HOMeward BOUND

*Swiftly sped the good ship westward,
Plowing proudly thru the ocean,
Bearing precious freight upon her,
Warriors homeward bound from battle.*

*There was one stood by the deck rail,
Who with gladness watched the gleaming
Of the sunbeams on the silver
As the waves broke by the ship side.
Bright hope sparkled in his black eyes,
Beat his heart with joy the faster,
For beyond the skies to westward,
Far away in dreams his thots were.
Dreams they were that stirred his soul-depths,
Dreams of scenes deep burned in memory—
Made him long for them once more.*

Twilight falling o'er the campus,
Long drawn shadows on the grass;
Sudden boomed amid the stillness
Evening vespers of the chimes.
In his fancy he could hear them,
Merry peals of far flung tunes,
Songs to which he oft had listened.
Now they blotted from his memory
Sound of yell and shriek of battle,
Sights he saw in Argonne hell.

Then it seemed as if 'twere noontide,
He could see across the campus,
Building white with open doorway,
Inside and dim were shadowed corridors,
Office doors; and there a welcome,
Grip of hand, glad words outspoken,
Greeting from his old instructors,
Proud to have him back again.

These were men he knew and trusted,
And they knew and trusted him.

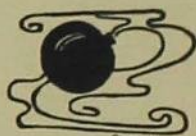

When shadows 'gin creep eastward,
Softer fall the golden sunbeams,
Then it is that spruce and pine tree
Seem like mystic fairy maids;
And the towers behind them hidden,
Fairy castles touched with magic.
There's a certain spot to see this,
Once you see — you ne'er forget.

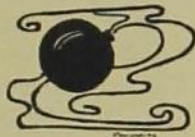

Halfway hidden in the distance,
Yet in sight between the trees,
One can see a stately building,
Look you this way, look you ponder,
There's a vista always seen
Just beyond. Search the wide world,
Can you find another campus
With more vistas to be found?
Can you find a spot more lovely
For a homesick lad to dream of?

In the morning, Oh so early,
If you hasten you may see
Hasten and you get a picture
Of a palace at the road-bend.
There are pillars 'fore the doorway,
Broad and graceful sweep of roadway,
Leads up to the palace door.
Here is where birds sing their sweetest,
As one hastens to the classroom.

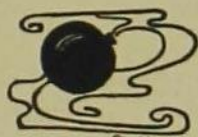

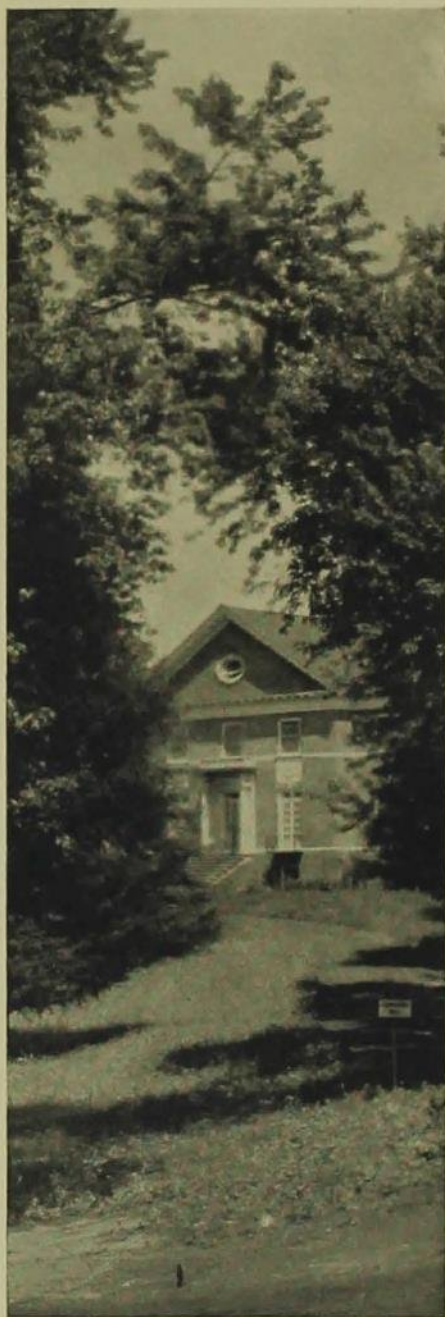

Drowsy hum of hidden insects,
Moonbeams filtering thru boughs,
Voices soft, slow wending lovers,
Secrets whispered, troths are pledged,
Hearts beat faster, cheeks are rosy —
Tho their blush is hidden quite.
(Springtime is the time for loving.)
There's no need to keep it from you.
Now our hero dreams of Lover's Lane.

Here's a magic mirror for you,
"Makio"—a name from Nippon.
Look within the silver waters,
Watch the shadows and the ripples.
Back to you will be reflected Visions strange of days gone by,
Visions too of days to come.
Would you know a mystic story,
Wish to see your own soul self?
Then the silver mirror waters
Of Lake La Verne will tell you.

Another vista 'neath the shadows,
At the end a deep-set doorway
Here she dwelt, the one who loved him,
Here his thots came flying back,
Strangely still and solemn now
Was the vision of this doorway.
Was she faithful still or faithless?
Did she love him as before?

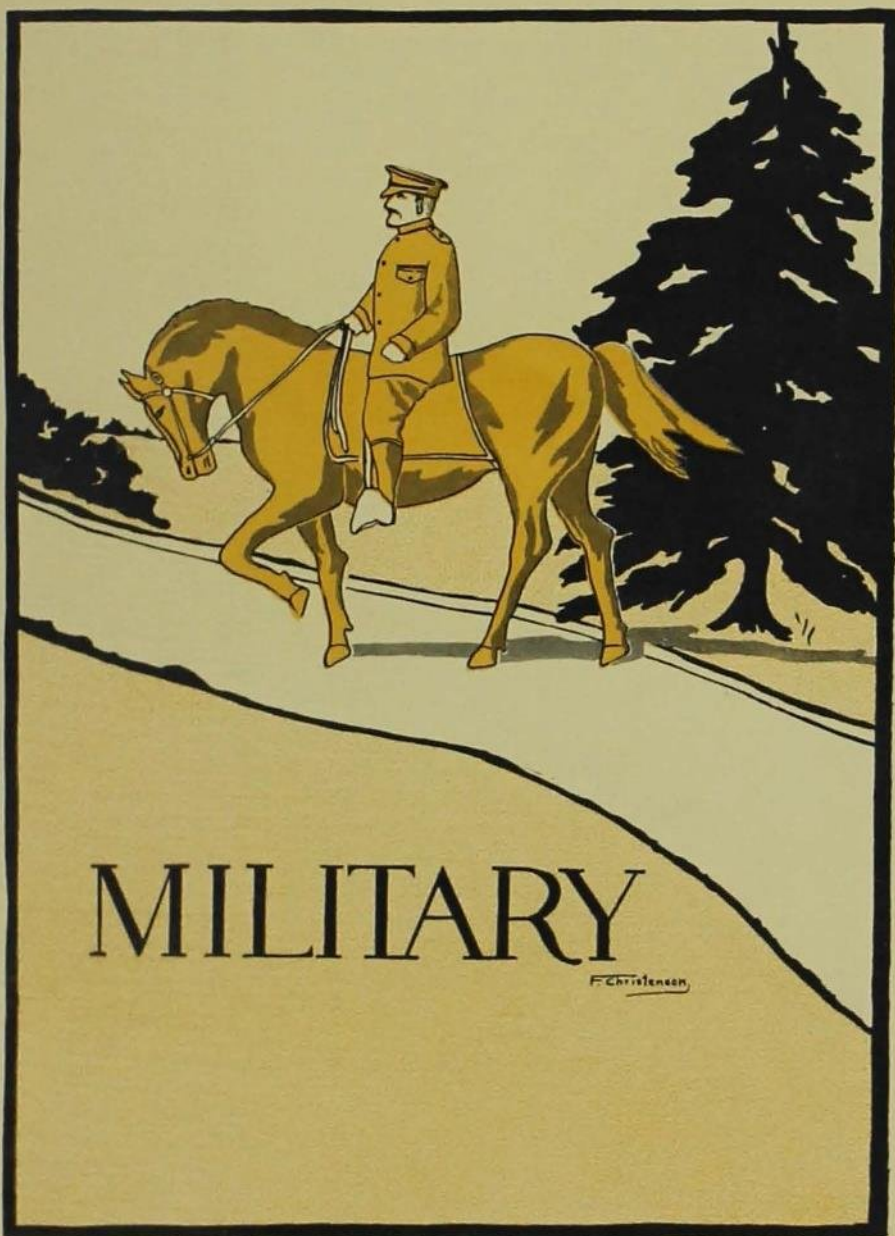

Shadows deepened, darkness followed,
Lights and stars a-twinkle both;
Deep beneath the trees half hidden,
He could see the rustic footbridge.
Here was trysting place for lovers,
Here one strolled when violets bloomed,
Soft the rippling waters whispered,
Music for two hearts a-tune.
With the lights thru maples eastward,
He forgot the glare of shell flash,
And signal rocket's baleful gleam.

There's a spot beyond the campus,
Where a magic gateway stands,
Stands and all who may, can enter—
Open Sesame to North Woods,
Door to fairyland of pleasure.
And our hero dreams of picnics,
Dreams of campfires and of violets,
Or of Autumn leaves that swirl.
Now you know why he is smiling,
Standing there beside the deck rail,
As he dreams of Alma Mater,
Dreams that soon will be fulfilled.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Military at Iowa State College this year has held as important a place as ever. S. A. T. C., lasting through the fall months, gave military training to 2300 men. During the second quarter, although the upperclassmen were excused from military, the freshmen were given the usual courses. The third quarter, the R. O. T. C. was organized. An infantry and an engineers unit were formed, with 600 men enrolled. When the school reaches normal again, General Lincoln expects to make the military a bigger part of the college life.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

President Pearson offered his services to the government as soon as war was declared, and within a few days the Secretary of Agriculture called him to Washington. A little later he was appointed by the President as Assistant Secretary of Agriculture. One of his duties was to serve as Chairman of the Food Production Committee, which developed plans for increasing food production in this country, to meet our own needs and help meet the needs of the Allies.

He visited the countries of the Allies during the last months of the war as a member of a special commission to look into food production.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Doctor Edgar W. Stanton, Dean of the Junior College, has had his main life interests centered in the welfare of Iowa State College for the past forty-seven years.

For the past two months, Dean Stanton has been in Live Oak, California, where he has been working in the fields of his son's ranch. There is nothing that Doctor Stanton enjoys more than not only watching things grow, but also taking an active part in making them grow.

Dean Charles F. Curtiss is head of the Agricultural Department of Iowa State College.

Dean Curtiss lives, it has been said, to see Iowa "the large and happy corn field", speckled with flourishing farms which are inhabited by Berkshire hogs and Shorthorn cattle.

Mr. Curtiss has been called the "busiest live stock expert in the world".

The service which Dean Curtiss has rendered to Iowa State College is hard to estimate for he has, by his work on the Campus and his outside associations, made Iowa State College renowned for both her theoretical and practical agriculture.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Prof. Herbert Kildee is the head of Animal Husbandry, which is the largest Department of the Agricultural Division.

Prof. W. H. Stevenson is head of the Farm Crops and Soils Department. The field of the graduates of this department is wide, as it trains them for farming, extension work, county agents, instructors, seed house work, and as agricultural journalists.

Prof. M. Mortensen is head of the Dairy Department, which gives the students not only theory, but practical work in creamery work and ice cream and cheese making, which are conducted on a commercial basis. The high state of excellency to which Professor Mortensen has brought this department, has made it well known, and has drawn students from all parts of the world.

Prof. G. B. MacDonald is head of the Forestry Department. In the late war, fifty per cent of the boys of this department have been in France, where they have been able to use their forestry training to a wide extent in such work as locating desirable tracts of timber for cutting, map making and topographical work.

Prof. S. A. Beach is head of the Horticultural Department. The enrollment in this department is increasing, thanks to Professor Beach's persistent efforts, for the horticultural industries have, under his direction, proven the value of scientific fruit growing, floriculture, truck gardening, and landscape architecture.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Anson Marston, Dean of the Engineering Division and Professor of Civil Engineering, has just returned to Iowa State College. Since July, 1917, Dean Marston has been engaged in war work. The following is a chronological account of his war activities: Went into military training January 1, 1917, under General Lincoln at I. S. C.; commissioned Major in Iowa National Guard, commanding 1st Battalion Iowa Engineers (separate), July 25, 1917, at Camp Dodge, Iowa; Major, commanding 1st Battalion 109th Engineers, Camp Cody, N. M., October 1, 1917, to September 1, 1918; was thirty days at the School of Fire, Camp Perry, Ohio, June, 1918; spent about two weeks at Camp Dix, N. J., September, 1918; promoted to Lieutenant Colonel Engineers, September 6, 1918; served ten days at Camp A. A. Humphreys, Virginia, assigned to 324th Engineers; commanded 97th Engineers at Camp Beach, D. C., September 14, 1918, to demobilization and discharge, December 14, 1918; served about two weeks in November and December, 1918, in the office of Chief of Engineers at Washington, D. C., assisting in outlining three year course for West Point graduates in Corps of Engineers.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Prof. S. W. Beyer is Vice-Dean of the Engineering Department, and professor of the Mining Engineering Department. Professor Beyer very creditably filled the office of Dean of Engineering during the absence of Dean Anson Marston.

Prof. F. A. Fish is head of the Electrical Engineering Department. The department has grown and become the largest division in point of enrollment on the west side of the Campus under his direction. He has turned out many engineers who are high up in the electrical world and who are reflecting credit upon their Alma Mater.

Prof. W. H. Meeker is head of the Mechanical Engineering Department, which has to do with the design and operation of machinery in general, but more especially labor-saving devices which are developing the industries not only in Iowa, but over the whole United States.

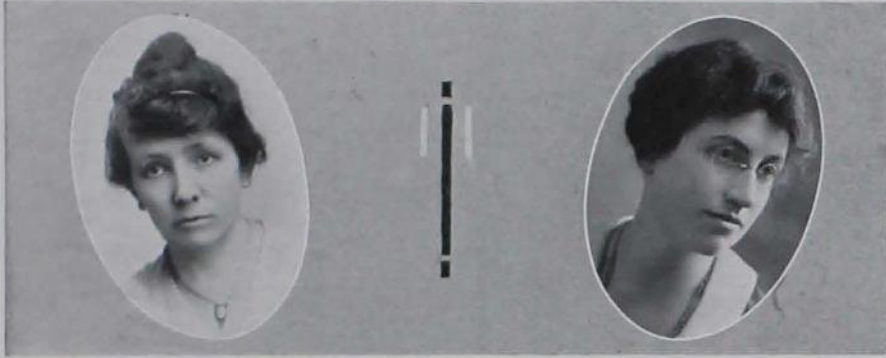

Catherine J. MacKay is Dean of the Home Economics Division; also Head of the Household Science Department. Dean MacKay is also President of the American Home Economics Association, and is Home Economics Demonstrator for Iowa.

The Household Science Department offers not only the fundamental principles of cooking of foods, food preservatives, marketing, planning, preparation, and serving of meals, but also trains one to arrange the diet for infants, children, adults, and invalids.

Splendid courses in home nursing, household management, and experimental cookery, are also given.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Ethelwyn Miller is head of the Household Arts Department, which offers training not only in design and construction of clothes—with special emphasis on economy, invention and speed—but also offers splendid courses in textile buying, house decoration, and applied design.

This year, Miss Miller has been responsible for the establishment of a new course, namely, Commercial Design.

Through the splendid efforts of Miss Miller, the Household Arts Department is being developed, and is now becoming almost as prominent at Iowa State College as is the Household Science Department.

Ruth McNary Smith is head of the Household Management Department, which deals with all the factors entering into the managing of a household, and relates them to the community life. Special emphasis is placed on individual and community health. The Practice Cottage provides a laboratory to demonstrate the principles underlying household management. The effectiveness of the Practice Cottage is due to Miss Smith.

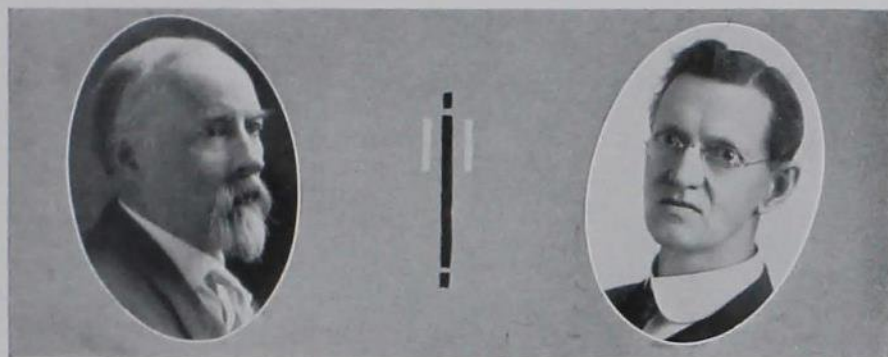

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Robert E. Buchanan is the Dean of the Industrial Science Division, comprising the following departments:

Bacteriology and Hygiene, Botany, Chemistry, Economics, English, History and Psychology, Library, Mathematics, Military Science and Tactics, Modern Language, Music, Physical Training, Public Speaking, and Zoology.

Dean Buchanan has done much in developing an interest in Graduate Work in Bacteriology, Botany, Chemistry, Mathematics and Zoology. Many of the Industrial Science faculty have been actively engaged in war work.

BOTANY

Prof. L. H. Pammel is head of the Botany Department. Through his work on the campus and his outside activities he has made the Botany Department of Iowa State College especially noted for its Graduate Work.

ZOOLOGY

Prof. J. E. Guthrie is head of the Zoology Department.

A general knowledge of zoology stands for a broad and true basis in general education, for every educated person today must understand the human body and its care.

The Zoology Department of the Iowa State College not only offers the students this general knowledge, but also offers splendid graduate work.

CHEMISTRY

Prof. W. F. Coover is head of the Chemistry Department.

The purpose of the work of the department is twofold: 1. To teach scientific methods of experimentation and to give the student that understanding of the subject which his chosen course requires.

Its graduate work-students are prepared to enter fields of work which bear a direct relationship to Engineering, Home Economics, and Veterinary Medicine.

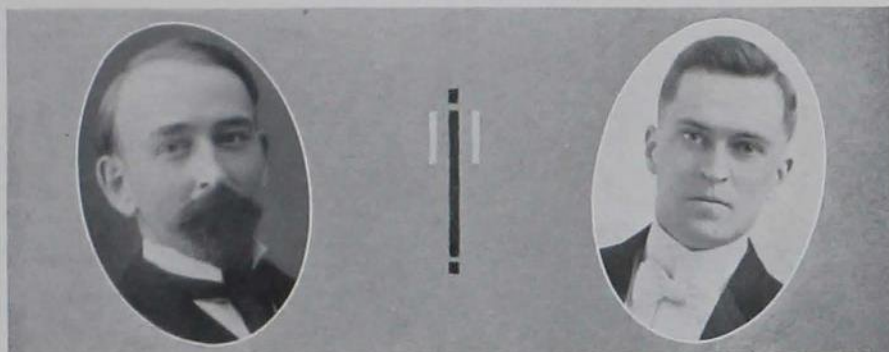

VETERINARY

C. H. Stange is Dean of the Veterinary Department, which is the oldest and highest class State Veterinary school in America.

Dean Stange has done much for this division not only thru his work as Dean, and as Head of the department of Theory and Practice of Medicine, but also as director of State Biological Laboratory and the department of Veterinary Research.

Dean Stange is also prominent in national veterinary matters. He is a member of the United States Live Stock Sanitary Board, of the Executive Committee of the American Veterinary Medical Association and a member of their Enlisting Committee.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Dr. H. S. Murphey is creditably filling the office of Dr. H. E. Bemis, as head of the Veterinary Surgery Department.

Dr. Bemis entered the army as Major in the Veterinary Corps, October, 1917. At first in charge of the Veterinary Corps at Camp Funston, later in charge of the Hospital Units Training School at Camp Lee, then in charge of Hospital No. 3 in France, then as Assistant Chief Veterinarian, A. E. F., and with his chief straightened out a chaotic, unorganized corps into a working organization, able to take care of the sick and diseased animals with the advancing army from the beginning of the St. Mihiel drive until the signing of the armistice. He is now Chief Veterinarian of the Third Army of Occupation at Coblenz.

Prof. J. D. Grossman is now the acting head of the Anatomy and Histology Department. He is taking the place of Dr. H. S. Murphey, who is now the acting head of the Veterinary Surgery Department.

Veterinary Anatomy deals with the normal structure of domesticated animals, which is a necessary step to the study of the normal functions of the various organs.

“Fight, Ames, Fight!”

By HAROLD WILLIARD GLEASON

(Cry of Iowa State College, carried over the top by forty men of the 168th Infantry, Rainbow Division.)

Forth down three, and the tension grows—
Stands are hushed—then the eager crowd
In the stadium, rows on rows,
Voice their war cry in cadence loud.
Crouching linemen react like springs;
Backs drive forward, the ball clutched tight,
Nerved anew as the chorus rings
Over the chalk lines—“Fight! Ames, FIGHT!”

Fog and mud and a cheerless dawn;
Whispers pass through the sullen rain—
“Two minutes more, boys! Pass it out!”
Then—a whistle thrills—ends the strain:
Rattle of stones from the parapet
As soldiers scrambled to left and right,
Mounting; eyes flashing brighter yet
At the heart stirring slogan, “Fight! Ames, FIGHT!”

Thus they answered when honor called,
Giving all to their country's needs;
Leaving their college, stately walled—
Blazing her name with splendid deeds.
Heroes, late of the football field,
Doing battle for God and right,
Shoulder to shoulder, never to yield,
With their glorious war cry, “Fight! Ames, FIGHT!”

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

CAPT. MORRIS R. HARRISON

SGT. ARTHUR J. GUDE

"Mose" was decorated with the Croix de Guerre by the French government on May 7, 1918. As First Lieutenant he fought through the Chateau-Thierry battle and in the St. Mihiel drive until he was wounded by a machine gun, September 15, 1918. On September 17, he was made Captain. Captain Harrison is now stationed with his regiment at Bendorf, Germany, on the Rhine.

For bravery in action, Sergeant Gude was awarded the Croix de Guerre with a silver star. His citation reads: "Sgt. Gude, 350th Inf. During the night of Oct. 12, when the enemy attempted a raid on our line, he gave proof of the greatest activity and absolute scorn of danger. He organized the defense under an extremely violent bombardment."

CAPT. HOWARD MOLESBERRY

JAMES FITZGERALD

For distinguished gallantry at the battle of the Marne, Captain Molesberry was awarded the distinguished war cross by the French government. In this battle he took command of a large force, whose officers had been killed, and directed the action successfully. He also received a war cross from the United States government.

The honor of driving the first American ambulance to the Italian front and of bringing back the first wounded man for the American Expeditionary Forces, belongs to James Fitzgerald. The Italian government later gave him their cross of honor for service at Mt. Grappa.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

MAJOR GUY S. BREWER

LIEUT. ROBT. BARNES

Major Brewer was decorated by the French government for extraordinary service. With his Rainbow Division, the Major fought throughout the first attack on Sergy and passed unhurt through ten days more of terrible machine gun fire. Later, he was wounded in the successful drive against the St. Mihiel salient.

During the fighting at Argonne forest, Lieutenant Barnes was severely wounded in the head. He was sent home from France with other convalescent soldiers. On the trip across he leaped over the side of the ship into the water thirty feet below to rescue another soldier who had jumped overboard while temporarily deranged. For this act Lieutenant Barnes was awarded the distinguished Service Cross.

MAJ. L. L. JANDA

LIEUT. H. M. NOEL

For bravery in leading his company against a German machine gun nest at Chateau-Thierry, August 10, Lieutenant Janda was promoted to the captaincy and awarded the Croix de Guerre. He was later promoted to Major.

For service and bravery during the battle of Belleau Wood, July 20, Lieutenant Noel received the distinguished service cross. His citation follows: "Lieut. Noel—for heroism in action east of Belleau Wood—discovering a German machine gun nest, Lieut. Noel led twelve men to it, charging up a steep hill under fire from other guns. He and his men wiped out this center of resistance and made possible the advance of his company."

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

LIEUT. H. C. EALES

For bravery in battle at Neuf Chateau, where the American bombing squadron played an important role, Lieutenant Eales was awarded the coveted French cross—the Croix de Guerre.

BEN GOODALE

The citation for the presentation of the war cross to Goodale: "To Ben Goodale, driver of SSU, No. 645—a driver of exceptional courage and devotion to duty." He distinguished himself at Fontaine, St. Remy, by rescuing wounded under heavy bombardment. He was injured by the explosion of a shell.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES MERRICK

While flying with the French, Lieutenant Merrick brought down his first Boche plane. As a reward he was granted the French Croix de Guerre. His "first" was not his "last", for he brought down two more German planes soon after.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

MITCHELL NORTHRUP

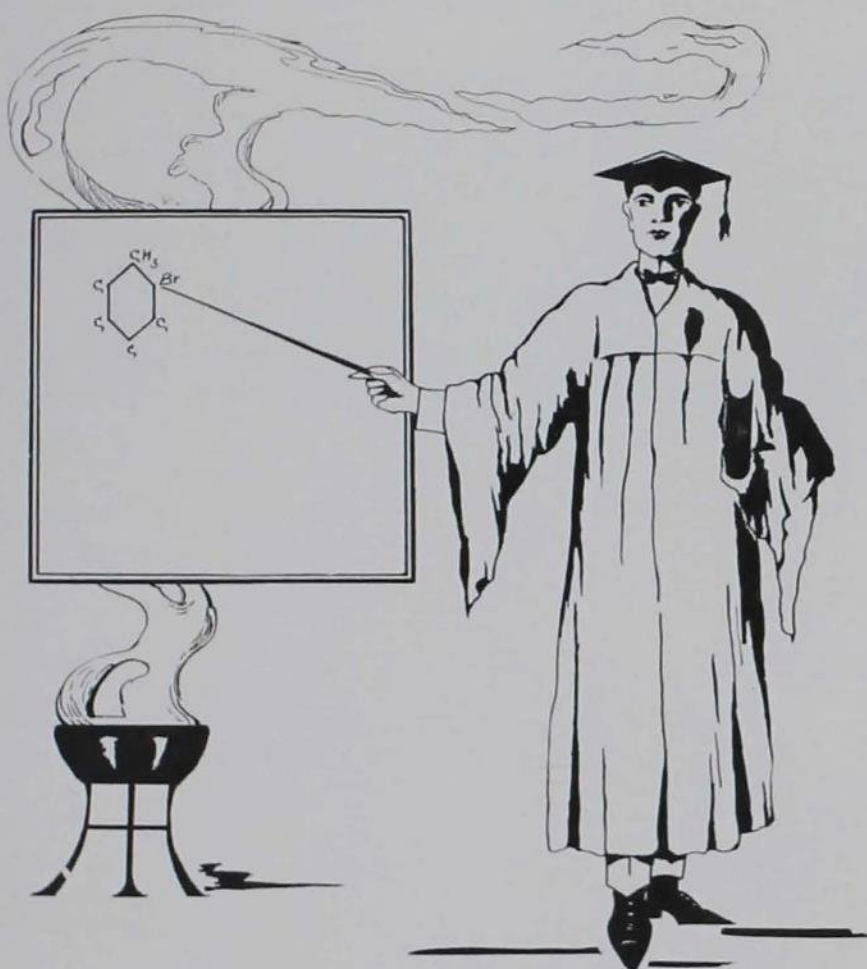

LIEUT. E. R. SCROGGIE

Northrup entered the service as a volunteer ambulance driver for the Red Cross in the summer of 1917. Later he went into the service of the United States Army in the same capacity. He was decorated with the Croix de Guerre for bravery on the French battle front.

Lieutenant E. R. Scroggie, of the "Uncle Sam's Hat in the Ring" squadron, is home again; but he hasn't forgotten the days he spent in the Hun prison camp at Karlsruhe.

Tau Beta Pi

Founded at Lehigh University in 1885

ALPHA OF IOWA

Installed in December, 1907

Publication—The Bent

Colors—Seal Brown and White

The object of Tau Beta Pi is to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering schools of America and to promote high standards in the engineering profession. Undergraduate members are elected from those of the upper one-fourth of the class whose qualifications mark them as future leaders of the profession; honorary members, from those who have honored their Alma Mater and the engineering profession after graduation.

Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society

IOWA CHAPTER

Organized in 1911

The Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society is an organization of graduates and undergraduate members of the Senior class, of all departments of American colleges and universities. Its prime object is to emphasize scholarship in the thought of college students, to hold fast to the original purpose for which institutions of learning were founded, and to stimulate mental achievement by the prize of membership.

The Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society does not confine its membership to any particular kind of degree or course of study, but aims to stand for the unity and democracy of learning. Membership in it is open to members of other honor societies.

Organized in 1897, Phi Kappa Phi now has chapters in fourteen colleges and universities.

Coach Mayser

Coach Charles Mayser came to Iowa State in the fall of 1915 and since then has won a place among the notables of the College and in the hearts of the students.

Coach Mayser spent two years at Yale, taking special medical work, fitting himself to be an M. D. His love for athletics, however, caused him to decide to make them his life work, and he has been following this work for nearly twenty years.

His skill in wrestling caused him to forsake the amateur field to try conclusions with professionals, where he acquitted himself with credit. He has coached all branches of athletics and enjoys them all, but he excels in football. His teams are feared by all who oppose them. He has developed wonderful teams in all branches of athletics in the east, and with a free rein at Ames great things are expected of him after another year.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

The dead line for copy finds us without an Athletic Director. We hope to hear in the near future, however, that one in our midst has received the appointment. Since the resignation of Clyde Williams, we have been waiting with as much patience as possible for action to be taken. The initiative shown by the student body in this matter indicates Coach Mayser's ability to make friends. During his four years at Iowa State College, he has won the support of the entire student body, and has made a host of friends throughout the Middle West.

His friends feel that his snap and aggressiveness, his keen insight into human nature, his ideals, administrative ability, and his ever-ready smile, are features that would put Ames far up the scale in the athletic world.

Director Williams had been in the business for some time; athletic problems are coming up to be solved; the best man in the country is needed to take Clyde's place. Coach Mayser, we hope soon to shake your hand as Athletic Director.

Review of the Football Season

Football in general, and particularly at Ames, suffered a severe setback this fall. No institution suffered from lack of practice as did Ames. Only thru the spirit of the men and the coaches did Ames go thru with a part of the schedule, knowing full well they were leading a losing cause. From the standpoint of sportsmanship, such a cause is commendable; but results obtained under such deplorable and discouraging conditions must of necessity be rather disappointing. From this we may gather that Ames has shown a fine spirit of sportsmanship, but, unfortunately, such data is not included under the score heading. What the quarantine did not do to drive football out of existence at Ames, the S. A. T. C. did. Between them both, football was put on the rack. Beginning practice in November, a month after every other college in the land began, Coach Mayer started in on a course that even to the most optimistic did not appear over sanguine.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

After a few days of practice, the team played the strong Camp Dodge team in Des Moines. Despite the discouraging conditions, Ames made a good showing, the soldiers being put to it to win 6-0, after a strenuous battle. So many disappointments cropped up during the short season that we forgot to state that two days before the game four of the most promising players were taken off the team and sent to an Officers' Training Camp which, of course, did not add to the effectiveness of team play.

The next game played was to have been played on State Field. Just why it was not played here can hardly be explained by merely stating that the "flu" bugs were more virulent in Ames than in Iowa City; however, such appeared to be the case, as the game was transferred to that place. The S. A. T. C. elephant again stepped in and mused matters up. Two days before the Iowa game, three more players were asked to leave for an O. T. C., one of these being a quarterback. Coach Mayser, about this time, came to the conclusion that he was getting to be a good scout for Uncle Sam's training schools. While Iowa was predicting 40 and 50 points, Ames was hoping. To make a long story short, the first half ended 0 to 0. In the last two minutes of the third quarter, Iowa scored, and finally made it 21-0, against the half-conditioned and tired Ames players. The Iowa adherent themselves admitted that had Ames been in shape for a hard and long battle, the results might have been different. At any rate, Ames may well feel proud of this achievement.

One more game remained, that being with Kansas State College, which was played in Manhattan. To add to the players' and coach's difficulties, an over-zealous guard pointed his gun at the team, just as they were coming upon the field for practice. He said, "My orders are to let no man upon this field". By the time he found out that football players were not included in the order, the moon was slowly painting her beaming face over the top of the high bleachers, and another day of valuable practice was lost.

The next day sixty auto trucks were playing leap-frog or blind man's buff upon our beautiful State field. A ten-ton truck on a grass sod leaves an impression, both on the sod and on the mind, long to be remembered. Finally, the team found a place which was a cross between a shell-torn battle field and a forest; however, the casualty list that day was even less than when the team played on a decent field. This, no doubt, being due to the fact that the practice period was entirely devoted to reconstruction work, so that by the time the practice was over the field almost looked like a football field. Well, at any rate, the team took an outing, visiting Des Moines, Kansas City, and other interesting points. After a rough voyage on the Rock Island, the team finally arrived at Manhattan. Kansas won, 11-0. While Kansas did not score a touchdown, they had a wonderful drop kicker, who was successful in his three attempts.

Thus the season ended, only three games being played. Drake was to have played, but even the elements joined in the fun, and the snow storm prevented the teams from meeting. Shakespeare had nothing on the "Comedy of Errors", as played here in Ames this fall.

AMES-IOWA GAME

IOWA STATE COLLEGE

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

CAPTAIN "CHICK" HEATER

Weight 140 Position—Half-back

He did not equal his brilliant playing of the year before, due no doubt to the fact that he had little opportunity to get into condition. However, he carried the ball well and played good defensively.

V. B. VANDERLOO

Weight 150 Position—Full-back

His punting was his strength. Always consistent and displaying cool judgment in placing his kicks, were characteristics of his punting. He should be even better next year.

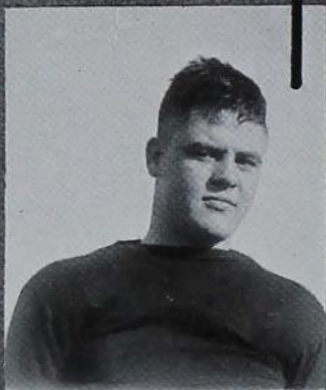

A. W. HINDERMAN

Weight 155 Position—Half-back

With more experience, he will develop into a great half-back. His playing this year was high class.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

J. P. FLINN

Weight 150 Position—Half-back

Of the Freshmen back-field men, he stands out prominently. His fearless plunging and speedy shifting will make him a great player.

L. M. HADLEY

Weight 147 Position—Center

Weighing less than 150 pounds, he made every pound count. His passing was good and on the defense he played an aggressive game.

"LAFE" YOUNG

Weight 185 Position—Tackle

Played tackle his first year on Ames team. He is a powerful player and displayed rare judgment in diagnosing plays. He will be a great power for Ames next fall.

Weight 165 Position—Left end

He displayed fearless qualities and broke up many plays before they were under headway, the position being an entirely new one to him. Undoubtedly he will prove a most valuable man again next year.

L. W. SCHALK

Weight 175 Position—Tackle

A fast, brilliant tackle. His ability to get down under punts and his speed in breaking through a line were his main assets.

C. F. BREEDEN

Weight 185 Position—Guard

A power at guard and fearless in execution of the demands of that position. His ability to break through the opponents' line made him respected by those who opposed him.

H. L. SHEPARD

Weight 135 Position—Quarter-back

While he did not play this fall, he had the earmarks of developing into a heady man. On guard he will, in another year, gain weight and then he will make other aspirants for the line hustle to keep him off the team.

R. H. HEDGE

Weight 137 Position—End

His weight was against him, but as he still has another year, he will fill out and develop into a fine player.

D. K. HIBBS

Weight 127 Position—Quarter-back

The diminutive quarter was good at catch punts and returning them. Weighing less than 130 pounds, he skirted the ends and ran off-tackle plays that would have done credit to a much heavier player.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

M. W. McGUIRE

Weight 165 Position—Right-end

He played a good game, and with more experience should develop into as good an end as Ames has had in a long time.

L. M. MARSHALL

Weight 190 Position—Guard

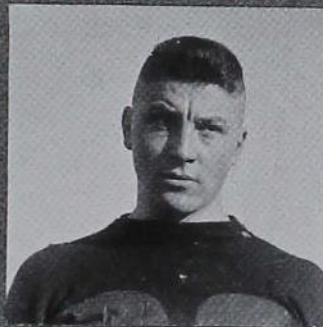

Though injured early in the year, he stuck it out and toward the end of the season began to show his true worth.

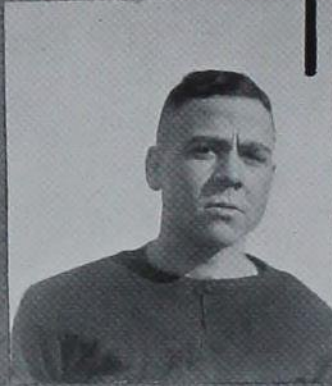

COKE

Weight 175 Position—Guard

Though inexperienced, he should become a good player. A consistent learner, he never needed to be told a thing twice.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

C. A. McTAGGART

Weight 140 Position—End

A trifle light, but fast and aggressive. He will, in another year, be a valuable man if he grows heavier.

HENRY RAMSEY

Weight 160 Position—Guard

Though inexperienced, he played a good game, and in time should develop into a player of the first rank.

Basket Ball Review 1918-19

When Coach Walter called out the basket ball men in the early part of the year, he was greeted by the smallest and greenest squad that ever graced the floor of Iowa State College gymnasium. Not one man from last year's squad was in school, and never did the squad number more than an even dozen. It is safe to say that no school in the State was handicapped as were the Cyclones. Suffice to say, Coach Walter moulded out a quintet that made a rather formidable showing, and although Ames lost many games, the season was, nevertheless, a success.

Filling Captain-elect Linnan's place at guard was one of the big problems. Linnan was not discharged in time to come back to school. In "Stew" White, Coach Walter developed a fighting guard, who before many games had been played, had established such prestige that he was one of the most feared men in the State.

"Bobby" Robinson, a diminutive fighting machine, barely tilting the scales at 120 pounds, put every ounce of his weight into the game, and held down the other guard position the greater part of the season.

"Dutch" Levensen, of baseball fame, was at center, where he performed in the most creditable manner. His guarding was good; also he had a keen eye for the net.

Willimack, a member of last year's prep five, made good for the greater part of the year as forward. Toward the middle of the year, the big fellow began to slip a little, but before the season closed, was playing in his old form once more.

The Miller brothers, "Bob" and "Boob", were ineligible until the middle of the season. When pronounced eligible, they began to burn things up, and both of them fought themselves into the team, "Bob" at forward and "Boob" at guard.

Harry Shepard, at forward, was Iowa State's one big "ace" on the entire team. Shep ranked head and shoulders above any other forward in the State in dribbling, guarding, and basket/shooting. He was the unanimous choice for forward position on the mythical All-State five, and earned a berth on the Conference quintet.

On January 3, a game scheduled with Coe College was postponed on account of the quarantine. During quarantine, the team was sent to Simpson, where they defeated the veteran Simpson team in a hard-fought battle by the score of 23 to 15.

Following this game were the Missouri games, originally billed for Ames, but transferred, due to quarantine. The team was sent to Columbia, where, after a man-killing trip, they were crushed by the strong Tiger quintet, which had four old men in their number from last year's Conference champions. The first game went to the Tigers 32 to 16 and the second 35 to 22.

The University of Kansas team was met in a brace of games at Ames, and it was here that the Cyclones created what was thot to be the seventh wonder of the world. After going down in defeat by a 50 to 17 score the previous day, they came back with a rush and in one of the hottest games ever staged in the gym, whipped the "Jay-hawkers" 29 to 28.

The Camp Dodge divisional team, made up of the strongest basket ball men in the country, came to Ames on January 24, and in a well-played, hard-fought game, were turned back by the green Cyclones, 31 to 30. Ames led by a large margin until the last few minutes of play, when the Dodgers uncorked some baskets and came within a hair of winning the game. Shepard demonstrated in this game his ability to cage long shots, getting nine baskets.

Led by Coach Banks, Drake University made their debut here on January 28, and were defeated in a loosely-played game, 27 to 11. So close did the Cyclone guards work that the "Bulldogs" were able to get but two goals, the rest of their scores coming by the free throw route.

Coe College sprung a surprise on Coach Walter's crew when they took the locals into camp by a 31-20 score in one of the most interesting games of the year. Coach Carrithers' team ranked with the best in the State, and their victory was well earned.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

February 4, Washington University invaded the institution and managed to slip one over on the Cyclones in a poorly-played game, defeating the locals by a 25-19 score. Ames led in the first half 16 to 6, but lacked the punch to hold the advantage.

Once again did youth bow to old age when the veteran Kansas State five set the Cyclones back in a pair of games, 22 to 18 and 27 to 17. The Kansans had the greatest team ever, and won the Conference title with ease.

The climax of the Ames schedule was reached when they journeyed to Iowa City and were forced to submit to the powerful Hawkeye five, 27-17. Three days after this game, Drake was invaded where the locals were at a disadvantage on a small floor and lost 27 to 11.

The game with Grinnell resulted in a victory for Grinnell, 25-20.

A return game was played with Iowa, and they again won, 28-20.

Ames finally came out of their trance and ended the season with a bang, defeating Grinnell 25-22.

Freshman Basket Ball

It was with keen satisfaction that Coach Walters put his Freshmen basket ball proteges through their paces, since this year Iowa State had the best Freshman basket ball team that ever played in the local gymnasium.

For the first time in years, the Ames preps bucked up against yearling quintets from other schools. Twice they humbled the strong Freshman team of Drake University, by a big score. They trounced the Grinnell Freshmen with comparative ease.

A few words as to the personnel of the team: At the forward position, Hudson and Lane, two stars from Muscatine, formed the finest combination one could wish. Lane had a deadly eye for the basket, and is also a dribbler of the highest quality. When it comes to handling the ball, it is safe to say that no one has been seen in Iowa State gym who could handle the leather in a more clever manner. Working together, these two men make a very pretty combination, and will be a big factor in deciding just who will play on the Varsity next year.

Nevin Innes, a product of the local high school, proved to be a find at the center position. Coach Walters accomplished wonders with Innes. He came out the first of the year—a big, awkward player—and finished the season playing a polished game. He is said by many to be the best center since the days of Erskine. Innes has the size and natural ability, with a knack for learning the fine points of the game. Another year under Coach Walters will see him one of our foremost centers. Walters was greeted by a wealth of material for the guard positions. After some weeks of careful observation, he selected J. C. Brown, a big, fast fighter, from Fort Dodge, and Wolters, of Dubuque, as his first string guards. Both these men proved to be bears on the defense, and were excellent floor men. Walters has a wholesome respect for the work of these men, but claims to have other guards practically their equals.

Schoppe, of Jefferson, and P. W. Brown, of West Liberty, are two men who, altho small in stature, are big in amount of fight and gameness. Handicapped in size, they fought their way to the top in great style, making a big hit with the coach. He has much faith in their ability, and is looking to them to make a good impression before they graduate.

There were also a host out for forwards and center. Not any could come up to the standard of Hudson, Lane, and Innes; however, in Davidson—a big youth from Brooklyn, Iowa—Coach Walters found a man who gave Innes a battle the whole year. He was a good shot at the basket, displaying a nice brand of generalship, altho not nearly so strong in teamwork.

Adamson, a former all-around high school star from Correctionville, came in for a good share of comment. While not nearly as polished a player as either Lane or Hudson, he showed wonderful adaptability, and improved steadily. He was used to advantage at guard and center positions also.

Two likely-looking candidate for berths on the prep team were Barnes, of Brooklyn, and Heath, of Council Bluffs. Both these men are hard workers, and fighters to the last minute. Their improvement at the last of the season is indicative of the fact that they will be in the ring when it comes to handing out Varsity suits next winter.

With all these Freshmen back in school next year, in addition to the returning men, Iowa State should have one of the strongest quintets she has had in some time.

High School Tournament

RUNNERS-UP IN THE TOURNAMENT

Owing to the fact that the State High School Athletic Association decided not to hold the usual high school basket ball tournament for the season 1918-19, the several colleges of Iowa took it upon themselves to hold and finance the tournaments. Invitations were sent out from Iowa State College to the winners of the several tournaments, and also to the teams which had made good records during the year's basket ball season.

The tournament was held March 14 and 15, at Iowa State College gymnasium. The teams represented were: Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Cedar Falls, Fort Dodge, Boone, Fairfield, Ames, and Council Bluffs.

After preliminary games, on Saturday evening the finals were played, with Fort Dodge and Council Bluffs, the two strongest teams of the tournament, matched against each other. Fort Dodge won in a hard fought battle, 16 to 11. In the consolation game, Boone and Cedar Rapids were the contestants, Boone winning by a close score of 9 to 7.

Interfraternity Basket Ball

Hudson, Heath, Baker, Lane, Heft

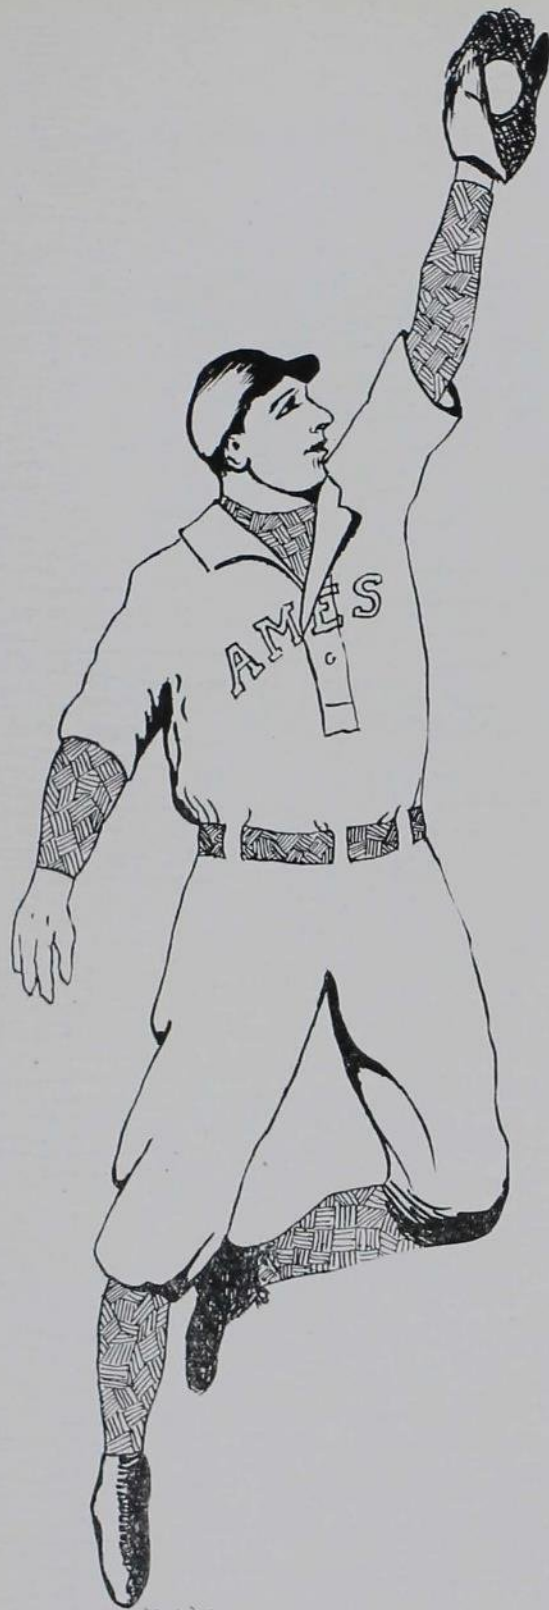

An interfraternity basket ball league was formed for the first time this year. The league was organized by the Athletic Department with the idea of fostering and maintaining interest in basket ball in order to get more men out for the sport and thus build up a Varsity nucleus.

All fraternities were asked to enter the contest. All the locals responded, but owing to lack of material in some of the houses, the Nationals decided not to enter the series. However, from the interest shown it is hoped that next year will see the league organized with all the fraternities on the Campus entered in the league. Thus, interfraternity basket ball will form a part of our regular college sports.

The scores of games were as follows: Lambda Sigma Phi, 33; Tau Gamma Nu, 3; Colonials, 8; Palisades, 6; Sigma Sigma, 13; Ausonia, 12; Lambda Tau Alpha, 55; Adelante, 2; Mohawk, 18; Hau Ki, 9; Sigma Sigma, 20; El Paso, 14; Lambda Sigma Phi, 12; Colonials, 4.

The semi-finals were played between the Lambda Sigma Phi, Sigma Sig, Mohawks, and Lambda Tau Alpha. The Lambda Taus and Lambda Sigs finally played for the championship, the former winning, 18 to 7. The final game was close throughout the first half, being tied at the end, 4 to 4. During the next half the winners did some tall basket shooting and soon had a safe lead, which the losers could not stop or overcome.

Review of the 1918 Baseball Season

GREENLEE
Captain-Elect

With the opening of spring and the baseball season, Coach Williams took stock of his available material with which to weld together a machine, only to find that the ranks had been depleted by the sterner game over in France. For it was just at this time that old Hindy and his Hun cohorts were striving to put one over on the Allies, before they could run in some of our punch hitters. This is in large measure responsible for but eight wins out of sixteen starts.

With such reliables as Dallas, Levens, Captain Brotherlin, Aldrich, Malcolm, and Shellito to show the way in fielding, and those two moundsmen—Plagge and Greenlee—to demonstrate pitching, these departments were of high calibre. It was the lack of punch with the old hickory bludgeon that threw a goodly number of the results into the lost column. Even with the distraction of war to divert the minds of the players (not to mention the fans and fanettes) from the old national pastime, Iowa State was well represented on the ball field as well as in the game of teaching the Heinies a bit of sportsmanship. Let our championships come after the war.

Review of the 1918 Track Season

The 1918 track season opened with but fair prospects for a first-class team. Coach Merriam worked up his team without any sprinters of first-class calibre. The team was reasonably strong in field events and exceptionally strong in the distance events.

The season opened March 3 at the Illinois Relay Carnival. The four-mile relay team, consisting of Hawthorne, Stone, Cromer, and Reed, placed second against the best schools in the Conference. Stone, running his first race in Varsity competition, ran the mile in 4.33 and was beaten out by Otis, of Chicago, by inches.

March 16, Ames entertained the athletes of Iowa, Drake, and Grinnell, in the first Big Four indoor meet in the history of state athletics. Ames won with 42 points; Grinnell, her nearest rival, having 25. Anderson, in the high jump, undoubtedly made the best performance of the day.

The annual Home Meet was staged April 6. Very little can be said of the meet. The time was fair, but nothing sensational took place. Though the Freshmen were poorly represented in point of numbers, White made a good showing in the dashes.

The Missouri Dual was staged at Columbia, April 13. Ames scored points in the mile, two-mile, half, and pole vault, but was defeated by a large score. The feature of the meet was the running of "Germany" Scholtz, who covered the century dash in 9.6 seconds, tying the world's record.

The Drake Relays, at Des Moines, were next. The four-mile team easily won the four-mile relay, nor were they crowded at any time.

The team was divided on April 27, when the four-mile team went to the Penn game, while the remainder made the trip to the Nebraska Dual at Lincoln. The four-mile team, consisting of Hawthorne, Stone, Cromer, and Reed, won the championship of America for the four-mile relay. The meet at Nebraska was slow, because of the muddy condition of the field. The score will show how badly the missing distance men were needed.

Iowa came May 4th with thirty men and worlds of confidence. The dope was upset in the javelin when Lodwick hurled it 150 feet for first place. Iowa won all the dashes, Ames all the distance events, the field events being about equally divided. The mile relay was won by Ames on fight—not ability. The two-mile, the last event, decided the outcome. Ames won all three places, thus winning the meet. Reed, of Ames, ran the most sensational and nervy race ever witnessed on State Field, and deserved the lion's share of the credit of victory.

On May 11, Drake's two-man track team came up. Lucius Erwin and Howard Drew represented the Des Moines school. Drew won the 100-yard dash, the 220, and the high and low hurdles. Erwin won the broad jump and tied for first in the pole vault.

Because of the fact that the Juniors and Seniors left school early, the home team was badly crippled for the State Meet, May 18. The remaining men, however, put up a good fight, and were barely nosed out for the state title of Iowa. Wagner won the shot, while Hawthorne, Stone, and Cromer put up their usual consistent performance.

The Missouri Valley Conference, at Columbia, was the last week of the season. Ames was represented by a small team of four men. Lodwick placed fourth in the 440; Stone, fourth in the 880; Wilkin tied for first in the pole vault, and Wagner placed second in the shot put.

Ames was represented June 10th at the Big Ten Conference by Stone, who won fourth in the mile.

"TUFFY" WILKIN, Capt., '18.

Cross Country

Coach Merriam, Stone (Capt.), H. Frevert, W. Frevert, Smith, Breitengross

The 1918 Cross Country Season

The Cross Country team did not meet with its usual phenomenal success this season, due mostly, to the lack of time to train. The team started its work at the beginning of school, as usual, but had been out only one week when, because of the "flu", orders were received from S. A. T. C. headquarters to stop all athletics. For this reason no running of any kind was attempted until about November first, when conditions were again deemed safe. The uncertainty of the situation had delayed the scheduling of any meets, so it seemed unlikely there would be any competition. The result was, that the usual number of aspirants for the team did not show up. There were just eleven men working for positions (including the now eligible Freshmen) when a triangular meet between Wisconsin and Minnesota was arranged for November 23. Just ten men started in the tryouts over a muddy road. The five men chosen to take the trip to Madison, Wisconsin, finished in the following order: Stone, Frevert, W., Frevert, H., Smith, and Breitengross. Noble, a Freshman, beat the last named to the tape, but was unable to make the trip. Of these men, Stone was the only one with any previous experience. Of the others, none had ever been in a cross country race before, and the two Frevert brothers had never had on a running shoe until the day after the tryouts; so Ames had but small show against the more seasoned teams of the other universities, who at least had been running long enough to be in fair condition.

Wisconsin won this meet with 24 points; Minnesota was second, with 35, and Ames brot up the rear with 64. Captain Elsom, of Wisconsin, was first, in 27 m. 13 s. Of the Ames men, Stone finished seventh in 28:10; Frevert, W., twelfth, in 28:50, followed by Smith, who came in thirteenth in 29:20; Frevert, H., was fifteenth, in 29:50, and Breitengross was seventeenth in 30:20. This race was over a five-mile course.

Wrestling 1918-19

Iowa State College had a most successful wrestling season, defeating Iowa University, Nebraska University, and Wisconsin University in turn, thus securing the championship of the middle west. Such an aggregation of mat artists are seldom gathered on one team. Captain L. W. Schalk stood without peer among the light-heavy-weights, winning every bout in which he participated. He graduates this year. C. F. Breeden lost only one bout during the year, and is now one of the best heavy-weight wrestlers in any college. He also graduates this year.

Birch won all of his matches in the 158 pound class, and is a comer. Next year, he will probably enter the light-heavyweight class, and should be able to repeat his success of this year.

H. B. Thompson won every one of his bouts, and was a most skillful performer in the 145 pound class. He graduates this year.

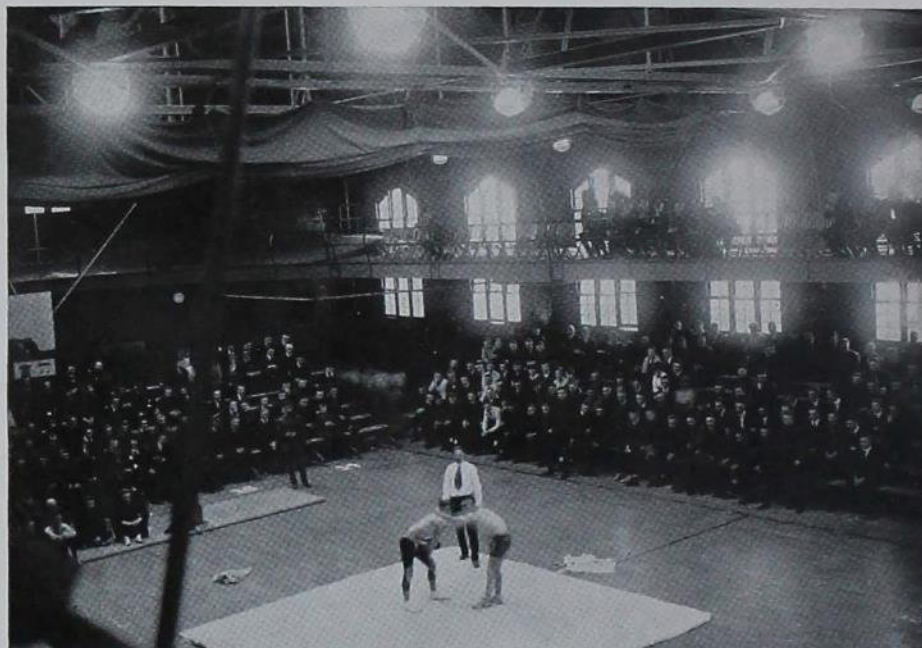

W. A. Lockling won all his matches, and is probably the most resourceful 135 pounder wrestling among the college men. He will be unbeatable again next year.

Jillson is a good 125 pounder, but he was unfortunate in being mated against men older and more experienced. He won his bout in the Wisconsin Meet, and should develop into a marvel next year.

Wright wrestled in the 120 pound class and defeated all who were pitted against him. He should develop into a performer of high class next year.

In the short time that wrestling has been recognized as a major sport at Ames, the Cardinal and Gold has achieved a reputation second to none, and today holds a prominent position among the colleges in this sport.

Wisconsin Meet

The meet with Wisconsin was held at Ames, March 16, 1919. From the beginning Wisconsin was clearly outclassed. Just previous to the meet, Schalk had broken his shoulder. Foell, a new man, without previous training, took his place, and lost the only bout lost by Ames. The final score was 42-7, in favor of Ames.

MINOR ATHLETICS

Swimming Team

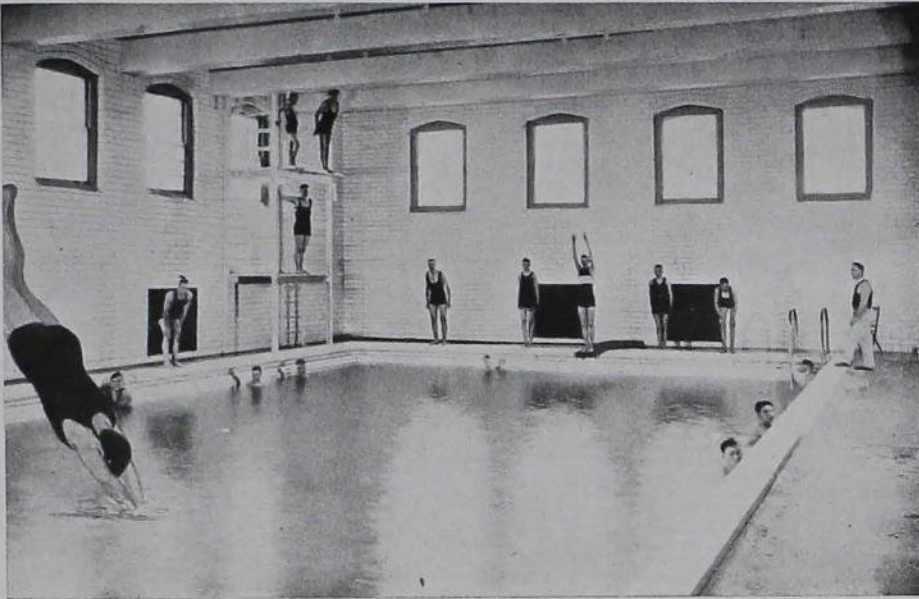

Breitengross, Burns, Eaton, Korn, Pendleton, Brown (Coach)

Swimming at I. S. C., just as at many other colleges, is considered one of the minor sports. A reason for this is that not all schools are fortunate enough to possess a swimming pool and consequently little competition is available.

Ames has for the past few years, taken an active interest in aquatic exhibition and competition, and this year has been no exception. The swimming team worked hard with the intention of sending at least two men to the inter-collegiate meet held at Chicago: Howard Park, who proved himself to be a fast man at Iowa two years ago, was to represent Ames in the dashes, and Pendleton was picked to enter the plunge for distance. However, at the last minute it was decided that Chicago's pool was too small to accommodate so many competitors and Ames was dropped. The men did not discontinue their work, hoping to be able to obtain a dual meet with Iowa, but due to the unsettled conditions they did not have a team.

Three inter-class meets were held and brilliant material discovered among some of the freshmen. With these new men interested in the sport, Ames can hope for a fast group of swimmers next year.

Tennis

Tennis at Ames, was practically at a standstill during the entire period of the war, but since the signing of the armistice, this sport has been resumed with more enthusiasm than ever before. The tennis outlook at the beginning of this season was for the most successful tennis year in the history of the school.

Tennis more than any other sport was most affected by the war-time conditions and this was especially true at Iowa State.

Before the war this sport had many devotees and both State and Missouri Valley Conference tournaments were played each year. The year after our entry into the war the state tournament was the only one held and for the next year and a half only local contests were held.

Over fifty entries were made in the college tournament this year, which showed more than usual interest. Matches are scheduled with Iowa, Cornell, Grinnell and other state schools. Besides these, there is the state meet at Des Moines and the Missouri Valley Conference tournament at Ames.

The tennis team is most promising and is working hard. Some of the men on the team are, Phil Smith, present college champion and captain of the team; Wagner, Kittle, Hurwich, Mahone, Kern and Miller.

GIRLS ATHLETICS

R. SPENCER

Instructing Staff

Watson, Peterson, Bihl, Revell

Miss Irene Watson, who has charge of the the gymnasium work for women at Iowa State College, attended the Sargeant School of Physical Education at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and later took work in the Chicago Normal School. She came here from the University of Western Illinois.

Miss Jean Peterson is a graduate of Chicago Normal School. At present she has charge of the swimming.

Miss Myrtle Bihl is a graduate of the American College of Physical Education, where she afterward had charge of athletics and swimming. She took further work in the Herman Beasley Butler house at Chicago. At Iowa State College Miss Bihl has charge of freshmen gymnastic classes and apparatus work.

Miss Revell attended Grinnell College, later graduating from the Sargeant School of Physical Education. She came here from the University of Oklahoma to take charge of the corrective work.

Gymnasium

Gymnasium work is required of all Freshmen and Sophomores. Each spring and fall the girls have a choice of outdoor work, for six weeks, of either basket ball, baseball, hockey or tennis.

Swimming Pool

The Swimming Pool is open to all students and faculty for recreation and instruction. All students are required to pass off a certain test in swimming from now on. The first swimming meet ever held will take place this spring in this pool.

May Fete

Departing from the usual program of May Day festivities, the May Fete of May third, nineteen-eighteen, consisted of a patriotic pageant, "Her Gift", written by Miss Winifred Tilden and Miss Mabelle A. Payton.

Alma Mater, attended by her maid of honor and her page, with her followers, the black-gowned Seniors, held court on the steps of Agricultural Hall. For some time the assembly was entertained by the spirits of frivolity—dancing, feasting, card-playing, and gaiety of all descriptions, led by Queen Indifference.

The College Maiden, representing all the girls of all the colleges, was almost won over by frivolity, when the healthful, wholesome pleasures, Tennis, Golf, Hockey, and their partner, Thrift, led by Service, appeared, and passed in review, before the College Maid.

The spirit of Service was victorious, and the college maiden chose to be of aid and service to her country during the summer.

The Ames Chinese Student Club

Under the auspices of the Chinese Student Alliance in the United States of America, the Ames Chinese Student Club was organized on the last Yule-tide. During the past few years an attempt was made to organize such a club, but, as the number of Chinese students who attended the college was deficient, never was the plan brought to a realization. With the increase of the number of Chinese students by leaps and bounds, however, it gives sufficient number and strength to start the organization, which opportunity was not overlooked. The formation of the club met the unanimous approval, and as a result of which, the following officers were duly elected for the fiscal year:

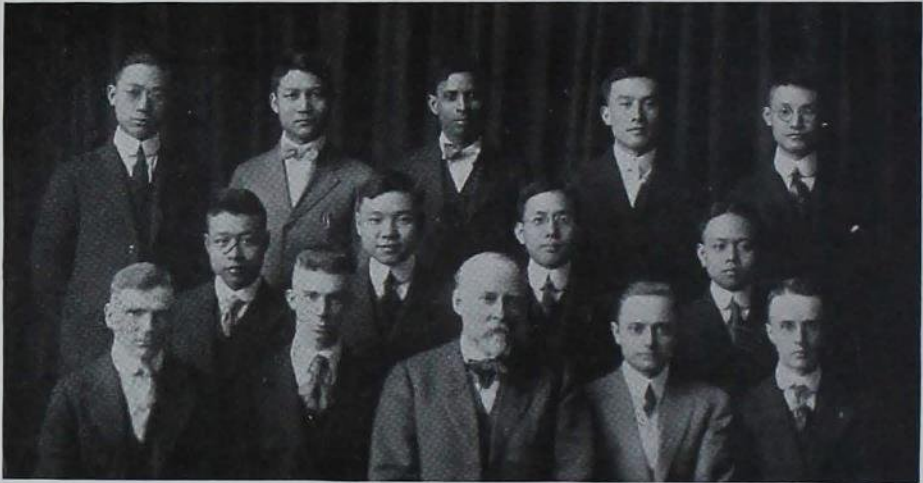

President.....	H. H. YAO
Vice-President.....	S. C. CHEN
English Secretary.....	W. M. LING
Chinese Secretary.....	C. F. WANG
Treasurer.....	J. C. CHEN

Among the various proceedings may be mentioned social entertainments, the contribution of articles to different magazines, the representation of this club in the Chinese Students' Alliance, and the organization of a discussion group, which holds its meetings on Saturdays. Here are prominent persons invited to speak on every other week, while the other weeks are extended for open forum. It looks forward with a bright prospect for the future.

Pins I Have Worn

This was the very first pin I ever wore. Why, girls, it thrills me yet to think about it. It was handed to me in registration line, about half an hour after I got off the interurban, and I wore it clear through the line, until my time card was made out. I wasn't overly crazy about the man, as I remember it. (I think it was that Moser thing—the girl behind me whispered that he was a good dancer and I knew that there was an All College that night, so I took a chance.) What I fell for most was the line he handed out about the ancestors,—how it happened they wore the golden sickle, and all that bunk. He said it was organized by Father Time, the Angel of Death, the Three Gleaners, and Zeller Mills, one hot afternoon during harvest time, when they were up in Dakota getting their six months practical experience. I thought for a few minutes that maybe I could be happy with him, but by mistake he pulled out a snapshot of some of the brothers, taken out in front of the grain elevator, with a cross marking the window where he said he "hit the hay" every night. Can you imagine anything more crude, girls? Anyway, I was thrilled. Remember, it was my very first!

The next day, I started out bright and early to my first eight o'clock with Dean Arnold's Beta pledge pin where a button should have been. I wore it from the new Dorm as far as Central, but that wasn't any fun, because Ida Ratzlaff came up to me and asked me where they were giving out the recognition pins for the Home Economics Club. I realized then what a terrible mistake I had made, but the experience was worth something.

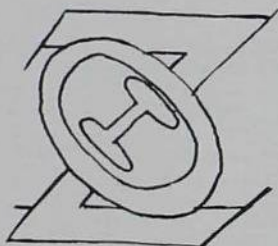

This is the next pin I wore. It belonged to one of the Malcolm boys, I don't remember whether it was George's or Shorty's. The girls told me that I was a nut to take it. They said that the Langs had loosened the safety clasp, but I didn't care. I got by with a lot of stuff when I wore the Crescent and the Star. I could buy Fatimas any place; I sneaked in at all the P. E. O. meetings, and I even got to go to the Policeman's ball.

This pin looked interesting to me for a few days. I thought it looked like a Croix de Guerre, and I tried to make people think it was a little token of affection from Lieutenant Le Mar. (I was crazy about him, but they told me he was engaged to some good-looking Alpha Delta, so I loved and lost in silence.) But, anyway, I didn't get by with my stories, I guess, because that little Len Harbuck thought it was one of those Snipe shooters or maybe a Sharp Shooter's medal, like George, down at the Twin Star, wears on his dress uniform. Imagine!

Pete Bosch gave me this little electric toaster one dark night after a Theta Xi dance. The next day he asked me to give it back to him. He claimed he thought I was Margaret Rutherford. He apologized profusely; said it was careless of him not to strike a match before he hung his pin, and all that. But I was glad to get rid of it. Somebody had just pointed his cousin, Carl, out to me and—well, take a tip from me girls, and don't ever tie the ball and chain around your ankles until you've given his family the "O-O". You can't be too careful, I've decided.

Van Scoy sent this little heart about February 14, so, naturally, I thought it was a comic valentine, and returned it. I'd never met him, anyway, and the girls said I wasn't missing out on anything, so I didn't care.

I was so proud of this conquest. It had Ralph Bottorff's name on it, and you know, girls, he's that handsome woman-hater from Hedrick, that the Arcades tried so hard to land the night of that big pep meeting at the Gym. But Helen Curtiss told me it was the very same one Dud Weaver had offered her one night, so I came to earth with a thud. Don't ever take a chance on a Phi Delta—you can't tell who you're getting. I went to a dance one night with "Boob" Miller's shirt, "Bob's" suit, John Jackson's tie,

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Moses' hat, and "Pretty" Hawthorne's coat,—that swell one with the sealskin throw. You can imagine my bitter disappointment when I found it was Bruce Russell inside.

I wore this one Sunday, but nobody knew what it was, so I gave it back that night.

This is the pin I am wearing now, and I really think it's the one I'll keep. It's not that I care so much for Burt, but it's such a handy little model to have around. You know, it hasn't a bit of individuality, so you can pass it as most anything—an Alpha Delt, a K. D., a Phi Gam, a Royal Neighbor, a D. K. E., an I. O. O. F. pin, or a street car slug. It's really about the most versatile of all, girls, and I know, because I'm a prep and I've tried them all.

This terrible gun inflicted many losses on our brave troops. Several casualties had to be carried out.

This 6 cm. shell was picked up on the gory field after the famous "Battle of the Eggs". It had a very strong charge.

These dice were found by our intelligence (?) experts to be loaded. This was probably dirty work by German Spies; fixed to explode when used.

This piece of wood is a charred remnant from the S.A.E. fire. This disastrous occurrence was said by some to have been caused by German Agents while others consider it an example of war profiteering, in proof of which they point to the new furniture which may be seen adorning the S.A.E. Rooms.

This girl's handkerchief was picked up between the Phi Gam and Pi Phi Houses. As the girls were under quarantine, its origin is still a mystery.

CARR

TO LILLIAN CARR

A candle's tiny flame I lit
 Within a chancel dim,
 And whispered to the tender saints
 To guard the life of him—
 The man I loved; but in my heart
 I really did not know
 If Rist, Wood, or Dunc I fain would choose—
 I told the good saints so!

The psalms are sung—
 The cruel war is past;
 The brave men that went away
 Are safe at home at last.
 But Wood is courting Dorothy (Stuart)
 And Dunc with no one goes!
 My little Bill Rist saves them both—
 I hope that no one knows!

Parley Sheldon:

He trudged along,
 Unknowing what he sought,
 And whistling as he went,
 For want of thought.

Florence Rominger:

Her pretty feet, like snails did creep
 A little out, and then
 As if they played Bo-Peep
 Did soon draw in again.

Dudley C. Stone: Like a winged Mercury he trudges the cinder path.

Bob Rauch: Owen to the county agent famine, there is liable to be a
 Rauch starting out that way.

Scotty Liberknecht: Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten
 my imagination.

H. E. Hawthorne: His idea of a paradise is a five and a deuce on top.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Breathless and red they tumbled onto the Chicago train as it started slowly away from the station, a handsome man laden with two suitcases and a merry, laughing girl. An eloping couple, surely.

"Where's the Chicago coach?" demanded the man of the porter.

"Right this way, sah." He led the way through the long lines of coaches, full of college students returning from vacation.

"Why, Esther, what are you doing here?" and a girl half started out of her seat in surprise.

"Sh, keep still, I'll explain all later." With head held high she followed the porter and the man out of the car.

"What do you suppose has happened? Esther went to South Dakota to visit. Isn't he good looking, tho?"

In the meantime the couple had reached the Pullman.

"You have berths, sah. Wouldn't you like to change this?" glancing at the bit of cardboard. "I can give you one in the other part of the car where it would be more comfortable for the lady, sah."

"What, Oh, I beg youh pawdon, sah."

"I think I better move back into the Ames coach with the girls."

"Say, what do you think I ran with these heavy bags between stations if I'm not going to get to talk with you. I want some amusement. Sit down!"

Down she sat.

After a period of excited speculation and anxious waiting, the girls confronted Esther in the Pullman.

"Esther Rebok! You old charmer, what do you mean by this?"

"Sh! Do keep still. He's just at the other end of the car. It'll all right. He's married and has two children and is looking for a dietitian in his hospital."

Crestfallen silence on the part of those who had scented a romance.

UNPOPULAR PROHIBITION

Ever since Adam and Eve, appearing in the Garden Theatre, warbled a little interpretation of their own, entitled, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree", and were cancelled for putting in business not in the show, it has been generally conceded that the chief ingredients of a regular good time were wine, women and song. It is a combination that never fails to work, stands the test of time, and in the final analysis leave little to be desired. Now and then you run across a man who sort of specializes in one or the other, but even they mixed them up at a time. Nat Goodwin could sing a little and old Omar Khayyam's idea of supreme happiness was, "A flask of wine, and thou beside me singing". There is your combination in a nut shell. The old troubadours loved a drink from a glass and a wink from a lass. And today, if you mix a sip of rare vintage, milady's smile and a bit of Hungarian rhapsody, you're gone.

It has always been the same wine, women, and song, and will be until next July. After that, the combination that has been working so well for centuries is going to be all busted up by certain gentlemen who say, "You will have to substitute something for wine". Substitute what? Think of "Bevo, women, and song, or nut sundaes, women, and song." Substitute, your eye; there is not substitute, and for our parts we will get along if we have to with just women and song, and let it go at that. Although, of course, we will all have to play the two a little stronger to make up for the deceased member of the combination. "So, do your part, girls."

"Wait till we have a few more drinks Parley, and I'll sell it to you," was Burton's reply.

H. H. Caughlin, talking to his son Harry: "Son, you are so shiftless that I can't imagine what would become of you if I should suddenly be taken away."

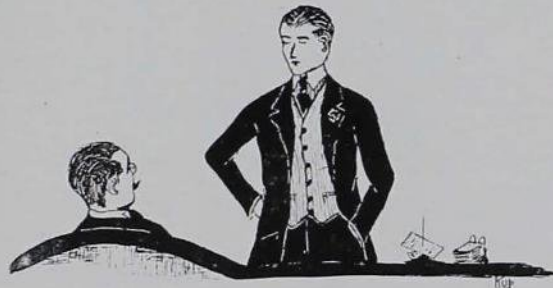

Harry: "Oh, I'd stay right here, Dad. The question is, what would become of you?"

Bruce Russell, aged four, was discovered by his mother, industriously smashing all the eggs in the house.

"Why, Bruce! What do you mean by breaking all those eggs?"

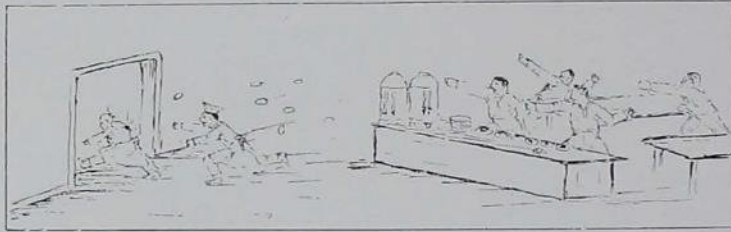

"I heard papa say there was money in eggs, and I was trying to find it."

Stick Around Till Christmas

Don't you remember in old '18,
Mr. Hohenzollern acted sorta mean.
We all left our plows, went marching off
to war,
M-m, by gosh, but we were sore!
Shined old muskets, kissed our girls goodbye,
When old Woody Wilson cocked a knowing eye.

Said he, "These babes are so young and sweet,
We'll send 'em off to Ames to get 'em on their feet."

So we landed here one chilly day;
Had to sleep on a pile of hay.
The meat was spoiled, the coffee bad,
Blankety blank! but we were mad.
All week long we'd have beef stew,
Along came a Sunday we'd have some, too.
Up at dawn, in bed at ten,
Them was the days when a feller needs
a friend.

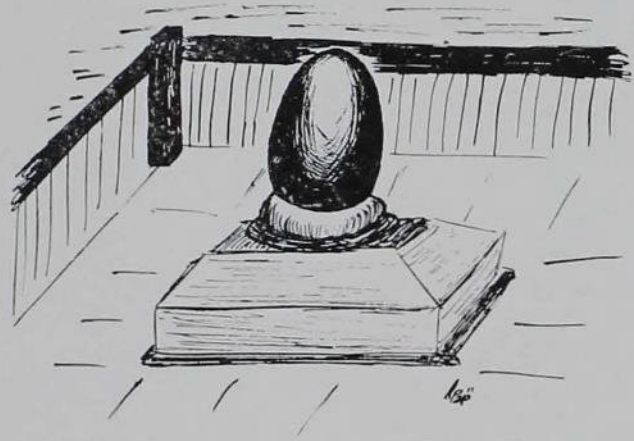

When An S. A. T. C. Feller Needs a Friend

Then just as if all that wouldn't do,
Along came some little germs, dragging
in the flu.
The lid went on, I'll tell you what,
You'd pay, by heck, if you were caught.
Couldn't even look at the pretty little girls,
With their winsome smiles, and sassy wayward curls.
Girls in Ames were always few,—but!
'Twas a darn sight worse when the col-

If we stay right here and have a jolly time.

"You can walk on the Camups till five

M-m! but you'll have fun!"

Did you ever hear anything that sounded

The news came on Wednesday, about half

No more khaki putts and no baggy suits,
No more guard house, no crabby lieuts.

IOWA STATE COLLEGE

TERPSICHOREAN GRAPPLERS

Ames is famous throughout the Missouri valley for being able to consistently put out a wrestling team that's a ringer. And many have wondered at the cause of our supremacy in this line of sport.

But, we are sure, fair reader, that there will be no doubt in your mind if you will only take notice of our wrestlers on parade at some of the all-college dances.

Now, these people are not all on the squad, but we must admit they are among those counted eligible.

We are not allowed to be there very long until we are brought to mind that Bert Brown must be present, for he is seen charging down the speedway. Bert is an old standby and is famous for his "body chancery", and when he hits you, you are aware of the fact that he could hardly train down to the featherweight class.

But, wait; let's glance around. There's "Terpsichorean Tommy", with his late holds, fresh from the Boone front. Mr. Frank's particular hold is not listed in Spaulding's Rules for Wrestling. But you can't defeat the fact that Tommy is a sure point man and never gets away with less than a decision over his opponent, even though he may not always get his opponent to fall for him.

Also, lest we forget, the Phi Gams have a promising Freshman, who will surely make the Varsity next year, as he has a "head-scissors" which can't be beat.

And last, but not least, we have a man in the botany department who surely deserves honorable mention. Mr. Kirby is there for all the dances and though his style might not be considered in wrestling terms, yet he has a certain aeroplane propeller effect that greatly resembles the hold that Louie Shalk takes just before throwing his opponent to the mat.

These are not the only ones deserving of mention, but the rest were submitted too late to classify.

"Once a Freshman was cast on an African shore,

Where a cannibal monarch held sway,
And they served up that Freshman on slices of toast,

On the eve of the very same day,
But the vengeance of heaven followed
swift on the act,

And before the next morn was seen,
By cholera morbus that tribe was attacked,
For the Freshman was terribly green."

Maybelle is pretty to look at,—yes,
good to be-hold, too.

Professor Von Tungeln in Ec. Sc.
"Miss Livingston, what would you do if you wanted to build a house that cost one thousand dollars, and had only seven hundred dollars?"

Ruth Livingston, after some thought:
"I'd marry a man with three hundred dollars."

Like a meteor
It flashed down the street
In the bright noon sunlight
And was gone.
"What was it?" queried the inhabitants
Of the neighborhood.
Again at night was it heard
Roaring upward with spurts of flame.
At last the time came
When, the speed reduced to thirty miles,
It was possible to discern
Thru the smoke and dust,
Encircling the orange patrol wagon,
The grim features of Bruce,
The dainty visage of "Pretty Hawthorne"
And numerous other brothers
Adorning the running board;
Most thrilling of all,
In the place of honor,
Very close beside the driver,
Sat Kae.
"Whose the brilliant car?"
"Why, ours, of course", answered Kae.

"I met Bert Brown coming out of the bank just now."
"Buyin' War Loan Bonds, I suppose."
"No; he'd just been in to fill his fountain pen."

"What, Lillian, engaged to another man?", said Myrtle, the K. D. chaperone.

"But Myrtle, they need the change as much as I do."

Lives of all great men remind us
We may kiss and we may hug,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on another's mug.

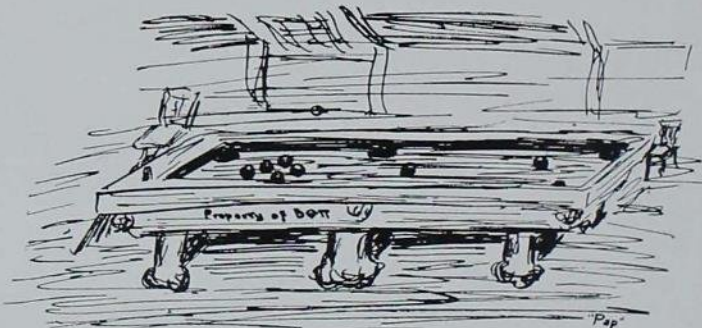

It's easy enough to go spooning
When no one knows of the fact.
But the man worth while
Is the man who can smile
When caught in the mushy act.

Johnnie Owens sidled into the jewelry shop with a furtive air. He handed the jeweler a ring, with the stammered statement that he wished it marked with some names.

"What names do you wish?" inquired the jeweler in a sympathetic tone.

"From Johnnie to Bob," Owens blushingly whispered.

The jeweler looked from the ring to the young man, and said in a fatherly manner: "Take my advice, young man, and have it engraved simply, 'From Johnnie.'"

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

The man with one of the most important jobs in America

As we sit at our comfortable tables enjoying our steaks and our roasts, how rarely do we think of the man who makes it possible for us to have them.

He is the cattle raiser. Like other men he is in business to make a living. He must receive prices high enough to cover heavy costs and to bring him a profit.

Naturally while the stock raiser wants to get high prices for his animals you want to pay as little as possible for your meat. The packer would like to see you both satisfied.

For the success of the packer — whose average profit on beef is only a fraction of a cent per pound — depends on volume.

Prices that encourage the cattle raiser to produce heavily and the consumer to eat generously spell volume of business, and this is what the packer needs.

Considering the price that cattle men must receive for animals, Swift & Company sells meat at as low a price as it is humanly possible to sell it, because of competition, large volume, and efficient methods.

Eliminating Swift & Company's fractional profits entirely would make practically no difference in the price of meat or livestock.

O'Brien in Ag. Journalism 9: "Lawler, you write a story about poultry, for your next assignment."

Lawler: "Well, I never was particularly interested in chickens, but I'll try."

Harry O'Brien, in Journalism: "Here is a bulletin on Infant Morality, a subject in which I am much interested."

Harold Brenton: "I feel like thirty cents."

Etta: "How things have gone up since the war."

THE ETERNAL MYSTERY

I wish I knew the reason why
My girl has fallen for a guy,
A homely shrimp, but five feet high,
And I am so good-looking!

Oh, tell me why she turns me down
For this uneducated clown,
Who never saw a cap or gown,
And I have been to college!

Ah, tell me, for the love of Pete,
Why that dear girl, who is so sweet,
Lets that poor fish step on her feet,
And I dance so divinely!

What made her fall for that sad gink,
One look at whom would make you think
That you had found the missing link,
And I am so attractive!

JOHN JACKSON.

F. Gates: "It isn't done that way in Minnesota.

E. C. Koonz: His popularity is exceeded only by his good looks.

Doris Wilson: She is one of those who are strong for the ad-Vance of the Non-Fraternity policy.

Miss Overholt (when breaking the news to Florence Draper that her social privileges were lifted): "Well, Florence, what are you going to do without a date for six weeks?"

Florence (chuckling): "Well, if some people can do without them all their lives, I can stand it for six weeks!"

Ruth Livingston: "Oh, Boy! There's music in my soul; just hear my shoes squeak."

Oh army shoe!
 If you
 But knew
 The joy that comes unto
 My soul, when through
 Your spacious depths my toes
 Do percolate—yes, those
 Are real joys: wool hose
 And you
 O army shoe!
 The tender spots
 (And I have lots)
 Upon my feet
 Gently you treat.
 You do not pinch
 At all; an inch
 Of room you give each toe
 And do you squeeze? Ah, no!
 Nor do you rub
 Although you're stub,
 Embarrassingly big,
 Yet you're indicative
 Of comfort. Shoe,
 I'm strong for you!

RULES IN DELTA TAU DELTA HOUSE

1. If possible, the knife should never be put in the mouth at all; but if it is necessary, let the edge be turned outward.
2. The teeth should be picked as little as possible, and never with a fork.
3. When napkins are provided, they are to be unfolded and laid on the knees. Use the napkin to wipe the mouth or fingers; never as a handkerchief or to mop the brow.
4. Never lean back in your chair so far that there is danger of falling backward.
5. If possible, refrain from smoking cigarettes when the president or any of the deans are entertained.
6. Try to avoid swearing when company is around. If it is necessary, put a nickel in the bank which is on the center of the table.
7. Never ask the company if they care for second, for we are cutting down house bills. (Brown can pass plate up for thirds without violating rules.)

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

We hope that the Kappa Deltas will take the following in a good manner, as it is meant in a helpful way:

The Kappa Deltas are losing out socially. They are not one of the leading sororities as they used to be. The reason is simple: So many of the A. G. R's are now dating at the Gamma Phi Beta house.

Ruth Livingston: "Perseverance always wins in the end."

Zeller: "Then you will marry me?"

Ruth: "No, I was just wondering how much longer I'd have to say 'No.'"

Barbara McBeath: "What kind of weather is it outside this morning, Etta?"

Etta Spurgeon: "I don't know, Bab, it's raining so hard that I just can't put my head outside to see."

Alan Deyoe, as Drill Sergeant: "Straighten out that line there! What the hell do you think this is—the Rainbow Division?"

Bert Brown: "Saluting reminds me of poker."

Arch Patterson: "How's that?"

Brown: "Every time an officer passes, we raise him five."

Innocent looking freshman, as he pulled a Pi Kappa pledge pin out of his pocket: "Say, could you tell me what fraternity this belongs to, and where the house is?"

(The initials of this prep are withheld; his last name is Wright.)

Daisy Putzke: "Vera, that's a rather light hat you have on."

Vera Waite: "Yes; next to nothing."

UNDERWRITING VICTORY

In the golden bow of Hope that circles the blending sky of the great New World appear the magic words, "LEAGUE of NATIONS," and eloquently they declare that War shall be no more.

When the Peace Conference, without a dissenting vote, declared for a League of Nations, the world entered upon a new era marked by the triumph of Right and Justice and Humanity.

In the fulfillment of Peace, every individual and every institution has an obligation, just the same as every Nation and every People. Everywhere men of high ideals must henceforth devote themselves to the perpetuation of this supreme achievement of the great World War.

So far as this bank is concerned, it proposes to become at once an underwriter of Victory. It has resolved to interpret through its man-power and its organization the lessons of Democracy learned in the school of agony and tears.

It has resolved to further in every possible way the policy of mutual effort with its large number of customers and its growing clientele to the end that the Ship of Trade may glide smoothly once more upon the great Sea of Commerce.

By a wholehearted participation in every sane effort at a better understanding of one another's problems, and a wholesome co-operation for the adjustment of business to the New Day this bank is resolved to underwrite Victory.

Let us go forward together

Harry O'Brien, His Life and Work

Harry R. O'Brien was born on a farm where the bridge washed out way back in the spring of '67, near the romantic little town of West Milton in Ohio. His father was a farmer from the Emerald Isle. On his forty-acre farm he raised potatoes, tobacco, hogs, and Harry; and in addition to these, he had a flour mill. While helping his father on the farm, Harry stored away in his super-human brain all kinds of knowledge concerning the care and feeding of hogs and facts about potato bugs and squash worms. It was here that he developed an appetite for tobacco and the pipe, which has ever since stuck to him.

At an early age, Harry showed signs of developing into a great character. His mother says of him:

"One Monday, when I was after doing the family washing, I says to George (George is Harry's father), that there Harry is going to look just like your ancesters. He's just the picture of his grandfather O'Brien in Ireland."

Well, this was nothing against him, as the O'Briens were quite a handsome race.

Harry grew up on the farm, attending the country school nearby, and going with Susie Jones, who lived just across the river and up the cow-path into the woods. Later, in spite of these infirmities, Harry grew to manhood, and went away to college. At the university, he barely escaped being a Phi Beta Kappa. He learned, or rather, he came by it naturally, to write the stuff that "thrills the heart to laughter or moves the soul to tears". During all this time his mother never lost her confidence in him. Even when he flunked the beginning course in Journalism, and Susie Brown turned him down, she said:

"Niver you mind. Harry, me bye, is smarter than he looks and acts, and some day he's going to be a great man."

He was persistent in his desire to write, and he took for his subjects the common and the ordinary. For him there was a theme for a story in a budding onion patch, or in an uncorked bottle of soothing syrup. In other words, he was a landscape artist of prose and verse. He was Corot all over again.

He wrote in a free and easy style, often with his feet up over the typewriter and his pipe in his mouth.

As a teacher of English and Journalism in the Oklahoma Agricultural College, he showed his ability not only as an instructor, but also as a public speaker and a writer. Although a man of liberal education and a student of Homer and Shakespeare, he turned to the soil for his subjects to write about.

In the capacity of a teacher of Journalism, Harry came to Ames five years ago. In this time he has interested more women and men in the profession of Agricultural Journalism than any other man in the United States. He is today a writer of farm feature stories and an authority on all subjects concerned with farming, from making a milkstool out of an old bedstead to the canning of asparagus for winter use. In the capacity of a farm feature story writer for the Country Gentleman, he has now become a great man. It is just as his mother predicted twenty-nine years ago last August.

THE 1920 VICTORY BOMB

Illustrious Student Solicitor: "Aw, c'mon, Bruce; sell some subs for the Student. You'll get a commission."

Bruce: "That's what I've been looking for ever since I joined the army. Say, what sort of a commission do I get?"

Jack Bell, at Mikado practice: "Music always intoxicates me."

Kate Balkema: "Indeed? Where was the concert last night?"

Mary had a little Bo
That acted like a sheep,
And Mary once did wear a dress
That sure did make Bo-Peep.

Lafe Young: "I can't get my locker shut."

Coach: "Take your shoes out."

A certain young lady who takes Soils 342 with a class of boys was much embarrassed one day recently, when Professor Eastman made the following request: "Those of you who chew tobacco, will please spit in the sinks."

Dot (after the dance): "No, Shorty, there isn't time to get something to eat."

Shorty: "Oh, yes; come on with that old college yell, 'There isn't time!'"

Prospective Guest: "How much are your rooms?"

Clerk: "Two dollars up to twelve."

Man: "How much are they up to half past nine?"

"Hell's bells", he cried, as the alarm went off.

THERE WAS A TIME
NOT SO VERY LONG ago, when all printing looked alike to most of us; it was just printing;
but that time is past and a
new day has dawned.

Most everyone today has a very highly developed sense of what is right and proper
in all manner of printing.

It is one thing to appreciate superior quality and another to produce it.

To produce it requires men
of skill, industry and zeal and a good equipment.

We have a corps of efficient craftsmen who are schooled in what is right and how to get the best results.

We have a master printer who will give your work his personal attention.

Our equipment is of the best.

There is a glowing sense of satisfaction in dealing with people in whom you have absolute faith.

O'BRIEN PHILOSOPHY

"I always contend", says this prominent philosopher, "that the best love stories are written by bachelors."

Miss Humphrey (in Cooking class, lecturing on marketing): "Dates—Well, we haven't much use for them this fall."
(How about dates out of class?)

She (going through College Hospital): "What happened to that poor soldier who has his arm in a sling?"

Wise Hospital Apprentice: "Oh, he broke his arm trying to lift the quarantine off the Campus."

It is rumored that Jack Bell passed the cigars not long ago, but he told the brothers not to smoke them up at once, as he might call them back any time.
