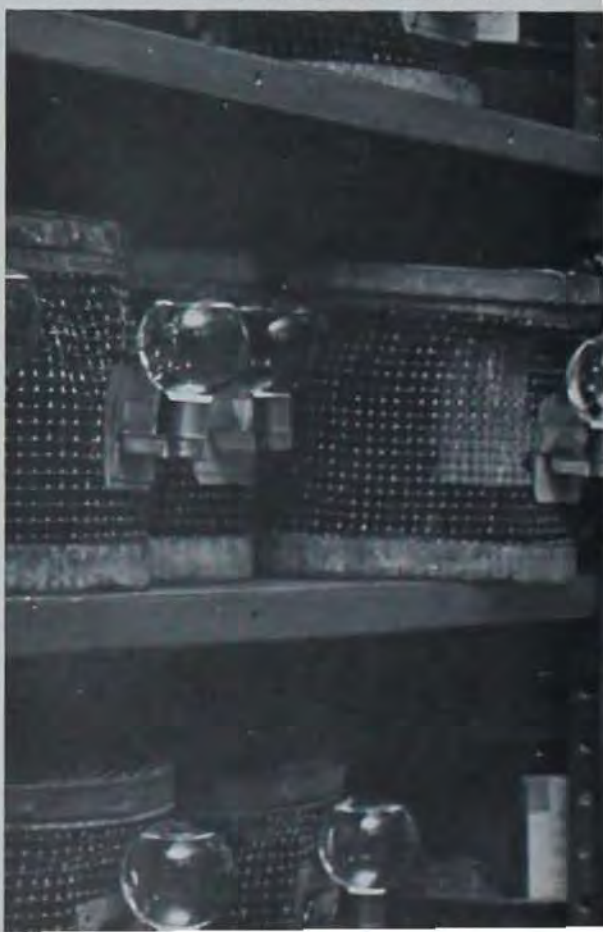

Eligibility for membership requires a grade placement in the upper 40 per cent of the junior class plus professional attitudes and interests in home economics. Prospective members must have the approving vote of all members and the approval of the advisory board.

Phi Upsilon Omicron

The biggest project of Phi U each year is making fruitcakes to sell before and after Thanksgiving. Three weeks before the sale each member worked Wednesday afternoons measuring ingredients; others worked on Friday and Saturday mixing and baking the cakes. The proceeds go toward a 100 dollar scholarship to a freshman or sophomore women in home economics. It is awarded on the basis of scholarship, activities, character and need.

Phi Upsilon Omicron, along with Omicron Nu and Home Economics Council, sponsored the Home Economics Banquet, the first of its kind for this division. The banquet replaced the former Home Economics Day.

THIS year the Department of Industrial Administration of the Division of Science was officially recognized by the Iowa State Board of Education. For the past 5 years this department has been listed in the college catalog as a major course in the Division of Science.

Headed by William H. Schramper, this department provides training for students interested in business and industry. The student majoring in Industrial Administration may have as his goal either that of his own private business enterprise or he may aspire toward an ultimate business management position.

The department is now called Industrial Administration. The purpose of this department is to provide interrelated training in the basic recognized business areas. An opportunity for preparation in the study of law is possible. If a student completes 3 years in this curriculum followed by 1 year in a recognized college of law, he will receive the degree of Bachelor of Science with a major in Industrial Administration from Iowa State.

"Challenge," a new television program started in September 1953, was continued for the second year. Programs, sponsored by the Home Economics and Science divisions and watched by viewers all over Iowa, were designed to present the human interest side of science and to tell of the contribution of science to mankind. The program series narrated each story so that the viewer learned how and why the scientist chose his profession and what the nature of his work was. Thus the program answered many questions asked by parents of Iowa State students, the students themselves and the general public of Iowa.

By the mechanism of television the viewers were transplanted to the scene of a scientist at work. The development of canned cream, whipped under pressure, the building and stocking of an aquarium and several historical science discoveries were the contents of three programs, each complete within 30 minutes.

"Challenge" programs were kinescoped on film and used in a larger area than that of Iowa for classes, meetings and interested groups.

A lost shipment of stone table tops caused much conversation around the campus and delayed the final finishing of the classrooms in the new section of the Science Building. A few of the labs not requiring these table tops were completed, as were several offices. After the stone arrived, workmen added final details. By the fall of 1955 the new section will be in entire use by classes in bacteriology, geology and zoology.

Carbon dioxide has been found by the bacteriology department to be essential to the life of some animals and certain bacteria. The carbon dioxide unites with the pyruvic acid of the cell to form the oxaloacetic acid so essential to life. By the use of radioactive carbon-14, the carbon dioxide can be traced through the stages of metabolism in the cells. This discovery has reopened the field of study in photosynthesis. In the oxygen systems of aircraft 5 per cent of carbon dioxide is now added and acts as a stimulant to the human body.

The Iowa State College synchrotron produces high energy x-rays of seven million volts. The departments of chemistry and physics investigate photo-nuclear reactions in which x-rays cause the transmutation of nuclei. The physics department studies the structure of nuclei and the chemistry department the disintegration of the nuclei. This research project is operated by the Institute of Atomic Research and was constructed in 1950.

DATA SHEETS, tabulations of numbers, name lists and many hours of work went into the curriculum survey conducted by the members of the Science Council this year. Two hundred and fifty junior and senior college science majors were interviewed for their recommended core curriculum changes. The Statistics Department helped to compile the data. When the study was completed, the information was submitted to the Faculty Curriculum Committee with the suggested changes.

The Science Council consists of seven seniors, five juniors, three sophomores and two Cardinal Guild representatives. Students serving on the council are interviewed by a council committee and then elected by vote of all science students at the all-college spring elections. Two-thirds of the members from each class are elected and one-third are appointed by the committee.

The Science Ball, "Icy Ecstasy," featured Barbara Lumbar as the Science Ball Queen. Held in the Union during winter quarter, the dance was open to all college students.

Science Council conducted a program of student counseling for the freshmen, and orientation programs during Freshmen Days. Council members gave talks to acquaint the new students with the division.

A year ago the Science Council formed the new science honorary, Lampos. This year a faculty newsletter keeps the faculty members informed about the happenings of divisional clubs and the council.

URANIUM prospecting in the Black Hills was the topic of speaker Vaughn Knapp, a mining engineering student, at a bimonthly meeting of the Geology Club. After the regular business meetings, subjects not too technical, but of general interest to the members are discussed by program speakers.

Geologists Hear of Prospecting

Students, faculty members and authorities in various fields are invited to tell of their experiences.

A 100 square mile area is completely studied and mapped out by students in the Geology Department at the annual eight-week summer camp. This camp, located near Colorado Springs, Colorado, teaches the students to systematically study areas for suspected locations of natural resources.

A display illustrating the outlook for the future of the natural resources of the United States was created in scale models by members for the Veishea open house. Other parts of the open house included displays about the summer camping period and various types of minerals.

AS PART of their pledge projects, Pi Mu Epsilon pledges plotted given points on graph paper, then connected the points to discover the outline of the Pi Mu key. Members of this mathematics honorary must have an all-college grade point of 2.5 and a 2.75 in mathematics courses with at least one mathematics course beyond calculus.

Pi Mu's—ISC's Math Wizards

During the quarter the Pi Mu Epsilon's met to hear guest speakers. Dr. R. H. Bing of the University of Wisconsin talked on topology at one of these meetings. At other meetings Dr. C. E. Langenhop discussed mathematical logic and its applications, and Dr. G. O. Hendricson told about the trends and opportunities in mathematics.

At the traditional spring initiation banquet Dr. D. C. Kreider gave a welcoming speech to the new members.

An award was given to Christ Dixon for outstanding work in math through his sophomore year.

LAMPOS is one of the newest honoraries on the Iowa State College campus. This divisional honorary selects outstanding science students for membership. From four to seven seniors and the same number of juniors in this division are selected by the present members and are subject to approval by the Dean of the Science Division. High scholastic requirements of a 2.5 grade average insure that election to Lampos depends on true leadership and merit. Each year honorary members are selected from the faculty. Dr. Norman Graebner was invited as such a member this year.

Lampos—Science Honorary

To improve the group spirit within the Science Division and to promote a feeling of unity is one of the important functions of Lampos. This year the Lampos members were busy establishing their budget. They ordered keys to be given to each member. During winter quarter Lampos met regularly and near the end of the quarter they announced the names of new members.

Warm weather brings ISSIE members to Union steps.

Cokes and ice cream are welcome before Science Women's Club meeting.

THE TANTALIZING odor of spaghetti filled the room. Plates heaped high with white noodles and meat-tomato sauce were placed in front of each woman. Chatter ceased as they consumed the food. With appetites appeased and conversation lightened, the Science Women's Club began their first meeting. The club includes women in any division except home economics. One exception to this rule is that Home Economics and Related Science majors are admitted.

Science Women's Club

Twice a month the programs of the meetings appeal to the scientific interests of each woman. Dr. Norman Graebner explained the situation in world affairs, and samples of new fabrics were demonstrated by an extension service woman at two meetings.

THE BUSINESS-Students Association is the new name for the organization previously known as "ISSIE," the Iowa State Society of Industrial Economists. The change in name was due to the official recognition of the Industrial Administration Department this year by the Iowa State Board of Education. New interest in this department was reflected by an increase in club membership.

Business- Students Assoc.

Professional guests spoke to the Business-Students Association twice a month. A panel of men from General Electric each talked about a different division of this company. A fall trip through the Collegiate Manufacturing Company in Ames showed the students the many processes necessary in producing a varied line of novelty items.

THE INDUSTRIAL advantages of chemistry were explored by Dr. Charles Goetz, head of the Iowa State College Chemistry Department, for members of Alpha Chi Sigma, professional chemistry fraternity. Harry Svec, also of the ISC chemistry department, discussed the use of the mass spectrometer and its relationship to chemistry at another of the biweekly meetings of this group.

Alpha Chi Sigma is the only professional chemistry fraternity in existence and was founded in

Members of this group are chosen only after consideration of their scholarship and personality. An expressed desire for chemistry as a vocation is one of the prerequisites for membership.

Chemists Join Alpha Chi Sigma

Smokers, a dance for members and their dates and an initiation banquet are part of the social program of the fraternity.

Add a chemical here, turn a stopcock there. It's all easy when you know how, in spite of how complicated the equipment happens to look.

A group of biology students try out the science laboratories located in the new Science Building. Large windows provide adequate lighting.

Television workshop, now an accredited course at Iowa State, gives students practical experience in production and direction of TV programs.

DEAN I. A. Merchant looks at the blue prints for the new Iowa State Veterinary Medical Diagnostic laboratory. The building will be attached to the north wing of the Veterinary Medicine Quadrangle when it is completed. State appropriations of 600,000 dollars made possible the beginning of construction on this building and its equipment. Due to a slope in the ground, this modern building when finished will appear to be three complete stories on the north side. In addition to the diagnostic services, the departments of anatomy, hygiene and pathology will use this building for teaching.

The Iassac Hayes Memorial Library has been donated to the Veterinary Medicine Division this year. Iowa State alumnus of 1937 and known to everyone as "Ike," he had accumulated the library while serving as a practitioner. The collection will be housed in the Clinic Annex Reading Room. The room has been modernized by the addition of new lighting and student-built bookshelves. Veterinary Medicine students' wives fitted and sewed the new draperies for this library.

Veterinary Medicine

I. A. MERCHANT,
Dean of Veterinary Medicine

This building, the Clinic Annex, has been re-decorated and provides facilities for student activities. The AVMA Council and the Iowa State College Veterinarian have their offices there. The Reading Room provides a place to study for the Vet students.

The functions of the Division of Veterinary Medicine are five-fold. Undergraduate and graduate teaching constitutes the most important part of the division, but clinical services, diagnostic services and extension also serve their purposes. In addition, the Veterinary Medical Research Institute is an integral part of the division. Research is carried on in the various departments throughout the division and at the Institute laboratories.

The discovery of various infectious agents which may cause atrophic rhinitis, known commonly as "sneezing disease," in swine was made in the Veterinary Medical Research Institute. Methods for the prevention of this disease are being studied at the present time.

Throughout Iowa the prevalence of mucosal, a disease which causes necrotic areas in the intestinal tract of cattle, is increasing. Research work is now being carried on to find out its cause and some type of cure.

LAWRENCE E. BARNES, Veterinary Hygiene

BURNELL W. KINGREY, Veterinary Medicine and Science

Studies on the various animal bile, to learn if there are other reservoirs for the parasite of trichinosis than the pig, will help the prevention of this disease in man.

Short course programs through efforts of the Short Course Committee of Veterinary Medicine have refreshed the memories of practioners on the facts about new developments in poultry diseases. In the summer of 1954 a conference was attended by practioners on swine diseases. Experts from all parts of the United States were brought to Iowa State to discuss various aspects of these diseases.

Two years of college study in a specific area are required before a man can apply for admittance to the Division of Veterinary Medicine. Many students study in the Division of Science. If they complete three years in that division, they will be awarded a Bachelor of Science degree upon completion of their first year in the Division of Veterinary Medicine.

Each year about 130 applicants take the National Veterinary Medical Aptitude Test. The results of this test, along with an interview and consideration of their scholarship, determines the selection by the Admission Committee of the 70 students who are to be admitted.

MEMBERS of the Veterinary Medicine Council held meetings in new surroundings in the recently decorated Veterinary Library. This council, which serves as the executive group for the Veterinary Medicine Division, is the governing body of the Iowa State College Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Each class in Veterinary Medicine is represented on the council by an elected class member. Each serves for a term of one-half the school year. Re-election of officers in February gives a greater number of students the chance to benefit from holding an office. The new president-elect serves for a term under an experienced president, who the term before was also president-elect. The new president is thus able to familiarize himself with the executive duties of the chapter before assuming office.

The council, in carrying out its executive duties, performs according to the provisions of the constitution, administrative by-laws, Honor Code and Code of Ethics of the Veterinary Medicine student body.

Veterinary Medicine Council

The members of the Executive Council must be in good standing in the Student Chapter of the A.V.M.A. and must have met the scholastic requirement for holding their office.

Dr. Burnell W. Kingrey, Assistant Professor of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery, acted as the faculty advisor this year.

During the first term Jim Creel was president; Rex Jones wielded the gavel for the Executive Council in the second.

Basic studies in zoology and other sciences are an important part of the preparation a student must undergo to qualify for Vet Med training.

As a part of the treatment for an infectious skin disease, this Iowa State Veterinary Medicine student treats the side of a hog.

Everyone goes busily about his business as construction work progresses rapidly on the new Iowa State Veterinary Clinic building.

VETERINARY students don't have a chance to get too deeply buried in books. The ISC Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association prevents that by scheduling a varied list of outside activities.

Dr. A. H. Quin, president of this association, was featured speaker at the fall Veterinary Banquet. At this time freshmen were welcomed into the division. Quin's comments on the contributions of the veterinarian to our civilization, both in the past and in the present, seemed most fitting for the start of a new year.

Student Chapter of AVMA Plans

At other times Vets had the opportunity to obtain first hand information from professionals in the field.

Shep Field's orchestra played the second consecutive year for the Vets and their dates at the Vet Med Ball. During this all-college, semi-formal dance in Great Hall in January, the Bomb Beauty finalists were introduced.

An annual Christmas party was sponsored by the Junior Vet Med class. This social function was attended primarily by married students, their wives and children. Santa brought gifts to the tots, and the junior vets entertained guests with a skit about the faculty. The vets' spring dance at the Country Club in Ames was made festive by the bunny hop and special decorations.

"Plenty of baked ham for everyone," and they meant everyone! It was a traditional spring picnic for the AVMA members. Volleyball, horseshoes and other sports were enjoyed by attenders.

Each class in the Veterinary Medicine Division produces part of the Vet Veishea Open House. The freshman class took charge of veterinary anatomy, the sophomore, bacteria, pathology and physiology, and the junior class, pharmacology and the Veishea Dog Show. The Dog Show provided delightful entertainment for spectators and valuable experience for participants.

The promotion of a spirit of friendly relations among Veterinary Medicine students is one of the goals of the Student Chapter of AVMA. The 250 undergraduate members are provided with an opportunity to gain professionally as well as socially and to uphold the honor and dignity of the veterinary profession.

DEAN I. A. MERCHANT, Veterinary Medicine Division, spoke to Pre-Veterinary Club members at their first monthly meeting. Registered in the Division of Science, pre-vets were given an outline of the veterinary course of study and the requirements for admittance to Vet Med School. Dr. R. A. Packer of the Admissions Committee outlined more requirements at the second meeting during fall quarter.

The establishment of a small animal clinic was the topic of Dr. I. M. Thiele, general practitioner from Marshalltown, at one meeting. Semi-technical movies on topics of interest and concerning the work of the profession were shown to pre-vets at other meetings.

The 120 members of the Pre-Vet Club usually discuss their biggest common interest, entrance to Veterinary Medical School, during their smokers in the Union Gallery. Their social functions, held fall and winter quarters, included skits, a barber-shop quartet and musical entertainment. Spring quarter wouldn't have been complete, of course, without the annually celebrated picnic for all pre-vets and their dates.

With a bit in place to keep the animal's mouth open, a veterinary student examines the inside of a horse's mouth with his hands.

Summertime Exodus . . .

THE SUN blazed bright and hot on the nation. From its lofty viewpoint rays fell upon Iowa State students scattered over the country on their summer vacations.

Catching its tanning effects as reflected off cool, refreshing waters in Wisconsin or Minnesota, many ISCers took full advantage of the true meaning of the word vacation. Or perhaps it was just a mid-day break between the chores of that resort job that turned out to be one big party all summer long. And what tans they had to show the kids when school opened again in the fall.

Over the cities the sun beamed its steaming heat on stone buildings. Inside, Iowa State summer help kept cool with the advantages of air conditioning while pulling in a substantial weekly paycheck that would certainly help out with the return of fall and school expenses. And the experience!

But the sun was moving on to the west where it would set. Below there was a party winding its way up a well-worn mountain trail. And there were two kids from Ames.

What an exciting summer for them! But wait. Just a few miles away there were more. From the sun's high spot above the world it would be hard to tell if it was shining on foresters, engineers, geologists or agriculturalists, but they were all out there somewhere.

Of course, when summer vacation comes the sun doesn't forget to shine over Ames. The campus becomes sparsely populated, but classes continue. There is an air of informality, and off and on there are more convention delegates than students on campus. Then, as quickly as a summer afternoon passes, the summer fades. The sun continues to shine, but this time its rays are of autumn.

On last summer's Hamlin tour, sponsored by Miss Hamlin of the Applied Art Department, ISC students saw Romeo's castle.

Much of the fun of a foreign tour is the shopping in a variety of different stores. Here ISC students display a portion of their purchases.

Among the many sights of interest included in the trip abroad was the open market place. Here an elderly woman displays her wares.

BOOKS were stored and most campus residences stood empty. The campus population had dispersed itself to all corners of the nation — and beyond. Summer vacation was finally here!

Nine months of school seemed more than enough. It was great to get away from the pressing studies, the urgent meetings and the constant rush of school for a little while. Now, at last, there was time to do all those things that took too much time during the school year. Home was just the place for these activities.

Some found intriguing jobs in new places. The idea of money coming IN for a change attracted many Iowa Staters to any and all types of summer jobs. And then there was travel! These were wonderful months for so many things . . . swimming, golf, paying off debts, seeing the old gang again . . . ah, summer!

Iowa State students enjoy traveling through the "streets" of Venice, getting the feel of the romantic atmosphere of that famous old city.

Highlight of the year for forestry students is the annual forestry summer camp where they get a chance to put their book learning to work.

Members of the ROTC engineer battalions work out practical military construction problems at the Army ROTC summer camp. ROTC members at summer camp take a welcome rest after a long morning of field maneuvers, drill and demonstrations.

DURING the summer some ISC students spent time away from the campus and still earned college credits. Summer camps teach students the practical experience of their year's work.

"Here comes another bumble bee," warned an Iowa State man at the Civil Engineering Surveying Camp. The bees and wasps caused many a swollen face among these surveyors, whose campsite is located 400 miles from Ames at a former C.C.C. Camp near Wirt, Minn. Fifty men spent from the first of August until the second week of September at this location.

The fishermen in the group head for Rainy Lake, Lake of the Woods or Lake Superior in the most northern part of Minnesota and try and catch those "big ones." Others travel into Canada for a break from work during 3-day weekends.

With the transit and level, engineers survey highways, depths of water, work out maps and plan imaginary railroads and highways. The Minnesota camp offers better practical experience than Iowa because Minnesota's topography is rougher.

Sixty-three hundred miles of highway were traveled by 30 agronomy and animal husbandry students last summer. Traveling by bus, students saw the King Ranch in Texas, historical Vicksburg, Louisiana, Fourth of July in Washington, D.C., Pennsylvania Dutch farms, part of eastern Canada, the Ford Rotunda in Detroit and the Chicago Livestock Yards. All this for credit, too!

Last summer 45 students, including an Iowa State coed and four staff members, spent 9 weeks 66 miles west of Laramie, Wyo., on the west side of Medicine Bowl Mountain Range. These foresters had summer experience equivalent to two summer sessions at summer school.

Classes, tests and definite work are included in the studying of timber cruising, silviculture, forestry operations and forest industries.

Camps for Experience

For about 1 week of the camping period the group went on a "Buck Camp." A trip into the Rocky Mountains and Park was part of the experience.

The ROTC organizations on the Iowa State campus have summer camps also. During the junior year Army ROTC men spend 6 weeks at summer camps throughout the country. Regular NROTC students spend two summers on cruises and one on instruction in aviation and amphibia study. Flying hours and air base experiences are part of the summer camp program for the Air Force ROTC men. The Marine ROTC men spend the summer at Quantico, Va.

The army has not only its drill and its maneuvers, but also its music. Here Fred Anderson, solo cornet in the ISC band, gets some practice.

Under the hot July sun, ROTC artillery students learn the fine points of accurate fire during summer camp sessions at Fort Sill, Okla.

"I need volunteers for an important mission." The cardinal rule for survival in the Army is "never volunteer." Here are four who did.

THE MOTIONLESS forms in the Palm Beach swimming trunks soaking up the hot summer afternoon sun were not sleeping. Under dark sunglasses sharp eyes fixed on the well-shaped feminine figure poised on the high dive. Bobbing heads below cleared to the sides as the form glided neatly into the blue depths. Eyes searched to see where she'd come up, but the pool was too crowded; before long she again sailed exquisitely into the refreshing water.

The men continued to watch; then one decided to forsake burning tan for cool comfort. What would Ames be without Carr's Pool in the summertime? The classes were notable in their informality, but when it's hot, a swimming pool is the only place to be; and Iowa really knows the meaning of the word 'hot' in July and August. ISC didn't quite compare with a resort summer, but there were extra credits piling up.

A dripping figure effected a startled jump as he splashed cool water on a thoughtful fellow. "Hey, stimulate your brain. I have some calc problems to get. I'm all refreshed and ready to study."

On the other side of the pool, a group of girls with brown backs bared to the sun were writing letters and discussing their compositions. The words "concert every Wednesday night," "air conditioned Commons for studying" and "ratio that beats the regular year" reached the boys' ears. They laughed. Eating with the girls in Birch Hall second session would help solve that last item.

Sun, Studies at Summer School

It would be great to spend the whole day here, but studies were calling, so the boys prepared to leave. They must get done tonight; nothing could interfere with golf tomorrow. "Hey, girls, want a ride back to Oak and Elm?"

The sun blazes down on the walk in front of the Home Ec Building as a lone coed walks toward class during Iowa State's summer session.

Air conditioning? Well, not quite. But certainly an asset to summer studying in comfortable places.

A cool drink to make the books more bearable in the summer heat ... But in a few minutes, the heat suddenly won't be noticed at all.

The girls knew studies waited but were not yet ready to leave. It wasn't everyday that they had enough time to go swimming in the afternoon. In fact, some of them had classes then and had to utilize their few free moments to the fullest. But thank goodness the day's early start helped to avoid some of the summer heat. Of course, getting up at 6:30 to make it for breakfast before a 7:30 class was the most difficult task of the day, but a dependable bright sun streaming in the open windows was a definite aid to the alarm clock.

The girls continued to write letters and one enthusiastically told her folks how much she was gaining through the many interesting people she'd met. "There are so many foreign and special students; what marvelous stories they tell," she read from her letter. "And besides that, I'm meeting a lot of grad students in my major. I'm really hobnobbing with intellectuals. Maybe a little will rub off."

A darkly tanned coed joined the conversation with a couple of comments on the merits of hour-long classes before she was tossed in the pool. Letters were quickly finished; then one more dip before time to head home to dry hair for the exchange in dorm court. As they left they passed a mixed group deeply engulfed in planning the week-end's picnic. Ah, summer school!
