WE WO

IOWA STATE IN A WAR YEAR

Six thousand men and women from 48 states, Hawaii and South America, China and Japan, Germany and France, working side by side. That is Iowa State in 1943—working to understand, not to memorize—studying to widen concepts, not to wall themselves up. Here we have a woman planning to be a dietitian; there is a man who will someday be a veterinarian; beyond is a farmer of the future—a trained scientist; walking with him is a child care expert; a builder of bridges; a chemist and a physicist. Then add to this group 2,000 navy men—soon to be electrician's mates, diesel mechanics, cooks and bakers; more than a thousand army men getting specialized training; over a hundred Curtiss-Wright women learning specialized tasks and numerous other women taking courses in engineering, agriculture and physics. That's Iowa State in 1943.

These things are not apart from a world at war. They are the world. The men and women of Iowa State are learning to feel about with tentacles of knowledge to strangle the forces of fear and superstition based on ignorance. They are working to win the war and the peace that will follow.

Holds Two Degrees

Inaugurated as governor of Iowa this year, Bourke B. Hickenlooper holds degrees from Iowa State College in the Division of Science and from the law school of the University of Iowa. He served 21 months in the army during World War I, spending a portion of that time overseas. He was elected to the governorship after four years as lieutenant governor under George Wilson.

Wielding the gavel of the Iowa State Board of Education for the fourth year, Henry C. Shull presides over this group that regulates the actions of five state colleges and universities. The nine members of the board are appointed by the governor and approved by the senate, serving 6-year terms.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

To the Members of the Class of 1943:

There are many who would tell you, as you leave the halls of the Iowa State College, that civilization is doomed to destruction and the human race is fast on its way to chaos. These pictures of impending doom are not new. In every crisis in the world's history such prophets have arisen; seldom if ever have their gloomy forebodings come true.

In your years at the Iowa State College we have endeavored to give you fundamental training and education in a useful field of activity. We have also tried to give you some understanding and appreciation of the world in which you live, of the methods by which we have reached our present position in civilization and the causes of our present troubles. Thus you should be equipped to judge impartially and intelligently the characters and events in the march of time.

One thing is clearly evident: Most of the troubles which we and which the world generally face today are the results of our own blindness, our own greed, our own stupidity and our failure to maintain in our personal and social lives the fundamental verities of truth, morality, and justice, and the courage that comes out of our firm belief in these virtues.

Mankind has revealed the secrets of nature, discovered her immutable laws and developed marvelous inventions for the betterment of the human race. Here and there, through the ages, great philosophers have laid down the principles on which human life may be guided to its high goal. If leaders have arisen here and there who have diverted the gains of mankind to evil uses, we should of course destroy them quickly, but we should be equally zealous to find the reasons for their rise to temporary power and correct those faults.

This is your job in the America of the future and in the new world. We can no longer live to ourselves; we can no longer ignore the economic and social problems and the aspirations of the peoples of other countries. The nations of this world must live together, on a basis of mutual respect and a concern for the common good.

We have full faith that you will do your share in this great work.

Cordially yours,

Charles E. Friley
Charles E. Friley
President

Our president, who travels extensively in the interests of the college war effort, is giving his enthusiastic support to the student War Council, and offering all possible assistance to the newly founded Naval Training School. While giving fullest cooperation to the army in its specialized training program and to the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Company in its plan to train women, Dr. Friley wrote this letter to the students.

President Charles E. Friley

Proposes Changes

Dr. Charles E. Friley, president of Iowa State College, spent many extra hours in 1942 and 1943 keeping the college on an even keel during the crucial war period. He proposed and carried through the elimination of the Thanksgiving vacation and lengthening of the Christmas holidays to solve transportation problems. Advising young men to complete as much work as possible, he nevertheless gave complete cooperation to all selective service boards over the country.

Mrs. Paulus Lange

John L. Holmes

M. D. Helser, dean of the Junior College and director of personnel, has administered the program for the heaviest enrollment in the junior college in the history of Iowa State. As chairman of the Student Loan Fund, Mrs. Paulus Lange answers the increased demand for loans caused by the accelerated education program. John L. Holmes, assistant director of personnel and director of the I.S.C. Testing Bureau, has been busy filling student requests for aptitude tests due to the increased demand for student employment on the campus. Housing Director Mrs. Madge I. McGlade has accepted added responsibilities this year with the arrival of contingents of the U. S. Naval Training School and the Curtiss-Wright college women on the campus. New Director of the Memorial Union, J. C. Schilleter supervises the war activities at the hub of the campus, including the food for the navy men and Curtiss-Wright women. Miss Jane Fay, newly appointed social director, has charge of the newly inaugurated exchange program, and supervises the social activities curtailed by lack of facilities and finances.

Dr. J. G. Grant

Charles H. Brown

Overseeing Iowa State's land holdings throughout the state is George Godfrey, director of agricultural relations. Dr. John Grant and his staff are now working with the navy hospital, while Dr. Charles Brown, librarian, has expanded the library's activities to include research books for war industries. D. C. Faber heads the Engineering Extension Service, offering short courses in war fields, and Wallace Barron, director of alumni affairs, edits the Alumnus and oversees the preservation of the names of Iowa State men and women in the armed services. As Director of the Agricultural Extension Service, R. K. Bliss helps farm families solve war-time labor and machinery problems.

IN MEMORIAM

Maria M. Roberts

On April 12, 1942, Iowa State's busy professors, students and administrators stopped for a moment, hats in hand, to pay tribute to the small, white-haired woman who for 50 years had given the utmost in service and loyalty to Iowa State College.

Throughout those 50 years, Maria M. Roberts had been assistant to the college preceptress, vice-dean and dean of the Junior College, professor and head of the mathematics department, and dean emeritus of the Junior College. On June 10, 1940, Miss Roberts received the honorary degree of doctor of laws in recognition of her service.

As a student, she distinguished herself by selection for membership in Phi Kappa Phi, Pi Mu Epsilon, Sigma Delta Epsilon and Mortar Board. Roberts Hall, completed in 1939, stands as a permanent reminder of the woman whose belief in young people and her desire to help them will make for her a lasting place in Iowa State College traditions.

Frank D. Paine

Funeral services for Frank D. Paine, head of the General Engineering Department, were held in Great Hall, Memorial Union, July 2, 1942. Paine served Iowa State continuously, with the exception of the three years following his graduation, as instructor and professor in electrical engineering. In 1929, he was made head of the newly organized Department of General Engineering.

Entering Iowa State in 1905, he was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering. He became a member of Eta Kappa Nu, Tau Beta Pi and Delta Upsilon, and in 1940 was made an honorary member of Cardinal Key. Veishea owes its name to Mr. Paine, who coined the word from abbreviations of college divisions.

Probably the only head of a department in the Engineering Division who so won the confidence and friendship of students that they called him by his first name, he was a teacher, not of subjects, but of students.

CARDINAL GUILD

Guild Initiates Activity Point System

John Slater, Student Body President

To distribute activities among a greater number of students, the activity point system was put into effect this year by the Cardinal Guild, student governing body. The ban on negro orchestras was removed and the curtailing of library hours because of the shortage of labor, was prevented. To divert corsage expenditures toward war stamps and bonds, corsage dances were designated as Stamp Corsage Dances.

Adjusting to the changes brought about by the war, the Guild moved the 1943 all-college election and the Senior Prom into the winter quarter. The Guild attempts to represent true opinions of the student body.

Handle $1,400 Through War Chest

Born out of the emergency created when the United States entered the war in January, 1942, the Student Defense Council, now called the Student War Council, has grown in proportion until it now handles $1,400 in its War Chest Fund, and contains 12 committees embracing every phase of campus war activity. The 19 members are presidents of major campus organizations, with Student Body President John Slater serving as chairman, Marian Loofe as secretary and Dick Moehl as finance chairman.

War bond and stamp sales, headed by Irwin Nathlich, netted over $1,700. Sales were conducted by Twisters and Yel-Jax at football games and by volunteers at concerts and lectures. The newest campaign features were balloting for Bond Queen, with each stamp and bond allowing votes for a candidate, and a baseball game between the naval trainees and the college team.

Other committee chairmen were: Health and Recreation, Jean Guy; Service to Service Men, Carl Vangsness; Information Correspondence, Beth Blomgren; Education, Lee Gibson; Publicity, Dick Roberts; Salvage, Joy Hayes; Reclamation and Conservation, Margaret Hauck; Emergency Preparation, Kenneth Allbaugh; Personnel, Bill Calhoun, and Red Cross Sewing, Mary Lynn Beasley.

Graduate 185

Donning coveralls and gas masks as a part of their training, over 185 women have been graduated from six sections of Ambulance Driving, supervised by Dr. A. R. Lauer under the sponsorship of the Student War Council. Classes, which are held one evening each week for two hours, cover such emergency conditions as changing tires and oil, checking fan belts and spark plugs, greasing cars and blacking out headlights. Also included in the 20 hours of work required for certificates are lectures by faculty members on gases and abnormal conditions of patients, discussions by experienced ambulance drivers and actual night driving experience.

One hundred sixty-five tons is the mark just passed by the Salvage Committee of the Student War Council in cooperation with the college in collecting scrap metal and rubber. The first major drive collected over 500 pounds of scrap rubber at a dance held in the Memorial Union during the first summer session. Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, supervised two collections, one in the organized houses, wards and dormitories for scrap metal, and one in campus buildings for tin foil. The Salvage Committee solicited student cooperation last fall to uncover a 5-ton testing block buried on the campus and formerly used by the railroad engineers.

Social Council Revises Exchange System

A new system of sorority and fraternity exchanges was effected by the Joint Social Council this year. The exchanges are now being arranged by purely mechanical rotation; the 29 fraternities divided into 18 groups have an exchange every other week with one of the 9 sororities.

The council is composed of representatives from every college organization. This year an executive board was organized to facilitate the planning of programs and to decide questions of policy for the council. The representatives to this group are Harriet Swift, women's dormitories; Robert Himmel, men's dormitories; Margaret Hanson, sororities; Roger Henrich, fraternities; Frederick Smith, wards, and Paul Mongerson, chairman. This committee met once a month to outline the year's business and programs for the monthly council meetings.

Campus Varieties, Friday night fun-fests featuring student talent, were again sponsored by the Joint Social Council. Wilbur Layton and Barbara Hornaday were co-chairmen of the Varieties. Competition Night, with skits submitted by the organized houses, climaxed these Friday night programs. Singing, dancing and dramatic talent was employed during the year, with the Sor-Dor sing occupying two Friday nights during winter quarter.

The summer social program, intensified by the increased number of students, was sponsored by the council. Street dances, twisters, mixers and other dances were held in the Memorial Union for summer students.

Officers of the council this year were Paul Mongerson, chairman; Julie Wendel, secretary, and Miss Jane Fay, social director, appointed to replace Mrs. Paulus Lange.

MEMORIAL UNION STUDENT BOARD

Board Allots Profits To War Fund

A generous contribution to the War Council was made by the Memorial Union Student Board of Directors when they voted to allot a portion of the profits of all major dances to the care of the Student War Council. The board has also been active in giving student opinions on ways to handle the 1600 naval trainees and 105 women employed by Curtiss-Wright, who are fed by the Memorial Union cafeteria. The Union will also operate the kitchen at Friley Hall, where many of the naval trainees will be accommodated. The board is also represented on the Student War Council, and weekly luncheons have been arranged at the Union for these meetings. Representatives from each of the five divisions on the campus make up the Union Board. The selections are made at the all-college election held each year, with three students being chosen from Engineering and Agriculture, two from Home Economics, and one each from the Science and Veterinary Medicine Divisions.

Regular duties of these members are to pass all budgets for dances held in the Union, sponsor Friday night dances when no other college functions are being held, and supervise the Coffee Forums, Books and Coffee, Twisters, Musicales and Veishea Open-house. This year for the first time in the history of the Union, the board found it necessary to function during the summer months.

Plan For Women

With food production and distribution assuming a front line role during the past year, the Division of Agriculture has found it necessary to make alterations in its program. Each department in the division has made a careful study to determine the most pressing research needs, the areas in which extension work should be expanded, and the short courses which should be provided.

Intensive poultry and dairy courses for women are being developed, and a course in meats is planned for enlisted men at the request of the army's Quartermaster General.

Dean Kildee and Agricultural Council President, Irvin Nathlich confer in Dean Kildee's office

Though busier than ever, the hand of Dean H. H. Kildee can be found expertly guiding many new activities directly associated with the war effort. His position as head of the Agricultural Division enables him to actively assist in making essential adjustments to a war-gearred world both on the campus and in the various fields of activity over the state. Named by the Code of Iowa as an executive committee member of several state agricultural associations, he makes many vital addresses before farm and chamber of commerce groups concerning war-time agricultural problems. Working with national breed associations on programs of adjustment and education, he helps develop integrated radio programs dealing with ways and means of meeting 1943 food production goals. He spends many additional hours promoting agricultural courses in Iowa high schools. As a member of a committee appointed by the American Farm Bureau Federation to study and recommend improvements in livestock marketing, Dean Kildee works with Iowa market hog producers and packers on problems involved in the national meat rationing program.

Eight keys were presented to senior Agricultural Council members of the division this year, as a reward for their achievements. The council took charge of the Harvest Ball in October and sponsored the freshman reception for agricultural students during freshman days. Organized to promote harmony between the departments in the division, to sponsor extra-curricular activities for students, and to further the interests of agriculture, members post the Des Moines Register in the main hall of the Agricultural Building each morning to benefit late risers.

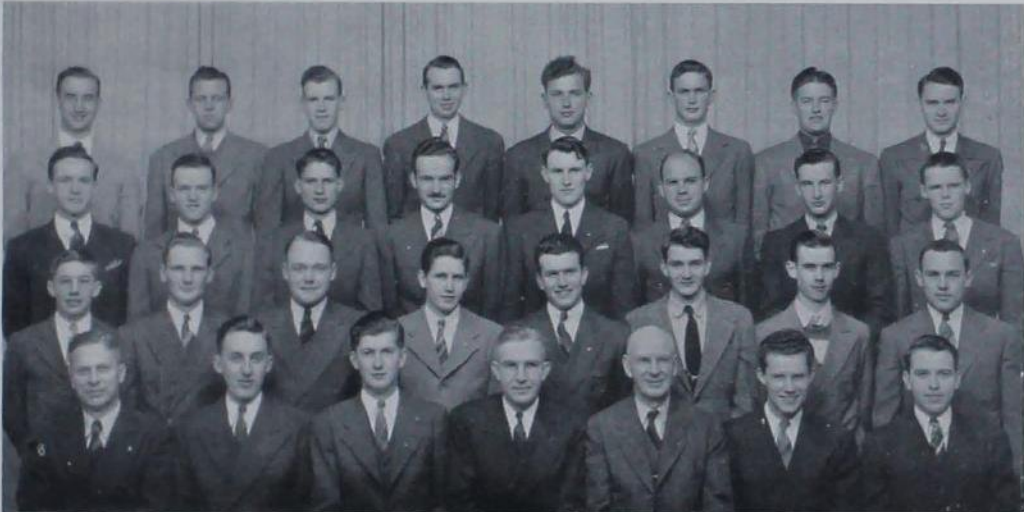

Send Five Men To Wisconsin Convention

Sending five delegates to the national convention at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the Iowa State chapter of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers won the Farm Equipment Institute cup for the fourth time in seven years of competition in the annual contest.

Activities sponsored by this organization which claims over 30 men were the Grease Monkeys' Ball and the Agricultural Engineering Mixer, which gave students an opportunity to become better acquainted with faculty members. This year's officers of the A.S.A.G.E. whose purpose is to promote professional interest in agricultural engineering, were Stanley Swanson, president, Quin Conard, vice-president, Clarence Bockhop, secretary-treasurer. Mr. E. J. Barger was faculty advisor of departmental organization.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION CLUB

News Letter Travels To Alumni Members

Everett Frink, secretary, Al Block and Lewis Baer, president of the Agricultural Education Club, draw up objectives and discuss the year's plans

A news letter, containing letters from service men and reviewing activities on the campus, was sent to every former member of the Agricultural Education Club as a project of the group this year. At each meeting throughout the year, a professor in the department either gave a speech or presided at a panel discussion, giving students a chance to become better acquainted with the various fields and their instructors. In place of the usual banquet, the club arranged a social meeting for members this year.

Fall officers of the organization were Alvin Block, president; Wesley Fox, vice-president; and Everett Frink, secretary. During the winter quarter, Lewis Baer served as president, with Raymond Rodgers as vice-president, George Gast taking role as secretary.

Hold First Banquet

The first Dairy Industry Club banquet held since the club's beginning in 1909 was sponsored this year, with the governor of Iowa and several other interested officials attending. The banquet made exclusive use of food products prepared on the campus.

Financial obligations of the organization are paid from a fund obtained by the sale of dairy products at Veishea when booths are set up at various points on the campus. This money has helped to send the Dairy Products Judging Team to competition since 1919, but was used this year to buy war bonds in lieu of the usual trip. During the year, Dr. A. L. Grosso spoke on "Argentina's Dairy Industry," and Mrs. Soledad Payawal of the Home Economics Division gave some information on dehydrated foods.

Membership in the Forestry Club was given new importance last January when Lyle F. Watts of the class of 1913 was appointed head of the National Forest Service. Watts is the first graduate of a school other than Yale University to become chief of the U. S. Forest Service.

Members of this year's club have made a systematic survey of the 300 acre Holst Tract, managed by them, to determine the value of its timber for production of much-needed native hardwood lumber for war purposes.

In addition to the usual activities of the club in sponsoring the Foresters' Hoedown and the Ames Forester, the program has been expanded to publish a news letter for the graduates and men in the armed forces. Co-editors are responsible for turning out the quarterly paper mailed to servicemen.

Three members of the Forestry Club take a Saturday off to do some surveying on their Holst Tract

HORTICULTURAL CLUB

Hort Show Features Apple Display

Staged in connection with the convention of the Iowa Horticultural Society in the college greenhouse, the Little Midwestern Horticultural Exposition is sponsored each year by the Horticultural Club. The Grand Sweepstakes prize was won for the second consecutive year by Mrs. Alta Masterson. Special features of this year's show, managed by Darl Snyder, were the display of new varieties of apples by Prof. H. L. Lantz, an apple selection contest for freshmen and a floral arrangement contest for home economics students.

Always taking an active part in Veishea activities, the Horticultural Club was founded in 1912 with a view toward promoting a professional interest among students and advancing the field of horticulture. This year's Little Midwestern was the twenty-fifth sponsored by the organization.

Supply Magazines for L. A. Students

Through the proceeds of a candy counter and contributions from the club members, a large variety of current magazines and periodicals, both popular and technical, is made available for daily reference in the reading room of the Landscape Architecture Building by the Vistonian Club, landscape architecture organization.

Tau Sigma Delta, national honorary society in Architecture and Landscape Architecture sponsors exhibitions of work of Vistonian club members in Great Hall of the Memorial Union. Current student work is constantly on exhibition in the rooms of the Landscape Architecture Studio for the benefit of visitors.

The Vistonian Club sponsors the extracurricular activities of the department, including special outside speakers and guest lecturers on related technical and cultural subjects. Firesides, dances, picnics, informal parties and student mixers make up the bulk of the social program which is highlighted each year by the costume party called the "Apple Polishers' Ball." At this informal affair, prizes are awarded for the best costumes, and a member of the faculty crowns the king of the Apple Polishers for the year.

Alumni and service men passing through the campus are often invited to speak at meetings of the Vistonians, giving valuable accounts of first-hand experiences.

Guiding the club were Jack Gibson, president and senior representative to the Agricultural Council; Theodore Osmundson, secretary and junior representative to the Agricultural Council; John Staley, vice-president and Mary Louise Long, treasurer.

AG ECON. CLUB

An illustrated lecture on Brazil, given by Dr. C. W. Witt, who has spent several years in that country, furnished the material for one of the most recent meetings of the Agricultural Economics Club. This meeting was one of many held on the first and third Tuesdays of each month at the homes of professors or in the Pine Room of the Memorial Union. Carrying out the purpose of the organization, which is to discuss timely problems related to the agricultural economics field, these programs also provided an opportunity for students and faculty to become better acquainted.

Serving as president this year was Robert Anderson, with Robert Fleming as vice-president, John Stamm as secretary-treasurer and Rainer Schickele as the faculty advisor.

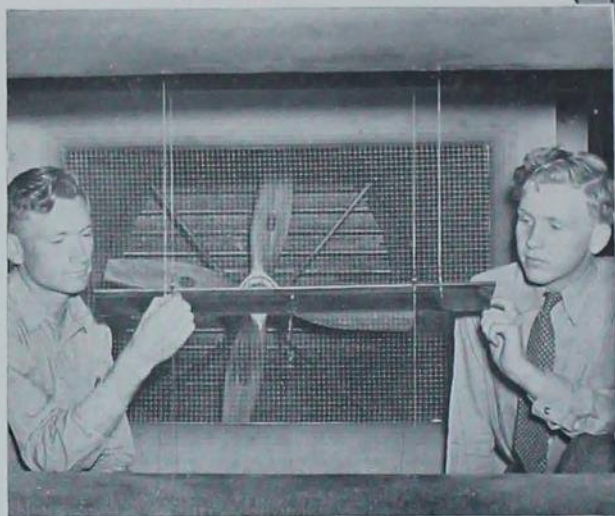

A. S. AGRONOMY

Cancellation of the student grain show open to all college students and sponsored by the student section of the American Society of Agronomy was brought about this year by the speeded up study programs and accelerated war conditions. The purpose of the show has been to give students actual experience in exhibition of corn and small grains.

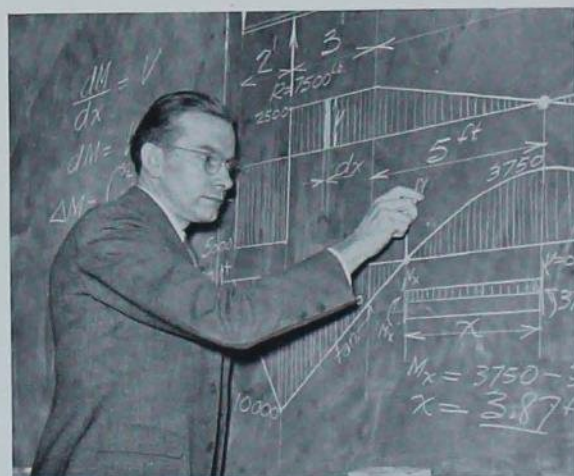

Founded to further professional interest in agronomy and provide an opportunity for students engaged in the study of farm crops and soils, the club was led by James Parrish, president; Leon Foderberg, secretary; Howard Wiig, treasurer; William Ecklund, the junior representative to the Agricultural Council; and Warren Kester, the senior representative to the Agricultural Council.

Teach Naval Men

Thirty-one hundred navy men, enrolled in electrical and diesel training courses and an enrollment of 105 Curtiss-Wright women, in addition to the 2,000 students usually accommodated, produced a grave strain on both the staff and the equipment of the Engineering Division this year. Besides this, forty civilian pilots are graduated every two months, and about 2,500 students have completed 12-week short courses especially designed for war industry service. Supplying a steady flow of engineers to the armed forces and to industry, the division also trains 60 electrical engineers every two quarters in the new field of Radar aircraft warning systems.

Gerald Harris and Dean T. R. Agg talk over affairs of state in the dean's office

Choosing to fight his battle on the education front, Dean T. R. Agg, head of the Engineering Division, holds the rank of Colonel in the Army Officers' Reserve Corps. It rests within his power, however, to hold or send his key faculty men to active duty. Several times he has recommended the induction of some of his most needed assistants, because he thought they could do more for their country in another position. As chairman of the Faculty War Council Advisory Board, Dean Agg reviews countless student draft situations, recommending deferment where he feels it is best. Numerous occasions find the dean speaking to large groups of civilians and trained instructors. As vice-president of the third zone of the American Society of Civil Engineers, he was called upon to clarify several conditions at a meeting in St. Louis. Many of the naval trainees stationed here graduate from their 16-week electrical course with Dean Agg giving the final commencement address. Fishing, golf and bridge are diversions he enjoys.

Lead Aid Program

Taking the lead in a program to bring recreation to the Iowa State War Industry Trainees, the Engineering Council made available to them all college facilities open to regular students. Through its efforts, an athletic and social program have been opened to these 2,500 students enrolled in intensive courses.

In an effort to convert fun into guns and ammunition, the council this year invested the profits from the Engineers' Carnival and the Engineers' Ball into war bonds. A total of $600 was spent by the council in this way, and $100 in war bonds and stamps was given in prizes at the carnival in the fall.

Bridger of T. V. A. Addresses Engineers

An address by Dr. D. S. Bridger of the Tennessee Valley Authority on the chemical processes in operation at Muscle Shoals, filled the program for one of the recent meetings of the student branch of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. On other programs throughout the year were Dean T. R. Agg who spoke on "Shadows," and Ensign Smoyer, director of the recreation for the Naval Training Station at Iowa State, who gave a summary of the navy's organization and training program. Movies pertaining to chemical engineering and its part in the war effort were shown frequently to this organization which is now composed of 43 chemical engineers. The club was originated to fulfill the dual purpose of presenting new ideas and binding its members together. Dr. S. F. Ruth is faculty advisor.

"House of Magic" Show Appears Here

Mr. Watson of the Westinghouse Electric Company explains a new power device to George Geick, Paul Vavra and Robert Roe, all members of A.I.E.E.

Feature attraction of this year's A.I.E.E. meetings was the General Electric "House of Magic," displayed at a special meeting during winter quarter. Regularly shown only to service men at U.S.O. centers, the American Institution of Electrical Engineers was able to obtain this show for the entire student body. Recently, Mr. Watson of the Westinghouse company spoke to the local chapter on "Power System Stability." A novel part of the speech was his demonstration through the use of an interesting mechanical analogy.

The local chapter of A.I.E.E. was organized for the purpose of promoting closer friendship and understanding, and to give the students a brief look into their future, through demonstrations and motion pictures. It is a branch of the national A.I.E.E.

Contest Paper Wins

Downing all competitors, the Iowa State branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers won the national contest for the best annual report of A.S.C.E. activities. They accomplished this in spite of their diminished size and the loss of Ed O'Conner, treasurer, and several other capable members to the services. Increased enthusiasm was created when a new system was inaugurated whereby four members of each class were introduced at each of the bi-weekly meetings with a short experience sketch, humorous or factual.

The oldest national engineering society, the A.S.C.E. began in 1852 and claims more than 5,000 members in this country. Guiding the Iowa State chapter this year are Fred Nance, president; George Maloney, vice-president; and Jim Foster, secretary.

Hear M. M. Boring

Speaking on the vital character of the work being done by engineers in our present war industries, Mr. M. M. Boring, chief of personnel at the General Electric Company appeared at one of the semi-monthly meetings of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers recently. He presented the opportunities for engineers in the post-war world, outlining the possible changes in industry, and the need for skilled engineers. During another meeting, Prof. David L. Arm, head of the Mechanical Engineering Department told the group of the effect of the war upon engineering training.

Iowa State's delegate to the Midwestern A.S.M.E. Student Conference, held at Notre Dame University, was awarded fourth prize on the technical paper which was in competition with those from 15 other schools.

Managers Stress Engineer in Industry

Boasting members in practically every city in the nation, the Society for the Advancement of Management was organized as a technical society for engineers. The Iowa State branch holds meetings twice a month in the Memorial Union, and sponsors a picnic each spring at Brookside Park.

This year, the theme of the club's meetings has been the general engineer in the war effort. Movies and speakers who explained the problems that the engineer may expect to meet when he enters industry were helpful in orienting the students. Recently, Dr. J. C. Schilleter, director of the Memorial Union, discussed the increased management problems brought about by the necessity of feeding 1,500 sailors. Prof. J. K. Walkup, head of the General Engineering Department, is sponsor of the organization.

Architects Sweep Steel Contest Honors

Curtis Hicks and Bob Lueder, both members of the American Institute of Architects, put the finishing touches on their American Steel contest entries

Designs submitted by Architectural Engineering students, all members of the American Institute of Architects, made a clean sweep in the American Institute of Steel Construction annual bridge competition this year. George Russell won the first prize of $200, Clifford Prall took the second prize of $100 and Curtis Hicks was awarded the third prize. Four Iowa State men received honorable mentions.

The annual A.I.A. banquet for graduating seniors was held during spring quarter in the Memorial Union with Dean T. R. Agg delivering the address. Members who were in school summer quarter were given a picnic at Sunset Rock, and "Farewell to Old '97," a fireside in commemoration of the old locomotive "Iowa," donated to the scrap drive, was given in the Arch. E. laboratories.

Cadettes Join

With the coming of the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Company's program to train college women in aeronautical engineering and the arrival of 100 women on the Iowa State campus, the local chapter of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences found its ranks greatly augmented. Through the new courses offered to the women, members of this newest departmental club gained new information in the aircraft field. After 13 years of steady growth as a part of the Mechanical Engineering Department, the work in aeronautical engineering was incorporated into a separate department in the Division of Engineering with Prof. W. C. Nelson as its head. The local chapter of the I.A.E.S. was guided this year by Robert Caswell, chairman; Merle Evers, vice-chairman; Oliver Harwood, secretary; Jim McCoy, treasurer.

Shorten Plans

Shortened programs, from seven to eight quarters, are the newest arrangements of the Home Economics Division for students wishing to prepare for nursery school teaching in war areas, assisting in industrial cafeterias and working in laboratories of electrical manufacturing plants. Engineering drawing courses, under the war-time curricula for textiles and clothing, applied art and home management majors, are now preparing women for drafting positions in war industry. A child development course in organization of war-time nursery schools is now offered to undergraduates in that field.

Talking over Home Economics Club plans are club president Marjorie Boyts and Dean Genevieve Fisher

Reorganization of home economics curricula and course content to meet special needs of young women in their preparation for war service has had much of the attention of Dean Genevieve Fisher, of the Home Economics Division, and her department heads this year. Army and navy training schools offering opportunities for assistantships for institutional management majors, and the shortening of the army dietitians' internship to 4½ months in a civilian hospital followed by 4½ months in an army hospital have created urgent problems in course content that must be met with immediate changes. New emphases in the Home Economics Division, pointed out by Dean Fisher, are consideration of food rationing in meal planning problems, preservation of food by canning, home freezing and drying, designing and construction of clothing to conform to W.P.B. regulations, Red Cross sewing and basic work for textile testing. Dean Fisher finds an occasional moment away from her desk to read latest books and enjoy outdoor sports.

Enroll in Canteen

Emergency needs are drafting Home Economics Council and 1,228 Home Economics Club members into fast thinking of new ideas for fitting their training in their fields. Child disaster stations have been set up in Ames by child development and home management majors while nutrition majors enroll in the city Canteen Corps to familiarize themselves with canteen service and gain broader working experience with equipment and service of food. With the other eye toward civilian life Home Economics Club opened the fall formal season with Home Economics Ball, where Phil LeVant set the rhythm for club members and their dates.

Solve Clothes Rationing Problems

Clothing rationing will not worry the women in advanced clothing construction classes. A few yards of cloth, a dressform, a little imagination and—presto—a dinner gown. In case the new material is not available, an old garment can be transformed into a new model.

1943 finds the senior students in home management turning their attention to such current problems as rationing, new taxes and substitutions. Point rationing does not hold terrors for any one who has had experience in feeding a home management family of ten.

Nursery school teachers are needed to staff the day care centers for the young children of mothers at work in vital war industries. At Iowa State, the nursery school serves as a laboratory for this kind of training.

Observing, recording and interpreting child behavior is the training received in the nursery school by students planning to staff day care centers

Increases Span

Because of the span and content of the 21 departments in the Division of Science, over three-fourths of the students enrolled in the college take some courses in it. The objectives of the division are twofold: to provide study courses in the major biological, physical and social sciences, and to instruct students in the basic sciences and other general studies to provide a background for future professional life. Forced, as other divisions, to appoint instructors to replace men inducted into the services, this fourth largest division is going ahead on the full four-quarter plan, which includes a full summer quarter.

Dick Mathison, president of Science Council, confers here with Dean Gaskill

Under the hand of Dean H. V. Gaskill, the Division of Science functions in two ways: first, to train students in the division intensively in fields such as mathematics, chemistry, physics, geology, economics, history, government, psychology, botany, bacteriology, entomology and zoology; second, to serve as a service division to the entire college in such fields as hygiene, library, modern languages, military, music, English, physical education and science research. This division also operates a personnel service for its graduates, for alumni wishing to change their positions and for undergraduates seeking summer employment. This year Dean Gaskill, recognized nationally as an expert in applied psychology, has spent many additional hours supervising the war production being carried on in connection with the chemistry and physics departments in his division. A gracious host and enthusiastic sportsman, especially fond of fishing, the dean has written books in the fields of personality, physiological psychology and higher education.

SCIENCE COUNCIL

Decide Against Science Honorary

Debating the possibility of bringing a science honorary to the campus this year, the members of Science Council decided that the speeded-up war program did not allow for beginning any such new project. Besides correlating the work of the 21 departments in the Science Division, the council planned the Wintermezzo, winter formal sponsored by Science Council on January 23 in Great Hall, Memorial Union. Council members are chosen, one from each department with more than five majors, and six members at large from the division. This year, 11 students outstanding in scholarship activities and athletics were presented science service keys by their dean, H. V. Gaskill.

Send Cards To Iowa State Men

Writing cards to Iowa State men in the armed services was the new activity of the women of the Science Division this year. Claiming over 120 paid members, the Science Women's Club, which is open to science faculty women and women engineers, meets twice each month for business and social meetings. During the past year, Dean H. V. Gaskill spoke to the group on opportunities for science women; a Russian student gave some information on the Russian Revolution and education in Germany was discussed with a German student.

Money for milk for the Franklin Opportunity School was another project of this group of science women this year. Besides soliciting for money, and donating it themselves to this milk fund, the women also raised the money to finance two war bonds.

The freshman tea, held each year by the club, was given in the women's gymnasium this year. Colored leaves and fall colors in the napkins and candles set the scene for the meeting of freshmen women and upper-classmen.

One of the biggest jobs of the club, discontinued during this war year, has been to feed the high school students who come here each year for Science Day. Competitive examinations with awards attract many high school students from over the state, who come to look over Iowa State via the open houses that are always held.

Posting an honor roll for freshmen women ranking high in scholarship in the Science Division was considered by the club, as was the presentation of an award for scholarship at the annual Fall Honors Day Convocation.

Begin In Summer

The oldest veterinary college in the United States has gone all out in realizing its responsibility in the war effort. Starting in June, 1943, the Iowa State Veterinary Division will run on a full year basis. New freshmen will begin in the summer quarter, allowing these students to complete the normal 4-year course in three years.

The curriculum of this division of 245 men prepares them for general practice work and for work in food, hygiene and disease control. Most of the 58 graduating seniors will go directly into the Veterinary Corps of the army, or assume private practices.

Council President Bob Kirkpatrick calls for his weekly appointment with Dean Charles Murray

Through the work of Dr. Charles Murray, dean of the Veterinary Medicine Division, all Iowa State veterinary students have been inducted into the army as second lieutenants, and will finish their training before going into active service. Heading this oldest college of veterinary medicine since 1936, Dean Murray has organized the work of the students so that cases from nearby farmers and townspeople are taken at the Charles H. Stange Memorial Clinic. Iowa State, one of the 10 accredited veterinary schools in the nation, offers additional training facilities through the Veterinary Research Institute, the state diagnostic laboratory and the Ames milk inspection service. These give the students excellent opportunities to investigate current animal disease problems, to observe and assist in diagnostic techniques and to work on official milk sanitation control. Dean Murray's hobby is gardening, and he is a lover of animals, especially his pedigreed scotties. His other interests include an active part in the Research Workers of America.

See Induction

Serving to correlate the various departments of Veterinary Medicine, the Veterinary Council represents a division that saw mass induction of its members into the army as second lieutenants this year. The council, composed of two members elected from each class in the Veterinary Division is the governing body of the local student chapter of the A.V.M.A. and in addition, has charge of all social functions in the division. The Veterinary Student, Iowa State's newest publication, is also sponsored by the council guided by Bob Kirkpatrick, president, second term; Bill Calhoun, president, first term.

JR. A. V. M. A.

Weekly campaigns conducted by the Junior chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association to stimulate the sale of war bonds and stamps resulted in increased sales with every student starting a war stamp buying plan. Because of their interest in the advancement of the medical profession, and because they believed it their patriotic duty, the Iowa State chapter went out one-hundred per cent for donation to the American Red Cross blood bank collection.

Holding a unique position this year on the campus, the Junior A.V.M.A., which claims every veterinary student as a member, has every member a commissioned officer in the Medical Administrative Corps. These commissions were granted by the army in an attempt to maintain a supply of specialized and qualified men for present war needs, as well as to assure the public a sufficient quantity of trained men to guard the health of the nation after the war. Every effort is made by the Junior A.V.M.A. to make their bi-monthly meetings hinge directly on the war effort by inviting specialized men to speak.

Officers who have led the group this year are Bill Calhoun, president; Jack Denton, vice-president and Jack Hilton, secretary for the first term, and Bob Kirkpatrick, president; Bob Lofton, vice-president; and Clark Stillinger, secretary for the second term.

This arrangement has been made so that the registrar's office can order diplomas and complete plans for their graduation exercises each quarter

THE SENIOR CLASS

A senior in 1943 saw his graduating class split into many portions. The greatest number, including many engineers, received their diplomas after the winter quarter, with women students carrying on the June graduation tradition. Those who were pledged to honorary fraternities were chosen a full quarter early, in many cases, because of the speeded-up program. Seniors will always remember the burning of the Agricultural Engineering Building, the bare field which is now the site of the Women's Gymnasium, the first bowling on the alleys in the Memorial Union, and the time when Beard-shear was known as Central. Being the first class to graduate without paying diploma fees, the 1,000 seniors had an extra quirk of feeling when the sheepskins hit their hands.

JUNIOR CLASS

Rhea Putnam and Bernard Genrich offer a preview of what the well-dressed junior will be wearing this season. B.J.O.C. Stan Little and Junior Prom Girl Trymby Calhoun say a word after being presented by Johnny "Scat" Davis at the Junior Prom.

Junior members of the Cardinal Guild, student governing body who will carry on next year, meet to discuss new business. Evelyn Groth and Betty Roth, Y.W.C.A. radio chairman, present the "Y's" 15 minute broadcast over radio station WOI.

Taking advantage of the invitation extended to all Juniors, Joan Miller meets Dr. and Mrs. Charles Friley at their reception for Juniors at their home. Johnny "Scat" Davis obliges fans at the Junior Prom by signing programs. Even a long, sleepless trip did not bring the band to Ames in time for them to change, so Junior Promers enjoyed music from players in business suits

Junior Women Take Over Men's Places

Able stepping into major positions in Veishea and on campus publications, junior women at Iowa State took the places of men leaving for the armed forces this year. 1943 was a big year for Stan Little, elected student body president and Big Junior on the Campus. Trymby Calhoun was chosen Junior Prom Girl from a field of four candidates. Women of the class of '44 were the first Juniors to be affected by the requirement that all women take physical education.

Juniors, now making plans for jobs and senior classes, remember the campus as it was in their freshman days—when a student's greatest worry was finals, not whether Uncle Sam would let him finish the quarter.

Richard Moehl, finance chairman of the Student War Council and Stan Little, student body president and head of the war council do a 15 minute broadcast

SOPHOMORE CLASS

Planning the Prep-Soph Ball are Melena Adams, Patricia Gilchrist, Cornelia Lindstrom, Denny Bruns, Dick Reynolds and Russell Helms

Catching a moment to bowl a line are Dick Lyons, Eleanor Healy, George Spooner and Dorothy Gibb

Sophomores Betty Aldrich and Ronnie Norman partake of a coke in the grill of the Memorial Union, hub of campus activities

A sophomore corporal puts a squad of five freshmen through a morning drill

Dancing in the Trophy Tavern are sophomores Bob Vifquain and Helen Arnold

To the tune of swinging paddles, this Sigma Nu pledge takes the dust off the shoes of three sophomores just initiated from the ranks of the neophytes

Sophomores Choose

Sophomores, just one quarter removed from freshmen, faced the problem this year of either taking a chance on continuing the 3-year march to a diploma or of dropping out of school and taking war jobs. Many stayed through summer school after their freshman year, in an attempt to lessen the time in years required to give them a degree.

As freshmen, the class of '45 saw the rapid construction of Friley Hall and the Veishea dedication of the Home Economics Building fountain. Their class started something new in the way of Prep-Soph Balls when they elected a Stardust Sweetheart to reign over their ball. The biggest change they noticed this year was the freedom of 10 o'clock nights.

FRESHMAN CLASS

A dental check-up, part of the physical examination required of all freshmen, is performed on this newcomer in the dental offices of the College Hospital. Freshman "Get Acquainted" parties sponsored jointly by the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. are held at Lynn Fuhrer Lodge under the guidance of Mr. Ray Cunningham.

Freshmen Raise Summer Enrollment

Divided into groups under campus leaders, freshmen are shown around the campus, scheduled for physical examinations and helped through registration.

Contributing to the largest summer enrollment in the history of Iowa State, freshmen this year found their first taste of college rather hurried and unstable. Many students came to college just a few weeks after high school graduation, and some even appeared on the campus during winter quarter of 1942 in order to complete as many quarters as possible before being called into the armed services.

After struggling through Freshman Days and the physical examination, freshmen started classes and soon learned that studying is a necessity, not a pastime, at Iowa State. And that 8:45 deadline wasn't so bad when there was so much to do. Main activities for freshmen were Freshman Y, divisional clubs and departmental clubs. Toward the end of the year there was a general settling down, and freshmen were elected into minor offices for the coming year.

Proud of their cardinal numerals worn on gold sweaters, these freshmen are two of the many that received recognition for ability and cooperation in athletics

Three Delta Tau Delta pledges reach for matches to light a cigarette for an active. On their own for the first time, these freshmen, registering for winter quarter, try to remember how they did it

Receiving freshmen students, President Charles Friley and Dean M. D. Helser stand in Great Hall, Memorial Union

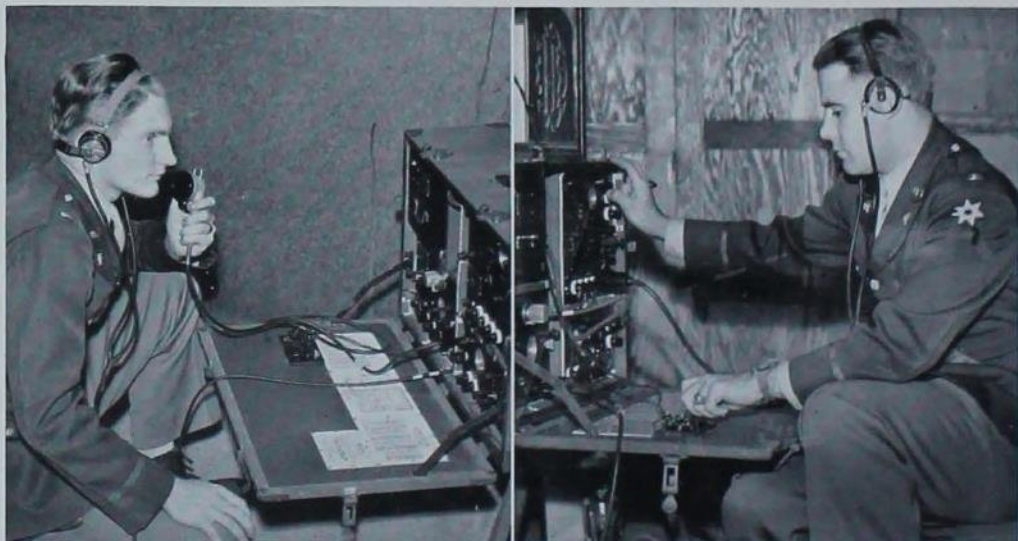

IOWA STATE FACULTY

Dictating the morning letters is Dr. I. W. Arthur who is active in the Agricultural Extension Service and who worked with the O.P.A. on prices for beef in Iowa

Dr. I. W. Arthur's contribution to the war effort has been two-fold this year. During August, September and November his work was with the O.P.A. where he aided in determining prices on beef. In the Economics Department, he published a memo in a series of pamphlets on economics issues confronting the country in war.

Lieutenant Jack Rector, a graduate of Texas A.& M. and Lieutenant William Seay, a graduate of Georgia Tech, head the new Signal Corps Unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps established at Iowa State this year. The course is designed to give men enrolled in the Electrical Engineering and Physics Departments an opportunity to learn the military branch in which they are best qualified for service.

Heading the newly established Signal Corps Unit at Iowa State, Lieutenant William Seay and Lieutenant Jack Rector teach military signal work to college students enrolled in electrical engineering and physics. Rector is a graduate of Texas A.& M. while Seay got his degree at the Georgia Institute of Technology

Professor J. K. Walkup, head of the General Engineering Department which has added five courses for the Curtiss-Wright cadettes, checks over the day's schedule. Geraldine Hesnard receives help on her pocket in a sewing class conducted by Mrs. Irene Buchanan, who also aided in the construction of war-time clothes.

The General Engineering Department staff, headed by Professor J. K. Walkup, is taking active part in the Curtiss-Wright program by helping to train women as design engineers. Several of the department members are now on leave of absence in the armed forces.

Emphasizing careful selection and conservation of clothes for longer wear, the Textiles and Clothing Department has maintained an "all out for the war" spirit, by making women's blouses, men's shirts and comforters for war use, according to Mrs. Irene Buchanan, instructor in that department.

Conservation and distribution of meat are being emphasized in the Animal Husbandry Meat Laboratory, according to B. R. McClurg, assistant professor. Stressed also is learning the value of different cuts of meat.

The value of a cut of meat per pound is pointed out to a student in animal husbandry by B. R. McClurg, assistant professor in the Animal Husbandry Department.

IOWA STATE FACULTY

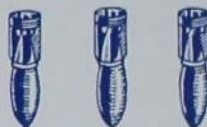

"We are trying to do all we can in assisting an all out war production program," stated Prof. B. J. Firkins, research professor of the agronomy section

Assisting in the writing of bulletins of a special war series designed to stimulate increased food production, Prof. B. J. Firkins of the Agronomy Department is a member of the department that helps solve state-wide victory garden problems.

Edith Sunderlin, as sponsor of the Child Development Club, has supervised work helpful to women in charge of Disaster Child Care Centers organized under the Office of Civilian Defense in Ames.

The Electrical Engineering Department, according to Professor M. S. Coover, director of the Naval Training School, is aiding in the war effort by giving a course in radio technician training and supervising instruction in the Naval Training School.

In radio programs and classes dealing with child development, Miss Edith Sunderlin is proposing emphasis on play materials made from waste products because of the restricted use of rubber, plastics and metals. As director of the Naval Training School, Prof. M. S. Coover has charge of instruction in their classes

Under the directorship of George Veenker, the Men's Physical Education Department has rearranged its schedule to train 1,600 navy men, and plans to give each new V-12 and A-12 trainee six hours of physical education a week.

Sending the concert orchestra to Des Moines to present a concert at Camp Dodge, and another for the WAAC, the Music Department also cooperated with the war effort by arranging for sale of war bonds and stamps at concerts and musical events. Commending the department on its activity, R. D. Welch of the United States Treasury Department wrote, "What you have done is certainly a valuable contribution to the war effort."

In addition to his regular college physics courses and consultant work, Dr. P. H. Carr has taught radio instruction to adults and classes in navigation for the Navy Air Cadets.

Expand Night Classes

Bright lights glowing from windows that have been dark in former years furnish the most concrete evidence of the changes that have come about in arrangement of class schedules in 1943. Evening classes are no longer an oddity, but an accepted part of students' days. Many engineering drawing classes, for both men and women, are held from seven to ten in the evening because of crowded daytime laboratories. Finals in some courses have even been given after dinner because of the necessity of reporting grades on time coupled with the inability to find room space in the day time. Lack of classroom space has been another wrench in the wheels of class schedules, with the naval trainees occupying many electrical and diesel laboratories, and essential war work taking space in the Chemistry Building.

NAVAL TRAINING SCHOOL

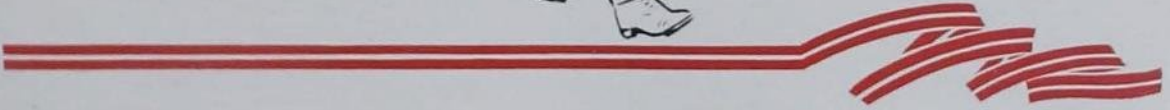

Arriving in June, 1942, the first contingent of naval trainees—200 in number—represented the first movement at Iowa State in the specialized training of men for active service. Since their arrival, Navy Aviation Cadets, Curtiss-Wright women and many special war industry workers have begun training here, but the sailors now outnumber all others, being a familiar sight both on the campus and on the streets and busses of Ames. Classes all day, a free hour spent on the "ship" each evening, and liberty to leave the campus on Saturday and Sunday constitute the chief activities of these sailors.

NAVY OFFICERS

Duernberger Commands Training School

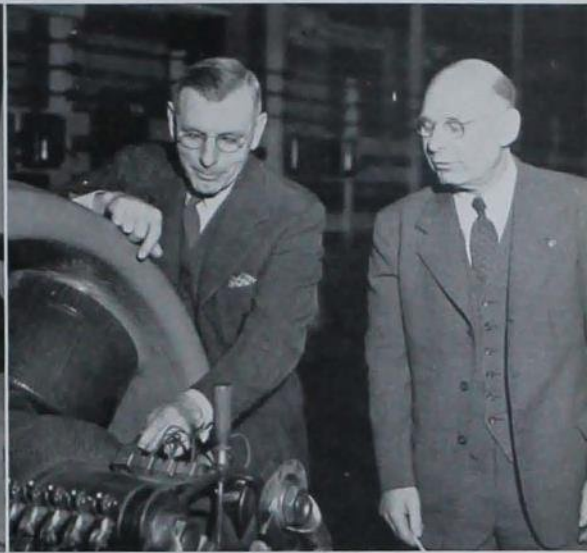

Commander A. F. Duernberger was made commanding officer of the Iowa State College Naval Training School in February replacing Lieut. George C. Ray, the Officer in Charge. Supervising the activities of the 15 commissioned officers and the 1,500 trainees of the school, Duernberger became commanding officer when the training school was designated a command by the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington, D. C.

An executive officer, and four batallion commanders constitute the military command under the direction of Commander Duerenberger.

The navy "sick bay" in the college hospital and the general health of the trainees is supervised by two medical officers and three dental officers, while the disbursing of pay and clothing, and record keeping is the responsibility of three naval supply officers.

Nearly half the civilian instructors in the Electrical School of the Naval Training School are Iowa State graduates, with civilian teachers having been secured from electric utilities companies, manufacturing firms, civil service, construction firms and other educational institutions. The Electrical School is the only division of the Naval Training School in which civilian instructors are employed.

A number of the instructors have enlisted in the navy with various ratings from specialist, third class, to chief specialist, with a teacher's classification.

Class instruction in the Electrician's School is conducted similarly to the college program, with 50 minute standard classes daily for their training period of 16 weeks.

An ensign in World War I, Commander A. F. Duernberger has served in the navy 24 years. He came to the Iowa State College Naval Training School in February from Detroit, Michigan, where he was executive and education officer at the Electrical, Diesel and Marine Engineering Training School at the United States Naval Reserve Armory. The Commanding Officer was appointed when the school was designated a command, replacing Lieut. George C. Ray, the Officer in Charge at that time.

Commander Duernberger received his training as an electrical engineer and in civilian life was in the electrical machinery business. As commander of the Iowa State station, he supervises 15 commissioned officers and 1,500 naval trainees at one time.

NAVAL TRAINEES

Arms swinging in rhythm to their brisk steps, naval station trainees marching from the railroad station to the Naval Training School are a familiar sight when the new contingents of several hundred trainees arrive every few weeks.

A mimeographed 10-page paper edited by a former Iowa State student, Yeoman third class Max Hedrick, '37, makes its appearance every two weeks. The paper, the Nautilus, keeps the different companies informed about the general activities, sports and recreation and talents of the various trainees.

The physical fitness program at the training station incorporates all kinds of sports, with swimming and calisthenics, taken at the Men's Gymnasium located directly behind Friley Hall, as the compulsory items. Trainee intramurals in touch football and basketball, and bowling intramurals for the officers, trainees and the ship's company were highlights of this athletic program.

Leaving Iowa State after completing their training, these sailors are bound for more training or actual combat duty. They arrive and leave in contingents of 200

The dining room in the newly constructed Friley Hall became "mess hall" for 750 naval trainees, officers and ship's company in February. The facilities of the Memorial Union were also used to feed the navy under the supervision of Miss Fern Gleiser, head of the Institutional Management Department, and Ensign G. D. Hartnett. Helping prepare meals for the navy are the 60 members of the Bakers' and Cooks' School.

Hughes Hall and Friley Hall, transformed as nearly as possible to resemble ship's quarters, serve as living quarters for the navy men. There are no doors on the rooms, double and triple decker bunks are used and, according to navy regulation, clothing and gear are kept in ship shape and in the smallest space possible in the ship's quarters.

The 8-week diesel program supervised by Prof. David L. Arm, head of the Mechanical Engineering Department, prepares the men for service on submarines, P-t boats, submarine chasers and auxiliary craft, and for the amphibian service.

Electrical companies, under the direction of Prof. M. S. Coover, head of the Electrical Engineering Department, have taken over parts or all of several college buildings, including Exhibit Hall, emergency building constructed for the first world war.

A benevolent weather man combined with the work of over 2,000 students to present Veishea of 1942 for a crowd of 15,000 visitors on May 14, 15 and 16. Opening with the crowning of the Veishea Queen of Queens, the program for the three days contained the usual openhouses, Veishea Vodvil, and baseball games. New in 1942 were the "Revue Militaire" and the review of 1,500 R.O.T.C. men in a graduation parade.

Opening Friday's program was the dedication of this fountain placed in front of the Home Economics Building. The children were sculptured by Christian Peterson and the inscription by James Whitcomb Riley reads: "I believe all children's good If they're only understood Even bad ones seems to me's Jest as good as they can be"

1942 VEISHEA

Mechanical engineers held open house in their casting laboratories on the west side of the campus. These two students voluntarily gave demonstrations beginning at 10 a. m. and closing at 5 p. m. "Education in Action" was the theme carried out in campus openhouses during the 1942 Veishea.

Deepening twilight over Lake LaVerne set the stage for the formal opening ceremonies of the twenty-first annual Veishea on Friday, May 15. Master of Ceremonies William Mullan and Patricia Hayes, chairman, were the students in charge.

A crowd of 2,500 filled the State Gymnasium for both performances of the Veishea Vodvil, student talent show. Delta Delta Delta sorority was the sweepstakes winner, while Delta Upsilon took first place in the men's competition.

The first horse show ever to be presented at Iowa State drew a capacity crowd of 2,700 as 45 horses were entered in the contest. Phyllis Voorhies rode first place winner in the horsemanship class.

Veishea Queen Rides With Cary Grant

Riding in the Hollywood Victory Caravan when it appeared in Des Moines was the lot of 1942's Veishea Queen of Queens, Marian Allen. Choose War Theme

In keeping with the theme "Iowa State Goes to War," 1943 Veishea presented a condensed war-time program for visitors on May 7 and 8. Opening ceremonies on Friday, May 7, featured the crowning of Queen of Queens by Governor Bourke B. Hickenlooper. Completing the evening's program was the first performance of "H.M.S. Pinafore," produced by the Music Department, Iowa State Players and Dance Club, with admittance being gained by the purchase of war stamps.

Divisional openhouses highlighted Saturday morning's schedule, with all divisions participating. Saturday night was given over to the gigantic War-Fair, carnival requiring the purchase of war stamps for participation.

Scrapbooks for the U.S.O. were projects of the Christmas party given in December for the alumnae. During winter quarter, a Founder's Day Tea was served for all members of the organization. The annual waffle supper was sponsored by the alumnae.

Hold's Second Recognition Banquet

A recognition banquet was given for the second time in the history of Cardinal Key, senior men's honorary, on February 4 this year. At this time, recognition of about 100 outstanding campus leaders was made, and the men invited were given engraved certificates of honor signed by officers of Cardinal Key.

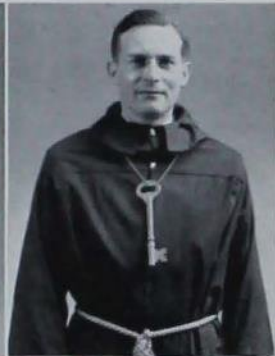

Leadership, scholarship, character and service to Iowa State are the four requisites for membership in Cardinal Key. Twelve men are tapped each year, with six seniors automatically becoming alumni members and the six junior members carrying on the organization for the following year.

The president of Cardinal Key is selected before the tapping ceremonies and is always tapped last by the outgoing president. Last tapped last year was Paul Visser, while Lyle Abbott was vice-president, Stuart Kuyper took roll as secretary, Royal Lohry balanced the books, Hoyt Chaloud was social chairman and John Slater was sergeant-at-arms.

Gathered in the Cardinal Guild Room on second floor of the Memorial Union, members of Cardinal Key and Mortar Board rehearse before going out into the snowy night to serenade the organized houses where taggers reside. Speaking at the recognition banquet held on February 4 by Cardinal Key, Robert Bellairs, United Press' Tokyo correspondent recently released from a Japanese concentration camp, told the 100 men gathered in Oak Room, Memorial Union, that "only civilian sacrifice can defeat Japan." His address on February 5 was broadcast over WOI

CARDINAL KEY

Taps New Men During Winter Quarter

Holding their tapping ceremony for new members on March 6 instead of waiting until the usual Veishea-time ceremony under the Campanile, members of Cardinal Key set a precedent in the organization this year. Five junior men, six senior men and three faculty members were honored. The number is not fixed by constitution, but set by precedent. The five junior men tapped first in the ceremonies place their names in a hat and assume offices in the order that their names are drawn, but due to uncertainties for the coming year, no drawing was made this spring. Chosen before the ceremonies, Kenneth Krogh was selected president, and, he along with Robert Chase, was tapped in absentia.

On February 5, a leadership conclave was held by members of Cardinal Key to emphasize and stimulate leadership on the campus. Speaker for this occasion was Robert Bellaire, United Press' Tokyo correspondent who was recently released from a Japanese concentration camp. Mr. Bellaire's address, which stressed civilian sacrifice on the part of Americans, was broadcast over station WOI.

Group Reappears

Alpha Zeta, national honorary agricultural fraternity, was reinstated into the circle of honorary organizations at Iowa State in spring quarter of 1942. Their annual scholarship award, sponsored by Gamma Sigma Delta, national senior honorary agricultural fraternity, was presented to the highest ranking freshman agricultural student, Lowell Dunigan, at the 1942 Fall Honors Day Convocation.

Since it is the aim of this agricultural honorary to promote youth leadership, Alpha Zeta sent Robert Bell as a delegate to the American Youth Conference held at Carbondale, Ill. for youths from over the nation.

Darl Snyder and Warren Kester, two members of Alpha Zeta, national agricultural honorary, go over some material for an approaching meeting

Twenty-two juniors and seniors were initiated into the group this year, with George Godfrey of the Agricultural Experiment Station as guest speaker at the initiation banquet. Winter quarter officers included Kenneth Oakleaf, chancellor; Irvin Nathlich, censor; Harris Sellers, scribe; Stanley Swanson, treasurer; and Robert Bell, chronicler.

PHI UPSILON OMICRON

Initiates 24 Women

Twenty-four new members, four seniors and 20 juniors were initiated into Phi Upsilon Omicron, national professional home economics honorary, during the year. Miss Rose Wanek, district counselor, inspected the Omicron chapter at Iowa State and was present for the initiation service and the tea which followed for active alumnae and members.

Two cookie sales took the place of the traditional Christmas fruit cake sale, with 244 dozen cookies selling during the fall quarter sale.

Phi Upsilon Omicron, with Omicron Nu, sponsored the annual Ellen H. Richards Day program. Talks on the phases of the life of Ellen H. Richards were arranged by members of Phi Upsilon Omicron, organization in charge of the convocation.

Plan "Bent Swing" for Seniors

A "Bent Swing" honoring graduating seniors was given winter quarter this year by Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honorary. The annual Engineers' Banquet previously held winter quarter and which attracted 806 engineers last year, was cancelled for 1943. Election of new members is held twice a year, one election including a majority of juniors and the other a majority of senior students.

An all-night job of erecting a bent by dimensions derived from solving given problems was in store for this year's pledges as usual. Traditional white and gold caps and gowns were worn by pledges during the week when they spent the better part of their noon hour on the steps of Home Economics Building or Agricultural Hall singing, cheering, reciting poetry and passing out gum, candy and cigarettes to the audience.

Chemists Display "Chemical Magic"

Sponsoring a display of "chemical magic" as their Science Day project this year, Alpha Chi Sigma, professional chemical fraternity, took its place along with other groups helping to organize open houses for the visiting high school students. Also a member of the National Safety Council, Alpha Chi Sigma displays safety posters in the Chemistry Building as a part of a national program. First aid kits placed in all laboratories are another phase of the same safety program.

One senior and two chemistry students are recognized each year by the honorary at the Spring Honors Day Convocation. The senior receives a year's membership in the American Chemical Society and his name is engraved on a scholarship cup which is kept in the lobby of the Chemistry Building. Firesides and smokers round out the social program of this group of professional chemists.

Carry Equipment

Carrying portable electrical engineering equipment and candy for demanding actives, new Eta Kappa Nu pledges were put on a week's probation preceeding their formal initiation in the spring. New members are elected to this electrical engineering honorary in the fall and again in the spring, but all are initiated in the spring. Men in the upper fourth of the junior class and the upper half of the senior class who have progressive qualities of leadership and personality besides their scholastic records are eligible for membership.

Receiving an award for his display in the electrical engineering open house for Veishea, Dean Watkins received a copy of the "Standard Handbook for Electrical Engineering," presented by Eta Kappa Nu, at the Fall Honors Day Convocation.

Ball Opens Activities For Musicians

Opening the activities for Phi Mu Alpha, national music honorary for men, the Harmony Ball was held on November 21 with Robert Himmel as chairman. Next on the calendar for the fraternity was the Sinfonia Intramural Sing, a contest among organized men's groups held March 14 under the supervision of Clarence Bockhop. The Veishea openhouse in the Campanile is another project of this musical fraternity for men.

Phi Mu Alpha sets its goal to advance the cause of music in America, to foster the mutual welfare of students in music, to develop the truest fraternity spirit among its members and to encourage loyalty to the Alma Mater.

Elected president for this year was Robert M. Young with Robert Himmel as vice-president, Rush Benson, secretary, Paul Messer, treasurer and J. Walter Giffee, warden.

PI MU EPSILON

Holds Math Contest

Winning the mathematics contest sponsored this spring by Pi Mu Epsilon, national mathematics honorary, Joe Elliot and Richard Steinberg received five dollars apiece and a copy of one of the newest books on higher mathematics. Oscar Towler won the scholastic prize this year for the highest grade point average at the end of his first two years of mathematics—upon completion of calculus.

Another project of Pi Mu Epsilon is the planning of the program for the mathematics club two or three times each quarter. Annually Pi Mu Epsilon contributes to the Roberts Loan Fund, available to all students needing funds to finish their education.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

Alters Probation

War probation for the proverbial "tin hat" boys, members of Scabbard and Blade, a national military honorary for advanced R.O.T.C. men, took a serious turn this year as the spotlight turned from the tobacco chewing and soap box speeches of the heckled neophyte last year to more constructive probationary activities. Alteration of the traditional pre-initiation period at this time is in line with the purpose of the organization—to further the interest and ability of those men in advanced R.O.T.C. who have shown outstanding proficiency and interest in military training. Probation this year was marked by well-disciplined, close-order drill in front of Beardshear Hall each noon hour. A new pledging ceremony including neophytes and their dates was also innovated at the Military Ball held in the winter quarter for the first time this year.

Pledge Plans LaVerne Skating Shelter

Pledges of Tau Sigma Delta, honorary fraternity in architecture and the allied arts, were given this year the problem of suggesting ways to improve the campus from an architectural or landscape architectural point of view.

Dave Frevert, Arch E. Jr., topped all pledges with his plans for a shelter for skaters and picnickers to be located on the shore of Lake LaVerne.

Clarence Rost, Arch E. Sr., placed second with his idea to move the victory bell from its present location back of Beardshear Hall to the triangular plot of ground between the north-east side of Lake LaVerne and the Campanile.

Tau Sigma Delta holds informal meetings usually as luncheons to promote friendship and collaboration between future professional men in these closely allied arts.

THETA SIGMA PHI

Inviting two speakers for their annual Matrix Table dinner, members of Theta Sigma Phi, national women's professional journalism honorary, entertained over 100 women students and faculty members at the March 2 dinner in the Institutional Tea-room, Home Economics Building. Ensign Gladys Henderson, former national president of Theta Sigma Phi and now a public relations officer at the WAVE center in Cedar Falls and Miss Mary Grigs, editor of the Farmers Weekly, English agricultural journal, were the guest speakers. A supper with Paul W. Appleby, undersecretary of agriculture, and a luncheon with Mrs. Nell Nichols, field editor of Women's Home Companion, completed their special functions.

SIGMA DELTA CHI

Under the direction of John Rigg, members of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism honorary for men, founded this year the display of Iowa State's Master Editors in the Agricultural Annex. The chapter also completed arrangements for the permanent location of a bust of the late Clifford Gregory done by Christian Peterson, campus sculptor. Gregory, once a journalism instructor at Iowa State, was an outstanding farm editor.

Regular projects of Sigma Delta Chi include awarding trophies to prize-winning newspapers in Iowa and the publication of the Green Gander, college humor magazine. Prominent speakers have been invited to speak at the group's bi-monthly meetings.

DELTA PHI DELTA

A bazaar, sponsored this year by Delta Phi Delta, national art fraternity, was organized to raise funds for the purchase of war bonds. Art objects, created by members in the group, were sold in the Home Economics Building to obtain the money. Each year Delta Phi Delta sponsors an exhibition of work from the art departments of the Big Six schools, and attempts by this exhibit to promote art interest on the campus.

Consisting entirely of applied art majors on this campus, the honorary is not necessarily confined to women, and lists Grant Wood as one of its laureate members. Frances Mallory served as president of the group.

Next on their calendar was a tea given for sophomore women ranking high scholastically. A scholarship plaque was presented to Eileen Dudgeon, highest ranking freshman of the year 1941-42 at the Fall Honors Day Convocation.

Ellen H. Richards Day was observed in the fall in a cooperative program with Phi Upsilon Omicron, national home economics honorary.

Twenty seniors were initiated into the group last fall and 30 juniors this spring, with officers elected at the last meeting.

SIGMA ALPHA IOTA

More than 600 used phonograph records were collected this year by Sigma Alpha Iota, national music fraternity for women, for service men and women.

Sigma Lambda chapter at Iowa State is also contributing to the MacDowell Endowment Fund. Pan's Cottage, a building equipped as both studio and living quarters, is maintained at the MacDowell Colony for creative artists at Peterborough, N. H., as a national project of Sigma Alpha Iota. This endowment fund is to insure the continued existence and usefulness of this cottage.

To point the way to a keener appreciation of the relation of the cultivation of the art of music to the art of living is the purpose toward which this organization works.

VISITING ARTISTS

15 Perform

Bringing the finest in musicians, dramatists and lecturers to the campus, the Music Council, Lecture Series Committee and other organizations have presented over 15 artists to the student body. On November 10, Sir Norman Angell, Nobel Peace Prize winner, spoke on world peace, while Religious Emphasis Week saw Dr. G. A. Buttrick of New York City delivering the sermons. Speaking on Germany was Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press Berlin bureau for 14 years. Cornelia Otis Skinner delighted audiences with her performances of the "Wives of Henry VIII," and Zino Francescatti, French violinist, presented a concert on January 24th. The Cossack Chorus under Serge Jaroff gave two programs and Mitropoulos directed the Minneapolis Symphony to close the season.

First guest on the campus this fall, Paul W. Appleby, undersecretary of agriculture, spoke on the service of government in agriculture. Dorothy Maynor, noted negro soprano who presented a concert on October 23, pauses here with Prof. Tolbert MacRae and her accompanist for this season

IOWA STATE BAND

Presents Concerts

A program of popular music presented in Great Hall, Memorial Union on Dec. 4 opened the season by the Iowa State Concert Band, conducted by Alvin R. Edgar. Sunday afternoon musicals on Jan. 31 and March 1 completed the concert program for the organization.

Made up of only members of the concert band, the 100-piece marching band executed maneuvers at the four home football games, combining with the Twisters and Dance Club to fill the half time at Homecoming.

A tribute to Kansas University is spelled out on Clyde Williams Field by the marching band at the final home game on Saturday, November 14

Three rehearsals a week are required to prepare the marching band for an appearance on the football field. The Music Council entertained the band at a chicken dinner, following its season's work at four of the home games

Officers of the concert band were John Weir, president, Keith Dickson, first vice-president, Dorothy McDade, second vice-president, and Fred O'Green, secretary-treasurer

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Orchestra Presents Formal Concert

Band and orchestra room was moved to the top floor of Landscape Architecture Building this year following confiscation of the former location in Exhibit Hall for navy use. Mrs. Kathryn Fletcher Shreves, principal cellist with the orchestra, appeared as soloist with the symphony Nov. 22 in the first of the three concerts given by the organization in Great Hall, Memorial Union. The orchestra presented a formal concert for faculty members and special guests on Feb. 10 and repeated the program on Feb. 14 for the student body. Miss Ilza Niemack, concertmistress of the symphony, was featured in a violin solo at both winter concerts. On March 5 the orchestra gave its annual concert in Ames High School Auditorium for the students. The 80 members rehearsed twice a week under the direction of A. R. Edgar.

Sectional rehearsal is held for the bass viols to familiarize them with their part and facilitate rehearsals with the full orchestra present

Presenting a formal concert for faculty members and guests, the Iowa State Symphony Orchestra pauses before beginning the performance. Club Sings For All-Men's Meeting

Bill Craig, David Donhowe and Wayne Keith, all members of the Men's Glee Club, go over a new arrangement for a Sunday evening vespers service

Joining in the all-college observation of Religious Emphasis Week on the campus, the Men's Glee Club furnished music for the All-Men's Meeting on Jan. 17. The organization sang with the Women's Glee Club on the Sunday evening vespers this year, forming a small choir to take the place of the large chorus which appeared formerly. Under the direction of Tolbert MacRae, head of the Music Department, the Men's Glee Club appeared on the Feb. 7 Twilight Musical. The group formed part of the Festival Choir which sang in the presentation of Handel's Messiah in the State Gymnasium during the Christmas season. A yearly feature of the glee club's concert program is the presentation of a program for Ames High School students. Robert Young is president and manager of the organization.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

Give Patriotic Program In February

In conjunction with the men's organization, the Women's Glee Club presented a program of patriotic and popular music at the Twilight Musical Feb. 7. Selected members of the club appeared in the performance of the Latosch and Robinson "Ballad for America" that was featured on the program. Tolbert MacRae directed the women in their weekly rehearsals this year following the entrance of Eugene Hilligoss, former conductor, into armed service. A carol service in Great Hall, Memorial Union, for the Faculty Women's Club took the place of the annual candlelight service formerly held during the Christmas season. The Women's Glee Club participated in the presentation by mixed voices of Stainer's Crucifixion at Easter, and in the Christmas performance of Handel's Messiah in State Gymnasium.

Swingsters Disband For The Duration

Following loss of over half of its members to the armed services, the Iowa State Rhythm Club became inactive this year. The organization is composed of a selected group of members of campus dance bands, and is regularly in existence only during the winter quarter. Weekly jam sessions are held to prepare for the Campus Varieties Program and one Cyclone Twister at which the group performs. The club was organized in 1937 by Freddy Schlott, who at that time had his own campus band. New members are selected by a vote of the active members, and graduating seniors each select a man from the Iowa State campus bands to fill their vacancies. Annually, golden keys are awarded to the men outstanding in ability and service to the organization. The officers left on the campus this winter were Bob Allen, president, and Dwight Gilbert, treasurer.

Presenting a play during the summer for the first time in their history, members of the Iowa State Players produced "Petticoat Fever" for a capacity audience in Great Hall of Memorial Union during the first session. Shepherd Greene, Dorothea Dunagan and Lila Mae Hummel played major roles in the comedy. Last spring quarter's production was "Village Green," with Bob Pomeroy, Dorothy McGoon and Bill Borchardt doing the major roles. The presentation for fall quarter was "School for Husbands," in which Shirley Sloane, Dorothea Dunagan, Georgiana Jensen and Bob Pomeroy received the applause. "Arsenic and Old Lace," the winter quarter production, played four times to capacity audiences in the Theatre Workshop with Margaret Mewhirter, Dorothy Hatch and Kay Sebert as the leading characters.

Forty-eight teams from organized houses, dormitories and wards entered the first intramural debate contest ever to be held on this campus. The Iowa State Debaters supervised this new activity under the sponsorship of the Education Committee of the Student

War Council, and chose for a topic, "Resolved: Iowa State students are doing their part in the war effort." Preliminary debates were held, and the two finalists debated in Great Hall of the Memorial Union, with the pledges of Beta Theta Pi taking the honors.

Answering the call of the Office of War Information, the members of the debate organization participated in the national "Speaking for Victory" program, and traveled to several near-by towns to speak on topics of national interest. Lee Gibson, senior member of the club, won first place in the American Economic Foundation's Regional Debate Contest at Lawrence, Kansas. Gibson is a member of Delta Sigma Rho, national forensic fraternity. Outstanding debate members received Activity "I" awards.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK

Dr. Buttrick Speaks

Guest speaker for the 1943 Religious Emphasis Week was the Rev. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, whose unassuming manner and thought-provoking sermons delighted and impressed Iowa State students. A custom since 1926, the week is set aside each year during winter quarter to give students an opportunity to take time out from the kaleidoscope of campus activities to turn quietly to religion. The entire week is planned by a student committee representative of campus organizations.

Dr. Buttrick's lectures climaxed a week begun with discussion meetings led by faculty members in organized houses and wards. An innovation in the customary all-men's chapel this year was the participation of trainees from the Naval Training School.

Y. W. C. A. Pastes and Sews for Victory

U.S.O. scrapbooks for base hospitals, bean bags for the Ames Child Disaster Centers, and Red Cross sewing have been occupying members of the Y.W.C.A. who are interested in war work.

An International Caravan, which strove for closer understanding of those in other parts of the world by studying their countries and people, was led by Iowa State college students who were natives of other countries. "The World's Best Seller" was the theme of the Worship and Religion group, which devoted its time to a study of the Bible. Another popular group, the Freshman "Y," included in its varied program speakers on many topics.

Because of the shortened Thanksgiving vacation, the Y.W.C.A. helped sponsor a Thanksgiving service in the Memorial Union, inviting the Rev. Stoddard Lane of Des Moines to speak.

Gretchen Young, president; Helen Barbre, vice president; Marion Willis, secretary; Verdene Boyken, treasurer; and Mrs. Walter Dunagan, "Y" secretary, headed the group.

Enlisting its services in the Naval Training Program, the Y.M.C.A. has moved its offices to the basement of Morrill Hall. The men of the Ship's Company are now occupying Alumni Hall, formerly the center of campus "Y" activities.

Supplementing the present limited facilities, Lynn Fuhrer Lodge has furnished a retreat where religious services, weekly firesides, and picnics are held. The cabin has been the locale of the annual Woodcutter's Day, which this year was featured by Life magazine.

Although the war eliminated freshman "Y" camp and the Foreign Relations Group, the rest of the program continued unscathed.

Donald Noller, president; Frederick Nance, vice-president; Joe Elliot, secretary; and Orville Olson, treasurer led the group with the able help of Mr. Ray Cunningham.

INTERCHURCH COUNCIL

Urge Church Attendance

Crowded busses and filled churches were the results this year of the All-Out-To-Church Sundays, sponsored and advertised by the Interchurch Council on the first Sunday of each quarter. The winter quarter All-Out-To-Church Sunday appropriately began the 1943 Religious Emphasis Week with a record church attendance. Exchanges between different religious organizations for the purpose of getting better acquainted with other students and church groups were also carried out.

An all-church communion service for all students is another of the activities of this group whose purpose is to promote cooperation among the different student church groups, and to encourage the students to find the place of religion in their lives.

ROGER WILLIAMS HOUSE

Navy Men Join Roger Willams' Group

Men from the Naval Training School are the newest additions to Roger Williams House, Baptist student center, and parties are held every other Saturday night for them.

Topics upon which the year's program was built included "Certainty in Times of Stress" and "Making Christ Live Today." Outside speakers were Mr. Ray C. Cunningham, the Rev. Walter Barlow, Dean M. D. Helser and Mrs. E. S. Allen.

The Rev. J. H. Gamble is advisor for the group which is presided over by Judson Thompson, chairman. Members of the cabinet are Gilbert Mellen, Melvin Stout, Doris Dorman, Graham Hollowell, Leota Gerdes, Alvarita Sturtevant, William Rice, Jean Dwellen, David Frevert, Florence Tingley, Hartley Barker and Louis Lordyke.

Cheer Baptist Men in Armed Services

Cookies, popcorn balls and candy, as well as letters and the Daily Student, are cheering the Iowa State Baptist men in the armed services. Responsible for these gifts are the members of Theta Epsilon, service fraternity for Baptist women at Iowa State.

The organization, which aims to keep up the women's interest in the church through service to the church and society, has had, as its projects for the year making dolls for girls in an Illinois orphanage and caring for the small children of the parish while their parents were at church.

The group was sponsored by Mrs. J. H. Gamble with Mrs. George Hartman, Miss Jessie Darlington and Miss Olive Crosley as patronesses. Student leaders were Barbara Pond, president; Jean Pangborn, first vice-president; Mary Elizabeth Lees, second vice-president; Leota Gerdes, secretary; Doris Dornan, treasurer; Wilma Preston, program chairman; and Helen Wortman, devotional chairman. The chapter of Theta Epsilon at Iowa State College was established in 1927.

Open Church to Sailors and Cadettes

With the help of the two naval trainees recently elected to their student council, members of the Wesley Foundation, student center of the Collegiate Methodist Church, now hold "Play Night" on alternate Saturday nights for the trainees and Curtiss-Wright cadettes.

The entire youth program of work and worship, fun and fellowship is supervised by the student council. The 16 departments are: friendship, religious education, Christian reconstruction, Wesley League, Wesley Players, music, deputations, publicity, finance, social, foods, alumni, Wesley Student, Kappa Phi, Delta Sigma Theta, and the four cooperative clubs which provide low cost board for 93 men. Newest of these cooperatives is the Wesley Fellowship House, added this year, which houses 11 men, from six different countries and three different races.

KAPPA PHI

Possessing the largest group in its history—61 active members—Kappa Phi, Methodist college women's organization, is attempting to develop Christian leadership among college women and to serve and befriend those in need.

Sculpturing was the theme of the year's work. It was discussed not so much as an art as in the sense of how it could be applied to the sculpturing of one's life. Leading the group whose motto is "Every Methodist woman in the university world today is a leader in the church of tomorrow," were Dorothy Moreland, Margaret Davidson, Eleanor Hoeflin, Helen Woods, Genevieve Behner.

DELTA SIGMA THETA

In the spirit of the times, "Christians Through the Crisis," was the year's theme of the Iowa State chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, national brotherhood for Methodist men. Outside speakers led group discussions and, on the social side, meetings were held with Kappa Phi.

To provide an incentive for religious endeavor is the purpose of the organization which was formed last year by the union of Phi Tau Theta and Sigma Epsilon Theta. Responsible for the program were the Delta Sigma Theta officers Vaylord Ladwig, Merton Tracy, Larry Butler, Charles Neidt, Robert Bell and faculty advisor, Lowell Carver.

WESLEY PLAYERS

Writing, directing and acting in plays takes up most of the time of the Wesley Players, an organization sponsored by the Methodist Church. During the fall quarter they presented "The Bishop's Candlesticks," and during the winter quarter, "The Lost Church" and "Burning Pews." The local group enjoys the distinction of having the national president of the Wesley Players, Clay Lanman, as a member of the Iowa State chapter. New members are selected from the pledge group on the basis of interest and participation. When each associate member has earned a specified number of points, he is admitted as an active member of the chapter.

GAMMA DELTA

In cooperation with the government's attempt to cut down on civilian travel, the Iowa State chapter of Gamma Delta decided to cancel the national convention which was to be held in Ames. The Lutheran club, which aims to bring students together and to help them become better acquainted with their church and pastor, meets every Sunday evening for lunch and a social hour. Sailors who are attending the Naval Training School are encouraged to attend these meetings. Student leaders are Clarence Stuckwisch, president; Alvin Block, vice-president; Dorothy Arm, secretary; Royce Neiting, treasurer; the Rev. Edgar Otto, sponsor.

Students Serve on Church Control Boards

Serving on the official church boards is an opportunity for Presbyterian students who attend the Church by the West Gate. Since the founding of the church, student representatives have had a share in the governing of its policies. On the official boards of the church they serve as elders, deacons, and deaconesses. In these positions the students help to decide church problems as well as visiting the sick and helping with church suppers. The student council has been functioning since 1911.

The Westminster Student Fellowship, to which the Iowa State group belongs, is composed of 53 state colleges and universities, and is maintained by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education. Purposes of the group are to provide a spiritual home for Presbyterian students while they are attending Iowa State, and to train these young people to be responsible church leaders when they assume their places in the world. The Rev. Walter Barlow, pastor of the Collegiate Presbyterian Church, directs the group.

A brisk grand march opens the fun at one of the many parties, firesides and religious meetings held at the Presbyterian "Church by the West Gate"

Hayrides, Box Socials Held by Frisbie

Hayrides, sleighrides and a box social have been among the special events scheduled on the Frisbie House calendar during the past school year. Among the regular features of the organization are dances which are given every other week end, and social hours every Sunday evening where food and fun are furnished.

Popular features of the club, which is formed to encourage religious activity among Congregational students, included panels led by student members of the club and discussions on topics of current interest by outside speakers. Leading the group this year were Keith Dickson, president; Kenneth Allbaugh, vice-president; Mary Rood, secretary; Charles Gay, treasurer; and Catharine Vial, representative to Interchurch Council. The Rev. Arthur McLaughlin acts as supervisor for the Frisbie House group.

LUTHERAN STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION

Write to Servicemen

Letters to servicemen who were once members of their own group and collection of money used to finance missions for army camps are projects of the Lutheran Students' Association this year.

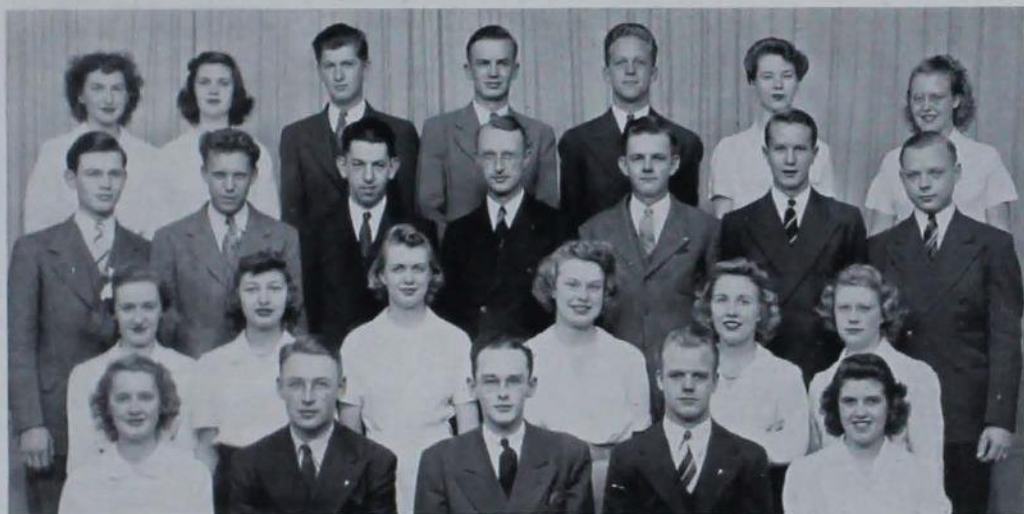

A fellowship supper, program and social hour are held every Sunday evening for the students. Special programs at these meetings included a picnic held at Lynn Fuhrer Lodge, the annual banquet and a play given during the spring. The local chapter is a unit of a national organization, and shares in both regional conferences and a national summer Ashram.

The organization is governed by an officers' council which meets every Thursday to conduct business and has a Sunday morning breakfast once a month. Present members of the officers' council are Eugene Nicol,

NEWMAN CLUB

Promote War Stamp Sales at Firesides

War stamp sales are being given a boost by members of the Newman Club, Catholic student organization. To gain entrance to the group's firesides, each couple purchases war stamps. Stamps were also exchanged as gifts at the annual Christmas party.

On the more serious side of the program, bi-monthly discussion groups were held to discuss the problems which are now facing college students.

The Newman Club is a national organization of Catholic students in secular colleges and universities whose purpose is to develop an interest in culture and leadership among Catholic students.

The Reverend John J. Brickley is chaplain for the group. Officers working under him include: President, Tom Carroll; Corresponding Secretary, Margaret Ralston; Recording Secretary, Jeanette Botsford; Treasurer, Harold Kjar, and Discussion Chairman, John Baker. A mission committee to keep the members informed about conditions overseas has been set up by the club.

Fellowship Sponsors Prayer Meetings

Meeting each evening for prayer and each Tuesday for Bible study is the record of the Iowa State Christian Fellowship, an organization of students belonging to various churches who are striving to increase interest in spiritual and moral uplift.

Although deprived by the transportation situation of one of their main activities, conducting meetings at surrounding rural churches, the members are continuing to have special speakers, student discussions, and social gatherings.

In addition to its local functions, the Iowa State group is a chapter of the IntersVarsity Christian Fellowship which was founded in 1877 in Cambridge, England. The movement has spread to many countries, the first group in the United States being organized at the University of Michigan in 1933.

Now one of over 100 organizations, the local christian fellowship group is headed by Lloyd Freshour, president; Dean Tatum, vice-president; Henrietta Bryant, secretary; and Winston Malmquist, treasurer.

Surgical dressings for the Mary Greeley Hospital, the College Hospital and casualty stations have been the major problem of the Women's Student Health Council this year. Two thousand five hundred packages of neatly folded and packed dressings were sent to both hospitals in addition to cotton balls and applicators. The 25 members, including representatives from each dormitory and sorority house, met each Monday afternoon under the direction of sponsors, Miss Fern Goulding and Mrs. Jane Stock. Several movies on health were featured at the 4 o'clock meetings of the group which has offered membership to any woman interested.

Performing hostess duties for the Farm and Home Hour women was the newest responsibility of the members of the Campus 4-H club this year. Besides entertaining these women from over the state, the club gave a victory tea for the freshmen, a boy and girl 4-H party, and a May morning breakfast for the seniors. Outstanding on their program also was a series of lectures designed to help the young woman fit into the war effort at home. Claiming 386 members, with at least one from every county, the club has one big meeting each quarter. Presided over by Jean McCormick, the sponsor is Miss Crowe of the extension service.

FOUNDERS

Meeting at monthly Sunday breakfasts in the Memorial Union, the Fourfold Founders are the Iowa State men and women who have attended Camp Miniwanca, the American Youth Foundation camp at Shelby, Michigan. Organized during last spring quarter, Lorma Gallaher was chosen president, Kenneth Allbaugh, vice-president, Walter Swank, treasurer and Verdene Boyken, librarian of the group whose purpose is to further the ideals established at Camp Miniwanca—the development of balanced physical, mental, social and religious personalities. Programs have consisted of book reviews, talks, and speaker-led discussions.

International night, sponsored by the Iowa State Cosmopolitan Club in coordination with the Committee for Foreign Students combines a dinner and a program, giving foreign students a chance to express something of the culture, music, art and life of their respective countries. All proceeds from the dinner go into the Cosmopolitan Club Loan Fund.

Organized in 1908 by a group of people interested in promoting international friendship, the purpose of the group is to unite men and women of all nationalities, irrespective of race or religious creed, for their mutual social and intellectual benefit.

WOMEN VOTERS

Speaking on topics varying from the operation of a voting machine to the choosing of the right man for office, guests of the League of Women Voters have been invited to weekly meetings to spend an hour with Iowa State women who wish to become acquainted with the whys and hows of voting.

Claiming between 30 and 40 members now, the club was founded many years ago on the campus as a subsidiary of the national League of Women Voters. Guiding the members this year were Jane Crosson, president; Esther Thurman, vice-president; Elaine Benson, secretary; Jean Guy, treasurer; and Mildred Giesenberg, publicity chairman.

Under the supervision of Col. H. R. Odell, replacements have been made as men move out to take their places on the fighting fronts. Captain Galligan carries on in place of Lieutenant D. Graham; Captain R. Kottman, Captain D. Larson, and Lieutenant Watts have taken the places of Captain Burns, Captain P. Strickland and Lieutenant D. Patterson. Additions to the staff are Lieutenant J. Rector and Lieutenant W. Seay, in charge of the newly organized signal corp unit.

CADET OFFICER ASSOCIATION

Stuart Kuyper, cadet colonel, who received this highest of cadet honors by staff appointment

With their time in college limited by a war department order, the Cadet Officer Association, composed of all advanced military men, was unable to sponsor the annual Military Circus which has been a regular attraction of former years. Ordered to report for active service early in April, the senior advanced military men were graduated in March. The United States War Department changed the plans of junior officers by abolishing the 6-weeks summer camp where juniors ordinarily got practical experience calculating firing data, surveying, laying communications and firing the guns. Open to every cadet officer from field artillery, engineers, and newly organized signal corps, its purpose is to promote better feeling among advanced military students.

PONTONIERS

Gone is the annual competition with the Iowa University pontonier company, but in its place is a more extensive program of training for the local cadets. This year's program of activities includes machine gun drill, bayonet drill, wall scaling, pack-rolling, barbed wire obstacles, gin pole construction and special close-order drill.

The Iowa State Pontoniers is designed to afford additional training and experience in engineer work for those cadets in the Engineer Corps, R.O.T.C., who wish to become more proficient in engineering duties. The unit encourages individual initiative and offers additional instruction.

Intersquad matches have been the order of the day with the Iowa State College rifle team. These matches are held weekly, because of a ruling issued by service command headquarters, limiting the number of postal matches. The squad has been divided into five teams, with awards going to the men with the high averages for the season. Transportation difficulties having made traveling impossible, it was necessary to discontinue shoulder to shoulder matches.

Leading the military organization for the year were John R. Steinert, president; Keith Nelson, vice-president; Stuart Kuyper, secretary and William Slade, treasurer.

STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Pulling a proof, as the one above, is the check that publications have on the accuracy of their copy editors and the type setters. Metal used to cast the type molds, an alloy of lead, is melted into molds after being used once, and is cast into molds many times.

Labor Shortages Hamper Publications

Lack of labor, paper shortages, difficulty in getting cuts. These are the most serious problems which faced every publication in the Collegiate Press Building this year.

The Daily Student, suffering the loss of a managing editor, business manager, sports editor, reporters and men working in the back shop, besides having to consider a possible paper shortage, was forced to cut the paper from an eight-page daily to four pages four times a week with one eight-page edition.

The Iowa Homemaker lost none of its feminine staff and increased both circulation and advertising, but had difficulty in getting cuts, as did the Green Gander. The Iowa Agriculturist also lost staff members and changed to a self-cover printed in two colors.

Distribute 4,300 Bombs to Students

Distributing the 1943 Bomb, which claimed a circulation of 4,300, the highest in history, was the responsibility of the Bomb Publication Board this year. In cooperation with the college, the board voted to send copies of the yearbook to every regularly enrolled junior and senior who was forced to leave school to join the armed forces. Most judicious spending of the $21,000 budget is the largest regular task of the four student members and two faculty advisors who comprise the board. Losses of the board this year were Phillip Jennings, faculty advisor who joined the staff of Iowa State Teachers' College at Cedar Falls, Fred Phillips and Edward Covert, newly elected student members, now serving in the armed forces.

STUDENT PUBLICATION BOARD

Dick Roberts, newly appointed Daily Student editor, and Lyle Abbott, former editor now in the army, have a chat in the office of Prof. Charles E. Rogers, head of the Journalism Department

Loss of Daily Student staff members to the armed services caused the Daily Student Publication Board to hold staff elections earlier in the winter quarter than usual. Moved from production manager to editor was Dick Roberts, while Jean Ross was approved for the managing editorship. Assistant Business Manager Fred Clausen was put in charge of the financial matters of the daily paper.

Besides selecting the editor, business manager and approving all other appointments, the board is responsible for deciding financial and editorial policies of the publication. Newly elected members, chosen in the February all-college election to serve on the board until their graduation were Janet Russell, Margaret Ralston, Victoria McKibben.

To ease the transportation problem, Farm and Home Week was carried to the farmers by radio and the Iowa Agriculturist, instead of bringing the farmers to Ames. The Agriculturist preserved the meeting in permanent form by featuring its highlights in the February issue. Copies were sent to those who would formerly have attended the program.

The first woman ever to hold a position on the staff, Virginia Brainard, planned a homemaker's section for housewives, something new in the annals of the publication. During the winter quarter, the magazine adopted the policy of appointing an issue editor in order to give more men experience in editing the magazine.

Although handicapped by the exodus of staff members to the armed services, the monthly magazine continued to report the Beginning this year with the May, 1942, issue, the new Iowa Homemaker staff produced a magazine which broke past records for size and advertising inches. A theme which stressed home economics in the war was begun and continued throughout the year. Subscriptions made a sharp increase, particularly among high schools and professional home economists.

Serving as editor-in-chief was Phyllis Garberson, while Dorothy Lee Conquest filled the managing editorship. Jeanne Schram took care of business matters, with Phyllis Klusman acting as treasurer. Betty Ann Iverson and Marabeth Paddock were associate editors, and Joyce Curley ordered cuts for the publication. Eighty home economics students attended the Homemaker training course, designed to train future Homemaker staff members, held on Saturday afternoons.

Smash Sale Mark

Three times hitting the 3,000 mark in sale of Green Ganders, the business staff of the college humor magazine began a new system of pre-sales this year. A sales contest, with women's organized houses competing, was held. Each group's representative was allowed to contract for Gander sales before the date of distribution. The trophies presented for highest sales records went to Elm Hall and Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Most controversial copy of the year was the "Bawdy Detective" issue which abandoned the accepted formula in favor of a take-off of the detective pulp magazine, complete with plentiful amounts of blood, campus models of criminal types and chorus girls.

Appearing each Homecoming, Christmas, Valentine's Day and Veishea, the Green Gander is published by the chapters of Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalism fraternities.

Before coming under the direction of its new editor, Patricia Craven, and Business Manager Virginia Harding, the Green Gander went to press under the guidance of Frank Murphy, the financial responsibilities falling to Business Manager Alva Hayes.

SKETCH

Presents Awards

Establishment of the Sketch Award in freshman creative writing was the newest feature of the Sketch program this year. Presented at the Fall Honor's Day Convocation, the awards were books chosen by the winners and provided by Dr. Raymond Hughes, president emeritus, and the Sketch Publication Board. Winner in the prose section was Eileen Dudgeon, while Dwaine Marvick accepted the poetry award.

The annual fall quarter series of ten book reviews, Books and Cokes, was presented each Thursday in the South Ballroom, Memorial Union, under the sponsorship of Sketch, creative writing magazine. A committee headed by Don Cressey, associate editor, picked Robert E. Lee, Helen Pundt, Dorothea Dunagan, John H. Baker, Jean Ross, Lyle Abbott, Betty Ann Iverson,

For the first time, the Veterinary Student joined other publications at the journalism picnic held this year during win-

Many prominent men of the profession have contributed material to this official publication of the Junior A.V.M.A. One of the most quoted magazines of its kind, the Veterinary Student can now claim every veterinary medicine senior as a subscriber.

Judging Teams Win Waterloo Merits

The last intercollegiate dairy judging contest for the duration of the war was held in September at the Dairy Cattle Congress in Waterloo, Iowa. Out of the smoke of point scoring, the Iowa State team captured first in the contest for the third time in a row. Eugene Meyer was high individual in the contest with a total score of 702 points.

Placing fifth in the contest at the National Belgian Horse Show at Waterloo, Iowa, the 7-man livestock judging team was coached this year by J. C. Holbert, professor in Animal Husbandry. Maurice Peterson, A.H.Sr., placed ninth in the individual scoring. Iowa State teams have the highest long-time record at the Waterloo contest, winning the title three times out of six, breaking all previous records at Kansas City, Mo., last year, and leading in Chicago victories.

Selling rationing programs, scrap drives and service enlistments to its radio audience became a regular part of the broadcasting program of WOI this year. Additional gearing of its services to the war work was carried out by the new Freedom Front program, edited by Sidney Stone. Under the direction of W. I. Griffith, this Iowa educational station sends to its listeners world news, market reports and adult education programs as well as current reports of campus activities. Student courses are offered in radio speech, news editing, and broadcasting theory is given actual practice. Production manager of the station is Dick Hull.

Broadcast Farm Week

With travel restrictions and the increased burden of wartime production placed on the Iowa farmer, campus sessions of Farm and Home Week became impractical this year and WOI broadcast the annual short course from Feb. 8 through 12. Based on the theme of "Doing the Best We Can With What We Have," the week's program centered around problems that the farmers will face in 1943. Most of the broadcasts were interviews with Iowa State specialists who answered questions. Highlights of the daily Farm and Home Week schedule broadcast over WOI were the Homemakers' Half Hour, Farm and Home Week, Noonday Parade and a forum discussion as the noonday feature.

ATHLETICS

One of the largest college physical education programs ever undertaken in the United States was inaugurated at Iowa State during the fall of 1942. Every student was subjected to three hours of physical education a week, which included calisthenics, cross-country running, touch football, obstacle racing and special sports for underclassmen. Members of the coaching staff built an obstacle course patterned after the navy's pre-flight courses, which drew national attention in several physical education magazines. Students are now ranked high in physical fitness.

The absence of the Homecoming decorations usually displayed by all organized houses was the most obvious change noted by alumni of the college returning for the November celebration. The pep dance and traditional class break on Friday were also things of the past for Iowa State's first wartime Homecoming. The pep barbecue, held on Clyde Williams' Field as usual, supplied 3,500 students and 1,000 naval trainees with weiners, apples, ice cream and coffee, and saw Helen Arnold crowned queen of the week-end festivities. During the pep barbecue, students voted for 12 of the 31 Bomb beauty candidates presented from a band stand at the edge of the field. A pep rally, featuring a bonfire, cheered the football team, who lost a close game to Oklahoma.

Pep Club Sells Stamps; Buys Bond

Selling war stamps at the Missouri-Iowa State game, Barbara Boltz and Bettejane Kern, Twisters, collect 25 cents from spectator Bill Barger

Selling war stamps at the football games last fall and buying a $50 war bond have been the contributions of the Iowa State Twisters to the war effort.

Members of the organization, easily recognized in their cardinal jackets, are chosen from dormitories and sororities by popular election within the group. Attending all football and basketball games is their main activity. The trophy won by Twister's Veishea float in last year's parade has been permanently placed in the display case at the women's gym.

Miss Jane Bond, advisor for the pep group, is aided by Bettejane Kern, president; Carolyn March, vice-president; Ann Dandridge, secretary; and Leila Lander, treasurer.

Yel-Jax Usher, Take Tickets for Veishea

Veishea of 1942 found members of the Yel-Jax, men's pep organization, taking tickets and acting as ushers for most of the events. Their responsibility for the bonfire at the Homecoming Pep Barbecue became a wet job when rain soaked the kindling a few hours before the fire was to be lighted. Handling crowds, guarding gates and gathering ballots for Bomb beauty candidates were also jobs delegated to them during the weekend.

Adding another responsibility this year to their usual activity of attending all football and basketball games, members of the Yel-Jax sold war stamps at all athletic events. Buying several war bonds as a group also added to their war effort contribution. Heading the organization's activities were Fred Crandall, Elvero Henning and Bill White.

ATHLETIC STAFF

Brought to the Cyclone coaching ranks this year was a man selected as the all-time Pro Football Guard—August "Mike" Michalske. Michalske reported to Iowa State as a line coach but midway in the season he became head coach when Ray Donels turned over the coaching duties.

Baseball Coach LeRoy Timm supervised the work formerly handled by Berl Taylor, now in the navy; Louie Menze worked with the varsity basketball team. Hugo Otopalik coached the wrestlers and golfers; Jack McGuire took charge of the swimmers. George Brettnall again coached the track team, and Harry Schmidt, in addition to managing the large intramural system, tutored the net squad. Nebraska Snatches 26 to 0 Victory

Nebraska recovered from a crushing defeat at the hands of Iowa U. the week before to smash the Cyclones 26-0 in the first Big Six encounter of the season. Usually one of the Cornhusker's toughest competitors regardless of the strength of the two teams, the Cyclones were completely without scoring power and failed to register a first down until the closing minutes of the final quarter. Intercepted passes and fumbles stopped the Cyclones' scoring threats before they could reach serious proportions. Nebraska gathered in six of the faulty aerials tossed by the Iowa Staters and ran them back for a total of 126 yards. Of the 11 forwards attempted by Coach Ray Donel's charges only three found their mark. The Cyclone line held up against the Huskers better than expected, however, and Lincoln huskies were forced to take to the air to keep their attack rolling. Cyclones Stop Drake With 29 to 6 Win

George Galt, junior halfback

Playing their first game under the new head coach, August "Mike" Michalske, the Iowa Staters swamped Drake University by the largest score since 1917. Previously the Cyclones had shown no apparent power on the ground, but the hard charging forward wall slashed numerous holes in the Drake line to open paths for the scampering backs. Rangy Paul Darling paced the Cyclones on both offensive and defense. He split the uprights with a field goal and two points after touchdowns as well as bucking the line for a touchdown. Reserve backs Ron Norman and Howard Tippee also made the scoring column with 6-point counters, while Cyclone tackle LeVerne McGraw blocked a Drake punt, scooped it up and raced to the goal line for another Iowa State touchdown.

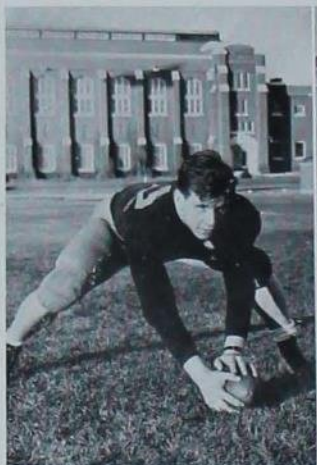

Bob Steuber, All-American halfback breaks through the Cyclone line for a 60-yard touchdown run without being touched. He was the driving force behind the many laterals throughout the contest that provided another scoring threat for the hard-fighting Cardinal and Gold. Iowa State garnered 16 first downs to Missouri's 11, but the Tigers collected 300 yards by rushing the Iowa State line. Lohry and Norman took to the airways to register most of the first downs

Oklahoma Gives 14 to 7 Ruffling

The powerful Oklahoma line proved to be too much for the lighter Cyclones, and the favored Sooners took a 14-7 decision from Iowa State before a Homecoming crowd. Basing their attack on sheer power, the Sooners scored once in the first quarter and again in the second quarter, making both conversions good. Unable to find the pay stripe until midway in the third period, Iowa State's scoring twins, Lohry and Darling, ended the scoring for the game. The big, burly Oklahomans threatened several times in the second half, but the Cardinal and Gold line tightened to prevent any further damage. Sustained drives late in the game by the Iowa Staters were twice halted by the Sooners deep in Oklahoma territory.

Feature play of the game came in the final 30 seconds of play when Tom McCarthy, substitute half-back, twisted and turned through the Iowa State team for a 73-yard touchdown run that brought the crowd to the edge of the field.

kicker Paul Darling made good the conversion for the extra point. Jack Girtin, Denver's sensational freshman back, kept the Iowa Staters on their heels all during the first quarter, and the Westerners dominated the play until Lohry hauled down Saracino's misguided pass. Denver's freshmen, Girtin and Cribari, shared honors for the Pioneers.

Iowa State Tromps Kansas U 20 to 13

Iowa State scored its first Big Six victory in two years by stopping Kansas 20 to 13. The nation's leading passer, All-Big Six Ray Evans, was rushed by the Cyclones and garnered only 12 yards through the air, al-

Evans' running game featured the Jayhawkers' attack. Several times when rushed while attempting a pass, Evans took to the ground and picked up first downs. The Dads' Day game produced the third and final victory of the season for the Cyclones.

Kansas State Trims Cyclones 7 to 6

Oft-beaten Kansas State revived its old jinx against Iowa State and tripped Coach Michalske's eleven in the season's finale, 7 to 6. The Wildcats rammed over a touchdown in the first quarter and made good the deciding point of the game. Back in 1938 the Manhattan lads nearly upset the famous Cyclone squad of that year, but a desperate passing attack finally salvaged a tie game. Again in 1941 the weak Wildcats tied the favored Cyclones. The defeat left Iowa State in a two-way tie for the cellar birth in the conference. Captain Royal "Ace" Lohry put on an iron man feat that nearly gave the Iowa Staters touchdowns on several occasions. The triple-threat All-Big Six star punched across a touchdown in the second quarter, but missed the conversion. He later intercepted a Kansas State pass that put the Cardinal and Gold in scoring position again. A fumble stopped the drive, however. Fumbles and inconsistent playing marred the hopeful climax to the Cyclones' season. Kansas State had not won a conference game until it nicked the Iowa State squad, but in the final game the following week, the Wildcats also tripped the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

Best Prep Stars Appear For Practice

Frosh Coach Clayton "Chick" Sutherland viewed the 1942 freshman football squad with great hopes for the yearlings when the '43 season rolled around. Some of the state's best prep stars appeared for the initial workouts, and the closing practices revealed several additional varsity prospects. Although lacking the all-around finesse of the previous year's record crop, the squad showed considerable speed and fair running ability.

The armed forces made their dent in the ranks even before the practice sessions had closed, however, with Ray Byrnes being called during the fall. Another promising backfield star, little Jack Webb, also reported for army service and many other numeral men were missing when spring practice started.

A smashing Blue team, sparked by Jack

Webb and Armin Schleifforth, took to the air to defeat a scrappy Red team led by Ray Byrnes, 12 to 0, in the annual intra-squad battle which climaxed the season.

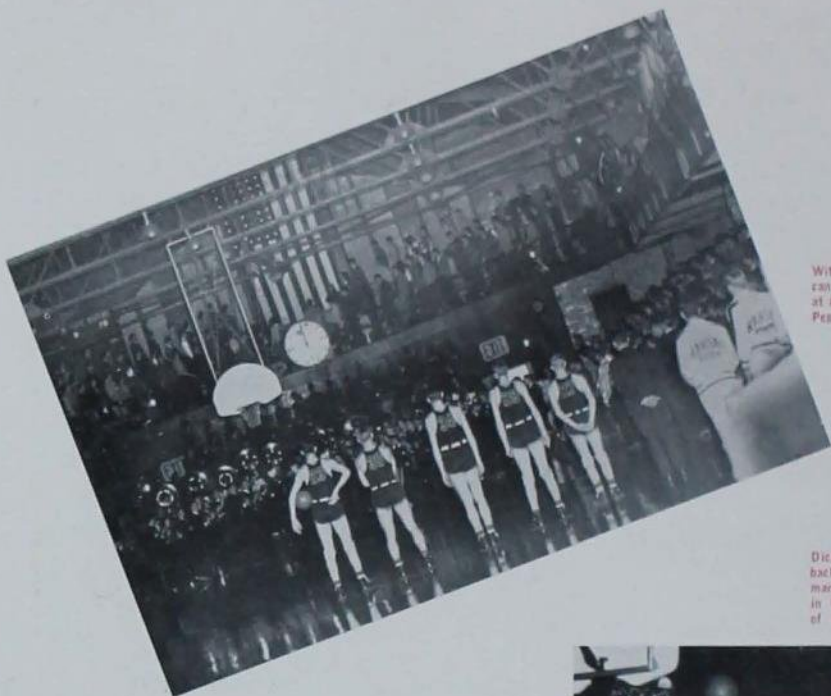

Other players which showed up well were Bob Dorsett, Bill Meyers and Lloyd Kester. The Blues scored their first touchdown in the first quarter and then countered again in the fourth.

Those awarded numerals were Mike Lawson, Ray Byrnes, Lloyd Kester, Harold Shugart, Jack Rold, Bob Erickson, Bill Myers, Bill Hedges, Don Schumacher, Joe Richey, Frank Stelovich, Bob Logan, LeRoy Wiltsie, Wally Linn, Fred Bittner, Keith Allen, Bill Winey, Walter Haugo, Allan Packer, Al Ryerson, Bill Lambert, Bob Axthelm, Carlyle Parsons, Jack Webb, Bob Updegraff, Leith Loch, Bob Dorsett, Armin Schleifforth.

Sophomores Star

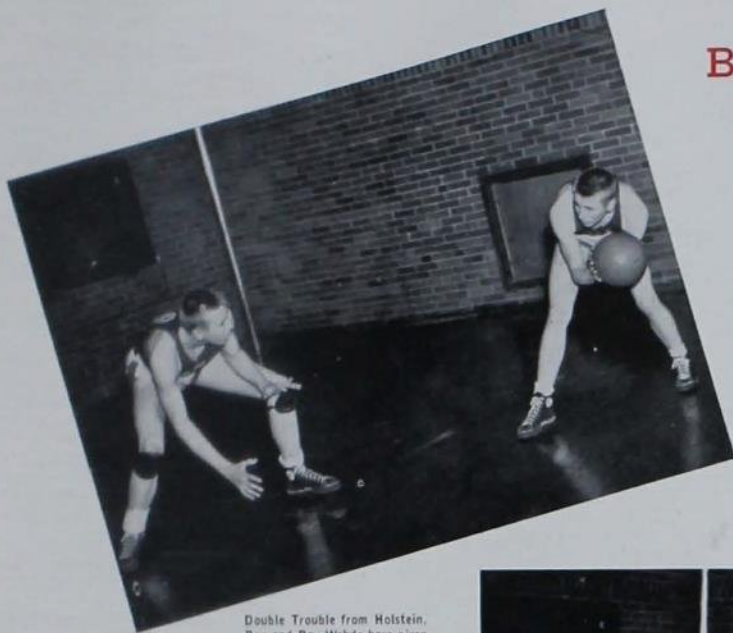

The veteran-short Cyclone basketball team had trouble ringing the victory bell in the Big Six Conference in 1943, but the sophomore studded quintet had to make no apologies for the fighting spirit it showed all season. Early in the season, Rollin Kuebler, red-headed center was forced out with a charleyhorse. Kuebler had set the pace for the Cyclones in the first game, and only Bob Hayes and Reuben Michelson were left from last year's lettermen. Hayes then went out with a bad ankle and the Army Air Force called Michelson before the conference stretch drive was under way.

Coach Louis Menze molded the sophomores into a smooth working crew that drew praise from all the loop's coaches. In the back court, newcomers Ronnie Norman and Gene Oulman appeared to be in the class of the Big Six guards, but Norman also was called by Army Air Force. Twins Ray and Roy Wehde held their own in the front court while Gene Phelps, Orlyn Feuerbach and Bill Husted, played good ball. The final check gave the Menzemen two victories and eight losses in the loop and five wins and one loss against nonconference foes.

Ten Freshman Cagers Claim Numerals

Definite varsity material was recognized on the 1942-43 freshman basketball squad that reported to Frosh Coach Chick Sutherland. Although the yearlings lacked the all-around abilities of the previous year's squad that produced five major lettermen as sophomores, the war-riddled crew showed every indication that good basketball will continue to rule the Cardinal and Gold teams. A smooth accurate passer from Everly, lanky Dayle Klett, paced the freshman squad to a 37 to 33 victory over the Naval Training Typhoons. Also sharing honors for the game were Leo Schneider, brother of Carol Schneider, Lloyd Kester, Jim Hogue and John Sheperd.

The possibilities of returning for most of the squad were small, with the armed forces scheduled for first call on several of the members.

Numerals were awarded to 10 candidates with Robert Anderson, Robert Bridge, Don Elk, James Hogue, Lloyd Kester, Bob Nicholson, Dayle Klett, Jim Myers, Leo Schneider and John Sheperd taking the cardinal '46's for their work on this year's freshman squad.

Mat Squad Claims One of Nation's Best

Iowa State's mat squad, although failing to make much of a record in the won and lost column, was represented by one of the nation's best heavyweight wrestlers. Genial George Gast, fresh from a season at the right halfback post on the football squad, picked up where he left off last season and took four straight matches against the nation's best contenders. He started off the season by winning against Cornell and continued his victory string against Michigan State, Iowa State Teachers and Minnesota. In the feature match of the year, Gast was pitted against State Teachers' Leon Martin. Martin had been undefeated in dual meet competition for three years at the Tutor school and fought to the finals of the N.C.A.A. tournament the year before. However, Gast broke his victory string by taking a decision in the best match held in State Gymnasium since the Prunty-Tucker match 15 years ago.

Coach Otopalik had only three experienced men for the squad. Capt. Gaylord Bales and Don Richter were the other veterans in addition to Gast. A newcomer, Norb Chehak, improved the picture and wound up the season by scoring three straight decisions.

Letters were awarded to Arnold Andreasen, Gaylord Bales, Norbert Chehak, George Gast, North Griswold, Don Richter and Dick Steinberg. Minor letters were given to Stanley Peterson and Don Sceli.

Numeral sweaters were awarded to Len Daib, Dick Ditsworth, Bob Dorsett, Wayne Emerson, Bob Newbrough, Dick Williams, Keith Koch and Frank Stelovich.

Win One; Lose Three

The Iowa State wrestlers started the '43 season by bowing to Cornell College's ranking matmen. Results of the meet in the order of weight classes were: Creston (C) decisioned Steinberg (IS); Bales (IS) decisioned Blakinger (C); Bishop (C) threw Andreasen (IS); Ellison (C) threw Bragdon (IS); Richter (IS) decisioned Littel (C); Fish (C) decisioned Sceli (IS); Thomas (C) decisioned Chehak (IS), and Gast (IS) decisioned Haloupek (C).

Results of the remaining three matches were: Iowa State Teachers—Bales, Richter, Chehak and Gast won; Steinberg, Andreasen, Griswold, and Peterson lost. Richter scored Iowa State's lone fall. Michigan State—Chehak and Gast garnered the only wins, Gast triumphing by a fall; Steinberg, Bales, Andreasen, Griswold, Richter and Peterson lost. Minnesota—Steinberg and Andreasen scored falls and Bales, Richter, Sceli, Chehak and Gast took decisions while Griswold lost.

The Iowa State swimming team split even in the season's six intercollegiate meets and two freshman meets. After nipping the yearlings 33 to 32, the varsity dropped the second meet 38 to 37. Wisconsin State Teachers lost a postal match to the Cyclones 60 to 15. The medley relay team, Salmon in the 220-yard free-style and the 100-yard free-style, Wells in the 150-yard backstroke, Slater in the 200-yard breaststroke, Pickens in the 440-yard free-style and the 400-yard medley relay team took first places for the Iowa State crew. Savage, Slater, Salmon and the two relay teams helped the Cyclones trim Carleton College 42 to 20 by winning first places. Minnesota's Golden Gopher tankers stopped the Iowa State mermen 51 to 33, taking all the events except the 150-yard backstroke. Michigan State swept first places in all the events at both meets in the state pool. The Cyclones won 10 firsts in the telegraphic meet with Washington University.

Tankers Battle In Six Dual Meets

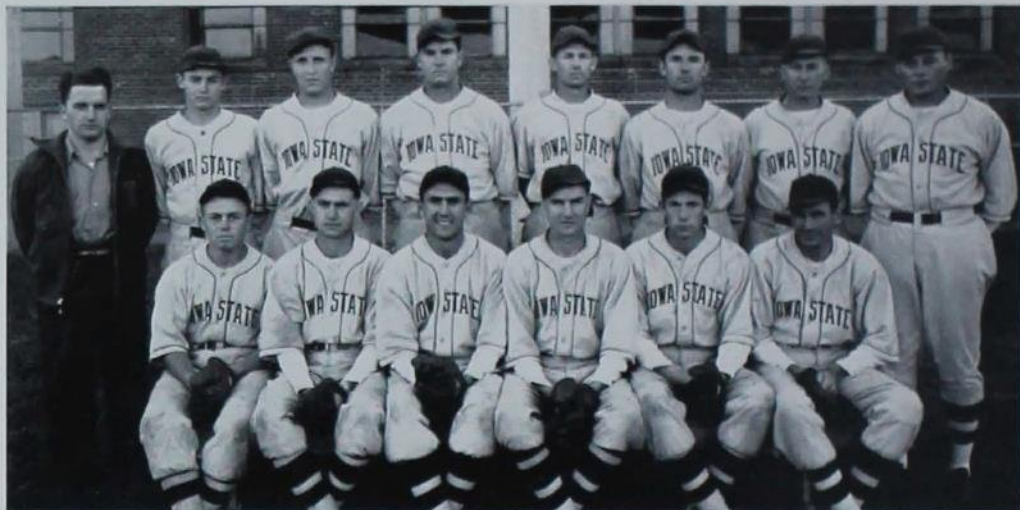

Cancellation of the Big Six swimming crown for the duration left Coach Jack McGuire's tankers with only six intercollegiate dual meets for the season, and none of these against Big Six foes. The Cyclones had aimed for their sixth straight Big Six crown until the championship winner was dropped. The season's record indicated the Cardinal and Gold crew could have made a good account of themselves in any tourney. In the last contest of the season, a telegraphic meet with Washington University of St. Louis, three new varsity records were smashed and one tied, three Big Six records were bettered and one tied, and all but the breast stroke time were new meet records. The medley relay team of Robison, Slater and Wilson splashed to a 3:05.6 record, 1 tenth of a second better than the old varsity record. Ted Salmon tied the 100-yard free-style record at :54.1. Doug Robison, a freshman who was permitted to swim on the varsity squad the last meet as a result of a new conference ruling, reduced the 150-yard backstroke time from 1:45.1 to 1:41.1. The 400-yard relay crew set a new record in that event at 3:40.0. Savage, Robison, Wilson and Salmon competed on the team.

Feature meet of the season saw Coach McGuire's predecessor, Charles McCaffree, bring his Michigan State squad to the state pool. The experienced Spartan swimmers trimmed the Cyclones in both meets of the doubleheader, winning 63 to 21, and 57 to 27.

Winners of major letters were Dave Clizbe, Jim McCoy, George Pickens, Ted Salmon, John Slater, Bob Savage, Charles Wells and Capt. Thornton Wilson. Numerals went to Keith Deal, George Fischer, Dennis Gibson, Barton Greenberg, John Guggedahl, Doug Robison and Ken Winchester.

Coach Timm Moulds Sophomore Squad

Coach LeRoy Timm moulded a veteran depleted baseball squad into a strong early season threat, but the usually powerful hitting Cyclones ran into a slump at the plate and took only three conference victories.

The previous season's team swatted the horsehide around for an average above the .300 mark, but only one of the Cardinal and Gold members finished the season above the team average mark for the preceding year. The loss of Capt. Bob Benedict, leading hitter on the team for three years, Dale DeKoster, Fred Gordon, Doug Strohhahn and Leon Wilson, all by graduation, left Timm with a staff of inexperienced sophomores. Capt. Bob Scharnberg, one of the midwest's outstanding catchers, failed to find his hitting eye and dropped more than 100 percentage points at the plate. Big Ellis

Alexander, slugging first baseman, also experienced a slump but finished near the top of the batting list.

Starting off his diamond career at Iowa State with an unbelievable .500 clip, Mel Shanda lost his punch as the season grew older. Shanda made his first few appearances as a pinch hitter, coming through on each trip, and collected one for two in two games as a regular.

Bright spot of the season was the superb performance on the mound by Al Strohhahn. Before the disastrous return trip to Nebraska, where the Cyclones lost two one-hitters, Strohhahn had hurled six games and was given credit for five victories. Willard Mylenbusch, Wayne Mitchell and Howard Tippee shared most of the remaining pitching chores for the Cardinal and Gold nine.

Hurdlers Snatch 66 of 72 Meet Points

The Cyclone hurdlers provided the most scoring punch for the outdoor track team by garnering 66 points out of a possible 72 points in the four dual meets. Capt. John Heggen paced the hurdlers in the four dual victories with 25 points. He broke the tape once each in both the high and low hurdles and finished second three times in the highs and twice in the lows. Bob Moats and Lincoln Stewart won 17 and 14 points, respectively. The only meet the Cyclones didn't take firsts in both hurdles events was the initial clash with Grinnell. Pollom of Kansas collected the only other placing in the hurdles competition.

The high jumpers also ranked high in the competition with the aerial artists capturing 31½ points out of 36 possible counters. Versatile Paul Darling picked up 16 points going over the bar and added two firsts and a third in the broadjump, a first and two seconds in the pole vault, two thirds in the discus and a third in the javelin.

A victory in the one-mile run against Chicago would have given the Iowa Staters at least one first in every event during the dual meet season, and would also have given the Cardinal and Gold harriers a clean sweep of the first places in the Maroon meet held later in the long season.

The Cyclone thinclads who were awarded major letters were Charles Binning, Dick Bliss, Phil Bogdanovitch, Marlowe Burgy, Duane Dankel, Dave Martin, Bob Moats, Everett Norcross, John Phenix, Bob WinJers, Lincoln Stewart, who were entitled to membership in Varsity "I" Club while Gordon Taylor received a minor award.

Bob Winters, Cyclone quarter-miler, limbers up for the indoor track competition in Kansas City

During the winter indoor track season, the Cyclones produced some individual standouts in the conference. At the Big Six indoor meet in Kansas City, Everett Norcross set the nation's best broadjump mark for the indoor season. Norcross leaped 23 feet 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches. The Big Six outdoor broadjump record might have fallen to Norcross too, if he hadn't reported to the armed forces. All but three of the lettermen were called to serve in the armed forces before the spring quarter season got underway. Duane Dankle, Dick Bliss and George Gast were the three returning lettermen.

Although the squad boasted such sophomore stand-outs as Lee Richardson, they fell to a bad loss before Drake's powerful team.

Harriers Gather First Seven Places

After eleven years of obscurity, varsity cross-country has again taken its place in Iowa State intercollegiate competition since Track Coach George Brettnall substituted the new program for the Big Six two-mile event.

The Cyclone harriers ran in four meets, swamping Grinnell, 15 to 50, and taking the first seven places.

Drake eased past the Iowa Staters, 23 to 32, while Cornell provided the next competition, and Iowa State won, 26 to 29.

A triangular meet between the Iowa Navy Pre-flight, Grinnell and Iowa State was won by the naval trainees with 24 points. The Cyclones were close behind with 31 tallies, but Grinnell was far back with 77 points.

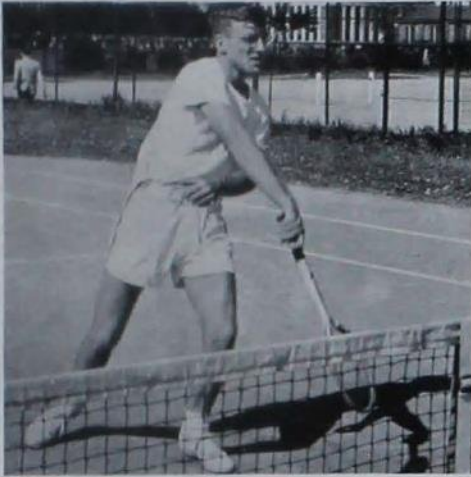

The new record for the Cyclone's new 4-mile course was set by Cornell's Orme.

Netsters Capture Third In Big Six

A hard drive over the net is executed by Ken Donelson, letter winner of the tennis squad who teamed with Lawrence Gilley in doubles play this year.

Nebraska's Big Six netsters turned the steam on the Iowa State tennis squad to drop the Cyclones into third place in the conference standings. The championship husker team toppled Coach Harry Schmidt's crew 4 to 2 in the final loop match of the season. Nebraska had previously tipped the Cyclones by the same score. Oklahoma, the defending champions, drubbed the Cyclones 6 to 0 in the only other conference game of the season, the victory giving the Sooners second place in the Big Six. Minnesota took the Cardinal and Gold measure 6 to 0 in a non-conference game. Iowa State nipped Coe 4 to 2 and hammered out a 4 to 0 decision over Carleton. Grinnell and the Cyclones played two 3 to 3 ties. Netsters winning major letters were Dick Young, Lawrence Gilley, Milton Salzman and Ken Donelson.

Linksmen Garner Second Place Honors

Bad breaks along the route spoiled Iowa State's chances for the Big Six golf crown last spring. Even though the Cyclones had beaten Nebraska earlier in the season, the Cornhuskers came back and won the conference title, Iowa State placing second. Max Hall proved himself the best golfer in the conference by capturing medalist honors. The Iowa State aggregation opened its 1942 season at home with an easy victory over St. Ambrose College. Nebraska next invaded the college course and Coach Otopalik's crew handed the Cornhuskers a timely drubbing, 15½ to 5½, and gave the Cardinal and Gold their first conference victory of the season. The Cyclones next journeyed to Minnesota for two games, winning easily from Carleton College, but meeting with stiff resistance when they played the Golden Gophers at Minneapolis. Minnesota took the long end of the score, handing the Cyclones their first loss of the year. Playing their second conference game at home, the Cyclones defeated the defending title holders, Oklahoma, 14½ to 3½. Max Hall's consistent par shooting, and the steady playing of Bill Walters, Bob Mall and Joe Sexton enabled all of them to play every game and win their letters for the current season. Max Hall was the second member of the Hall family to hang up honors for the Cyclone linksmen, Billy Hall having set the pace on the rugged Iowa State course two years earlier. Bill Walters was named captain of the Cyclone quartet for the '43 season.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

The Women's Gymnasium, completed in 1940, houses a large gymnasium, dance studio, individual activity and game rooms, and an indoor archery and golf range

In their first annual water show, "Amphibian '43," the Naiads, members of the Women's Swimming Club, presented a program of rhythmic pattern swimming with waltzing and marching strokes, a demonstration of standard dives and swimming strokes and a variety of comic arts. Tryouts for Naiads are held the beginning of each quarter and are based on general swimming ability and interest shown.

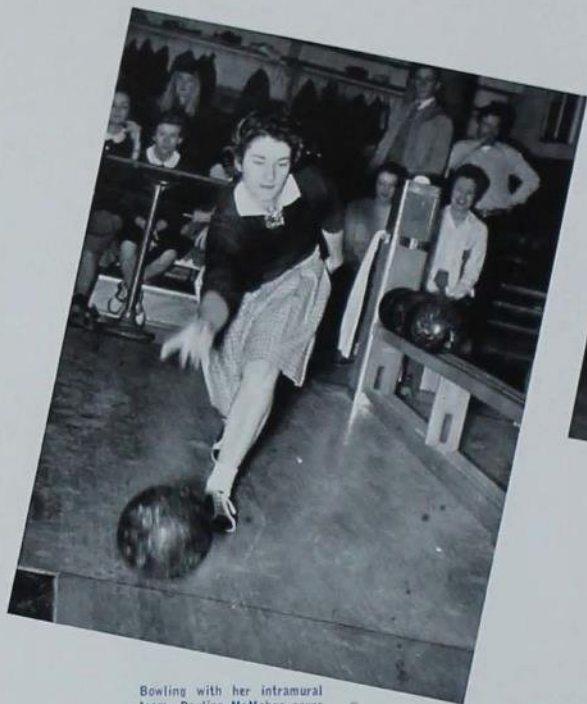

Recreational Leadership Club, combining the personnel of the former Camp Counselors Club and Leaders and Officials Club, offers its members instruction in outdoor cookery and first aid, subjects which will be aids in summer camp counseling. Also members are given experience in officiation of group sports.

Tennis and badminton enthusiasts make up Rackets Club which is held during spring and fall quarters. This organization offers instruction and recreational activity along these lines.

Dance Club cooperated with the combined speech, dramatic, and music groups in presentation of a play, "School for Husbands." During intermission of the college Homecoming football game with Oklahoma, a group of Dance Club members presented dances representative of the allied countries.

Striving for physical fitness, Iowa State women students under the leadership of Dr. Germaine Guiot, head of the Women's Physical Education Department, participated in establishing the "campus health front." Many dormitories and organized houses had periods daily of supervised physical exercise. Special conditioning periods are a part of all classes in women's physical education with the exception of rhythm and swimming classes.

Upperclass women who have completed two years physical education are entitled to instruction in the Red Cross standard first aid course for which the standard certificate is given. During each quarter 150 to 200 students learn techniques in bandaging, care of burns and artificial respiration.

Assuming the responsibility of officiating at intramural events this year, members of the Women's "I" Fraternity, women's athletic honorary, took over an activity formerly under the supervision of the physical education faculty. Another new activity of the organization was the selling of chrysanthemums at the Homecoming football game. In spring quarter, the members entered a booth in the annual Varsity "I" Carnival and sponsored a Veishea open house. Leading the honorary this year were Alice Fletcher, president; Doris Strater, vice-president; Muriel Woodson, secretary; Mildred Giesenberg, treasurer; and Miss Ruth Hassinger.

Open to all women who are interested in participating in individual and group sports, the W.A.A. is divided into Bowling Club, Dance Club, Naiads and Recreation Club. Governing this organization is the W.A.A. Council, made up of the presidents of the clubs, of the Women's "I" Fraternity and the Women's Intramural Board.

Activities of the organization include a picnic in the fall for freshman women, a tea in the spring to introduce officer candidates, and occasional parties with the faculty.

WOMEN'S INTRAMURAL BOARD

Board Coordinates Intramural Program

Coordinating all athletic functions in the organized houses, the Women's Intramural Board strives to give every woman student an opportunity to participate in intramural activities. To man the board, each house sends one representative to serve in the organization. Phases of athletics included in this year's program were badminton, softball, table tennis, bowling, archery, volleyball and swimming. Because of war-time priorities, no trophies were awarded to winning contestants. Officers of the council this year were Fauneil Campbell, president; Sally Richardson, secretary; and Janet Cameron, treasurer. Dr. Germaine Guiot served as faculty advisor for the organization.

Track Meet Begins

Intramural competition got its first start at Iowa State back in 1895 when a track meet was held between the junior and senior classes. In 1912 competition was inaugurated in baseball. Three years later the Interfraternity Council organized competitive athletics between the fraternities. In 1920 a member of the athletic staff was appointed to supervise intramural activity, which had been limited largely to baseball, track and basketball. Frank Williman was the first full-time intramural director and pioneered the first year around program. The present director, Harry Schmidt, assumed the position in 1926 while holding the line-coaching job. In 1928 he added intramural competition to include independent men as well as fraternity and boarding club men.

Three-Fourths Of Men Participate

Believing that students needed more than a physical conditioning program, the athletic department this year put additional emphasis on the competitive angle of the college's athletic program. More than 75 per cent of the men students donned athletic togs and took part in the 26 sports offered in the intramural program. Participation was entirely voluntary and competition was arranged for students through three groups: fraternity, fraternity freshmen, and ward, the dormitory division competing with the ward groups. The winners of these divisions then competed to determine the all-campus winners. Further competition was made available through club organizations of special sports and by divisional class tournaments. The Iowa State Swordsmen Club was available to fencing enthusiasts, the Bowstring and Cyclone Archer's Club held regular archery classes and meets and the Winter Sports Club held skating tournaments.

MEN'S INTRAMURAL BOARD

Presidents, Managers Make Up Board

Back of the intramural program's success at Iowa State is the Intramural Administrative Board, which is the supreme court and congress of the system—deciding the policies and making the plans. Board members include the presidents of the three divisional intramural councils—fraternity, fraternity freshmen and ward—three senior managers and three junior managers.

Representatives from the fraternity council were Milton Nielsen, fall; Tom Colloton, winter; and Dick Beaubien, spring. Leo Schneider represented the fraternity freshmen throughout the year. Ken Myers was the fall and winter ward representative and Lowell Smith served during the spring quarter. Senior managers were Carleton Vangness, fall; David Ryder, winter; and Emmett Barnes, spring. Junior managers appointed to the board were Bill McCraith and Charles Pavlik, fall; Don Shimon, winter; and Melvin Shepherd, spring.

Twenty-six sports came under the intramural plan this year, with over 75 per cent of the men students of Iowa State taking part in some events. Some of the competitions were held in touch football, golf, archery, handball, track, badminton, tennis, horseshoes, bowling, swimming, fencing, basketball, wrestling, baseball and obstacle racing.

MEN'S INTRAMURAL COUNCIL

Managers Arrange Play Schedules

Backbone of the vast intramural organization at Iowa State is the Intramural Council which is composed of the managers from each division in a competition group. Managers from each ward, dormitory, fraternity and fraternity freshman team form a council to assist Harry Schmidt, director of intramurals, in making schedules, arranging play-offs and settling disputes.

Proof that Iowa State students took their physical fitness seriously was shown in some tests conducted by Ray Donels of the athletic staff. At the close of the winter quarter, Donels gave his classes in calisthenics four physical tests to determine their physical condition as compared to the standards used by many of the armed services' athletic instructors. Every participant in the tests was above the average standard, which is based on 200 points, and the lowest Iowa State participant scored 203 points. The average number of times for each event, according to the standard, was 27 for sit-ups, 15 for pull-ups, 22 for squat jumps and 16 for push-ups. Leaders in the test were Edward Hess who scored 274 points, Olin Howie with 269 points, Paul Bame with 266 points and three tied for 265 points in the final count.

STUDENT LIFE

One hundred fifty-eight engagements announced during the school year . . . Ellen Seidell, Virginia Bates, Virginia Richter and Suzanne Sybilrud chosen 1943 Bomb Beauties by naval trainees . . . Panhellenic Council organizes sorority-sailor swings . . . Interfraternity Council abolishes Homecoming decorations . . . Women's Dormitory Council inaugurates devotional services . . . Ward men elect a sweetheart . . . Ward Social Council gives turkey . . . Ward Program Council obtains popular movies for Ward Wampuses.

Eight campus queens reign over festivity. Sororities move transfer pledges into houses. Fraternities consolidate and rent houses to college. Barton Hall women move out to allow Naval Aviation Cadets to occupy the dormitory. Friley Hall men move into Friley on Lynn and Friley on Lincolnway. 1,400 ward men select Dorothy McDade as sweetheart.

Tacking up the Cardinal and Gold of an Iowa State penant, Barbara Miles and Eleanor Kenfield put the finishing touches to their room in the Tri Delta house

Slipping a diamond on the finger of his fiancée, this college man adds another pair of names to the long list of engagements announced in 1942-43. Five-pound parties serve to announce to the women in organized houses that another member has chosen to join the ranks of engaged women.

The buzzer rings, the doors to the dining-room open, and a houseful of excited women rush in, each anxious to be the first to find the chained pins, the box of candy. Five-pound parties have announced over 158 engagements since last September—a substantial increase over the number revealed last year.

When a fraternity man is involved, the first step in a romance is the pin-hanging, usually done after a big dance, but often accomplished ten minutes before curfew, in a brightly lighted parlor. The pin is meant to affirm the process of "going steady." A class ring, or a bit of jewelry serves the purpose for an independent man. The next step is chaining the pins, which sometimes occasions a five-pound party—sometimes not.

In past years, romances have usually budded in the proverbial "sweet springtime," but with their favorite uncle calling them, many men have affirmed their engagements earlier. So in the spring of 1943, instead of finding dormitories void of women on weekend nights, there are lights in every room—real evidence of a war change at Iowa State.

Sailors Choose 1943 Bomb Beauties

Setting a precedent in the selection of Bomb Beauties this year, the yearbook staff asked the sailors of the Naval Training Station to vote on the 12 candidates during their Happy Hour on Wednesday evening. The women, attired in formals, were seated on the stage of Great Hall, Memorial Union, when the trainees arrived. Each candidate carried a colonial bouquet presented by the Naval Training School. Ballots were cast by over 1,500 trainees who voted by number only choosing four of the twelve candidates.

Appearing through a large replica of a book, which served as a backdrop for the Bomb Beauty Ball, Virginia Bates, Virginia Richter, Ellen Seidell and Suzanne Sybilrud were presented as Bomb Beauties of 1943. Russ Carlyle, whose band set the rhythm for the dancers, gave each winner an engraved bracelet, gift of the 1943 Bomb. The remainder of the backdrop consisted of a ship, submarine and a cartooned sailor adopted from Esquire. Also presented at the ball were the staff members of the 1944 Bomb.

Council Plans Sailor-Sorority Swings

Gathered in the Union, Bette June Strayer, Mary Jane Drake, Miss Jane Fay, Jean Guy and Marguerite Heusinkveld discuss Panhellenic Council business

Highlighting the activities sponsored by this year's Panhellenic Council was a series of sailor-sorority swings held during the winter quarter. The first dance was held on Saturday Jan. 9 in Great Hall, Memorial Union from 4 to 5:30. The other two were held in the individual sorority houses. The nine sororities were divided alphabetically into three groups with a different group in charge each time. Entertainment was planned for the intermissions.

Leading the Panhellenic Council, which is composed of the presidents of the nine sororities and one junior representative, were Marguerite Heusinkveld, president, and Bette June Strayer, secretary-treasurer, for the first half, and Lucille Watson, president, and Jean Guy, secretary-treasurer, elected in January for last part of the year.

In place of the annual banquet usually sponsored by the Panhellenic Council for all Greek letter women, the council entertained Miss Hilda Beal, founder and first president of the York England Business and Professional Women's Club at a reception Tuesday night, October 20. A luncheon was held by the junior panhellenic members in the Oak Room on Tuesday, after which Miss Beal toured the campus. A dinner at the Kappa Delta house given by the sorority presidents preceded the lecture. Her address, "Wartime Britain" stressed the thought that the British feel the price of their sacrifices cheap.

Climax to the activities of the Panhellenic Council was the formal dance given in the combined ballrooms of the Memorial Union at the end of the winter quarter.

WINNING the Green Gander contest trophy twice during the fall quarter, members of Alpha Delta Pi set an all-time sales record for campus distribution of the magazine. In the field of dramatics, the Alpha Deltas were led by Kathryn Carter, who played one of the leads in the Iowa State Players' production, "Village Green." Doris Gramness, Eleanor Tinsley, and Jane Herdlicka served as the committee for the players "Stagedoor Stomp." Jean Crowther, treasurer of Psi Chi, was joined by Doris Gramness as a member of Chi Delta Phi. Katherine Johnson, Eleanor Tinsley, and Dorothy Larsen were among those sophomore women honored for outstanding scholarship by Omicron Nu. Josephine Elwood and Kathryn Carter, members of the Alpha Delt debate team, progressed to the semi-finals of the Intramural Debate Contest. Interested in athletics are Dorothy Stiles, cheer leader, and Bettejane Kern, president of the Twisters. In an all-college election, Janet Oliver was selected as one of the twelve competing candidates for Bomb Beauty of 1943. Dr. Margaret Sloss of the Veterinary Medicine Division, who served as an alumnae advisor, was elected national president of Sigma Delta Epsilon, scientific honorary fraternity for professional women.

A Greek goddess admitted guests to "An Evening with the Gods" at the Alpha Delta winter formal. Held at the chapter house, January 9, its atmosphere of fantasy was enhanced by glittering Greek letters, pink clouds, and music by Billy Weissenburgers' orchestra. The chapter house also was the scene of firesides, five-pound parties and after-hours parties throughout the year. Outstanding of these was the annual Christmas Pledge Party held at midnight on the Saturday preceding winter vacation. Letters to Santa from the pledges were feature attractions of the evening.

This year Alpha Deltas on the Iowa State campus have participated whole-heartedly in the war effort. Not only has the Iowa State chapter aided in the scrap drives, but it has also given some of its members to the armed forces. Pi chapter has joined other chapters of Alpha Delta Pi in contributing its time and energy to provide equipment and articles of comfort for the men overseas and in this country. Alpha Delta Pi celebrated its ninety-second birthday this May 15th. Originally called Alpha Delta Phi, it was the first secret society for women.

GRAND PRESIDENT Marguerite Jansky of Washington, D. C. honored Rho chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta with a visit early last fall. She discussed with the chapter members the continuation of the summer camp work of Alpha Gamma Delta. Previously the sorority has staffed two summer camps, one at Jackson, Michigan, and the other at Welland, Ontario, for underprivileged children. Each of the chapters aids in the support of these camps and sends several children from its community.

Social events for the year were climaxed by the fall formal held in the chapter house.

Blue cellophane background sprinkled with silver snow flakes, blue and silver lights, and icicles carried out the winter theme, with the music coming from Bob Allen's orchestra. Exchanges and house firesides kept the remainder of the social calendar filled.

Officers who guided the most recent arrival to sorority circle were Joy Stewart, president; Bebe Muehle, first vice-president; Shirley Girton, second vice-president; Miriam Smith, treasurer; and Edith Marks, secretary. Founded at Syracuse University, Alpha Gamma Delta was granted Panhellenic standing by the council late in 1909.

Sally Rowlands, activities chairman, was the power behind the Alpha Gams in extra-curricular activities. Members of honoraries included Mary Jo Franey in Psi Chi and Lorraine Wiese in Pi Mu Epsilon and Chi Delta Phi. Florence Jane Kas, president of Sigma Alpha Iota, participated in the war program by sponsoring a drive to collect phonograph records for sailors. Under her direction, the honorary also sponsored a series of music appreciation programs and the annual Sor-Dor Sing competition.

Other activities saw Shirley Girton on the Student War Council and as secretary of A.W.S.; Ann Dandridge, secretary of the Twisters; Sally Rowlands, chairman of the Representative Party; Jean Davis on Writers'

Round Table; and Lorraine Wiese on the Science Council.

Marilyn Williams, assisted by Mary Jo Franey, was Bomb Index Editor and secretary of the Bomb Publication Board. Ruth Marie Gaessler and Virginia Smith worked on the Bomb editorial staff. The Green Gander staff included Dorothy Shauger, Mary Jo Franey, Lorraine Wiese and Marilyn Williams.

The Women's 'I' Fraternity claimed Virginia Graf while the Iowa State Debaters included Jane Rice and Marilyn Miller. Marilyn Williams played parts in theater productions of the Iowa State Players. Mary Jo Franey was chosen one of the twelve candidates for Bomb beauty at Homecoming.

CLAIMING four campus queens, the Chi Omegas found themselves well represented in the beauty circles. Verlea Longley was chosen Varsity "I" Queen by an all-college election last spring. Marian Willis was the "sweetheart" of the fraternity pledges and presided over their annual spring Pledge Formal. Heading the Victory Caravan of Hollywood stars in Des Moines with Cary Grant as her escort of the day was Veishea Queen of Queens, Marian Allen. Selected from a field of eleven contestants by Mr. Grant, Marian was previously voted Pep Queen. This fall, cheerleader Helen Arnold reigned over Homecoming activities as Pep Queen for 1942. She was elected by the students and presented at the Homecoming Pep Barbecue to reign over the festivities.

Honorarys rewarded many Chi Omegas for scholastic and extra-curricular activities. Annabelle Hershey, Margaret Hauck and Phyllis Klusmann were pledged to Phi Upsilon Omicron. Sue-Marie Schreiber, already a member of Omicron Nu and Phi Upsilon Omicron, was made a member of Phi Kappa Phi. She was also president of the Associated Women Students, chairman of the Joint Political Committee and chairman of the Conservation and Reclamation Committee of the Student War Council. Annabelle Hershey, Applied Art Club president for the coming year and a member of Home Economics Council, and Barbara Sgarlata were initiated into Delta Phi Delta, while ex-president Ruth Hall is an associate member of Psi Chi. On the Y.W.C.A. Council are Betty Roth, chairman of the Radio Committee and pledge Jean Ringoen.

Treasurer of W.A.A. is Janet Cameron, who, with Ruth Hardt won the table tennis doubles tournament in intramurals. Active in Dance Club are Natalie Dexter, Harriet Engle, Marian Allen, Helen Arnold and Jean Ringoen. The Iowa Homemaker claims Phyllis Klusmann as treasurer and Betty Roth as feature writer, while Annabelle Hershey and Betty Peck are vice-president and treasurer of Bit and Spur. The duties of treasurer of the Green Gander, college humor magazine, are Marion Willis'; and Marion Viall, as treasurer, collects money for the Health Council. Campus representative for Mademoiselle, President Phyllis Collins, received an award for her report on "Traditions and Taboos at Iowa State College." Ruth Hardt, vice-president; Bessie Hansen, secretary; and Mary Logan, treasurer, are the other Chi Omega officers for the year.

ELECTED Honorary Cadet Colonel by members of Scabbard and Blade, Phyllis Voorhies, Delta Delta Delta, reigned over the Military Ball winter quarter. Also during winter quarter the Tri Dels won the Varieties Skit competition, nosing out four other entries. They added the Veishea Vod-Vil skit trophy to their house library last spring—the third time in four years that they gained possession of this award.

Tri Dels contributed to the war effort by holding their fall formal at the chapter house and donating the money saved toward buying stamps and bonds. Several members acted as supervisors for the Red Cross Sewing groups organized on the campus this year.

Taking the lead in scholastic and social activities this year was President Pat Barbre, co-chairman of Religious Emphasis Week, a member of the Memorial Union Board and Y.W.C.A. Cabinet. Vice-president Marjorie Boyts is a member of the Student War Council, Mortar Board and served as president of Home Economics Club last spring. Barbara Miles, Ann Mason, Marilyn Meads and Victoria McKibben also claimed seats in the Home Economics Club Council. Jane Crossan presides over the League of Women Voters, and Dorothea Dunagan wields the gavel of Chi Delta Phi, writing honorary.

Other activity minded Tri Delts were Jean Petersen, Jean Guy and Marjorie Boyts who were elected into Phi Upsilon Omicron with Marjorie as treasurer. Katherine Benbrook and Jeane Stange joined Chi Delta Phi, and Jeane Stange served as treasurer of Delta Phi Delta. High scholarship honors were awarded Victoria McKibben, Janette Kroeger and Barbara Miles at Honor's Day Convocation last spring. Barbara was also selected for the Freshman Danforth Scholarship Award. Cornelia de Jong, Beverly West, and Jean Guy held positions on the Y.W.C.A. Cabinet.

Alice Fletcher held the presidency of Women's "I" Fraternity with Marjorie Boyts, Alice Anderson and Sally Richardson as active members. Ann Mason served as vice-president of Dance Club and Associated Women Students and also as president of Textile and Clothing Club. Dorothy McDade presided over the Symphony Orchestra and Dorothea Dunagan has had leading roles in many Iowa State Players' productions. Betty Aldrich and Sally Richardson have contributed their pep towards cheer leading this year. Homemaker advertising manager is Marilyn Meads who is also vice-president of the Foods and Nutrition Club. With honors in volley ball and swimming competition, Tri Delta captured the plaque awarded to the house most active in intramurals.

For the fourth consecutive year, Tri Delta pledges held the highest scholastic record among the pledge classes of the campus. Pledge Jo Anne Powers was vice-president of Freshman Y.W.C.A. and Lila Mae Hummel was a member of Freshman Home Economics Council. The pledges turned the chapter house into a "Delta Hunting Lodge" for the pledge fireside in January. Dorothy McDade was selected queen by the Ward System and presented at their semi-formal.

THREE thousand dollars contributed to war bonds this year highlighted the individual activities of Delta Zetas in the national emergency. Besides this, Marjorie Beneke and Elizabeth Englehardt served on the Student War Council. Salvage committee members include Betty Ann Landgraf, also a member of the publicity committee, and Virginia Leafstone, committee secretary. Alice Mae Hauswirth, Marjorie Klein and Betty Ann Landgraf were Red Cross supervisors in the sewing room.

Rationing of fun was little in evidence at the chapter house this year. A Wild West party in the fall, an open house following the Drake-Iowa State game, and a Valentine tea dance were outstanding features in the social calendar.

Representing Delta Zeta in honorary societies were Marjorie Beneke, Barbara Moeckly and Josephine Ricklefs in Phi Upsilon Omicron; Flossie Ketelsen Reasoner in Sigma Alpha Iota and Chi Delta Phi; Marjorie Beneke and Virginia Harding in Theta Sigma Phi and Betty Fair and Barbara Moeckly in Psi Chi. Elected as a Pep Queen attendant to serve during the Homecoming celebrations was sophomore Jean Waterman.

Delta Zetas active on student publications included Virginia Harding, member of the Daily Student Publication Board, Marjorie Beneke, co-women's editor of the Daily Student, Betty Fair, exchange editor of the Green Gander, and Patricia Gilchrist, associate business manager of Sketch. Singing in the Women's Glee Club were Marijean Feik, Barbara Moeckly, also a member of the Y.W.C.A. sextette, and Jean Waterman. Josephine Ricklefs attended Cardinal Guild meetings, while Betty Fair represented Sociology Club on the Science Council. On Home Economics Council were Barbara Burns, Patricia Gilchrist, secretary, Elaine McCracken and Barbara Moeckly. Guiding college equestriennes was Suzanne Hayward, president of Bit and Spur. Senior Prom preparations found Betty Fair acting as associate chairman. Doris Strater reported to Women's "I" Fraternity meetings, while Elizabeth Englehardt worked out with the Dance Club. Margaret Mundt was secretary of L.S.A.

Guiding the DZ's this year were Virginia Harding, president; Doris Strater, vice-president; Marjorie Beneke as secretary; and Virginia Leafstone serving as treasurer.

THE 1942 "I" award entered the Gamma Phi Beta house last fall when Jeane Gross received the award as the outstanding freshman woman in athletics. Twice honored at the Fall Honor's Day Convocation was Eileen Dudgeon, winner of the Sketch Creative Writing Award and outstanding woman scholastically among freshmen home economics students.

On the activity wheel, Gamma Phi's wearing the Women's "I" Fraternity letter are Beverly Matson, Muriel Woodson, Mary Neal and Caroline Hardy. Eileen Dudgeon was assistant editor of the 1943 Bomb and Patricia Craven co-editor of the women's page of the Daily Student. On the staff of the Iowa Homemaker were Dorothy Lee Conquest, managing editor, and Marabeth Paddock, associate editor. Patricia Craven, president of Journalism Club, joined Mary Jane Drake, member of the Student War Council, on the Home Economics Club Council. Betsy Little served the Y.W.C.A. as secretary while Julie Wendel wielded the gavel of the Iowa State Players. Jeane Gross presided over the Naiads, Shirley Sue Smith served as vice-president of Health Council and Beverly Matson was president of Dance Club and vice-president of W.A.A.

Outstanding on the 1942 Gamma Phi social calendar were the Founder's Day party, the annual Christmas dinner and exchange of gifts, the fall formal carried out with a huge glittered Christmas tree as a background, and the sleigh ride and dance held at the chapter house during fall quarter.

AHUGE baby panda, designed and built by members of Kappa Delta won first place for them in the Sorority Division of the 1942 Veishea float contest. Attendant to the Queen of Queens at that celebration was Virginia Jordan. Queen of the Harvest Ball early in fall quarter was blond Verdene Boyken, also secretary of the Religious Emphasis Week committee, and Representative Party candidate for student body presidential primaries. Bomb beauty candidate Mary Jane Rice and Sigma Chi Sweetheart Corinne Smith also represented Kappa Delta in the beauty circles.

Student War Council members were Peggy Heusinkveld, who headed the health division of the council and also guided the members of Panhellenic Council, and Mary Lynn Beasley, chairman of all the campus Red Cross work organized this year.

Y.W.C.A. enthusiasts included Finance Chairman Verdene Boyken and sophomore cabinet members Peggy Cunningham and Mary Jane Rice. Elizabeth Mills, Pat Haskin and Frances Mallory aided on the Home Economics Council. Elizabeth served as president of Applied Art Club, Pat was vice-president of Textiles and Clothing Club, and Frances wielded the gavel for Delta Phi Delta. Joining Frances Mallory in Phi Upsilon Omicron were Pat Haskin and Verdene Boyken. Alta Reeves, elected to Omicron Nu in fall quarter, pledged Phi Kappa Phi winter quarter. Ruth Herzig served Sigma Alpha Iota as vice-president and Pat Haskin was editor of the Sigma Alpha Iota yearly publication. Science Council claimed Isabelle Morse, who was also elected to Psi Chi, and Ariel Clark, vice-president of Science Women's Club and treasurer of the Bomb.

Social events of the year were limited to minimum expenditures because of war-time stringencies, but Kappa Deltas made "fun at home" and enjoyed themselves at two clever firesides given for the active chapter by the pledge class. The quarterly scholarship parties and a formal dance with spirited Mexican decorations rounded out the social calendar for the Kappa Deltas this year.

Members of the varsity cheer-leading squad were pledges Jacquie Howell and Helen Yarwood, Kappa Delta's chemical engineering student. Corinne Smith was secretary of A.W.S., Carolyn March vice-president of the Twisters, and Elaine Benson, co-president of Bowling Club and a member of W.A.A. Council. FOR the second time in the last three years, the trophy case at the Pi Beta Phi house holds the scholarship cup, awarded for the highest scholastic average of all women's organized houses on the campus. Twice in the spring the Pi Phis were the possessors of the Green Gander trophy, awarded to the group which sells the most Ganders in open campus distribution.

The highlight of last spring's social events was the spring dance held at the Country Club. The members and their dates danced to recorded music, using the money saved to purchase a seventy-five dollar war bond. The annual winter formal was held at the Pi Phi house with Ray Gray doing the musical honors. The Pre-Final Fling, the pledge fireside, turned the chapter house into a schoolroom, just before the fall quarter final examinations.

During the past year, the Pi Phis have been under the guidance of Doris Denman, who also wields the gavel of the Child Development Club, and is a member of Psi Chi. Vice-president Pat Garberson is editor-in-chief of the Iowa Homemaker, a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron, Mortar Board, Theta Sigma Phi and president of the Bomb Publication Board. Recording Secretary Wanda Marshall was senior picture editor of the 1943 Bomb. Acting as treasurer of Pi Beta Phi was Lucille Spetman with Jean Miller as the pledge supervisor.

Another member of Mortar Board is Dordana Fairman, who is also a member of Omicron Nu, vice-president of Y.W.C.A. and a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron. Trymby Calhoun, chosen Prom Girl by the Junior Class, was a night editor on the Daily Student, commission manager of the Daily Student business office, a member of Pi Phi's debate team, secretary of the Student Publication Board, and a member of Dance Club.

MAKING U.S.O. scrap-books was a project of the Sigma Kappas this year. Since last fall, when the idea was brought to Iowa State by Ruth Ann Geig, Grand President of Sigma Kappa, the Sigmas have been holding weekly "pasting parties" and sending their products to the armed forces. Peg Reichardt and Dorothy Straight served as Red Cross Sewing Room supervisors. Betty Bielenberg and Marge Carroll helped the Health Council make dressings, while Eileen Turney did publicity work for the Student War Council. Peggy Ritts was one of the five Iowa State students selected as a Curtiss-Wright Engineering Cadet.

Mary Alice Culbertson and Jo Anne Schleis conducted exercise sessions each night for the physical fitness program. Betty Jane Camenisch was a member of Dance Club, while Frances Lockwood and Barbara Landau had memberships in the Naiads. Scholastically, Janet Crosby led the house with a four point. Eileen Turney was art editor of Sketch; Eleanor Harpster served on the business staff of Green Gander; Beth Fidler worked on Sketch and Phil Hawgood on the Daily Student. Gwen Qualley and Marjorie Hayward were on the Workshop Council of the Home Economics Education Club and Peg Reichardt served on the 4-H Council.

Winning active memberships in the Iowa State Players were Janet Crosby and Peg Reichardt, while Eleanor Harpster earned an associate membership. Betty Bielenberg, as a member of the Y.W.C.A. cabinet, was in charge of the music group. Shirley Diekman has part time charge of the Carnegie Music Room. Pledges of Sigma Kappa corresponded with other Sigma chapters and made a scrapbook of famous Sigmas.

The spring tea given by the pledges saw the tea table decorated with violets. Mrs. C. O. Anderson, Mrs. Forest Allen, Mrs. S. L. Thompson, Mrs. Neil Adams and Mrs. Alfred Hulmes were guests of the chapter. The chapter house was turned into a bower of flowers for the "June in January" formal with lavender and maroon, the Sigmas' colors, carried out in flowers and decorations. Founder's Day was celebrated with a formal dinner at which Mrs. Geig, Grand President, presided.

Teas and other parties were held at which the Sigma Kappa trio—Violet Thierman, Dorothy Glasener and Shirley Diekman—sang. Marguerite Joyner joined the WAVES, and Elizabeth Groves is now working as an analytical chemist in a soybean factory.

Dinner call is inviting for Harriet Rowse, Frances Lockwood, Peg Reichardt, Alice Ryder and Shirley Diekman

Men Abolish Homecoming Decorations

Abolishing unnecessary expenses and re-arranging fraternity customs took much of the time of the Interfraternity Council this year. Composed of all fraternity presidents, and led by Robert Chase and Clyde Miller, the group abolished Homecoming decorations, the Interfraternity Banquet and the annual Christmas party, deeming them superfluous in the streamlined college program. Fraternity probations also took on a more serious aspect, and many expensive and time-consuming activities were taken out of probation week.

Positive contributions to the college war effort were the war stamp sale, rubber drive, bond purchase, clothes contribution and scrap drive. A smoker was held for the naval trainees, and the profits from the Men's Panhellenic Dance given to the War Chest.

Orders to evacuate fraternity houses to make room for the women moving out of dormitories to be used by army men, constituted a grave problem for the Interfraternity Council this year. Fullst cooperation between houses, and between the fraternities and the college was maintained through the careful preparation of the council under the guidance of Prof. L. O. Stewart, faculty advisor.

Because of the speeded up program, the council found it necessary to elect officers during the winter quarter. Clyde Miller was leader of the group through the difficult times, while Jack Hawkins, vice-president, assumed alternate duties with Alva Hayes, secretary, and Wendell Kyle, treasurer.

LOSING 31 men over the summer vacation, the 15 active members and 21 pledges of Acacia had to work overtime to maintain their activities and scholastic standings. In honorary fraternities are Robert L. Carstens, a member of Tau Beta Pi and Phi Kappa Phi; Kenneth Oakleaf, chancellor of Alpha Zeta, a member of Phi Kappa Phi and Gamma Sigma Delta; and Jim Kemmish, secretary of Psi Chi and vice-president of Alpha Phi Omega. Evan Lutt balances the books for the Horticulture Club, and Robert Grobeck serves on the Agricultural Council.

Contact between the 25 chapters of Acacia is maintained through the Triad and the Triagram, national publications, while the Iowa State chapter reports its activities in its own publication, the Rising Sun.

Beginning by electing Warren Vollmer as war secretary, the Acacians contributed to the war effort by buying war bonds and stamps and participating in the scrap drive.

Graduates of the Iowa State chapter prominent on the campus include Dean T. R. Agg, head of the Engineering Division, Dean Emeritus Anson Marston, Dean H. H. Kildee, head of the Agricultural Division and Dean R. E. Buchanan, head of the Graduate College.

Dick Maire, former Venerable Dean, has written a new Acacia song called "My Acacia Pin," which has been accepted by the organization for publication in their magazine.

In a strategic location midway between sorority circle and the women's dormitories, the Acacians enjoyed a lively social season that included a Halloween costume party, a Christmas party, mid-winter Nut Party, pledge vodvil, Valentine sweetheart party, spring formal, and many picnics and informal gatherings. Ghosts, goblins and all other Halloween caricatures had complete reign of the chapter on October 31. All superstitions were spurned when everyone was compelled to walk under a ladder, climb through a dark tunnel, and finally shake the cold hand of a ghost. Decorations such as bales of straw and hay, corn stalks, black cats, footprints on the wall and ceiling and dim lights, all added to the mysterious surroundings of the chapter house.

The costumes of the Nut Party were the latest thing that a typical Iowa State Nut would wear—anywhere from galoshes for headgear to pleated gunny-sack skirts. The general theme of decorations was for the "President's Birthday Brawl" since the party occurred on January 31.

The first chapter of Acacia was established at Ann Arbor, Michigan, in 1904 as a fraternity to be free from social evils.

ADDING a gold star to their service flag, members of Adelante Fraternity paid tribute this year to Don Griswold, an alumnus who was killed in action during the Battle of Midway. Other prominent alumni who wear the Adelante badge are C. L. Burlingham, secretary of the National Dairy Association; J. G. Watson, president of the National Farm Editors' Association; the late C. V. Gregory, member of the Federal Reserve Bank Board in Chicago; Howard Vaughn, United States Indian Service; B. J. Firkins, G. W. Godfrey, L. J. Murphy, Rex Beresford and E. G. McKibben, all members of the Iowa State faculty. In all, Adelante boasts an alumni group of 400 members.

High points in a social calendar filled with firesides, date dinners and house parties were the Beachcomber's Ball, the Autumn Nocturne, pledge hayride, and the Skyline Scandal, a hilarious night club party with a 6-act floor show.

Extra-curricular activities claim many Adelantes for their meetings. Prominent in campus organizations is Hoyt Chaloud, editor of the Iowa Engineer, vice-president and cataloguer of Tau Beta Pi, member of Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Lambda Upsilon, Sigma Delta Chi, Guard of St. Patrick, A.I.Chem.E. and Engineering Council. Paul Vavra is actively interested in Eta Kappa Nu and Tau Beta Pi, while Bob Roe, also a member of Tau Beta Pi, was elected to Pi Mu Epsilon last fall quarter. Phil Lindahl directed the course of Alpha Phi Omega, national service organization, from the president's chair and also served on the salvage committee of the Student War Council in their recent scrap drive.

Publication Board member and circulation manager of the Iowa Agriculturist is Adelante's president, Bill Ettinger. Riley Gillette, Lees Faas, Don Meilike, Ed McGrew, Bob Wight and Ray Rodgers also are on the staff of the Agriculturist while Bob Johnson works for the Iowa Engineer.

The alumni of Adelante are kept informed of latest house news through the Echo, published each quarter, and the Andiron, edited by Don Watson, each spring quarter.

Striving to maintain their intramural records, members passed a successful year in the athletic competition by participating in all the competitions offered by the intramural program. Varsity wrestling candidate in the 145-pound class was North Griswold.

CARRYING off the Class D intramural football title, members of Alpha Chi Rho on intramural teams rounded out their athletic program by making progress in Class B basketball and table tennis. They were directed in these activities by Ted Clarno, who, with Bill Miller, represented the group in the Pontoniers. Athletic progress was not limited to intramurals, however, since Howard Silkman has earned two major letters in baseball.

Leading all other men in the house in number of activities was Fred Nance, who served as president of the American Society of Civil Engineers and president of the Midwest Regional chapters, vice-president of Y.M.C.A. and chairman of the All-Men's Chapel of Religious Emphasis Week. In the military field, Nance was a member of the Pontoniers, Scabbard and Blade, and was ticket chairman for the 1943 Military Ball. He was also elected to the senior engineering honorary, the Guard of St. Patrick.

Campus cartoonist, Eugene O'Neil, enlivened engineering functions with his caricatures of college personalities. High-lighting his senior year was his handling of decorations for the Senior Prom, membership in Tau Beta Pi, Tau Sigma Delta and the Guard of St. Patrick. Steward Bill Manley found time from his duties in the house to assist on the teaching staff of the chemistry department. Sundays he was busy as service chairman of the Newman Club. Topping all scholastic honors for the group, Larry Weeks was elected to Phi Kappa Phi. He is also secretary of Tau Beta Pi and a member of Pi Mu Epsilon. In his spare time, he taught a 4-hour course in the mathematics department. Leroy Sargent, the only "buck" coming from the newly-formed Signal Corps Unit, negotiated a difficult period performing pledge duties for Scabbard and Blade.

The Lumberjack Log Jam, where the engineers of Alpha Chi Rho and their dates turned woodmen for an evening to dance through the log-flanked chapter halls, served as a high spot in the social season. Entrance to the festivities was obtained by passing through a maze of obstacles to tax the would-be woodmen's endurance. Flannel shirts and a saloon in the cellar added color and informality to the occasion. Entertainment during the intermission was furnished by Ted Clarno's Log-Rhythm Quartet, Scandinavian tales by Ben Willis, and a burlesque calisthenics stunt directed by Bill Cuffey.

Musically inclined is Bob Corning, violinist in the Symphony Orchestra and a member of Phi Mu Alpha. Keith Mullenger's voice is familiar to WOI listeners through his work on the news staff. Prexy Dick Dunham found time from his gavel swinging to play the violin in the Symphony Orchestra. He also wears the keys of Tau Beta Pi and Phi Mu Alpha and along with Merle Betts and Bill Miller, is a member of the Y.M.C.A. cabinet. Chuck Gilbert's face is familiar to air cadets stationed on the campus, since he serves as an instructor in their department. Wilbur Walden, national secretary of Alpha Chi Rho Fraternity, was a guest at the chapter house during winter quarter initiation.

EMERGING from another successful campaign under the generalship of Herbert Marsh, Eta chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho found itself strong in all departments of intramurals, winning the championship in wrestling and receiving honor ratings in all-around intramural activities. In addition to his duties as house president, Marsh is Interfraternity Council's representative to Cardinal Guild and vice-president of that organization. As a member of the guild he served on the Fraternity Faculty Committee, Election Committee and was ticket chairman for Homecoming. Another important man behind the guns of AGR is Wendell Kyle, president of Block and Bridle and a member of I.S.C. Debaters. Don Noller wielded the gavel for the Y.M.C.A. and was ably assisted by cabinet members Howard Hass and Warren Raney. Noller is also a representative to the Student War Council and represented Iowa State at the Student Victory Assembly held at Carleton College. Bob Seaburg was elected captain of Scabbard and Blade and Maurice Peterson was also recruited into that organization. Howard Bayles calls the Poultry Club meetings to order and is their representative to the Agricultural Council.

In the field of judging the AGR's placed Gene Meyer, Bob Clause and John Morris on the champion dairy judging team with Meyer becoming high man in the contest. Maurice Peterson and Warren Severs were members of the horse judging team. Across the campus, Bob Pierson fills the vice-president's chair on the Memorial Union Student Board while Bob Hindman balances the books for the Dairy Industry Club.

The Jr. A.V.M.A. selected Bob Loften as their vice-president while Grant Harris was named president of Intramural Council. In the field of honoraries, Phi Kappa Phi selected Kyle and Loften for membership while Alpha Zeta initiated Hindman and Kyle. Phi Zeta took in Bob Loften. Fall Honors Convocation found Hindman receiving the Stevens Award, Kyle the Gund Animal Husbandry Scholarship, and Loften a Lane-Wells Scholarship for service.

ONE hundred per cent contribution by members to the Red Cross blood plasma bank is the record of Alpha Tau Omega, first organized house on the campus to donate needed blood. Participation in bond and stamp sales and in the college scrap drives is also on the list of ATO war activities.

Under the strong leadership of Tom Coloton, intramural teams in Class A football and swimming were entered. During the summer, the athletes annexed first place in the softball contest. The pledges entered a team in Class A football also, and played in the finals of horse-shoe pitching.

In all-campus activities, Prexy Don Richter is a member of the varsity wrestling squad besides being active in Eta Kappa Nu and Scabbard and Blade. Other members of Scabbard and Blade include Warren Anderson, Rod Overholt, Bob LaVelle, Carl Madsen, Francis Coyle, Bob Steinert and Bill Lawson. Tau Beta Pi and Phi Kappa Phi claim Malcolm Frick, while Bill Lawson represents the Interfraternity Council on Cardinal Guild. Jim Foster guides the Iowa Engineer financially, as business manager, and Joe Weigel was recently appointed managing editor.

Foremost among the local traditions of ATO is the presentation of the "Gunboat" Smith trophy to the outstanding pledge. This, however, only slightly overshadows the Thomas Arkle Clark award that goes to the outstanding senior in each province. Founded upon a historic traditional background, Alpha Tau Omega dates back to the first object of the organization—to unite the young men of the North and South. The fraternity was founded in 1865 at the Virginia Military Institute. It now has 94 chapters.

Beginning with a fall sport dance held at the Ames Golf and Country Club, the social program of the ATO's has been going strong all year. The pajama fireside given by the pledges created the most excitement, since only couples clad in the proper attire were admitted. To lend a more realistic effect to the party, several beds were brought down from the dorm. Cupid prevailed in the decorations for the winter Valentine formal held in the South Ballroom of Memorial Union, and preceded by a formal dinner for members and their dates at the chapter house. New to the men and housemothers on the campus this year was Mrs. Walter Dunagan, who presided over the social functions, as ATO housemother. Mrs. Dunagan is secretary of the campus Y.W.C.A. group.

AFTER holding an aggregate of 60 campus positions in their college careers, three members of Beta Theta Pi were tapped to Cardinal Key, senior men's honorary. The men so honored were Seeley Lodwick, now a lieutenant in the marines, George Wales, a lieutenant in the army, working as an engineer at Wright Field, and Ben Kinnick, a Navy Air Corps cadet. Betas serving on other major campus positions include Frank Murphy, editor of Green Gander; Herman Bailey, chairman of the Junior Prom; Robert Chase, president of Interfraternity Council; Pat Apgar, baton twirler and Gander photographer; Roy Miller, business manager of Stars over Veishea; and Frank Murphy and Kirk McGuire, Cardinal Guild.

Representing Tau Sigma chapter on the varsity swimming team are T. Wilson, captain and sprint man, James McCoy, David Clizbe and John Havercamp. Robert Ash is a tackle on the football team, while Robert Mall travels with the golf squad. Polo team men are P. G. Maxwell, Charles Johnson and David Sibbersen, with Dick Nobis of the wrestling squad and Herman Bailey of the track team finishing the list. Pledges of Beta Theta Pi won first in intramural athletics; claimed three in freshman sports.

Presenting a more serious aspect to the picture is the scholastic record that the Betas maintain. Scholastic honoraries claim Merle Evers, Robert Tower, Robert Chase, George Wales, and Carl Swanson, members of Tau Beta Pi. Carl Swanson, Robert Tower and George Wales belong to Phi Kappa Phi, while Swanson is also a member of Phi Lambda Upsilon. Pi Tau Sigmas are Myron Brower and Robert Chase, charter member.

As in previous years, the Beta spring formal was held on the terrace behind the chapter house. White picket fences and lanterns strung about the lawn helped to provide an atmosphere of springtime for Betas and their dates. A colored mammy served punch to the dancers at intermission.

"The Grave-Yard Shift" party was the outstanding social event of the Betas during fall quarter. Tau Sigmas and their dates were admitted to the Beta Aircraft Company upon presentation of their Beta badges as identification. After punching the time clock, lines formed to the right and the swing-shifters went to work on baked beans, ham sandwiches and cherry pie. During the dance which followed, there was a surprise air raid and the Betas in charge hastened evacuation of the house through a window in the rear. With minor injuries and a few shrieks, everyone was hurried through the tunnel leading out into the back terrace. Hot soup and hard tack were served to the evacuees as they recovered. Entertainment was provided by the pledges and by baton twirler, Pat Apgar, who performed with a flaming baton. As a climax, there was a sudden roar of an airplane motor, and a former Iowa State Beta circled several times and dove in salute to the party.

The winter quarter Beta formal was held in Catherine MacKay Auditorium.

FJURNISHING seven men to the varsity football squad, Delta Chi claims its share of athletic prowess. Paul Darling, All-Big-Six fullback leads the list, with Vic Weber, Maurice Ryan, Don Seibold, Bob Winders, Harley Rollinger and Jack Miller rounding it out. Bob Winders also captains the track team with Paul Darling, Selmer Hodne, Charles Neidt and Don Lyman bearing the Cardinal and Gold on the cinder paths. Tasker Johnson won his letter in baseball last year, while Prexy Gaylord headed the wrestling teams with brothers Norb Chihak, Don Deere, Len Brockmann and Ed DeBakey working out with the mat squad. With the swimming team is Don Winslow. Across the campus, Don Johnson was general chairman of the Harvest Ball and a member of the Agricultural Council. Robert Anderson wields the gavel for the Agricultural Council while Maurice Ryan and Don Johnson are members of Scabbard and Blade.

Gay and informal, the Hobohemian party in the fall quarter was managed by the pledges of Delta Chi. The winter formal found the Delta Chis dancing to the music of Bob Allen's orchestra. Firesides, hay rides, and date dinners supplied fun on weekends.

Day by day the stars are being added to the service flag which hangs in the living-room of the Delta Chi house. Roland Ormisten is studying to be an officer at the Navy's midshipman's school in New York City, while Robert Kelley is a merchant marine. Len Brockmann is in the Air Corps Radio School at Atlantic City, New Jersey and Lieutenant Wilber Harding is stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash. Lieutenant Kenneth Apel and Lieutenant Robert Bower are in artillery school at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, while Corporal C. R. Joy is in the Signal Corps. Charles Meler serves with the Medical Corps, and Fred Pieper is stationed at Camp Chaffee, Arkansas.

Some of the alumni to which the Delta Chi's point with pride are Peter Van Steeden, orchestra leader; F. H. Sommers, dean of the Law College, New York University, O. L. Wiese, editor of McCalls magazine, and C. H. Marvin, president of George Washington University.

Delta Chi fraternity first appeared on the Iowa State campus in 1923, when it was called the Haw-Ki club. A merger in 1933 with a local fraternity, the Sigma Sigma, permanently established Delta Chi on Hayward.

BOASTING forty-eight men in the armed services, Delta Sigma Phi is proud of such men as Aviation Cadet Arnold E. Sindlinger, Ex. '43, who was killed in a training accident and Lieutenant Jim Davis, Ex. '41, listed as missing in action in the Philippines. Major D. A. Morris, '21, Corps of Engineers, was commander of the engineer unit accompanying the first U. S. troops landing in Iceland. Major Henry M. Black, '29, Corps of Engineers, stopped at the chapter house on his way to advanced officers' training school in New Jersey. Captain David L. Graham, '37, former professor in the Military Department at Iowa State, is now instructing at the American School in England. Captain Henry E. Bollman, '40, is a military professor here at Iowa State. Black and Bollman are both past presidents of Cardinal Key.

Representing the house in varsity competition were Dick and Bob Caddock, Bob as a letterman. Outstanding in defense effort was Clifford Prall who founded the Iowa State College Service Directory and served as its chairman until the end of last summer quarter. Prall also was a member of Tau Sigma Delta architectural honorary, and with Bob Caddock and Rex Jorgenson went through probation for Scabbard and Blade. In publications, Marion Wilson served as personnel manager of the Iowa Engineer, while Don Bennett and Howard Inbody were photographers on the Bomb staff.

The well-developed social program of the Delta Sigs began in the fall quarter with the Barnyard Brawl, a costume affair in honor of the new pledges. Next, the Apache Dance, usually scheduled for the first weekend in winter quarter, was moved up to the weekend of Thanksgiving to allow those men leaving for the service to get in on the fun.

The Swing-Shift Swing and winter formal provided entertainment during the cold months of the year.

Delta Sigma Phi was founded in 1899 at the turn of the century and rapidly increased the number of chapters from the original three to the present 44 active chapters. Benefitting by the experience of older fraternities, the Delta Sigs were able to incorporate many new ideas in their traditions. Nationally known orchestra leaders wearing the badge of Delta Sigma Phi are Jan Garber, Skinny Ennis, John Scott Trotter and Ted Weems.

SOMETHING new was added to the record of Delta Tau Delta when Frank Ewing, Ted Thomsen, Jim Hauser, William Kilpatrick and Robert Doty formed the Delt obstacle course team and took the all-college championship, winning the distinction of being the first group to hold the title. The Delts also placed first in the Class C football league. On the varsity track squad is Robert Doty.

During Iowa State's first summer quarter, actives and pledges pitched in on house improvements to save war-time labor. Projects included resodding the front lawn and parking, laying new front steps and sidewalk, and grading and reseeding the entire property, putting the house in tip-top condition.

On the activity wheel, Sid Moore became a member of the Guard of St. Patrick and Scabbard and Blade. Other advanced military students were John McKee, another Scabbard and Blade man, Rush Benson and Ken Obye. Representing the Delts in the music world, Benson, a band member, was initiated into Phi Mu Alpha. Ben Brown, Sigma Delta Chi member, was editor of the Iowa Agriculturist and Ed Junkhan put his photography to work for the Bomb. Paddock served his second year on the Sketch editorial staff and McKee was a departmental editor of the Iowa Agriculturist. Earl Spencer served on the committee of the Interfraternity Pledge Smoker. Jim Brennan, ace scholar of his class, kept busy in the Iowa State Players. House President McKee, Paddock, Norman Givens, Harry Matthews, Robert Wehrman, Jim Hauser, William Atherton, Benner Hitchcock and Ronny Dirks kept the Delta Tau Deltas supplied with cigars announcing their pin hangings.

Coming to Delta Tau Delta from Orlando, Florida, Mrs. E. R. Hansen took over the duties in the fall after the retirement of Mrs. Clyde Williams, Delta mother for the past several years. With a boy of her own in the Naval Air Corps, Mrs. Hansen quickly became a favorite in the house. By the vote of the chapter, she was named this year's "Delta Queen" at the fraternity winter formal.

Also on the social record is the fall Dawgpatch Barn Dance sponsored by the pledge class. Under the direction of Social Chairman William Paddock and Pledge President Earl Spencer, the chapter house was decorated in typical Dawgpatch style.

Delta Tau Delta has the distinction of being the first fraternity on the Iowa State campus. The chapter was founded in 1875.

PROUD of their athletic achievements, members of Delta Upsilon now hold the all-college bowling and volleyball championships. The DU bowlers are Bob Shaw, Larry Danton, Lucien Clarke, Gail Peters and Warren Skvaril. The pledges are tennis champions of the college, and George Pickens holds several first places in swimming events. Leo Schneider reports for practice with the freshman basketball squad, while Bill Jahn and Dave Sharp practiced with the varsity football team. Jack Rold and Bob Updegraff won freshman numerals in football and Jim Dernehl works out with the mat squad.

The 1942 Veishea Vodvil trophy now perches on the DU's trophy shelf after Bob Lueder's writing and directing created the winning skit.

Councilmen in the DU House are: Agricultural, Warren Skvaril; Science, Bill Jones and Don Anderson; and Engineering, Bob Lueder.

Delta Upsilon is well represented in honorary fraternities. Bob Lueder is president of Delta Sigma Rho, Iowa State Debaters and a member of Tau Beta Pi. Dean Watkins answers roll in Eta Kappa Nu and Harlan Bentzinger is another Tau Beta Pi. Don Anderson reports to Phi Mu Alpha meetings and Oscar Towler is a member of Pi Mu Epsilon.

Activity inclined, Dean Watkins is managing editor of the 1943 Bomb. Leo Schneider is president of the pledge intramural council, and Warren Skvaril is the editor of the Ames Forester. Don Anderson was chairman of the Wintermezzo, Science dance, and is drum major of the marching band, while Meredith Smith twirls a baton. Bomb photographer is John Martin and Ed Ritts is a cheerleader. Dick Marvin and Warren Carlson are members of Scabbard and Blade.

The famed "Dogpatch" dance was held during the fall quarter, at the Ames Country Club which was decorated with farm products, mostly hay and cornstalks. A rules committee laid down regulations to govern the apparel worn at the party and doughnuts and cider from a large jug fed the hungry party-goers. For the winter formal, the chapter house became the Club DU, with a band and a floor show to complete the party. At the pledge party given for the actives, a play and refreshments served as entertainment.

All active members participate in the publication of the DU-Nite, a yearly record of all the happenings of the local chapter.

Founded at Williams College in 1834, Delta Upsilon was the result of antagonistic feeling toward secret fraternities. In her early years, Delta Upsilon was anti-secret, but this policy was later modified to one of non-secrecy. The chapter roll now numbers 64 chapters with four in Canada. The Iowa State chapter was begun as the forty-fifth in the group by a local fraternity called the Collonnades. Although 55 members have left for the armed forces, the chapter now numbers 20 actives and 10 pledges. Warren Lueder led the DU's as president this year, while Don Anderson was vice-president and Gene Walker was the fraternity secretary.

THE purchase of a six hundred dollar war bond highlighted war-time activities, as members of the FarmHouse Fraternity continued in their round of activities. Heading the list were two Cardinal Key men, Paul Visser, president of Cardinal Key and Don Marek, editor of the 1942 Bomb. Miller, Burgy, Opperman, Barger, Krogh, Kester and Armstrong were members of the Agricultural Council, with Kester and Armstrong as representatives to Cardinal Guild. Sidles and Crees served on Engineering Council, and Dean Huston occupied a seat on the Memorial Union Student Board of Directors. On the publication side of the campus, Visser edited the 1943 Bomb, with Yaw, Clague, Snyder, D. Kester, Kitchell and Henderson working on the staff. Sitting behind the managing editor's desk of the Daily Student was Ken Krogh with Hazen handling cuts for the paper. Last spring, Marvin Julius was selected as editor-in-chief of the Iowa Agriculturist, but failed to return to school this fall. Merle Hunt as business manager, however, was aided by Held, Handley and Henderson.

On the more strenuous side, Beneke played guard for the varsity football squad, Feuerbach reported for basketball practice, Wilson and Burgy ran with the thin-clads.

Honoraries claimed several FarmHouse men for their rosters. Phi Kappa Phi chose Paul Visser and Anthony Mathis, while Kitchell joined Phi Zeta. Krogh and Visser attended Sigma Delta Chi meetings, and Alpha Zeta initiated Miller, Kester, Roewe, McCone, Pilmer, Visser, Mathis and Krogh. Advanced military officers Miller, Opperman, Hunter and W. Kester were elected to Scabbard and Blade.

In departmental clubs and other campus organizations, Kirkpatrick pounded the gavel for the Jr. A.V.M.A., was president of the chapter during fall quarter, and secretary of the Interfraternity Council. Winter and spring quarter prexy Clyde Miller was a member of the Y.M.C.A. KAPPA SIGMA kept pace with Iowa State's various war projects during the year with all out campaigns for vital war materials. Manpower was also a large part of the contribution with a total of 48 men going into active service. A service flag displays 46 blue stars and two gold stars to honor these men. Still in school, Russ Calame, Ted Wood, Bill McCraith and Jim Myers are enrolled in advanced R.O.T.C.

Athletically, Fred Musser, Jack Byerrum and Bill Thayer were members of the swimming team. The tennis team claimed Bert Lee; Marc Pickrell saw action on the frosh baseball team, and Roy Kelso was on the varsity basketball team. Jim Frazee carried Iowa State's colors for the track squad while Musser became a member of the Varsity "I" Club.

Honorary fraternities claimed Bill Sales, Bob Keller, Calame and Wood in Scabbard and Blade. Lew Burnette joined Phi Lambda Upsilon, Jason Moses became a member of Phi Mu Alpha and Calame was an Alpha Chi Sigma selection.

Victims of the love bug, twelve members of Kappa Sigma announced engagements this year and six of the brothers were married.

Due to the large enrollment in summer school, the Kappa Sigma house remained open and shared its commissary with the Phi Gams. Mrs. H. M. Stanton graciously fulfilled the duties of house mother during Mrs. Bessie Williams' absence. Actives and pledges landscaped the back yard during their leisure summer evenings.

Publications claim Bob McIntosh as national advertising manager for the Daily Student. Clark Stillinger was secretary of the Jr. A. V. M. A. and Hal Stanton managed the advertising for the Veterinary Student. Verne Paulsen took charge of the advertising of the Iowa Engineer.

To round out their activity program, the Kappa Sigs made their annual western dance, Dead Man's Gulch Ramble, a bigger success than ever this year. The pledge winter formal, entirely promoted by the neophytes, highlighted the usual chapter picnics, exchanges and firesides. The Sunday evening candlelight buffet suppers with Mother Williams serving continued to be a principal winter quarter activity.

Amusement is furnished in the chapter house by mascot Kayzie, a Doberman Pinscher pup whose antics are the topic of conversation in many bull sessions.

The ritual of the 109 chapters of Kappa Sigma can be traced to the University of Bologna in 1400. Gamma Lambda chapter at Iowa State was formed in 1909, thus ending the reign of the strong Crescent and Star.

PRESIDENCIES were in style this year at the Phi Delta Theta house as John Slater became president of the Iowa State student body, Dick Boerner led the engineering society of Tau Beta Pi, Joe Stoddard headed the Society for Advancement of Management, George Fuller piloted the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, and John Doolittle assumed the first presidency of the new Mechanical Engineering honorary, Pi Tau Sigma. Slater, Doolittle, Fred Wells and Dick Moehl assisted Boerner at the Tau Beta Pi meetings, and Wells and Doolittle were initiated into Phi Kappa Phi. Cardinal Key tapped John Heggen and Slater, and the Guard of St. Patrick claimed Knowles, Stuart, Adams, Doolittle, Fuller, Wells, Boerner, Slater and Stoddard as members.

Heading the list of the Phi Delt's social activities for the past year was their annual Bowery Party dedicated to the express purpose of winning friends and alienating neighbors. Other major social events were the winter formal dinner-dance and the spring sport dance; informal entertainment included firesides, date dinners, and picnics.

Don Sceli, receiving the Danforth Scholarship Award, was acclaimed the outstanding freshman veterinary student on the campus; Moehl was appointed Finance Chairman of the Student War Council; Ben Ross joined brothers Frank Maine, Bob Wilson, Bill Walters, Earl Sorenson, Jack Sopousek, Adams and Slater in Scabbard and Blade; and Stuart, Doolittle, Stoddard, Knowles, Boerner and Moehl were honored at the Cardinal Key Recognition Banquet for campus leaders in the junior and senior classes.

Varsity "I" men include Burt Eberlein, Howard Tippee, Dean Thomas, Walters and Slater, while Ted Eales augmented the cheerleading squad.

Weishea responsibilities were given to Ward Tuller as business manager, Knowles as student vodvil chairman, Wells as treasurer, and Stoddard and Moehl as assistant business managers. The Phi Delt float representing a giant world turning on its axis, won Sweepstake honors in the Weishea parade.

Copping the fraternity intramural championship for the sixth year, Phi Delt's also scored individual honors when their active and pledge swimming teams won firsts in every event of the final competition.

The service flag is bedecked with more than 70 stars denoting Iowa State Phi Delt's in the armed services of the United States.

LAST spring saw the Phi Gams going undefeated for the season to win the fraternity Class A baseball championship. This fall they again defeated all opponents including the ward and dorm champions and fraternity frosh champions to win the all-college touch football trophy. Members of that winning team were Victor Grotlisch, Stan Little, Bill Rush, Adrian Nussdorfer, Gordon Bell, Woody Gaylord and Meredith Warner.

Among their activity men is president Jack Hawkins, who is serving as editor of the Iowa Engineer, vice-president of the Interfraternity Council, member of Engineering

Council, and along with Phil Goddard was pledged to the Guard of St. Patrick. Goddard was also president of A.S.M.E., charter member and treasurer of Pi Tau Sigma, and with Bob Boswell and Paul Reasoner, was a member of Scabbard and Blade. Brother Hawkins was ably assisted on the Iowa Engineer staff by Bob Hermann, associate editor, and Graydon Peoples, managing editor.

Stan Little, chosen B.J.O.C. for this year's Junior Prom, was elected student body president in the February all-college election. Stan is also a member and treasurer of Cardinal Guild, and on Engineering Council.

The well known Fiji social program consisted of three dances during the year. Their annual Fiji Grass Skirt dance last spring rang the bell as one of the season's outstanding informal parties. It was held at the Ames Country Club and all guests were attired in various versions of tropical island costumes. In the fall of the year, the Joe College dance held in the Country Club featured a negro swing quartet and came through as a stellar date on the calendar. Sweaters and sweat shirts were the order of that occasion.

This year, the Phi Gams, their dates and guests danced to the music of Lloyd Hunter and his orchestra during their winter formal in Great Hall, Memorial Union. Supplementing these dances throughout the year were many firesides and parties held at the chapter house with Mrs. Huntington Rowe, their housemother, acting as chaperon.

Some of the well-known Phi Gam alumni are Calvin Coolidge, Alfred M. Landon, 1936 candidate for president; Glenn Cunningham, greatest miler of all time; Jimmy Young, foreign correspondent; Frank Norris, author, and ex-Governor George Lehman of New York.

The Iowa State chapter was founded in 1907 when the local club "Noit Avrats" (Starvation, spelled backwards) affiliated with Phi Gamma Delta, the thirteenth oldest fraternity in the country, which was founded in 1848 at Jefferson College at Cannonsburg, Pennsylvania. The fraternity now has 74 chapters and an alumni roll of over 40,000 members. Well known is the Phi Gamma Delta Club in downtown New York City, a $700,000 showplace. Also well known is the collection of antique beer mugs which belongs to the Iowa State chapter. These mugs have been handed down from graduating seniors for better than forty years and now make a valuable and picturesque collection.

SHOWING the war spirit even in their entertainment, the Phi Kappas this year gave a "Yank in Paris" party which revived many of the costumes and customs familiar to "dad." Members also added their bit to build morale during the past summer by entertaining sailors from the Naval Training Station. Amusement in the form of "jam sessions" was furnished by sailors and members of the chapter alike. Salvage drives were held frequently, and the sale of war stamps was stimulated through party functions.

One of the highlights of this year's program came when Father Weisenberg, national chaplain of Phi Kappa, was a guest of the chapter. In conjunction with Religious Emphasis Week, Father Weisenberg conducted the annual Catholic student's retreat. His coming was timely as he was able to witness the ceremonies in which Fathers Steffan and Brickley of St. Cecelia's Parish were made honorary members of Xi chapter.

Fall quarter's social activities were ushered in with a Get-Acquainted Party followed by various firesides. The firesides were climaxed by a sweater party where pledges impersonated various campus queens to the delight of the active chapter and guests.

Highlights of last summer's social calendar were the steak fries at Ledges State Park. A dinner commemorating the twentieth anniversary of Xi chapter inaugurated the social activities of the house for the winter quarter. The annual winter formal honoring the chapter members departing for service in the armed forces, concluded the social activities for that quarter.

All active members of Phi Kappa participated in some form of athletics. Ivan Dull was on the freshman baseball team; pledges Rasmussen, Rosell and Hidding were members of the frosh football squad; Gerald Nurre took part in freshman basketball; Robert Reigh played with the tennis squad; and Nurre, Watkins, Weber and Georger ran with the thin-clads.

In intramurals the active football team was eliminated in the quarter-finals of the Class A competition. The summer program featured a softball team which went to the quarter-finals of Class A. The active basketball team was one of the top on the campus, winning most of their games with comparative ease, and the pledge bowling team ranked high in their competition. Ivan Dull was secretary of the Intramural Board.

PHI KAPPA PSI has sent its sons into every major conflict that this country has taken part in since its founding at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania in 1852. Brothers who figured prominently in the last war were Woodrow Wilson, war-time president; John W. Davis, head of the Diplomatic Corps; General William Mitchell, Chief of the United States Air Forces and General T. J. Bliss, Chief of Staff of the United States Army. Phi Psi's weathering the second world war are Major General Frank Parker and Colonel Donovan, the most decorated officer in the first A. E. F.

Although there is now an added stress placed on scholarship, Iowa Beta's Phi Psis found time enough to drag themselves away from the books and "slip-stick" in order to try their hand at costume parties. The setting for this year's Moulin Rouge was typically that of a Parisian bourgeois cafe, with none of its gaiety and breeziness deleted. Highlights by way of special effects were the all-important air raid shelter and accompanying blackouts.

Homecoming was made a gala weekend for the brothers and visiting alums by the fall house dance, held at the Country Club.

Helping to push the varsity basketball team to the top last year were Larry Hanel, manager, and Gene Oulman, first string guard. Chuck Wells works out on the track team, while John Bragdon earned his berth on the varsity wrestling team. Pledge Bill Hedges was quarterback on last fall's freshman football team.

Recently elected treasurer of Alpha Phi Omega is Chuck Jenista, also a member of the Student War Council. Some of the other active Phi Psi's are Bob Berwick, secretary of the Pre-Medics Society; Clarke Sweetser, Men's Glee Club soloist; Bud Barnes, senior intramural manager and Bob Bradt, assistant advertising manager of the Daily Student. Wielding the gavel in their respective organizations are Paul Mongerson, Joint Social Council, and Jack Weir, Concert Band. Weir, along with Bob Triplett, became a member of Scabbard and Blade. John McKlveen completed his already long list of honorary fraternities by joining the ranks of Phi Kappa Phi. John, a member of Tau Beta Pi and Guard of St. Patrick, also finds time to act as secretary-treasurer of Tau Sigma Delta and fill the position of vice-president of Iowa Beta. Brother Jim Wilts made his mark for Phi Psi by receiving the award for having the highest freshman engineering average last year presented at the Fall Honor's Day Convocation.

Phi Kappa Psi was first established in 1852 at Jefferson College in Canonsburg, Pa.

AFTER winning the Class B basketball championship in '42, both actives and pledges of Phi Kappa Tau came back in '43 with fast teams that looked like championship material again. Group cooperation is stressed at the chapter house, and every member is out for every sport. Representing their fraternity on the college teams are Vincent Nielsen and Tom Engler, freshman basketball men, and Gene Ewoldsen, wrestler.

Leading the list of Phi Tau's in outside activities is Irvin Nathlich who is president of the Agricultural Council, chairman of the Education Committee of the Student War Council, vice-president of Alpha Zeta, chairman of the War Bond and Stamp sale, and member of the Danforth American Youth group. Taking advanced R.O.T.C. are Harold Beenken, Andrew Baardson, Robert Miller, Harold Dettmann, and Vernon Wiley. Beenken also wields the gavel of Alpha Phi Omega, the college service fraternity, and is a member of Eta Kappa Nu. Baardson represents the Agricultural Engineers on the Agricultural Council. Regular members of the Men's Glee Club and Mixed Chorus are Stanley Bay and Bernard Wight. Dallas McGinnis participated in "School for Husbands," Iowa State Players' fall quarter play, was on the Iowa State horse judging team, and a member of the Y.M.C.A. cabinet. Holding the office of state vice-president of the F.F.A. is Jimmy Thomsen, while Sterling Heins claims membership in Alpha Phi Omega.

Mr. A. C. Eichberg, a member of the National Council, was a fall quarter visitor. The war has called the traveling secretary to duty, thus throwing more work and responsibility on the national council members.

Phi Tau gave its full support to the war effort and scrap drives by holding two house cleanings to dig up old metal and rubber. A refrigerator was the source of a supply of copper tubing, and transportation around the house was cut in half when a perfectly good bicycle tire and tube were accidentally donated after the owner had hung them in the basement until he could put them on.

Supplementing the regular round of fire-sides and exchanges this year, the Phi Tau's gave a Halloween party, Founders' Day dinner, formal dance and a Mothers' Day dinner where each mother was given a Phi Tau plaque. Entertainment for the naval trainees was also furnished by the Phi Tau's at several dinners. The fraternity was founded at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

CINCHING the standing of Pi Kappa Alpha among Iowa State's fraternities is its contribution of more than fifty brothers from this chapter who now serve on the various United Nations fronts. They are proud of such warriors as Lieutenant Jack Donalson who piloted the last plane to leave Bataan and Lieutenant Arthur Hughes who gave his life fighting the Japs in New Guinea. Prominent in the service are ten colonels who have served an aggregate of 273 years. Lieutenant Harold Heap was the first alumni of Alpha Phi chapter to give his life in battle. Captain John Swanson leads a bomber squadron somewhere in censored territory.

Despite the loss of members to the armed services this year, the Pikers saw the annual barn dance become a gay success with the addition of many new pledges and the return of alums. The fall hay ride and countless fireside dances gave further impetus to their social program, which was spotlighted by the winter formal held in the chapter house.

Alpha Phi, Iowa State chapter, received an award of merit from the national office for placing first among the 81 national chapters in scholarship for the '41-'42 school year.

Pledges Don Clock and Alfred Baird ran away with the interfraternity pledge cross country title. Both actives and pledges placed second in touch football. Freshman numerals were won in track and football by Alfred Baird and Fred Vitner, respectively.

Representing his fraternity as a member of the Bomb staff is Warren Bower. Ralph Rieke was elected to Cardinal Guild by the Veterinary Division. Phil Chamberlain was honored with appointment to Scabbard and Blade, Tau Beta Pi and Alpha Chi Sigma. Don Vreeland's scholastic achievement won him membership to Pi Tau Sigma, the new M. E. honorary. Secretary of A.S.M.E. and a member of Scabbard and Blade, Pete Winders pounds the gavel for the Pi Kappa Alphas.

Alpha Phi was the first Iowa State fraternity to entertain Ames children at a Christmas party, an act which has since become a regular part of every fraternity's holiday program. The chapters of Pi Kappa Alpha also claim as alumni Dr. Harmank, president of Drake University, and the number one football hero of 1943, Frankie Sinkwich.

Begun in Virginia when six veterans of the Civil War convened in 1868 to plant the seeds of a brotherhood, Pi Kappa Alpha now boasts a total of 82 chapters.

The Alpha Phi chapter of Iowa State was instituted in 1913 with the acceptance of the local Gamma Theta fraternity by the national Pi Kappa Alpha. Through years of efficient management, the fraternity gained the financial prestige to construct the chapter house they now occupy, in 1922.

EVIDENCE that the foremost thought in the minds of members of Pi Kappa Phi is winning the war, is the service flag, proudly displaying 19 stars. These men are serving on every United Nations front, and are a part of the thousand Pi Kappas now in the services, either as reserves or actively engaged.

Three formal dinners spotlighted the social activities of the Pi Kappas last year. One was held for the active members before the Men's Panhellenic Dance, one for the pledges before the Interfraternity Pledge Formal, and one for members and pledges alike on the night of the Bomb Beauty Ball.

A Masquerade Ball, built around Halloween, celebrated Homecoming this fall. Decorations and costumes reflected the witches and goblins of the season.

In marked contrast with the formality of these functions was the informality of intramural competition. Participation in all sports was stressed by the chapter with the softball team placing second in Class B, the volleyball team reaching the semi-finals in Class A and the pledge cross-country squad copping the top honors. The active's cross-country team placed third in the interfraternity competition and Pi Kappa Phi teams ranked high in the other intramural sports.

Believing that campus activities give college students a chance to develop talents both outside and within their curriculum, Ellsworth Hays and Vieth Griffith served on the Y.M.C.A. Cabinet and the committee for Religious Emphasis Week. Griff also spent much of his time working on the Student War Council. Marshall Olson is national advertising manager of the Iowa Agriculturist, Eldred Harmon was a member of the livestock judging team, and Keith Spiker worked out with the Cyclone basketball squad. High scoring man in the activities field this year was John Rigg, past business manager and editor of the Daily Student, president of Cardinal Key, member of the Memorial Union Student Board.

Born at the College of Charleston in South Carolina, December 10, 1904, Pi Kappa Phi was organized with the definite purpose of extending the influence of the organization throughout the civilized world. The incorporation as a national fraternity took place in 1907, growing until at present there are 33 chapters. The Ionian Club was organized at Iowa State in 1916 and reorganized in 1923 as Beta Delta Rho. It joined Pi Kappa Phi fraternity in 1929.

SENDING fifteen seniors of a class of sixteen to the armed forces upon graduation, Sigma Alpha Epsilon also claims nine men in advanced military, four headed for West Point, and two for Annapolis. A service flag in the chapter house commemorates 80 brothers who are already in the service of their country, one who gave his life. S.A.E.'s are in battle zones on all four corners of the earth.

Evacuating "en masse" on the evening of their fall house dance, the S.A.E.'s allowed their dates to take over for the night. Other entertainment for the evening included a buffet supper and a sweater dance. Governed by tradition, the winter house dance was preceded by a formal dinner at the chapter house for members and dates.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon claimed several successes on the intramural fields during the past year. Championships were won in tennis, golf, track, swimming, handball, Class B football, freshman golf and Class A football.

Fred Clausen this year succeeded Stuart Kuyper as business manager of the Daily Student. Clausen is also a member of the Student Publication Board and the Collegiate Press Board. Others in the field of journalism are Henry Hanson, associate editor of the Iowa Engineer, and Gene Cooper, circulation manager of the Green Gander.

Chartered in 1905, Iowa Gamma Chapter boasts of Dr. Charles E. Friley, president of Iowa State College as an alumni member.

Answering roll call to a long list of activities, Stuart Kuyper is a member of Cardinal Key, Phi Kappa Phi, Tau Beta Pi, joins Gene Cooper and Henry Hansen in Sigma Delta Chi, and reports with Bob King, Jack Whinery, Bob Fleming, Jack Allen and George Lorentz to Scabbard and Blade meetings. Eta Kappa Nu and Phi Mu Alpha claims Henry Hanson, while Dick Bliss wears the emblem of the Varsity "I" Club. Alpha Phi Omega includes Bob Evans, and Stuart Kuyper and Henry Hansen were knighted into the Guard of St. Patrick. Other campus organizations that find Sig Alphas in their ranks are Science Council, Cardinal Guild, football, basketball, track, Band, Orchestra, Glee Club, Rifle Team, Pontoniers, Cossacks and polo teams.

Wielding the gavel in their respective organizations are Dick Mathison, Science Council, and Gene Cooper, Sigma Delta Chi, while Stuart Kuyper ranks as Cadet Colonel in advanced military.

Charged with guiding the course of the chapter for the current year are Stan Munger, president, and Fred Clausen, vice-president. Other chapter officers are Don Johnson, recorder; Bob Ziemer, treasurer.

PLACING the Scholarship Improvement Cup in their trophy case this year, members of Sigma Chi rose to fourth place scholastically among the 29 fraternities. The pledge class took first place scholastic honors among all fraternities and copped the interfraternity pledge indoor track crown to round out their activities.

Putting a new idea behind its winter formal, Beta Omicron chapter followed the lead of other chapters and chose Corinne Smith as its Sweetheart of Sigma Chi. The winter formal highlighted the social calendar of fresides, exchanges, pledge parties and Sunday night suppers with which Sigma Chis entertained their dates at the chapter house.

Representing Sigma Chi in the activities circle is John Baker, secretary of A.S.M.E., member of Engineering Council, managing editor of the Iowa Engineer, member of Pi Tau Sigma, and a Knight of the Guard of St. Patrick. John Cooley and George Brush are Scabbard and Blade men, with Brush wielding the gavel of A.S.M.E. and attending meetings of Pi Tau Sigma. Vice-president of A.S.C.E. is George Malony, while Bob Gunsaulus serves as treasurer of S.A.M. and Leonard Ranch is junior representative of A.I.A. to Engineering Council. Mack Scott is now editor of the Veterinary Student.

Outstanding in the sports field were Bob Merkley and Carrol Paulson in wrestling and Bob Kline, a baseball man.

Nationally recognized men who have worn the White Cross of Sigma Chi include Grover Cleveland, Booth Tarkington, Coleman DuPont, L. G. Balfour, Frank Murphy, Joe Gordon, and Milton Caniff.

Sigma Chi, now claiming 34,000 members, was begun 87 years ago when seven men banded together at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. While still in its organization period, it found its members separated by the Civil War, with brother fighting against brother. Realizing the need to keep Sigma Chi alive, seven brothers in the Confederate Army formed the Constantine chapter, the only fraternal organization of its kind to operate under such conditions.

Beta Omicron had its beginning when it was formed from Rho Sigma Gamma (local fraternity) in 1916, becoming one of 101 chapters of Sigma Chi. Most of its members lived in boarding houses until 1927, when the present chapter house was built. Brush, Libbey, and Baker served as house president.

ALTHOUGH the Sigma Nus number among their ranks such band leaders as Glenn Miller, Johnny Long, Kay Kyser and Orrin Tucker, the music for this year's fall party, the Sod-busters Ball, was adequately furnished by an Iowa City band. The guests at this annual affair outnumbered the brothers, and old clothes were the order of the evening. A winter formal rounded out the remainder of the social program, already full of firesides and exchanges.

Leading the Iowa State members in all-around activities was Royal Lohry, captain of the varsity football squad and a member of Cardinal Key. Bob Lechtenberg sparked the team at quarterback while Bill Barger played in the line. Lechtenberg was president, Barger treasurer and Lohry an active member of the Varsity "I" Club.

Sigma Nu engineers who found time to spend in campus organizations were Carleton Vangsness, Lieutenant Commander of the Sigma Nus, a Tau Beta Pi, member of Alpha Chi Sigma, and member of the Engineering Council. Gerry Harris, another Engineering Councilman, was a member of the Student War Council, and served on the publication board of the Iowa Engineer. Virgil Chamberlain, fourth Sigma Nu to hold a seat on Engineering Council, was a member of Cardinal Guild.

Filling the position of advertising manager of the Green Gander until his graduation, Walt Ingalls was succeeded by Junior Nielsen. Don Sorenson served on the Bomb staff as well as taking over the duties of vice-president of S.A.M. Neil Bohner, Commander of the Sigma Nus, had the job of circulation manager of the Iowa Engineer, while Jack Mills was a member of Alpha Chi Sigma. Barger, Eichling, van der Linden, Mangold and Chamberlain were all members of the advanced R. O. T. C. course.

On the science side of the campus, Bill Eichling and Spencer van der Linden served on the Science Council, with Bill serving as president of the Interfraternity Pledge Trainer's Council and van der Linden as a member of the Joint Social Council.

Sigma Nu had its founding immediately following the Civil War, at the Virginia Military Institute in 1869. The three founders were western men attending an eastern school, and the organization claimed men from seven states during the first year. Today 98 chapters make up the national organization with at least one house in every state except New Mexico and South Dakota. 45,000 answer national roll call.

Gamma Sigma, founded in 1904, was the first national fraternity to be permanently established on the Iowa State campus. Since its founding, 427 active members have been initiated into the chapter. To contact all alumni and keep them informed of the chapter activities, Gamma Sigma News is published once each year by the group.

In addition to leaders of bands, other alumni familiar to most people which the Sigma Nus claim are Zane Grey, novelist, and Ellsworth Vines, tennis player as members.

ELIMINATING their Homecoming dance because of war restrictions, members of Sigma Phi Epsilon planned bigger and better firesides to supplement their well-rounded social calendar. Outstanding among these were the Autumn Dance when the chapter house was decorated with many branches and colored leaves, and the Fall Barn Dance and hay ride planned by pledges.

Alumni of Iowa Beta chapter who are in the news today are Bourke B. Hickenlooper, new governor of Iowa, and charter member Lieutenant General Max Butcher, aide to General Eisenhower.

Although many men in the Iowa State chapter are already answering roll call in the armed services, other members are carrying on in the activities circle. Whirling into the Cyclone gridiron battles was Ron Norman, quarterback; George Schoel, guard; Bob Lindauer, end; and Gene Phelps, quarterback. Ron Norman and Gene Phelps also played with the varsity basketball squad.

Proud possessors of freshman numerals were Bob Cunningham, tennis, and Bob Axthelm, football. Bill Schaudt held a front position in the student cheering section as a cheer leader, and Tex Burdick acted as chairman of Homecoming Pep Committee.

Intramurally, Sig Ep teams stand high on the point ladder with the touch football team ending a hard fought season as runner-up in the Class A division. Two bowling teams reached the semifinal round before they were eliminated.

The Green Gander claimed Rog Henrich as associate editor, and Warren Yunker and John Rasmussen as staff members. Rog also worked with the Daily Student. Art Hansen and Ned Mohr helped publish the Iowa Engineer, and Warren Hayes, junior representative to the Engineering Council, was named director of the State Service Committee of the Iowa State Debaters.

Gene Strauss, chapter vice-president, served as vice-president of A.I.Chem.E., Whit McCormack was president of I.Ae.S., and Walt Hammond, pledge president, was chairman of the Interfraternity Pledge Dance. Art Hansen and Whit McCormack were initiated into Scabbard and Blade, while Frank Gerhart became a member of Eta Kappa Nu.

Organized at Richmond College in Virginia in 1901, Sigma Phi Epsilon was formed from the "Saturday Night Club." The local Iowa Beta chapter got its charter in 1916.

WAR atmosphere hovered over Sigma Pi along with other fraternities and organizations on the campus. Instead of the usual "old grad" coming back to visit friends at the Sigma Pi house with his interesting stories of fraternity activities of yesterday, this year the more recent alums continued to drop in with yarns from the various battle fronts throughout the world. Even the bull sessions usually reverted to the war and the student's part in its prosecution. Serious discussions on the international situation became a regular feature on the weekly menu.

But fun also had its place on the schedule. Members and friends danced to the music of Ray Gray at the annual Spring formal held in the Sheldon-Munn Ballroom. Spir-aled crepe paper of lavender and gold and dangling balloons formed the decorations, with the lighted Greek Cross pin forming the center of attraction. Topping the winter social program was the "all-out" Bowery Party, accompanied by appropriate roulette wheels and dice games.

Slightly more on the exertive side of the entertainment program was the spring picnic, followed by ample doses of liniment and Indian medicine. Even the alumni members greased their joints and stepped up to the plate a few times during the picnic.

Sigma Pi was founded at Vincennes University, Vincennes, Indiana in 1897 under the name of Tau Phi Delta. The Sigma Chapter at Iowa State was chartered in 1922.

Probably the most noted alumnus of the fraternity is Willard Kiplinger, editor and publisher of the Kiplinger Washington Letters, who gained international recognition as an author this year with his book "Washington Is Like That." Other prominent alumni include Robert Livingston Johnson, president of Temple University; Martin Fisher, dean of men and professor, Purdue University; and Vee Green, Drake football coach.

Leading Sigma Pis active in campus activities, Alva Hayes served as business manager of the Green Gander, which also took the time of Dale Goodell and Ken Tharp. Hayes was sports editor of the Bomb for the second year in a row, handled the money accounts for Sigma Delta Chi, kept the records for the Interfraternity Council as secretary, and was a member of the Senior Prom committee and the Iowa State Debaters. Warren Doolittle worked on the Ames Forester, and Virgil Seiser represented Sigma Pi on the Iowa Agriculturist.

Goodell was named to the livestock judging team and participated in several plays presented by the Iowa State Players. Jack Lange acted as vice-president of the Players.

BEGINNING when Tau Kappa Epsilon's gigantic eagle gracefully bore a resplendent Uncle Sam to receive the award for the second finest float in 1942's Veishea parade, this year has witnessed many changes in TKE. Chief among these, of course, is the departing of many men for service in the armed forces. Another change representing the spirit of the house is the $4,899 invested by the fraternity in defense bonds, plus large contributions by individual members. Also in 1942, flames engulfed the house mortgage announcing that the chapter house belongs completely to its members.

There are some things that should never be changed, so, as in past years, the Tekes still boast of the knock-down and drag out Bar Room Brawl, and its more sedate companions, the fall and spring formals; of Mother King—Teke housemother; and of an excellent activity record. Included in the latter are intramural prowess as second place winners in softball, two classes of football, and cross country, while Scabbard and Blade man, Gus Blanchard, led the way to a Class B championship in the bowling alleys. As individuals, Teke athletes include Lawrence Gilley, captain of Iowa State's tennis team, and Forrest Stepp, runner-up in varsity wrestling tryouts and winner in the divisional meet. Varsity track men include "Lanky Jim" Lovell on the high jump, and powerful "Put" Putnam putting the shot. Football claims Eddie Weiler and Ellis Alexander, famed fullback and letter winner who is also captain of the baseball nine, first baseman, and high hitter of the season.

Iowa State's Epsilon chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon became a national fraternity when it received its charter grant in 1915 from the local Seminole Club. Illinois Wesleyan witnessed the founding of Tau Kappa Epsilon in 1899 as an organization to further the study of the Roman classics. Alumni to which the Tekes point with pride are William L. Shirer, Glen Gray and Ronald Reagan.

CONTINUING to hold their place as the leading exponents of the variety type of campus serenade, members of Theta Chi appeared this year beneath the windows of the women's residence halls sporting a bass fiddle and instrumental groups ranging in style from a John Kirby swing combo to the smooth trombone styles of Tommy Dorsey. These renditions were supplemented by a fine library of special vocal arrangements written by President Dwight Gilbert. Gilbert is also active on the campus as administrator of the Cardinal Guild Activities Point System, vice-president of Phi Mu Alpha, treasurer of the Rhythm Club, and a member of Eta Kappa Nu. Other Theta Chis active on the campus include Bruce Glassburner, Cardinal Guild booking agent, and recipient of the Science Division's award for excellence in activities; Harry Kompanek, tenor soloist with the Iowa State Concert Band and Men's Glee Club and affiliate of the Iowa State Players; Clarence Strock of the Daily Student staff; Phil Tully, a member of Alpha Chi Sigma and A.I.Chem.E.; Harry Olsen, a member of Eta Kappa Nu; and Paul Messer and Rex Reed, members of Phi Mu Alpha. Chapter officers aiding Gilbert were Roger Harrison, vice-president and Ed Freienmuth, secretary.

Playing host to their national president, Frederick W. Ladue, and national chaplain, Stuart Kelley, during November, the Iowa State chapter of Theta Chi claims eight faculty members as alumni. Prof. Tolbert MacRae, head of the Music Department and A. R. Edgar, director of the Iowa State band and orchestra lead this Iowa State list of men wearing the Theta Chi badge. Other well-known members include Robert M. Fous, managing editor of the Saturday Evening Post; Commander DeWitt Clinton Webb of the U. S. Navy; Sammy Kaye, band leader; William Rutherford Mead, architect, and John Cecil Holm, actor-playwright.

Intramural highlights of the local chapter include a pledge basketball team that loomed as a contender for the college championship, and a table tennis team that was undefeated until draft orders thinned the ranks. The chapter has also entered at least two teams in every major intramural sport in spite of the fact that all activities have diminished proportionately with the growing number of service stars proudly displayed on a large service flag in the chapter house.

Socially, the Theta Chi's entertained dates at fall and spring formal dances, the usual number of exchanges and informal parties, and firesides featuring military and patriotic themes. Intermittent entertainment by musically inclined brothers, Chet Nisula, Phil Tully, Harry Kompanek, Daryl Hanson and the pledge 5-man swing group added spice to these evenings at home.

The local chapter, originally known as the Antler Club, was admitted to the Grand Chapter roll of Theta Chi in 1922. The national organization now includes 70 chapters and boasts an active membership of over 22,000 men in major college and universities over the nation. Founded in 1856, the national fraternity of Theta Chi was begun at Norwich University, Norwich, Vt.

MARKING the 95th anniversary of Theta Delta Chi, the Founders' Day Banquet held this year during Homecoming was attended by George Rath of the Rath Packing Plant and Captain Hubert Egenes, '39, who had just returned from Australia and combat with the Japanese. Since his visit to this chapter, he has been decorated with the Silver Star for gallantry beyond the call of duty.

Leaving from the chapter this year for the armed services have been John "Skinner" Monroe, one of the unofficial B.M.O.C.'s of the house and Delbert Greenlee, football man. Jack Tabor left for the air corps in the fall quarter, as did pledges Brown, Rudeau and Blackman. Jim Bather, Stan Hill and Sam Hirschy left school to wait their call into the armed forces, and Bob Rector and Dave Roberts left college this winter quarter to go into war industries.

Because of the war and their depleted man power, the Theta Deltas decided to abandon their annual winter formal and have a series of informal firesides. Under the hand of Bill Polchow, social chairman, many informal "evenings at home" were spent. Sunday date dinners, spring and fall picnics, bridge games and exchanges rounded out the Theta Deltas social war-time program.

On the activities wheel, Everett Norcross, president of the Theta Delta Chi's, was initiated into Scabbard and Blade, became a member of the Varsity "I" Club, and worked out with the indoor track squad. He copped the broad jump championship from the indoor Big Six meet and broke a record in the process. Dave Roberts, president until the winter quarter, was on the Interfraternity Council Court and, with Robert Rector, worked on the staff of the Iowa Engineer. John Monroe was noted on the campus merely for always being there and knowing everybody. Helping Norcross to guide Beta Deuteron chapter this year were Bill Polchow, steward; Gerald Siegwart, secretary; and Arnold Jackson, corresponding secretary.

Founded at Union College in 1847, Theta Delta Chi is known as the fraternity of

"firsts," being the first Greek organization to have a pledge pin, the first to adopt and display a flag, and the first to publish a fraternity magazine. The local chapter, founded in 1919, was the 28th chapter of the fraternity which now has a membership exceeding 15,000. Alumni include Admiral Hepburn, Robert Frost and Alexander Woolcott.

WITH the war's emphasis on physical fitness, this year members of Theta Xi have been participating in almost all intramural sports. A trophy was awarded the champion handball team, and Theta Xi received first place honors in the newly inaugurated fraternity cross-country meet. Pledge intramural activity was climaxed when the Class B football team pulled down the championship.

Evidence of the support that Theta Xi is giving the national effort are the 40 members of the local chapter now in the armed services and the reserve status of over half of those remaining in school. Cooperating in the metal, rubber, paper and book drives, the chapter also joined with Mu Association, its alumni organization, to invest several thousand dollars in war bonds.

Visitors to Theta Xi during the past year were H. I. Heald, president of the Illinois Institute of Technology; Harry D. Linn, state secretary of agriculture; and Harold P. Davison, national executive secretary of Theta Xi fraternity. Leading the members of Mu chapter this year were Sanford De Beck, president, and Clevenger, Daubendiek, Thompson, Pennings, Kassel and Veenstra.

Studies have come first during the past year, but Theta Xi members have continued participation in worth-while activities. Don Van Howeling, Cardinal Key man, served as head of the Student War Council, and as president of the Interfraternity Council prior to his graduation. Wayne Thompson managed the business affairs of the Veterinary Student; Bob Hayes worked out with the varsity baseball and basketball teams. Arthur Pennings balanced the books for the Interfraternity Council, with George Kimberly serving on the Green Gander staff and Jack Heer and Ted Cowen working on the Bomb. Hal Sorensen and Ed O'Connor were secretary and treasurer of the A.S.C.E.

Limiting their chapter's social calendar to bi-weekly exchanges and firesides, members of Theta Xi held one big dance a quarter. The October 31 party served for both Halloween and Homecoming, and a back drop of a witch upon a broom, silhouetted against the moon above a pasteboard Campanile, was used. The Shipwreck Party, also held during the fall quarter, was a fireside for which the pledges painted a mural depicting hungry cannibals on a desert island, and decorated the house with a nautical theme. For the Bowery Brawl held during the winter quarter, the house was converted to a bar room with bottles, dim lights, and other suitable effects.

Once each quarter, Mu Musings, news letters, is published and sent to the alumni.

Move Dormitory Women to Fraternities

In a corner of her office, Housing Director Mrs. Madge McGlade serves tea to Ruth Vogel, president, and Betty Plumb, recorder, of the Dormitory Council

MASS moving of dormitory women into fraternity houses to make room for incoming service men was the most serious responsibility of the Dormitory Council this year. Some dormitory women moved to near-by fraternity houses and servicemen were quartered in the dormitories.

Entering into the college war effort wholeheartedly, the council put special emphasis on physical fitness this year. In cooperation with the Student War Council, representatives were sent from each dormitory to learn the physical fitness routine. Also in cooperation with the Student War Council, the council worked in promoting the sale of war stamps, and showed special efficiency in organizing blackout drills for the halls.

Wednesday night devotional services held in the women's dormitories were new features this year on the dormitory activity schedule. The Dorm Council also promoted debates by dormitory teams on questions of special war interest.

Highlighting their social events were the two annual formal dances held on Valentine's Day and St. Patrick's Day. Sailor-dormitory exchanges were new additions to the program this year, with the informal afternoon dances being held in the Memorial Union. Catching the holiday spirit, the council held a Christmas luncheon in the Institutional Management Tearoom, Home Economics Building, for themselves and their guests.

Made up of the presidents of all the women's dormitories, the council is advised at their bi-monthly meetings by Miss Kay Wittkowski, chief of the dorm advising system. Holding the office of president is Ruth Vogel with Betty Plumb serving as the reporter.

THE kitchen of Freeman Hall, women's cooperative dormitory, served as a classroom this year for the canteen corps led by Miss Mildred Bowers, hall dietitian. These women, who were learning methods of feeding large groups, watched the Freeman hall women at work in their kitchen and from these observations were able to see the possibilities of doing large quantity cookery in short periods.

Turning in more scrap metal than any other dormitory, Freeman Hall further demonstrated its cooperation by allotting all proceeds from candy money to the purchase of a war bond. Social activities were cut to a minimum in favor of war activities. Untouched, however, was the annual white Christmas breakfast when the women caroled through the halls before the candlelight breakfast. The Christmas story was related to the girls in the parlors before the breakfast by candlelight. In Freeman Hall 35 freshmen find themselves as much a part of dorm life as upperclassmen who have lived there on a cooperative basis for four years.

Globe trotting in the Freeman Hall parlor are Helen Dahlberg, Phyllis Lee, secretary of the Hall, and Mary Jean Smith, all are students of Home Economics Department

High scholastic honors this year went to Evelyn Groth, Evelyn Chapin, Margery Lary, Harriet Zook, Jean Gowdy, and Elinor Hoeflin all of whom joined one of the following honoraries: Phi Kappa Phi, Omicron Nu, Phi Upsilon Omicron, and Pi Mu Epsilon. Special recognition was given Evelyn Groth when she was tapped for Mortar Board at the Veishea ceremony. Jeanne Schram is the junior Home Economics Council representative to Cardinal Guild, and acts as business manager of the Iowa Homemaker. Harriet Swift shares duties with Jeanne Schram on the Home Economics Council, while Ann Livingston serves as secretary of the Independent Council. Elinor Hoeflin is a member of Science Council, while Campus 4-H President Jean McCormick is aided by Jean Black and Ann Lee Martin. Margery Osenbrug was elected vice-president of the Freshman Home Economics Club to serve for the remainder of the year.

Weekly Sunday night meetings bring the house council together with Mrs. K. McDonald to discuss means of promoting good will and understanding in the hall. Leading the Freeman Hall women this year were Evelyn Groth, president; Margery Lary, vice-president; Helen Dahlberg, treasurer; Phyllis Lee, secretary; Harriet Swift, social chairman, and Jerry Hesnard, music chairman. Monday night at the all-dorm meeting, every woman has a chance to discuss and decide upon future policies.

Freeman Hall is home to underclassmen and seniors alike. Instead of knowing only the women on one corridor, there is an opportunity of working with every one.

Saturday, February 6th finds Peggy McCluer distributing corsages to Marjorie Hoffman, Dorothy Gronna, Ruth Heitman and Florence Stallings at the Valentine Dormitory Dance.

A GIFT of 14 dollars presented to the Red Cross last Christmas began a new year of war activities for members of Birch Hall. Selling stamps, holding several thousand dollars worth of bonds, taking part in salvage drives, metal and paper collections and serving on war council committees rounded out their contribution to the emergency effort.

Birch Hall worked into the final competition at the Veishea Vodvil, and entered Sor-Dor competition under the able leadership of Anne Harris and Josephine Ahern. They were second in the intramural volley-ball competition.

On the social ladder, the annual white Christmas breakfast was held just before vacation. An open house and tea held in the spring brought a guest for each woman to the hall, and counselors were invited to dinner during the year, to better acquaint them with their students. Invited to speak at house meetings during the year were Dr. J. A. Vieg, Dr. T. A. Hippaka, Rev. Jack Finegan and Miss Ida Schilling.

Representing Birch Hall in Y.W.C.A. is Emmy Lou Hirschy, chairman of the publicity committee. Emmy Lou was also chairman of the publicity committee of the Education Committee of the Student War Council and the 1942 Junior Prom. She also served as co-chairman of the discussion committee of the 1943 Religious Emphasis Week.

Betty Ann Erickson was a staff member of the Green Gander and the Iowa Home-maker, while Pat Stow wielded the gavel for Freshman Home Economics Club. Rosemary Strohhahn was a member of the publicity committee of Religious Emphasis Week, a 4-H Council member, chairman of student deaconesses of the Presbyterian Church and vice-president of the fellowship committee of the Presbyterian Church. Chairman of the guest committee for the Home Economics Ball was Betty Plumb, also a member of the Dormitory and Independent Councils, Red Cross supervisor in the sewing room, and candidate for the Dormitory Advisor Chief. Out of 62 freshmen women honored by Omicron Nu for outstanding scholarship, Birch Hall claimed 13. These women were June Adams, Dona Browne, Roberta Gaulke, Doris Hawn, Margaret Herder, Neva Hunter, Louise Landstrom, Mary Laxson, Lennoe Perkins, Helen Phelps, Patricia Stow, Janis Waterman and Jo Ann Wick. Other activities that find Birch Hall women in their ranks include Concert Orchestra, Concert Band, Women's Glee Club, Home Economics Club, Science Club and church activities.

Representatives of Birch Hall to various campus organizations are Wanda Poulsen, Health Council representative, Helen Fuhrman, chairman of intramurals and Estelle Evers, representative to the 1943 Bomb. Guiding the women of Birch Hall this year were President Betty Plumb; Vice-President Mary Jean Cooper; Secretary Rosemary Strohhahn; Treasurer Emmy Lou Hirschy.

ELM HALL

UNDER the capable leadership of Virginia Bates, sales manager, Elm Hall started off the fall quarter of 1942 by winning permanent possession of the Green Gander trophy for consistent excellence in sales campaigns. Elm set the precedent by inviting 130 naval trainees to the Memorial Union for a dance exchange on November 20th. In the 1942 Veishea parade with the theme, "The Spirit of '76," they copped the trophy for first prize in the dormitory division.

Elm Hall women have purchased $12,255 in war stamps and bonds, and claim Jeanne Gustason as chairman of Red Cross; Shirley Sloane as recorder, Mary Jane Ward as secretary and Marian Loofoe as a member of the Student War Council. Marian Loofoe, the delegate from the Iowa State Student War Council to the Student Victory Assembly held at Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota, was appointed secretary of the Resolutions Committee. Anne Harris is co-administrator of the activity point system, and Jeanne Gustason wields the gavel for the Memorial Union Board.

Winning first prize for her war stamp corsage in campus competition, Rhoda Hanitz took first honors at the county contest and honorable mention in the state competition. Virginia Bates was chosen as one of twelve Bomb beauty candidates and Shirley Sloane had a leading part in "School for Husbands," an Iowa State Players' production given this fall. Chosen for the Vox Pop interview on the campus was Mildred Giesenberg.

Elm Hall owes its successful year to the cooperation of its officers, Marilyn Glasser, president; Elizabeth Hanson, vice-president; Elizabeth Murfield, secretary; Betty Meierhoff, treasurer; Virginia Bates and Mildred Giesenberg, social and activities chairmen.

Representing Elm Hall in honorary organizations, Janet Lindstrom was president of Phi Mu Epsilon. Rhoda Hanitz, Darlene Holder, Anna Spencer, Jo Anne Nicholson, Mary Jane Ward and Elizabeth Hanson were affiliated with Omicron Nu. Delta Phi Delta claims Rhoda Hanitz and Jo Anne Nicholson while Dorothy Ann Klein, Anne Harris, Elizabeth Hanson and Rhoda Hanitz answer roll in Phi Upsilon Omicron. Mildred Giesenberg, June Radke and Janet Lindstrom joined Psi Chi, and Dorothy Ann Klein is a member of Cardinal Guild.

Helping with student cheering as members of Twisters were Norma Parker, Beverly Eckwall, Betty McBride, Susan Fonk, Mary Gillette and Joy Schallaire.

During the last of March, 25 women from Oak Hall were moved into Elm Hall increasing their number of women to 163.

MARY LYON HALL

LAST fall saw the combining of two women's residence halls, Mary Lyon and the Memorial Union, into one group in Lyon Hall. Their successful social program, coming as the result of planned cooperation within the group, included a fall quarter tea dance and open house held in MacKay Auditorium. Lyon Hall arranged several sailor exchanges, and entertained the trainees at lunches and dinners. At Christmas time, a group representing the hall went caroling to the other dormitories and organized houses. In February, Lyon Hall women were hostesses with other halls for the Dormitory Valentine Dance. Bonnie Noel was guest chairman for the Valentine Dance, for the Victory Hop, and also served on the Campus Varieties Committee. Metal scrap from empty cans to old sprung bobbie pins was collected from members in the hall under the leadership of Elaine Lischke, scrap chairman. The sale of war stamps was carried on in the dormitory, every member being encouraged to start a bond book of stamps.

Selected for honorary fraternities from Mary Lyon were Mildred Peterka, elected to Phi Kappa Phi; Victoria Voelker, a member of Omicron Nu; Charlene Fredricksen, now a Chi Delta Phi; and Helen Horton, wearing the pin of Phi Upsilon Omicron. Under Elaine Haapaniemi, the women entered as teams or as individuals in the women's intramural program. Elaine, who is secretary of the Naiads Club and acted as stage chairman for the Amphibian 1943, participated in the show by swimming with Shirley Snyder and Margaret Connolly, both Mary Lyon women.

Kay Howe, one of the few women to invade the Division of Agriculture, stepped forward this year as president of the Horticulture Club. Kay also acted as assistant chairman for the Hort Show, submitting six entries to the show, two of which won blue ribbons, the others receiving mention.

Blanche Mohn runs off a quick sketch for some dormitory dance publicity while Grace Huglin, Jane Stanberry and Helen Falkenhainer look up material in new magazines Charlene Fredricksen, also acting as the first woman in her capacity, took the job of business manager for Sketch. Helen Falkenhainer was active as a member of Science Women's Council.

Leader of another group was Grace Huglin, president of the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship and representative to the Interchurch Council. Others that were active in church groups were Victoria Voelker, corresponding secretary of Lutheran Student Association; Miriam Waisanen, member of the Methodist Church Student Council; and Margaret Ann Clarke, Kappa Phi pledge vice-president.

Mary Lyon Hall housed only 115 college women, a comparatively small number for a residence hall, but a large number for the facilities of Mary Lyon. Harmonious living in these cramped quarters was made possible by the cooperation of Victoria Voelker, president; Helen Falkenhainer, vice-president; Bonnie Noel, social chairman; Betty Barnett, treasurer; Helen Horton, secretary; Beth Reynolds, music chairman; Grace Huglin, religious leader, and Elaine Haapaniemi, intramural chairman for the hall.

WITH the recreation room piled high for the duration with mattresses from vacated Friley Hall, the Oak Hall house council was busy adjusting the social program for the 194 women. The social calendar charted exchanges at many different places, with even the archery range of the Women's Gymnasium lending itself to the emergency. With Pat Ball at the helm, the women substituted a sailor's party with nautical terms and atmosphere for the usual sailor tea dance.

Eagerly backing the program of buying war bonds with house money, many of the women found it easy to become ten percenters when war stamps were sold at the dormitory desk. The Student War Council claimed Ruth Vogel and Carol Nichols for its regular meetings, while the other women cooperated in scrap and silk hose collections.

For the Intramural Debate tournament, Oak Hall called upon Ruth Loomis, Catherine Reavy, Mary Ellen Sullivan and Arline Norton to carry them through the second and third rounds of the tournament.

Mail time in Oak Hall brings Mary Frances Wilson, Helen Hudson, and Ruth Brown down to claim letters, and to check telephone calls left on the hall bulletin board

On the activity wheel, Oak Hall rolled into many kinds of campus organizations. Oak's president, Ruth Vogel served as Dormitory Council President; Kay Wittkowski, Mortar Board's president, acted as Campus Advisor Chief; Carol Nichols was Y.W.C.A. president; Jean Ross edited Sketch and Jeanette Simmons served as W.A.A. president. All were members of Mortar Board. Virginia Hall presided over Home Economics Education Club, and Martha Terrill served as Health Council president.

Sports activities of the whole group bagged the yearly intramural cup for Oak Hall, and Pauline MacMahon presided over the women's bowling club, B. J. Otto was intramural manager and Jeanne Little, Annette Lahr and Jeanette Simmons wore the emblems of the Women's "I" Fraternity.

The Daily Student masthead carries Catherine Tidemanson as society editor, Jean

Ross, managing editor and Virginia Brainard, night editor. The Christmas sale of Green Ganders brought Oak Hall the trophy with Martha Ryan heading the crew of salesmen.

Scholarship standards were set high by Ruth Vogel, Gretchen Hendrickson and Jeanette Botsford who were members of Omicron Nu and Phi Kappa Phi. Claylain Cawiezell was accepted for Phi Kappa Phi and Carolyn Beers and Ethlemae Aten swelled the ranks of Omicron Nu. Phi Upsilon Omicron claimed Carol Nichols, Ruth Vogel, Kay Wittkowski, Catherine Tidemanson, Ruth Brown and Jeanette Simmons while Virginia Brainard and Jean Ross answered the roll call of Theta Sigma Phi.

Roberts Hall's parlor serves as a meeting place as freshmen Marjorie Moody, Kay Rauschert, Mae Pooley and Pat Emick have an apple with their four o'clock chat

ARRIVING at Roberts Hall at the beginning of this year, freshman women were greeted by 25 advisors who had come earlier and were settled and ready to welcome the newcomers. These advisors, chosen last spring, were entertained by last year's advisors at a picnic, and were thoroughly acquainted with their duties through meetings arranged by the campus advisory council. Margaret McKeegan, dormitory representative to the advisory council, helped arrange for these meetings. New draperies in the parlor and repainted walls were an added attraction for the new women.

Dorothy Skinner acted as president under the direction of Roberts' housemother, Mrs. Young. Assisting her have been Margaret McKeegan, vice-president; Barbara Wellmerling, social chairman; Dora Bolen, secretary; Merle Bruene, intramural chairman; Joyce Nikolaison, activity chairman; and Virginia Mendenhall, treasurer.

Roberts Hall is represented in campus activities by many women. Serving as local advertising manager on the Iowa Homemaker is Dorothy Skinner. Marilyn Clayton, an active member of Iowa State Debaters, is the Iowa State College negative representative in the National Intercollegiate Radio Prize Debate. One of the twelve candidates for Bomb beauty was Barbara Wellmerling. Marie O'Brien was elected president and Kathryn Critchfield secretary of Freshman Y.W.C.A. Dorm representative on the Health Council was Barbara Fink while Jean Grosser served on the Salvage and Reclamation Committee of the Student War Council. On Freshman Home Economics Council is Eloise Burton; Ruth Kettleson acts on the Campus 4-H Council as a Roberts Hall representative. Five Roberts Hall women participated in the swimming show, Amphibian '43, given in February. They were Patricia Garrison, Mae Pooley, Jean Versteegen, Ruth Carrick and Marjorie Moody.

Social activities have not been overlooked by the women from Roberts. Advisors, this year, gave a chocolate hour in October for advisors from other freshman dormitories, so they might become better acquainted. Early in September, the women planned three firesides, one to be given each quarter in MacKay Auditorium with Barbara Wellmerling responsible for arranging and planning them.

An exchange with the naval trainees was arranged by the women during winter quarter, with dancing in Great Hall, Memorial Union for those who wished to dance, and games and card tables set up for those who did not. Barbara Wellmerling headed the committee in charge of furnishing entertainment, and providing music and a hall.

Following a Roberts Hall tradition, the women presented an Ames family with food, clothing and toys at Christmas time. Studies were attacked with a vigor that raised the all-time high freshman dorm record set last year by women now in upperclass dorms.

WELCH HALL

ONE hundred and sixty-nine active members of Welch Hall organized themselves early this year, and led all other dormitories in the Y.W.C.A. drive for voluntary contributions. The second week in December the women entertained a group of sailors in the Memorial Union at an afternoon dance, serving punch and cookies. The Curtiss-Wright cadettes were guests of Welch Hall at dinner on February 27. Pre-Christmas festivities were highlighted by the annual white breakfast held just before vacation.

Representing Welch Hall in the activities field was Marie O'Brien, president of Freshman Y.W.C.A.; Jo Ann Powers was chosen vice-president and Beverly Giedd was elected social chairman of that organization, while Eleanor Heinrich, Beverly Giedd and Margaret Ewing made up half of the freshman "Y" sextet. Zona Cleveland was elected secretary of the Freshman Home Economics Club, while Jo Zimmerman became the Welch Hall representative to that group. Veva Hopkins and June Hudek made a name for Welch Hall when they finished second in the intramural debate taking the negative side of the question: "Is Iowa State Doing Its Part in the War Effort?" Miss Hopkins also won first prize in an essay contest dealing with the part that college organizations play in the war effort.

Helping to lead the cheering at football and basketball games this year were Jackie Howell and Helen Yarwood, both members of the Cheer Squad. Elected as Bond Queen for Welch Hall was Betty Burns, who represents a dormitory that leads all others in actual war bond and stamp sales. Further adding to their stamp total, Welch Hall women joined the other dormitories in wearing stamp corsages to the dormitory formals.

Chosen as Advisor Chief for the dormitories for next year was Beth Blomgren, president of Welch Hall and representative from the Dormitory Council to Cardinal Guild. Treasurer Charlotte Langworthy, Secretary Lorma Gallaher and Miss Blomgren were invited to join Phi Upsilon Omicron while Doris Adams pledged Sigma Alpha Iota. Lorma Gallaher was also active in the Y.W.C.A.

Twenty women under the direction of Janet Hansen participated in the Sor-Dor Sing, presenting "Mighty Like a Rose," and "Sing a Song of Iowa State."

Embers, the devotional service held in the American room by the firelight every other Wednesday night, is planned by the freshman women. A scripture reading, prayer, several hymns and musical solos are included in these services, inaugurated this year.

WITH ten women enrolled in the Ambulance Driving Course, and members in the casualty station, on the war salvage committee and health council, Barton Hall women have made a substantial contribution to Iowa State at war. Last fall, they claimed the scholarship cup awarded for the highest Quality Point Average in 1941-42, and carried on an extensive war bond and stamp drive.

Participation in many campus activities is also on the program for Barton Hall women. Intramural board, Iowa Homemaker, Y.W.C.A., Interchurch Council and W.A.A. Council are some of the organizations that carry members on their rosters. Answering roll call in Phi Upsilon Omicron are Besse Hayes and Dorothy Ann Olson, who is also a member of Omicron Nu. Jeannette Kiel wears the emblems of Omicron Nu and Psi

Chi, while Fauneil Campbell wears the monogram of Women's "I" Fraternity.

Barton women were moved from their hall early in the spring quarter to make room for the incoming Navy Air Cadets.

TOWN WOMEN

Town women Jean Bretnall, Marjorie Upton, Helen Taylor and Dorothy Walker meet with three town men to discuss plans for the year, which included fresides and exchanges

AN INTRODUCTORY tea held fall quarter started Town Women's activities off for the year. Coeds not affiliated with an organized house made plans for exchanges and dinners at this time.

Grace Rasmusson headed the group this year and further distinguished herself as a member of the Independent Party Council, and Omicron Nu. Mary Kay Rood and Elvira Carstensen shared honors in Omicron Nu, while Mary Hendrickson and Betty Severeid were active in Sigma Alpha Iota. Dorothy Walker guided the group's social activities, and took time from her work on the Daily Student, Homemaker and Bomb to be general chairman of the Dormitory Valentine Formal Feb. 6. Charlotte Nutty represented the club on Home Economics Council, Louise Brown was a member of the Women's Intramural Board and Marjorie Lawlor was active on Health Council.

FRILEY HALL

ALTHOUGH the men of Friley Hall don't have several new lounges, and a spacious roof terrace overlooking Lake La Verne, they are still going strong. A group of fifty men who lived in Friley Hall decided to continue together when the naval trainees were moved into Friley Hall. At the beginning of fall quarter they took over both Ridgeway House and Lincolnway Cottage and called the combination Friley Hall. To designate between them, Lincolnway Cottage was named Friley on Lincolnway and Ridgeway House was termed Friley on Lynn. Miss Peisen, housemother of Friley Hall since its beginning as Men's New Hall, supervised both houses with Arnold Beguhn acting as house manager at Friley on Lincolnway and Miss Peisen staying at Friley on Lynn. Under the direction of Steward Bill Paulsen, all meals were served at Friley on Lynn for the men living in both houses.

Bob Fuller, representative to the Cardinal Guild, co-chairman of Religious Emphasis Week Committee, a member of the War Council Education Committee, and on the Y.M.C.A. cabinet, was the house president. Lee Gibson, the chairman of the War Council Education Committee and vice-president of the Iowa State Debaters, held down the job of vice-president in the house in addition to announcing for WOI. Treasurer Paul Brandt was president of the Symphony Orchestra and a member of Phi Mu Alpha and George Breckenridge was secretary of the house. Besides keeping the finances straight for the Engineers' Council, Art Runft kept the men of Friley Hall socially active with firesides, dance exchanges, and dinner exchanges during the year. Besides this work, Art was correspondent to National Bridge for Eta Kappa Nu, a member of Tau Beta Pi and a Knight of St. Patrick.

Jack Gieck, another activity man, was a Cardinal Guild representative and social chairman of Alpha Chi Sigma. Other members of Alpha Chi Sigma in the house are Bob Baumert and Dan Goodfellow, who is also president of the A.I.Chem.E. Bob Brinkman was a member of Tau Beta Pi, Phi Mu Alpha, and a member of the recently formed Mechanical Engineering Honorary, Pi Tau Sigma. Eric Schweim and Don Spaulding, two veterinary medicine seniors, are both members of Phi Zeta and Spaulding is on the staff of the Veterinary Student.

Al Bianco, a member of Eta Kappa Nu, was intramural manager for the house, seeing that Friley Hall won in its swimming competition.

Burton Flick, a junior, became the president of the A.L.A., and Stan Zager joined Phi Mu Alpha. John Foster, an advanced military student, was in the Pontoniers and on the Engineering Council. The senior football manager, Bob Ettinger, was also a resident of Friley Hall, and joined in the feeling of the men that the division of Friley Hall into two houses really made for strength.

The dormitory to which Friley Hall men will return after the war is the newest addition to the campus building program. Begun in 1939, the north wing was constructed and housed 150 men. In June, 1941, the contract was let for the remainder of the building, the general contractor being C. C. Larson & Sons of Council Bluffs. Plumbing and heating work was done by the Wheatland Company, Cedar Rapids, and the electrical work by Maier Electrical Company of Minneapolis. Located on college land, the total cost of the structure was $753,457.

Built to house 645 men, the dormitory was planned by Oren Thomas and Brooks and Borg, architects. Plans for the building were checked by A. H. Kimball, head of Architectural Engineering Department, Mrs. Madge McGlade, housing director, B. H. Platt, superintendent of buildings and grounds, and President Friley. Covering 141,350 square feet and occupying 1,323,100 cubic feet, the hall contains 345 dormitory rooms and three big lounges. The dining-room, designed to accommodate 800, is located at the front of the dormitory, and was planned to feed both the men of Friley Hall and Hughes Hall.

Thirty navy cooks and bakers and thirty civilian workers under the guidance of Dean Marshall Hossle, manager of the Friley Hall kitchen, are necessary to prepare the meals for the 1,000 navy men now housed in Friley Hall. Meals are served from two cafeteria lines, where steam-controlled counters keep food warm until served. In the baking department, two mixing machines with 30 and 60-gallon bowls have attachments for mixing bread and pie dough, whipping potatoes and mixing batter. Refrigerators line the wall between the cafeteria and the kitchen, opening into both rooms, to eliminate unnecessary handling of the food. College water, light and power are used in the kitchens.

HUGHES HALL

TWICE moved from their quarters by changing college conditions, members of Hughes Hall, now occupied by naval trainees, were first moved to the top floors of the Memorial Union, and were then obliged to scatter to private homes when Curtiss-Wright women were brought there. They have maintained their identity, however, and have upheld their campus position by claiming the all-college championship in basketball and touch football, and by winning the Sinfonia Sing trophy.

Claiming six musically inclined men, Hughes Hall saw Robert Young, Virgil Hanson, Edwin Hawyer, Clarence Bockhopp, Robert Himmel and Owen Scheldorf join the ranks of Phi Mu Alpha. Dick Utterback, president of Hughes, is a member of Scabard and Blade, while Don Lippenberger, Robert Wahl, Robert Crawford and Robert Gerber represent Hughes in Tau Beta Pi.

WARD SYSTEM

Electing a sweetheart for the first time, the 1,450 men of the Ward system chose Dorothy McDade to reign over their winter semi-formal, February 20. On that same night, Prof. L. O. Stewart, head of the Civil Engineering Department, presented twelve service keys to outstanding officers of the system. They were Delmar Thompson, Ray Keller, Fred Smith, Fred Rixe, Harold Wright, Ellis Butler, Eugene Baughman, Jerry Fisher, Kenneth Myers, Levi Willits and Joy Hayes.

Begun in 1932 at the suggestion of President Hughes, the ward system was first organized and presided over by a fraternity man. Divided now into 13 wards, the group maintains a newspaper, the Ward News, edited every two weeks by Ronald Ross. A one dollar fee is assessed each member at the beginning of the year, entitling him to all the privileges of the organization with the exception of the two ward semi-formals.

Claiming that it's nice work if you can get it, Bill Galloway and Ellis Butler measure the waists of some comers to the Ward Waistline party, while Eugene Baughman keeps the tally. The average waist was 25 3/4 inches

Draw for Gobbler Compile Handbook

Besides presenting Dorothy McDade as ward sweetheart at the annual ward semi-formal dance on February 20, members of the social council of the ward system gave away a turkey at the fall sport dance. Couples drew lots as they entered the door of the informal party, and the "Galloway Gobbler" was given to the couple holding the lucky number. The spring picnic was the other highlight of the ward social program which included the ward roundup, ward-sorority exchanges, dances, and the waistline fireside.

Compilation of an officer's manual—a combination of all former manuals—was the new job of the executive council of the ward system this year. Don Carter was in charge of gathering the material for this complete what, where, when and why of the ward system. Composed of the presidents of the 13 wards and the presidents of the four other ward councils, this council sends one junior and one senior to Cardinal Guild. Guided by Dr. E. W. Anderson, the council passes on all financial matters and on policy changes.

Arrange Movies Present Charms

Movies for the Ward Wampuses, held in the Agricultural Assembly during fall and winter quarters, are the responsibility of the Ward Program Council. Regular popular movies such as "I Wanted Wings" and "Yank in the R.A.F." are shown to the attending ward men. Under the sponsorship of the program council, the Ward Quartette performs both for ward meetings and other groups. Bi-weekly meetings featured faculty members, short educational movies and speeches by foreign students this year.

Sponsoring ward teams in every major sport, the Ward Athletic Council has as its major activity the handling and supporting of all ward intramural teams. At the end of each season the council awards charms to the champion teams, thereby encouraging participation. Sports included are touch football, cross-country, obstacle course running, horseshoes, ping-pong, swimming, basketball, wrestling, handball, indoor track and bowling. Harry Schmidt of the Physical Education Department advises the group.

WARD SYSTEM

Twenty per cent of the dollar paid by ward men for membership in the ward system goes for the expenses of the bi-weekly ward meetings. The membership entitles men to all privileges of the system with the exception of the two semi-formals and the waistline fireside. One of the highlights of the program is the spring picnic.

Iowa State College

Walking in stride with the accelerated war program come the service men and women and students of Iowa State College. The year 1943 witnessed the facilities of Iowa State keyed to preparing its own students for war service and to the training of Curtiss-Wright women in engineering, navy men in electricity and deisel work, navy pre-flight men and war industry trainees. Still retaining its same valuable training in agriculture, engineering, home economics, science and veterinary medicine, the college has made it possible for students to complete the regular 4-year course in three years by taking advantage of the 12 month plan, which involves four full school quarters.

Memorial Union

Just one of the many accommodations that the Memorial Union provides for service men stationed on the campus, the bowling alleys were given over to the naval trainees and their guests every Sunday afternoon during winter quarter. Dedicated now to serve the navy men and Curtiss-Wright Cadettes as well as to continue their food service to students and faculty members, the Union staff is busier than ever. However, Memorial Union still provides room for dances and meetings and a place for leisure hours in the Grill.

Campus Drug Company

Almost forgotten—Aunt Hattie's birthday. But a quick dash to the CAMPUS DRUG will solve your problem at once. From their large selection of greeting cards, you'll find just the one to suit the occasion every time. CAMPUS DRUG is also the by-word for cosmetic and toilet articles, both for personal needs and to make attractive gifts. You're sure to find your favorite leg make-up, perfume or lipstick on their well-stocked counters. A registered pharmacist is also available to fill your prescriptions. Good spot to pick up your favorite magazine, too, and the mailing service is just another convenience for the stream of students that comes and goes at the CAMPUS DRUG.

O'Neil Dairy Company

When the losers treat the winners in the quarterly scholarship contest, O'NEIL'S ice cream is the order of the day. And O'NEIL'S ice cream is a treat for everyone, with its velvet creaminess and full flavors. Catering to student gatherings of all kinds, from five-pound parties to departmental picnics, O'NEIL'S serves as Iowa State's favorite ice cream for all occasions. Other high quality products included in their service are Grade A milk and cream from their own dairy herds, sherbets and cottage cheese. A call to 62 will place your dessert worries in the competent hands of the O'NEIL DAIRY.

Younkers

Shrill squeals of delight announce the good news to the whole dorm. Jim is coming tomorrow from camp! You wonder in dismay why you didn't go shopping for that new outfit last week until someone reminds you that YOUNKERS is only a few minutes away. You no longer have to make a trip to Des Moines to find the perfect suit for your special weekend. A quick trip downtown and YOUNKERS will furnish you everything from lingerie to a frothy evening dress. Their gay assortment of pins, bracelets and bright beads is sure to catch your eye. Mix and matchable sweaters, skirts and blouses, latest in millinery, and new pleated and lace dickies are among the up-to-the-minute style notes found at YOUNKERS.

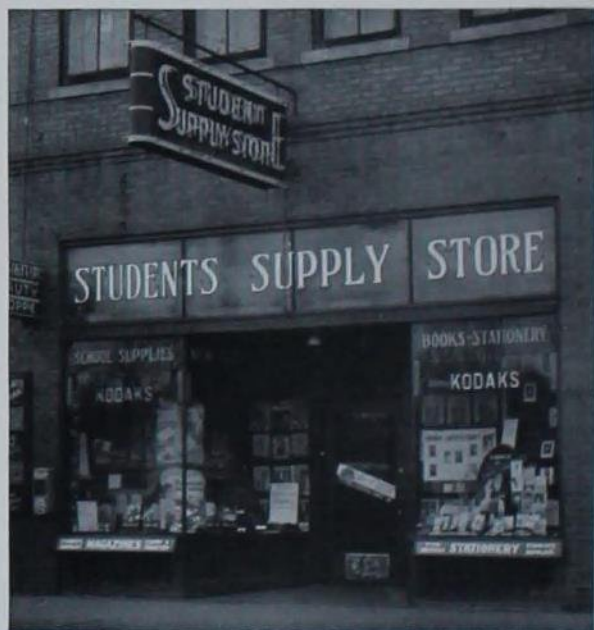

Stephenson's Dry Goods

Homecoming next week, and no skirt to wear with her new white sweater for the game. Mary Lou had about decided to wear her old blue sweater until she stopped in at STEPHENSON'S and found just the thing—pattern, material and all. So when the final gun went off and the crowd cheered for Iowa State, Mary Lou added a few extra cheers for STEPHENSON'S, under her breath. She would remember them for all her sewing supplies—from thread and buttons to collars and rickrack. You can always find the right color socks or gloves to go with your outfit at STEPHENSON'S, too.

Student Supply Store

Twenty-nine years of service to Iowa State students is the record that the STUDENT SUPPLY STORE claims. Whether it's a text book during that first mad rush of every quarter, or an Iowa State pennant to brighten your room, the STUDENT SUPPLY STORE can fill your need. Included in their carefully chosen stock are text books, laundry cases, study lamps, chemistry aprons, desk calendars, candy bars, stationery, shoe cream, kodak film, greeting cards, notebooks, magazines and cigarettes. The solution to your leaky pen situation can be found in a new Sheaffer or Esterbrook Fountain Pen from their large selections. Along with this quality merchandise comes the courteous service that makes the STUDENT SUPPLY STORE headquarters for student needs.

Myers Collegetown Studio

Flash, Click! Another shot for the 1943 Bomb is taken. MYERS STUDIO, selected by the staff of the yearbook to be the official Bomb photographer, scheduled all group pictures, took the photographs, did the developing and printing and kept the identification slips. Besides this, MYERS STUDIO took over 1,000 senior pictures, many of the views, and the informal photographs of the 1943 Bomb Beauties. Specializing in portrait pictures, MYERS STUDIO can take that good picture you have been wanting to send to John, or the attractive picture for your job application form. A large selection of frames and folders will enable you to make your picture complete before leaving the studio. Colored pictures, glossy, portrait or gold-tone finishes and other special treatments are part of the service at MYERS COLLEGETOWN STUDIO.

Iowa Engineer

Named as the best all-around student engineering magazine in the United States, the IOWA ENGINEER received the Tech Engineering News cup awarded by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The monthly publication also received several first place awards in the Engineering College Magazines Association for excellence in feature writing and editorials. Boasting a circulation of 1,700, the IOWA ENGINEER reaches every student enrolled in the Division of Engineering. Keeping up with developments in its rapidly expanding division, the magazine included stories on the work of men in the Naval Training School and the Curtiss-Wright Cadettes this year.

Green Gander

Topping its previous sales records, GREEN GANDER, college humor magazine, distributed 3,000 copies three times during the year. Credit for the new high sales went to the organized houses who competed for trophies, presented to the group selling the most GANDERS on the campus.

Appearing three times a year, the magazine deviated from its winter quarter edition into a take-off on a pulp detective magazine. A purple cover and campus impersonations of chorus girls and convicts completed the "Bawdy Detective" issue.

Tilden Store Company

Your feet still trudge mile after mile across the campus. But this year they must go the whole way with only three pairs of shoes. Emphasis is on quality for 1943 footwear. You'll find long wearability coupled with smart collegiate fashions in TILDEN'S shoe department. Besides the latest in footwear, TILDEN'S can supply your entire wardrobe with those new touches for spring and summer. Bright spring prints, cool summer suits, soft washable playclothes are all part of their stocks. The complete drapery department offers you the right print to give your windows a first-of-the-quarter lift. From flattering evening wear to casual classroom togs, TILDEN'S has been outfitting Iowa State since 1864.

Iowa State Daily Student

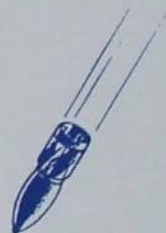

A last consultation in the back shop and another IOWA STATE DAILY STUDENT goes to press. Offering special rates to service men and reaching every student, its circulation of 6,000 offers complete coverage of the most active market in Ames. Its readers look to it for the latest campus news and for its advertising columns in allocating their increased spending power. As an added convenience for subscribers, a summarized news of the week column appears each Saturday. As a special feature, the STUDENT published a 28-page issue heralding Dr. Earl D. Ross' "History of Iowa State." The IOWA STATE DAILY STUDENT is the only publication that offers complete coverage of campus activities.

Class of 1943

Gathered in front of the Memorial Union, these members of the class of 1943 pause a moment, during their last quarter at Iowa State, to chat about the four years behind. Theirs was the class that felt the effect of the new full year program when their graduating class was split into many sections. Theirs was the class that found its women graduating into army hospital jobs, or into actual service duty. Theirs was the class that saw most of its men either in active duty or fighting the war on the materials front. And because they have been split into many parts, they have a feeling of unity stronger, perhaps, than any previous class. Their feeling is optimistic—"We're here in 1943, we'll be back for reunion in '53."

ADVERTISERS' INDEX

Edwards Coal Company

Continuing through the emergency, EDWARDS COAL COMPANY will supply the families of Ames as it has been doing for the past 32 years. Since 1910, they have given dependable service through all kinds of weather and transportation circumstances. This year, more than ever, when you purchase the coal supply to keep your house heated to patriotic 65°, you will want quality merchandise. Don't forget, too, during the hot months of summer, to assure your comfort by arranging for your ice supply with EDWARDS COAL COMPANY. Always rely on their dependable service which will continue as always during the emergency.

Iowa Agriculturist

Cooperating with radio station WOI and the college, the IOWA AGRICULTURIST helped take the annual Farm and Home Week to the farmers this year. A special issue containing digests of speeches and information provided by the Agricultural Extension Service was published immediately following the Farm and Home Week. The change was made this year when transportation difficulties prevented farmers from attending. In spite of the decreased enrollment figures of the Division of Agriculture, the IOWA AGRICULTURIST continued publication through the school year under the leadership of Ben Brown, Editor, and Merle Hunt, business manager.
