Greeting

With this volume we present to you the Bomb of nineteen fourteen. In it we have tried to record the events of our college life. To those whose enthusiastic support has made the undertaking possible we wish to give our heartiest thanks. May the reader find within these pages little to criticise and much to please, and perhaps a glimpse, here and there, into the life, all too short, which we live while here.

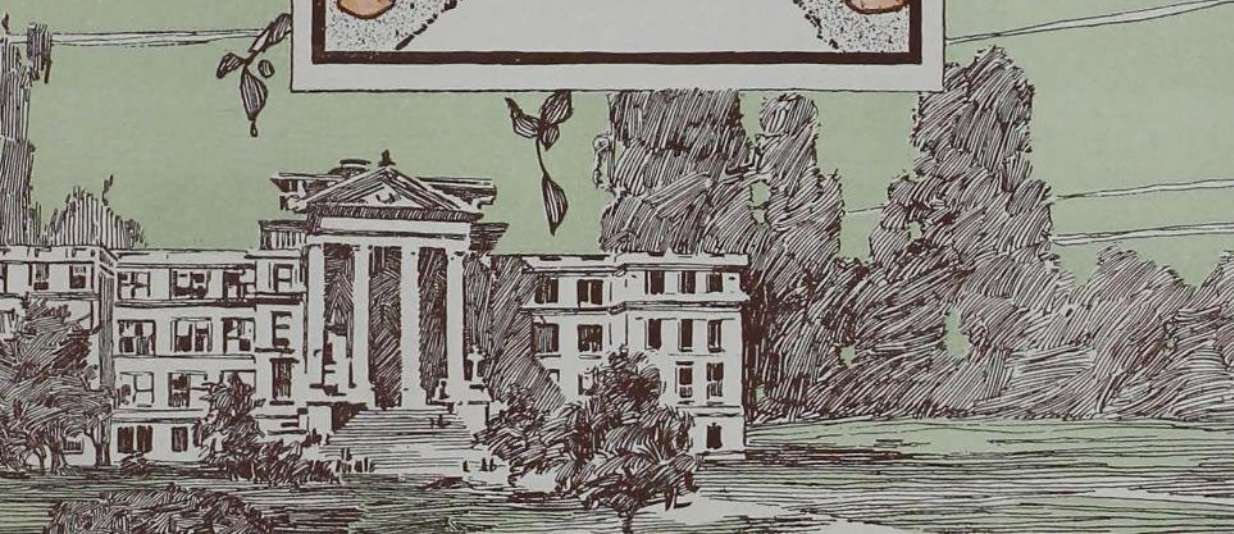

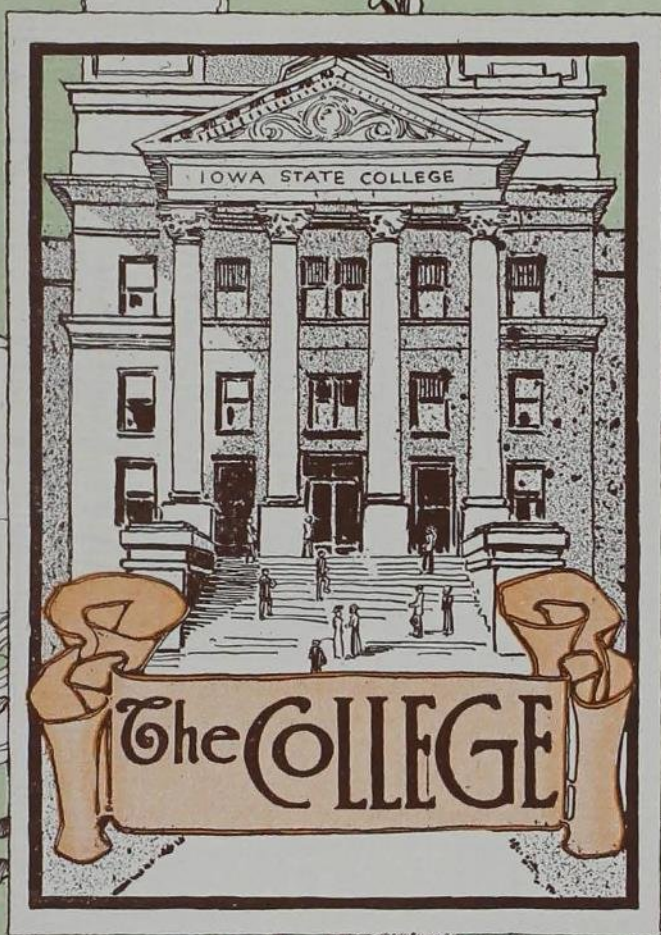

And, fellow students, if you should pause in the struggle which is before you and find upon the pages of this book some sweet remembrances of the days spent at dear old J. S. C. where friendships were formed that you will ever hold dear, then can the '14 Bomb Board say that we have performed the duty that was entrusted to us. : : : : : :

COLLEGE

STATE

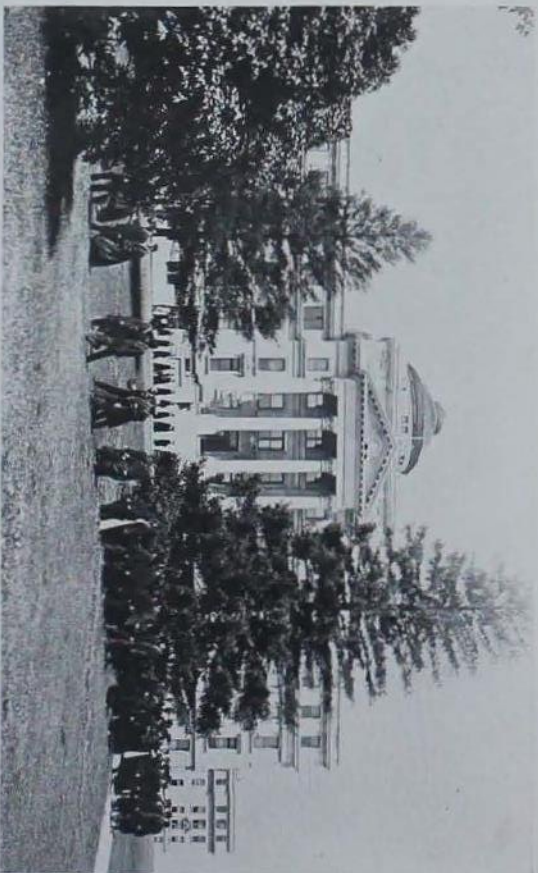

IOWA

PRES. R. A. PEARSON

The 1912 Class

Agricultural Hall

Where the youth of the farm and city obtain the first vision of better agriculture. The home of the Student Publications. Better known as the Ag Assembly where "Prexy" talks at convocations and where the forensic battles of I. S. C. are fought.

Old Agricultural Hall

Where agriculture received its first impetus. After the Ags' new home was built Domestic Science and Veterinary shared equally in the hospitality it offered. Today Agricultural Engineers hold full possession of it and its annex, but these are failing to meet the popularity of the course.

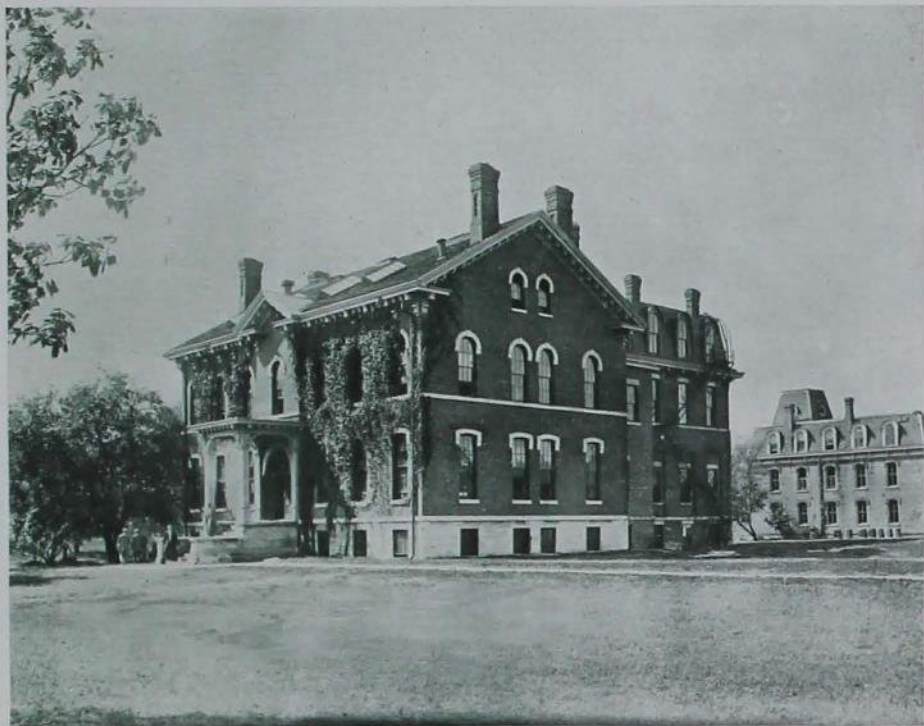

Alumnae Hall

A constant reminder of the loyalty of our Alumnae. The home of the new man. The first assistance when you reach Ames and a "friend to the friendless" ever after. The first we remember the last we forget.

Central

“Proud we are of thy stately halls.” Central is the center of the college world, the abode of the powers that be. Where the Sitting Committee meets and where all students begin and many end their college life.

Chemistry Hall

“Gone but not forgotten.” A vision of old Chem Hall is clearly impressed upon the mind of every student. Its crowded halls and hazy atmosphere, no longer realities, seem more enjoyable when viewed through the haze of long ago.

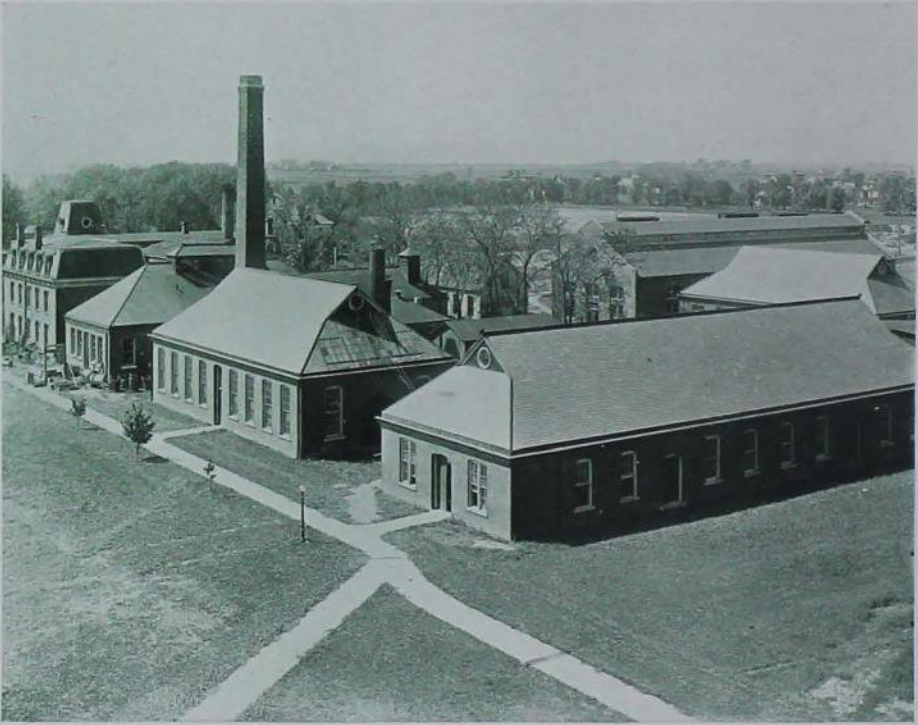

Dairy Building

The synonyms for the Dairy Building seem to be spring, refreshments, lacto. Beneath the neighboring trees which hover about its walls Engineers and Ags alike partake of the refreshing products which it daily turns out in experimental work.

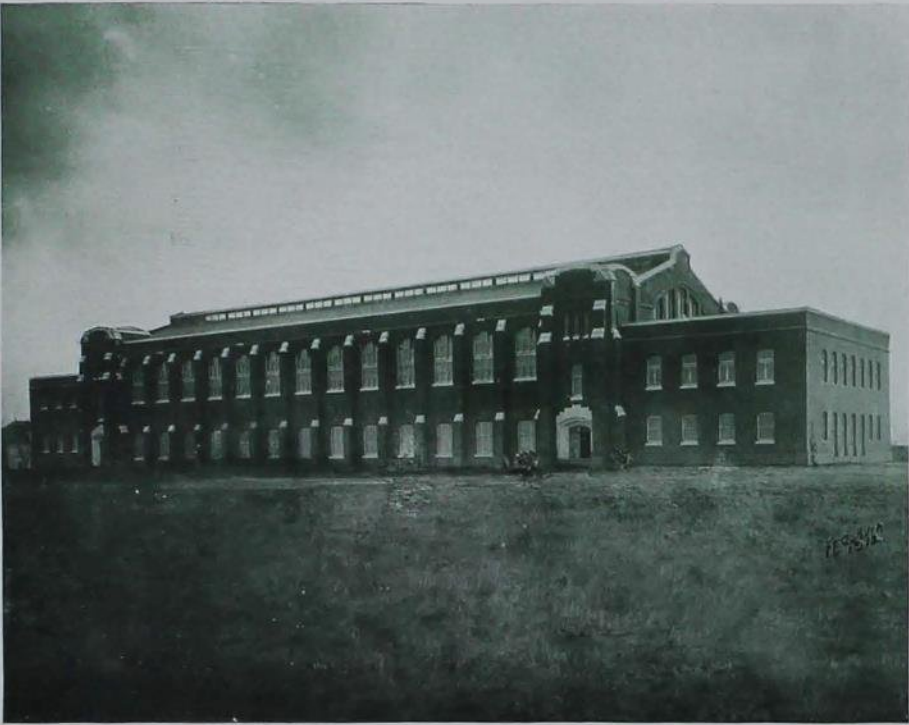

Engineering Hall

The home of the "Patron Saint," the "Phi ζ " department and the "Senior Civils." Many a rough house is held within these walls. With the old athletic field to grow on, it forms the nucleus for Iowa's greater engineering school.

Engineering Shops

Where the young engineer learns some of the practical things in Engineering. "Hit the iron while it's hot," and "move all in the same day" are common expressions. Many are the friendships formed in and around these buildings.

Gymnasium

Our newest and most popular building. The new gym is finding a ready response in the use which the students are making of it. None too large even now is the common verdict.

Home Economics

The bone of contention between the Board of Education and I. S. C. Where the pink and white uniform flits to and fro. The home of the famous Junior luncheons, as well as the haven of rest and substantialities for our noted I. S. C. visitors.

Judging Pavilions

Neath these circular roofs many students have vied for medal and fame. To make the live stock judging team is the highest ambition of every Animal Husbandry student. Could these pavilions tell tales, many would there be written in disappointments.

The Knoll

The home of our Prexies, except when the Musical Department can find no better place to make the "night hideous." To our chronic fussers when our Prexy has gone away, we recommend a perfect seclusion. Neither prowling dog nor belated night hawk will mar the harmony of it all.

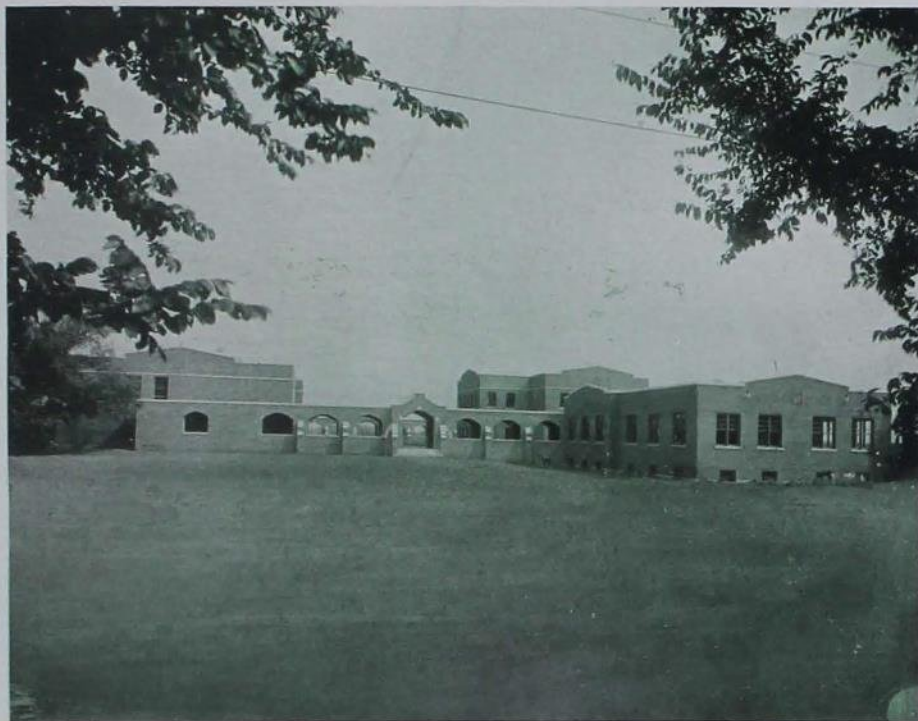

Margaret Hall

The home of one hundred lively maidens who know the meaning of work as well as play. It is the only place where Ag., Vet. and Engineer meet on common ground and where "None but the brave deserve the fair."

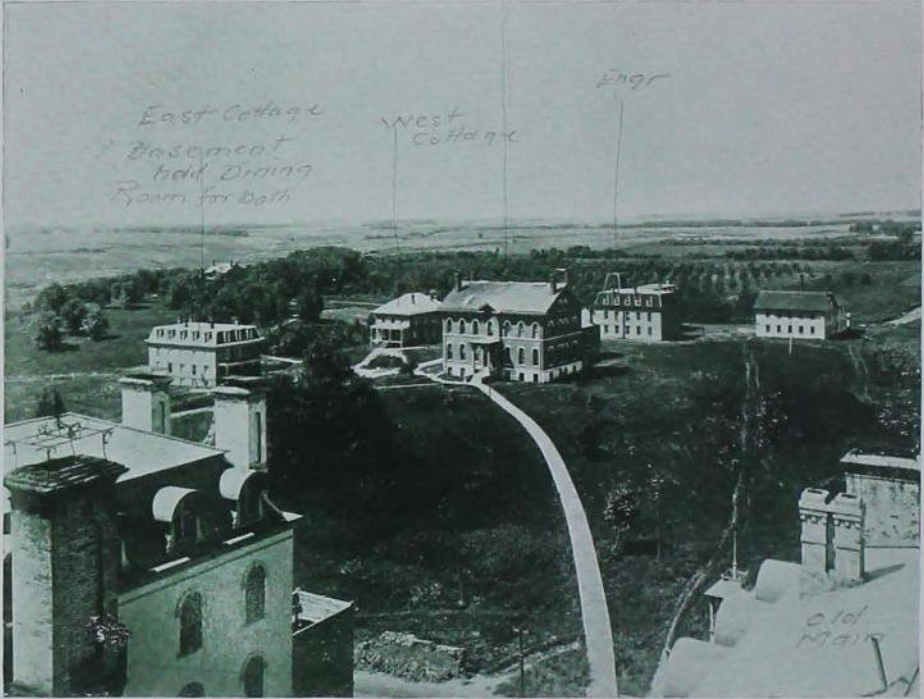

Morrill Hall

Varied are its missions. Where you get the home paper, thresh the English Department's problems out and meet Dr. Cessna every morning at 7:40. Not easy to forget that Prof. Summers houses his "fishes of the sea and birds of the air" here also.

Veterinary Buildings

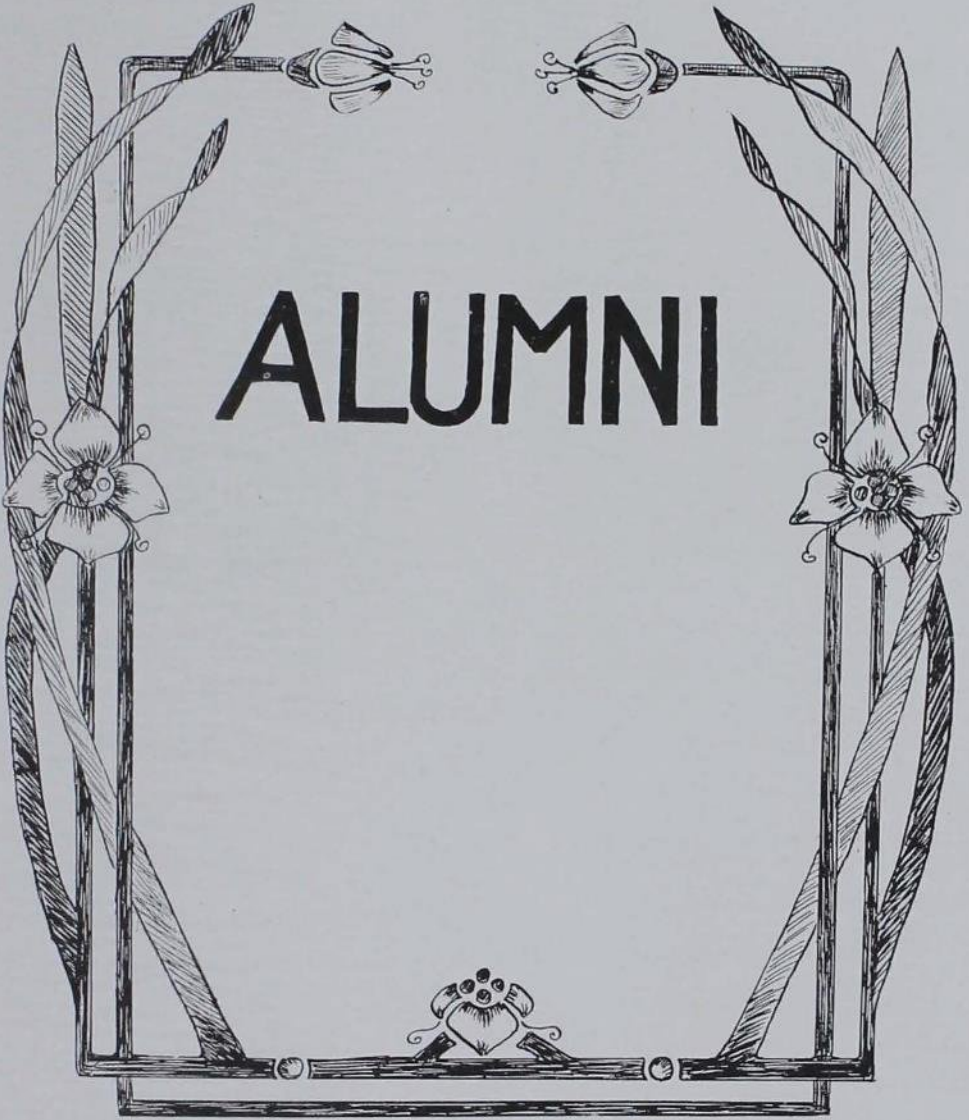

Where science spells practical and efficient work well done in the aid of the live stock industry. Rather secluded, but nevertheless fully enjoyable. The "Hang Together" Vets. find prestige in being absolutely to themselves where they seek to solve the mystery of equine and bovine ailments without molestation.

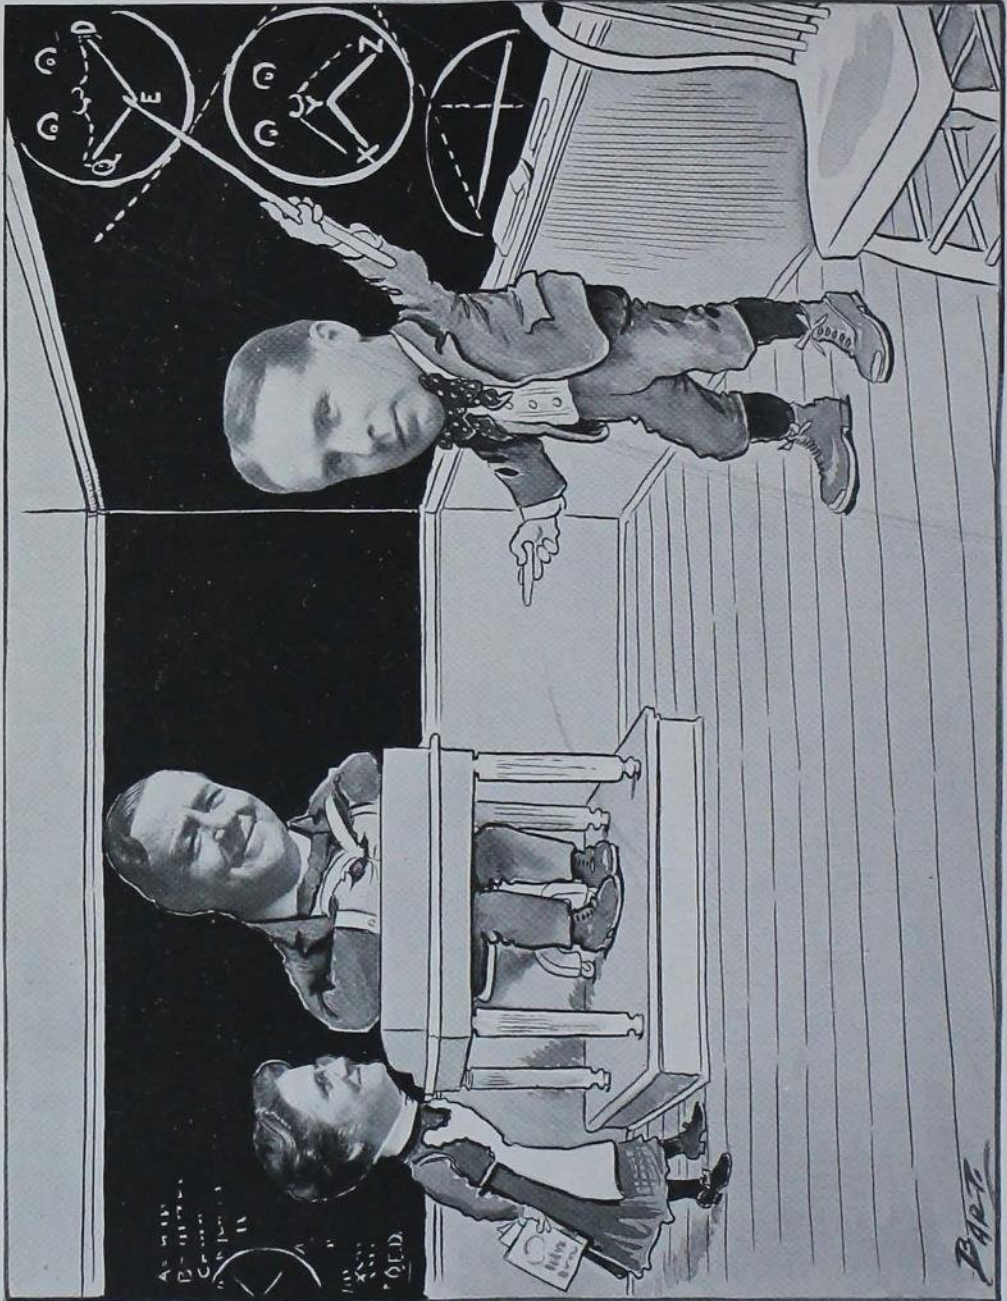

Scene of 1887

Taken from the top of "Old Main," this picture shows the progress we have made since 1887. Who can tell what to expect in the next 25 years?

ALUMNI

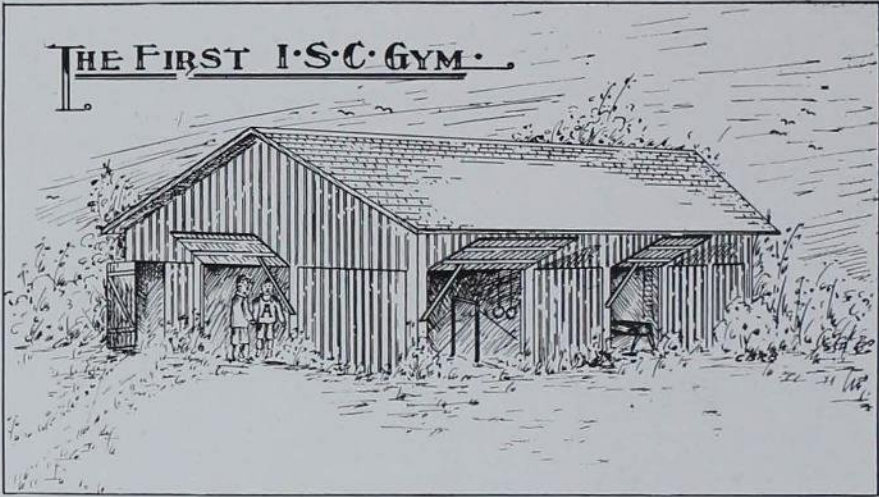

Q. E. D. we used to write it,

From the abstract proposition
The concrete we had evolved.

Business men and opportunist.
Think of "Stanty," smiling sweetly,
Educating a cartoonist.

THE FIRST I. S. C. GYM.

The first I. S. C. gymnasium was a frame building, barn like in appearance, and as near as I can remember like the accompanying sketch.

It was built thirty years ago this summer and stood a few rods west of the old bell tower. It was thirty by forty feet in dimensions built entirely of wood, unpainted, had no floor, and had doors all the way around which opened up from the bottom, and I am inclined now to think was not much of an ornament and, of course, at this time would not be permitted on the campus.

Some of us boys who were enthusiastic about this matter started the scheme, raised some money and bought the material and paid for it in part and did the work on the building ourselves. I can remember of shingling on the roof and it seems to me now that it was the hottest day I ever saw.

The accompanying sketch shows I think through the open doors about all of the apparatus which we had.

When finished, a good many of the boys began to use it without any cost to themselves and it was finally necessary to close all the doors but the small one, and I remember of having stood at this door on several days taking $1.00 membership dues from anybody who came along and wanted to use the privileges. These $1.00 membership dues, however, did not reach far enough and when I left school in November, '83 the building was not all paid for. As I understand, it stood there for a couple of years and was then sold for a barn.

I think it was some years after this before "A" was given for athletics at Ames, but some of the boys worked hard enough on this building to have won the "A" and the sketch shows one of the old-time athletes so decorated.

Last fall I visited the college before the new gymnasium was opened, and since starting this sketch have received a card from Professor Stanton showing the new building. I think the difference between these two buildings as to size and cost pretty well measures the advance which has been made in Iowa in every respect in the last thirty years.

March 18, 1913

Dear Miss Knapp:

I am very, very sorry not to help out on the "Bomb," because I realize the trials and tribulations of the Bomb Board from having been very active in my own day and generation.

One of the funniest incidents that I can remember was the time General Lincoln lost little Atkinson, '04, on the drill ground. The "preps" were staging the Battle of Gettysburg or something like it, and it was one of the days that the general was mounted on his fiery charger. The first and second battalions were doing stunts over near the Campanile, while the third, under Major Hofacre had wandered off on its own hook, down near the Farm House, which was what Dean Curliiss' residence was called.

The general completed his maneuver with the first two battalions, and brought them to rest, then turned expecting to see the third right behind him marching into position. Instead of that, there was a hole in the lines through which the whole rebel army could have poured. The red mounted to the general's eyes, and he spured madly eastward, peeling forth trumpet-like comments at the battalion. That much of the army had gone as far as it could to the east, and by this time was returning in an orderly column of companies, but veering more and more to the right with every rod.

Now the mistake in tactics was bad. Any army officer would have admitted that, but when to this was added the awful crime of not marching parallel with the Equator, soomething had to be done at once. We grim minions of war, standing at parade rest waiting for the reinforcing batallion heard this conversation hurled across the sword between the charging general and Sanford '06 (six feet nine inches high and a member of T. L. B.'s) who commanded the fourth company in the advancing host—said host being ninety "Preps" and Sophomores.

The General, "Waaasamatter that third b'talion? Ain't that fo'th comp'ny gottany right guide?"

Sanford, "Y-e-e-e-s!"

The General, "Well, wher-r-r-re izze?"

Sanford, from his mountaintop, laying a paternal hand on the head of Sergeant Atkinson, (four feet two inches), "Here he is!"

Doesn't sound funny does it? But it broke down all the reserve that we western West Pointers had had drilled into us through long sieges "i' the imminent deadly breach." The campus rang with a mighty roar and discipline fled.

Yours cordially,

L. W. ELLIS.

Baker, Ore.,

March 22, 1913.

Miss Hermine Knapp,

Editor 1914 Bomb,

Ames, Iowa.

Dear Miss Knapp:

In reply to your request, the "Things which made me laugh, and which pleased me most," while I was at Ames, were, respectively, the boys and girls there. Those were days when the very form of a boy made me laugh; and when I might say of the girls that, "Every prospect pleased."

It isn't easy to recall an individual experience, ludicrous, or happy, standing out above the others, from a time when my laughter, like "summer lightning," was almost constant; when, even in my dreams, something pleased me. I only know that, as time has passed since then, what I value most in those four years at Ames, are the personal memories I acquired there; and, in proof of this, I have forgotten nearly everything else. The human side of life is the best part of it, anyway; for it is there that recollection always turns when we need to smile.

Shortly after my arrival at Ames, some of us boys were getting acquainted on the campus by the natural, physical, process. It took the form of jumping. We had "heeled the mark" and hurled ourselves forward several times, each knowing that the distance covered would establish his rank in the minds of the others. My introduction was not discreditable for I had long practiced the "standing jump" on the farm, often to the neglect of the evening chores. A big bony fellow, with hands buried in the pockets of a pants, relatively shorter even than mine, stood looking quissically on, until the contest was nearly closed; when he slouched forward to the "mark," and immediately there was a vision of shank joints and coal tails flying through the air, and when the apparition descended, formalities were over, and "Old Jim Dewell" was the lion of the class. He and I have been friends ever since.

One morning we were crowding into the Freshman assembly room for organization in mathematics, and a short little chap with a face like a full moon, was pushing smilingly through, when dear "Old Hop" slapped him, in friendly overture on the back and inquired, "Where are you from, young fellow?" For reply the moon beamed a trifle more broadly, and passing on to the desk, turned and becoming articulate, modestly, but effectively, requested that "Everybody be seated, please." "Hop" gave me one wild stare, and simultaneously taking a handful out of my nearest leg, whispered hoarsely, "My God, it's Professor Stanton." That was the beginning of a fond companionship with R. J. Hopkins, which lasted until he was called hence; and when we meet again, he will greet me, I am sure, with a slap on the back, and in boisterous familiarity, inquire, "Where are you from, young fellow?"

One evening I had "bulged in" at No. 11, in the old Main, where Howlett roomed alone. Howlett weighed about ninety pounds—mostly head. He was pacing the floor, watching smoke snakes ascend from twisted cylinders of burning paper, lighting a fresh one regularly from the dying flame of the last. With this solitary guardian, and amid this strange incense, a two hundred pound Freshman was sitting at a table laboring, in profuse perspiration, over an impossible problem. "Come in, Mr. Burke," said Howlett, after I had closed the door from the inside. "Have a seat, I'll be at liberty soon. The faculty asked me to help them out, by conducting a few entrance examinations, in private." Something in my eyes must have clashed with the fiendish glee that Howlett was silently enjoying, for almost immediately he approached his victim, and launched at him the most vituperative abuse I ever heard. This he continued with increasing intensity, at the heels of the giant, while the poor fellow crept out, like a whipped cur. Then the dwarf collapsed in a chair, in a convulsion of noiseless laughter. "Howlett," said I, "Do you know what would have happened to you, if you had tried that on me?" He grinned appreciatively, while I explained that the mangled form of a human shrimp would be found next morning, littering the court below his window.

Some day I will write a book about Howlett. He was expelled, finally and afterwards killed by a mob in Bloomington, Ill., so there is no certainty where he is now.

I was a party to a "mock council" that was held with Frank O. Lowden as the culprit. The plea that Will McHenry made for or against the defendant, (I was never clear, as to that) must be still echoing there. It would have been the most successful thing of the kind ever enacted in the college, but just at the climax the defendant, who should have been not only alarmed, but pleading for mercy, stood up and calmly announced that he had to go, expressing at the same time the hope that our enjoyment had been as keen as his. Instantly the lights were turned off, and there was a wild scramble among the "council men," to hide their identity and escape in the darkness.

A shadow of "coming events" was not recognized then, but Carrie Lane attempted an organization among the girls at Ames, when she was a mere slip of a girl. It would have been a success, too, under such leadership, if it hadn't been planned without regard to natural law. The organic principle of the club was the time of meeting, which was fixed for "Recreation hour" the only time when a boy and girl could stroll, legally, together, through the grounds, and talk of things other than their studies. With the exception of W. C. Armstrong, "Sam" McGovern and a few others, who used to shy at girls, the boys made a united assault on Carrie's organization and scattered it all over the campus. In the words of a cheap military phrase that passed then, and no doubt continues to pass there, as a witticism, "The boys presented arms, and the girls fell in." Anyway, the organization was wrecked.

While I was a raw Freshman, our table was removed from the dining room, because Dora Sayles, Maude Hicks and some of the other girls couldn't keep from having hysterics at the way we boys talked and ate. We then started a rebellion by ordering our supper up from Ames, and eating it on the lawn. The girls were game too. We all banded together, under the name "Invincibles." Our purpose was to starve, or eat on the ground, until the authorities backed down and restored our table. It seemed certain to us, then, that either the "invincibles" or the school, would have to go; and we chose a name calculated to impress the faculty, as to just how we stood. The school remained, however, and the probability is that we compromised in some such way as "Johnny" did with his dad. Well, I am glad we did, for the old college has really done a great work since then.

When I muse loosely in this way, over my life at Ames, so many things come to the surface that make me "smile." For instance—but that would be too much.

Reminiscently,

THOS. CARRICK BURKE '81.

Reception for Wilson

Hon. James Wilson.

"This is a bigger demonstration than a common old hayseed like me can size up to," said ex-Secretary James Wilson to the enthusiastic audience which greeted him on his return to I. S. C. after sixteen years' service in the cabinet. Thus modestly did the veteran secretary receive the tribute paid by the students and faculty at the home-coming celebration.

Never before has there been such an impressive reception by the college in honor of any individual. Four thousand students, faculty, and people of Ames gathered at the gymnasium on Wednesday, March 12th, to pay respect to Tama Jim, the farmer, congressman, experiment station director, and secretary of agriculture—the most famous son of Iowa State College.

At 11:20 the I. S. C. cadets in command of General J. R. Lincoln, and headed by the college band, escorted Secretary Wilson, President Pearson, the Deans, and a number of other prominent persons to the east wing of the gymnasium. Here the cadets formed a double line through which the guests passed into the building and to their seats on a rostrum in the west end.

The body of the gymnasium was crowded with the faculty and guests, while the bleachers and running track were filled with students. The cadets stood in position in the east end of the gymnasium. During the seating of the crowd, the band, from the south balcony, played several selections. Dr. Cessna opened the convocation with prayer. America was sung by the whole audience, led by the two glee clubs.

President Pearson introduced Mr. Wilson, telling of his work the sixteen years he has been absent from Ames. The president read several telegrams of greetings from prominent men including ex-President Taft.

Mr. Wilson told of his interesting work as Secretary of Agriculture, and the good that this department brings the farmers all over the country. Governor Clarke spoke briefly of the advantages of an edu-education to men and women, laying especial emphasis on a higher education for women. After singing the college song, the crowd was given a chance to meet Mr. Wilson.

President Pearson entertained the two guests of honor and prominent business men of the community to the number of thirty-five at luncheon in the Home Economics building. Several toasts were given, followed by short talks by Secretary Wilson and Governor Clarke before all the women students.

In the evening, Mr. Wilson and Governor Clarke were the guests of honor at a reception and banquet tendered by the State Board of Education, the Faculty of the Iowa State College and the Ames Commercial Club.

History of the Class of 1914

"Through all the ages one increasing purpose runs and the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns."—Tennyson.

HISTORY is the means by which we measure our degree of advance. In a large institution of learning where each class comes in, plays its four short years of life upon the stage and goes out to be heard of no more, the influence of its stay can be preserved only by a record of its accomplishments. The adage that history repeats itself is borne out more accurately in the annals of collegiate classes than in any other records notwithstanding no organized class can live in a college community without directly or indirectly taking part in and affecting all life thereby. The class of 1914 at Iowa State College has in its three years witnessed many changes, helped win many collegiate victories and through merits of its individuals has attained a high plane in ranks of honors and scholarships. These are the things which will here be related.

Freshman Year

The class of 1914 entered the portals of learning September 1, 1910, with the largest enrollment of Freshmen entered at any one time. Nineteen hundred and ten marked the beginning of the increase of girls which from that year filled every room of Margaret Hall and in two years doubled its numbers, overran the Hall and made the establishment of annexes a necessity. From high school record sheets it was found that a very high per cent of the Freshmen were honor students of their classes in high school.

For the first few weeks the class, as a whole, was awkward and green, but this they soon outgrew and very early in their life, as a class, revealed those two essential qualities of students—squareness and grit.

First Class Meeting—The first class meeting was held on Tuesday night of the first week at 7:30 p. m. at the chapel. Although Roberts' Rules of Order were somewhat mutilated in the process, the following class officers were elected:

President	Charles Purchase
Vice-president	Donald Rate
Treasurer	R. C. Carter
Secretary	Marguerite Harrison
Sergeant-at-arms	Lewis R. Sanderson
Athletic Manager	George E. Gable
Historian	Mary Vaughn

Young enthusiasm reigned supreme. The first class yell was there initiated, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14-14-14. However, before the last 14 had died away the Sophs challenged by the nerve of these Preps were upon them. Reports, circulated about the campus the next day, told how many of the Preps spent a romantic night in the north or south woods and were too sleepy to attend classes next day. The '14's were the last Freshman class to hold its first meeting at 7:30 in the evening.

Postoffice Scrap—Open hostilities between the Freshman and Sophomore classes broke out Monday morning several weeks later when a Sophomore sign was seen on the postoffice. During chapel hour the Preps assembled in front to make their attack. With mighty force the Sophs held them at bay. Ten bells had almost struck when "Micky" McBride having been boosted up the back roof of the postoffice mounted the ridge and descended a rolling mass of man and sign into the outstretched arms of the Sophs. At that minute "Santie" with hair flying and hands raised in horror rushed upon them and no one knows where the scrap was finished.

Hall Initiations—The pushball contest was calculated to end all scrapping between the boys of the two lower classes. It did not suffice for the girls, however. That evening in the gymnasium there was a scene whose events are not usually told. Nigh onto midnight over the transoms of every Preps door came the ghostly shriek, "All Preps out," "Preps in the gym." Those girls having heard rumors of coming events hurried to the gym, immediately while the others with fear and trembling followed. It was not hard to confess that they were too homesick to roll matches on the floor with their noses (when they could blow them most of the way) or to play leap frog around the room to the accompaniment of dust pans and mops. Notwithstanding this no amount of threatening could prevail on them to give the '13 yell without ending with a "14."

First Football Games—Naturally the attention of the athletic world was turned toward speculating on the possibilities of the new class in football. At the exhibition game the bleachers were crowded. The Freshmen and Juniors battled and the interest centered on the new team. What a motley crew it was, unorganized, without captain, untrained, some hardly knowing the game. Little Bill, in for showing 'em what the Preps could do, assumed charge, and gave orders so fast that ere long the slogan from the bleachers was, "That's right, little Prep; show 'em what to do." The Juniors were fought to a standstill. O-O, the umpire said.

Later when the class games were played it so happened that the Freshmen were to fight the Juniors again—this time for class championship. In the meantime the '14 had organized a team of giant weights. The game was played and the Juniors defeated 6 to 0.

Squeaky Jones Takes Part in Class Scrap—No sooner had the championship been awarded than the Sophs jumped onto the Freshmen again. This time the '14's had the vantage ground. Stationed at the corner of the postoffice Hoper, Hansel and Seidell yelling "Come on, you guys, altogether one at a time," deftly picked up the Sophs as they came and tossed them back into the crowd. Meanwhile no one had noticed Squeaky Jones, who in the very midst of the mob was waving his hands frantically and pleading for them to stop. "Boys," he said, "can't you see who I am? Haven't I any authority here?" Then in sheer amusement the mob broke up.

Freshmen Hoist Colors

October 15th was a fearful day for the Preps. It was not until the middle of the forenoon when the mists had risen from the campus that the college people became aware of the Freshman colors flying from the flagpole. Moreover to the Sophs' surprise the pole was greased. For a while the Freshmen were confident in their victory, but a Soph after chapel hour finally succeeded in reaching the flag. Stantie, who was waiting at the foot of the pole to receive the coveted colors, was quite unnoticed when the Soph reached the ground and fled in terror. It is reported that the Sophomores had a war dance around the funeral pyre of that Prep flag.

Abolition of Hazing at I. S. C.

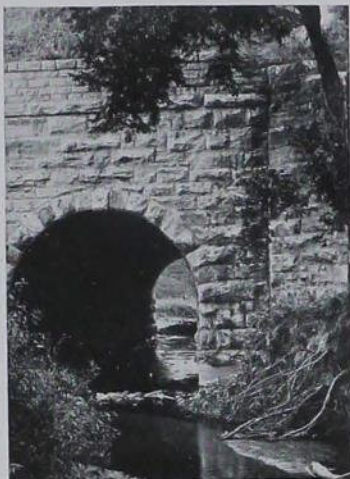

—For long it had been rumored over campus that following the leadership of some of the Eastern colleges, hazing would be abolished at I. S. C. At a special convocation in Ag. Assembly the question was brought before the student body for settlement. Examples of life-long injuries incurred here and elsewhere were cited by President Stanton in his talk to prove the inhumanity of such a practice. When the rising vote to abolish it was called for the audience to a man was on their feet. The student body, not the faculty, had abolished hazing notwithstanding that there were some who had taken pains to be absent at the time of expressing their stand on this subject. So it was not surprising to hear a few days later that ten Sophs had been expelled for more hazing. In order to redeem these ten men every Sophomore and Freshman was required to sign a written statement that he or she would never again engage in hazing of any kind. Thus endeth the history of abolition of hazing at I. S. C.

Naming the '14 Class—"What will the Sophomores name us?" was the next question on the lips of all of the Freshmen before their first Sophomore-Freshman Annual. What they did name us is still an uncertainty in so far as there is no written record left. After weeks of research and personal investigation a tradition of the naming of the class has been discovered. It is related that on the west wall of the gymnasium the night of the annual were placed a set of colored lights which blinked on and off alternately the numbers of 13 and 14. Then when the evening was spent and the musicians were playing the last strains of "Home Sweet Home" all lights were turned out save those at the end of the hall. Suddenly they blinked off to come on again spelling out the word "Quissex"—meaning "The Stars." So Quissex was to be the name of the new class.

How the Class Colors Were Changed

—At the second meeting of the Freshman class Orange and Black were chosen as the class colors. However, aside from the orange and black bows which the '14 girls wore to the pushball contest these never appeared in public. They say that the change in colors was due to a mistake at the factory where the class sweaters were made, for the sweaters sent were red and white. In this predicament the class did not persist on orange and black, so accepted the new colors. Those who would know the real story of changing the colors have only to refer to the Phi Gams and learn how Irish Bill wouldn't be an "Orange Man."

The Great Campus Reforms—A nation's greatness may be traced step by step through her reforms. The campus reform was inaugurated by the great Scotch naturalist, Thomas Sloss. After a searching glance over the campus this man went to the president with the startling proposition that "the campus can be pathless." So earnest was his conviction that the president decided to lend aid. At a general convocation President Stanton laid open the plan of reform and solicited the help of every student. With pathetic eloquence he pleaded "This grand and beautiful campus of ours must be pathless." The method of carrying out the reform was simple. Each student pledged himself to walk on the walks or cinder paths going to and from class and at all times except in the evening when only two were together.

'14 Athletics—No one can deny that the '14 class made a brilliant start toward athletic fame. In basketball 1911 they won the class championship with a team that furnished three regulars and one reserve on the varsity team for the next year.

In track the '14s won the home meet with forty-seven points against forty-three of the Juniors, their closest competitors. True most of the individual points were carried by Sloss in the pole vault and Hoper in the weights and even then the meet was undecided until the Freshmen won both relays, yet their capabilities were there and were revealed.

Remarkable Intellectual Ability—A people may rise higher than its physical strength only through its intellectual. The Quissex people were not only successful in athletics, but they furnished to the world men who were prone to be leaders in debating, scholarship and writing. Such an one as these, namely, Esther Brannen, was elected by the girls to be editor of the special girls' number of the Student. So successful a reporter and writer did she prove to be that room was wanting for over half the material which she turned in. In this special number appeared one of the first poems of our now illustrious poet, Grace Marie Conlon.

Recreation

'Tis nine forty-three, and all through the house	Such a babble and hubbub and noise do we hear,
Not a person is stirring, not even a mouse;	We know that at last the coast must be clear,
The rooms are all quiet, the girls are the same,	And out through the halls we can now safely roam
For this is the study hour, Margar- et Hall's fame.	Without any fear of being sent home.

Then soft through the air comes the ringing of bells,	From some noisy room comes the odor of fudge;
As nine forty-five the Campanile tells—	That a spead's going on is not hard to judge;
Closed are the books, opened the doors,	And for a while all is laughter, all play,
And into the hall a flock of girls pours.	For no one is thinking of lessons next day.

But just when the fun seems to be at its height,
And the fudge has cooled—then
out goes the light!
Ten thirty already! Oh, how the time flies!
Back to her dark room each girl
quickly hies.

—Grace Conlon, '14.

In debate, although all of the '14s (and there were many) who started in the first round of the Kennedy cup debates, could not finish up. Yet there was one, the present editor of the Bomb, who survived the preliminaries and was a member of the winning team.

The last achievement of the '14s as Freshmen was reported late in June. It came from the president's office and bore the news that the '14 class had the highest average of any class then in school and of any Freshman class to that day.

Introduction—In the fall of 1911 the Quissex people emerged out of what might be termed the rough stone age into the age of chivalry essentially a military age. They were self-confident, daring at war with everybody. Since the abolition of hazing they could not return the compliment to the Freshmen which they had received from the Sophomores. They could only win the pushball contest and be content with that. Some of the more barbarous became disgusted with the strict rules of the college.

The Work of the Women.—A history of any people would not be complete without dwelling for a topic or two upon the work of the women. In the fall of 1911 a new course was introduced in Home Economics called the art classes. As of old the girls would sit for hours over some crude figure or flower trying to reproduce it on rice paper, or they would reproduce in exact colors, the quaint Greek figures in oriental rugs. For what purpose was such a course? They were told that they might more artistically decorate the home, design ladies' dress-wear and appreciate the beautiful in nature. Tea tiles with original designs were molded, house plans drawn and painted, party gowns elaborated. Thus the architecture on eaves of buildings they noticed or the artistic pose of a little floweret.

Changing of the Chapel Hour—Another reform in which the '14s took part was the changing of chapel hour. In the future old chapel hour and its allurements will be a tradition to tell to the new classes. As yet there are those to whom it has been a pleasing realization. Early in the spring of 1912 by a majority vote of the students at a general convocation the chapel hour was changed from 9:40 to 7:45. Chapel is no longer a committee meeting.

First Ag. Carnival—When the Engineers laid claim to St. Patrick's day the Aggies, not to be outdone, established a new tradition, that of the Ag. Carnival. They were less violent in securing a holiday, yet so persistent that the faculty gave an afternoon in May for the celebration. An Ag. Carnival, what would it be like? Merry-go-rounds and ferris wheels? No, rather a prize parade, each division of the Ag. department competing. A carnival grounds on the pasture east of the campus, steam calliopes, sorority relay races, baseball games and moving picture shows in the evening. Even the stores of Ames were closed for the event and carloads of spectators from surrounding cities came to the celebration.

Introduction—The fall of 1912 found the Quissex people back at Ames, an entirely different people. During the summer interim they had emerged out of the age of chivalry into the age of modern industrial peace. Responsibility had at last settled heavily upon them and they rose to the occasion. The occasion was the issuing of the Bomb.

Those upon whose shoulders the burden rested most heavily are elsewhere listed.

Coming of the New President—Dr. Raymond A. Pearson came to Ames in October, 1912. To have a real president at the head of the institution was indeed a luxury, yet so long and faithfully had Dr. Stanton served in that capacity that we were loath to see him leave it. However, the new president won the hearts of all when in his inaugural address he said: "I come not to fill the place which Dr. Stanton has, but to work with him."

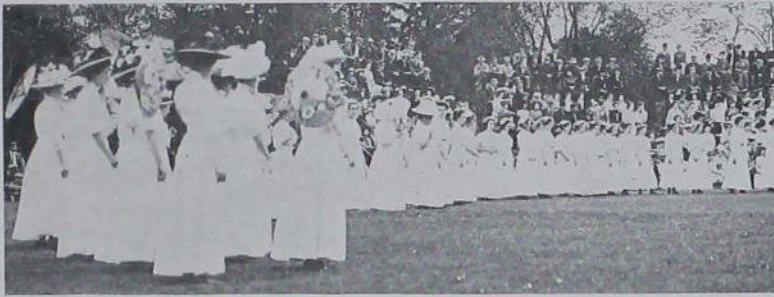

The Passing of Chemistry Hall

—It was 9:00 o'clock the night before spring vacation. The Junior girls were studying for a "take over" in Zoology when through the stillness the fire bell pealed out a doleful tone. People had said that once the old building started to burn nothing would stop it. At eleven the gas tank in the basement exploded and the walls fell in. Excepting the farm house chemistry hall was the oldest building on the campus. Its principal virtues were its age and its vines of ivy which for years entailed it and lent their charms to its antiquity.

The Awakening of The Cardinal Guild.—Until the year 1912-1913 it would not have been surprising to hear a Senior ask, "What is the Cardinal Guild?" and we in all sincerity would answer that it is an age-old institution sleeping under the laurels of its past. Today we have no need to answer that question. Like China the Cardinal Guild has awakened and is asserting itself. It has established an auditing committee whereby all class treasury books are inspected. It is abolishing smoking from the campus and is settling the question of Freshmen rules.

Summary

Conclusion—Thus we find the Quissex people preparing to assume their final role as Seniors. Perhaps no previous class has had a more significant period of time in which to live. More changes in the courses of study, more courses introduced than in any other similar four years. The Home Economics building, the Veterinary building and the new gymnasium, three of the finest equipped buildings of their kind in the country, have been completed and ere the Bomb is issued the workmen's hammers will be sounding from the newly laid foundation of Chemistry Hall. More vital questions such as the pathless campus, chapel attendance, smoking on the campus, abolition of hazing and the establishment of Freshmen rules, a compulsory forensic and athletic fee and finally "keeping the girls at Ames" will have seen their final settlement, a settlement which the '14s have had an inestimable influence in bringing about. This class has witnessed more athletic, forensic and stock judging victories for old cardinal and gold than any before.

Among its numbers are seen a goodly representation of "A" men both in the athletic and forensic fields and were women allowed to compete for these honors there would be as many "A" women. However, such a history as this would be incomplete without paying tribute to the Alma Mater who has protected, fostered and held out her opportunities through all the stages of development of the class. One more year will determine whether the '14s have lived up to their name, Quissex; then elsewhere other historians will record the deeds of their men and women.

The New Gymnasium

AT LAST the work is finished. The old training shed has disappeared and there now remains only a memory of the afternoons in early spring spent in jogging up and down the wet cinder floor and leaping over puddles of water.

In place of the old shack there now stands a large brick building, 297 feet long with a maximum width of eighty-three feet, the wings being seventy-seven. It is two stories high. This general description of the building may give an incomplete impression of its appearance, and in order to complete the picture an idea of its surroundings must be gained. It stands on the southwest corner of the campus, just south of the West Gate Road. The main doors open to the north.

To the south lies the new athletic field with room for tennis courts, baseball diamonds and gridiron. Around the latter is a quarter mile cinder track with a 220-yard straight-away course. The inside of the track is marked with a permanent cement curbing. To the west of the track and football field is to be constructed a concrete grandstand long enough to contain a hundred-yard indoor running track. It will accommodate at least 2,000 spectators. Movable bleachers will be used to place on the east side of the field and for the diamond. The intention is to enclose the field with a permanent brick wall on the north and west sides, and with a reinforced concrete or ornamental iron wall on the south and east. The plans for the field are as yet not complete.

Swimming Pool

Ground Floor

Just how the work is progressing may be judged by glancing at the interior. Let us enter the northwest and descend a few steps to the ground floor. Turning to the left we enter the tank room which contains a swimming pool 30x60 feet in dimensions with a maximum depth of eight feet. The interior is finished in white porcelain-faced brick and the floor is decorated with a pattern of sea green material incorporated into the material of the floor. On the west side of the pool floor is a shower room through which bathers using the tank are supposed to pass before entering the pool in order that the water may remain uncontaminated.

If we had turned to the right as we went in the main door we should have entered the large room 79x169 feet in dimensions with dirt floor which is used for general conditioning and training purposes. In this room are sand pits for broad and high jumping and vaulting, and a sliding pit for baseball practice. A cord net is stretched at the west end for the convenience of the baseball men. Passing through this large room we enter the first floor locker rooms. This floor of the west wing is divided into two smaller rooms, one on each side for the varsity and visiting teams, besides a large room in the center for class and department teams. In connection with each of these are toilet rooms and shower baths. Each of the smaller rooms contains about forty lockers and the large one about 300.

On the way to the second floor we pass store rooms and upon reaching it, we find offices, the faculty locker rooms, two special exercise rooms and a library and lounging room. From here we enter the main exercise floor and play room. It is 169 feet long and 79 feet wide with a hardwood floor. Suspended from the roof trusses, twelve feet above the main floor is a twelve-lap running track, twelve feet in width with banked ends and corners. This room is already furnished with all sorts of apparatus including horizontal and parallel bars, vaulting bars, climbing ropes, traveling rings, flying rings, chest weights, an intercostal machine, a wrist machine, horses, bucks, dumbbells, wands, spring boards, mats, jumping and vaulting standards, batting cages, a kicking pan and small articles, such as basket balls, medicine balls, hand balls and indoor baseballs. The floor is marked for three basketball courts, one indoor baseball court, one tennis and one volley ball court.

Passing to the east wing from the main floor we cross the hall into the main locker room. This contains space for 800 lockers with a forced ventilating system. This room has in connection two large shower baths and toilet rooms. The building is finished throughout in polished oak and is steam heated from the college power plant. It is electrically lighted, but ample provision has been made for sunlight and air to enter without obstruction.

We who are at present students of Iowa State College are fortunate in being able to observe the beginning of a new era in the athletic life of our Alma Mater. Given the material, there is no end to the miracles we may accomplish if we go about it with the determination to accomplish those miracles.

But one thing must be taken into consideration and guarded against, with the utmost care. Having at last been furnished with a suitable place for carrying on an athletic training and education, we may be inclined to slacken our efforts and relax a little in striving to develop our athletic ability, thinking that the improved facilities and conditions will make up for lack of effort on our part. Just as surely as this condition of affairs begins, just so surely will the standard of excellence in our athletic work be lowered. It is only by continuing our former enthusiasm, and each man doing his best to furnish the necessary competition that the new gymnasium will accomplish the mission for which it was intended. Under these conditions it will not only boost for the reputation of the school, but will make of each of us a stronger and healthier man, one more able and fit to combat successfully the life before us.

We have a gym of which we may well be proud. It furnishes quarters for visiting teams for which we need not apologize. It will furnish an assembly hall of sufficient capacity to take care of functions larger than ordinary college affairs. We will find uses for it which we do not yet imagine. It is incumbent upon us to show the grand old state which made it possible for us to enjoy it that the expenditure of the necessary sum was justified.

It is largely to the efforts of Prof. S. W. Beyer, general manager of athletics in this school, who has led and directed the campaign for the new gymnasium, that this gift of the legislature is due. It is to his loyalty to the school, his perseverance in striving for what he considered essential to the best welfare of the college that we owe this splendid building.

Therefore, it is through the columns of this publication that the class of 1914 and with us the student body of Iowa State College wish to tender a sincere vote of thanks to Professor Beyer for his work in our behalf.

DR. A. R. HACKETT.

DR. A. R. HACKETT joined us last fall as the assistant physical director and trainer. He started his work here by training and coaching the track aspirant for the fall meets. Dr. Hackett gained his athletic experience by seven years of Y. M. C. A. work and also as basketball coach at Drake University. While at Drake he finished his medical course.

Dr. Hackett has already won popularity among the athletes of the school and is one of the busiest men about the gym getting in shape for the new course in gymnastics and physical training. Welcome in our midst, Doctor!

JACK WATSON.

The end of the spring track season of 1913 will mean the end of Jack Watson's service as a trainer of Iowa State College athletics.

"Jack," we're sorry to see you go. However, if it is to your advantage to leave, we appreciate the fact that you stuck by us till our magnificent new gym and athletic field were finished—a result of your untiring efforts. It is the sincere wish of every Ames student and alumnus that your new surroundings and relationships shall be the most pleasant and congenial and that their appreciation of your worth shall be as keen as ours. We bid you Godspeed.

CLYDE WILLIAMS.

In 1907 there came to us from the field of dental surgery a man who has since become of national repute as the director of Ames athletics, as a football coach, and as an authority on all phases of college athletics.

Clyde Williams is known by all lovers of true sport to be a square sportsman. He is a graduate of the State University of Iowa and the old grads still talk about his exploits on the diamond and gridiron.

Since coming to Ames he has coached three State Championship football teams and two Missouri Valley Championship teams. To say that we are proud of Clyde is putting it pretty mildly.

HOMER HUBBARD.

Although to Jack and Clyde go the major honor in the coaching of our victorious teams on field and diamond, no less honor should be accorded their able assistants, men who received their training where they now strive to train. Among these is Homer Hubbard, assistant football and baseball coach, and head coach of the basketball team. "Hub" is an Ida Grove Product who earned a prominent place while yet in high school athletics by his work there.

So far in the history of the institution "Hub" has surely made good as assistant coach here. He turned out a championship basketball team here last year and developed a good, scrappy bunch this year from extremely light material as compared with the teams they bucked up against. "Hub" enjoys the support of student athletic sentiment, coaching his teams to win with honor for I. S. C.

HORACE I. RINGHEIM.

Horace I. Ringheim, winner of A's in football and baseball, spent most of his afternoons in the last fall months prodding the Scrubs with a sharp stick. He picked and developed a good solid bunch for the Varsity to buck up against. The result of his work made the words Scrub and Reserve synonymous in the minds of the Varsity. "Horse" deserves much credit for his share of the work last fall and the team next year will owe their success in a large measure to his coaching.

EDWIN HARTE.

"Busty" Harte—called Edwin by his folks—coached the class teams. "Busty" was the captain of the '11 Cyclones, and the wonderful success of that season may be largely attributed to his grit and scrappy qualities. This year, when he wasn't busy with the class teams he was hangin' round the Varsity bench, picking out weak places. We have to thank "Busty" for much of our success last fall.

Football Season 1912

Upon the opening of college work for the fall term, Clyde issued the call for football candidates. The old spirit of "every man out" was the immediate response. With nearly a whole month to practice, we had great hopes of putting the "kibosh" on Minnesota in the first game of the season, scheduled at Minneapolis on October 5th. Our hopes were rather rudely dashed to earth when the team returned, bruised and battered, with the zero end of a 5-0 score. Minnesota made her scores on a safety and a place-kick, both questionable. The score shows that it wasn't a walk away for the Gophers. Juhl, with a bone broken in his arm, played through nearly half of the game without a murmur of his injury. Hurst played a stellar game, and ran the team irreproachably. Dave Wilson, McDonald and Crawford did mighty good work.

Although defeated in the first game, the good showing they made gave them the needed confidence, and the week following they started their victorious march by winning from Simpson 24 to 7. Simpson played a fast, clean game. Fullback Sells, of the visitors, put up a very pretty exhibition of football; Betts, of Simpson, also played a good game. "By" Moad made a get-away for twenty-five yards straight up the sidelines for a touchdown. Buck Hurst played another star game, and "Dutch" Weyrauch played in his usual smashing style.

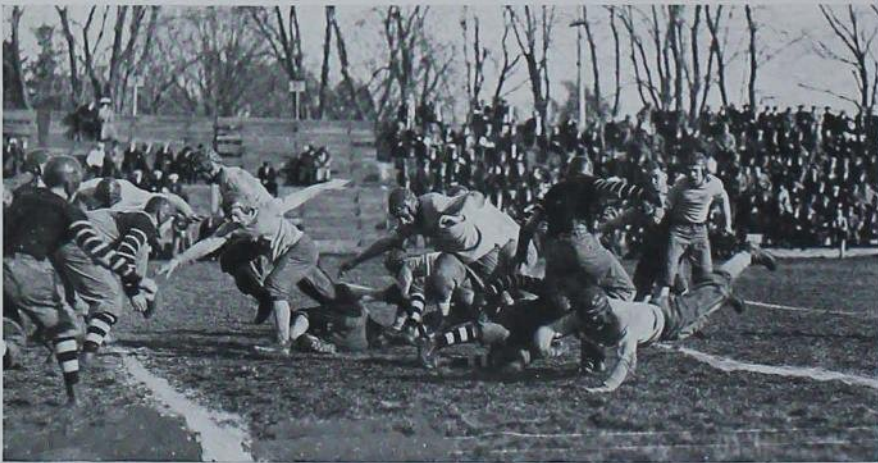

On October 19th the team went to Missouri. The tigers were weaker than the boys expected, and they had no particular difficulty in getting twenty-nine points to their credit while Missouri laid a goose-egg. Hurst featured the game by running through the whole Missouri team for a touchdown. Nagle and McDonald both showed up to good advantage, and Weyrauch lived up to his appellation of the "Fighting Dutchman." Nuff sed.

In the Grinnell game of the 26th, Brennan made several remarkable runs, but had to be taken out on account of his lame shoulder. The team as a whole played well, no one making any particular "grandstands," however, but played a consistent game throughout. Sherman and Egan starred for Grinnell. Ames had the spread formation worked on them several times before they solved the problem.

Morningside came down on November 2d, and threatened the Cyclones' goal on several occasions. Weyrauch played in his old style again, and Eichling made a remarkable showing in the line. Brennan was in the game hardly five minutes, yet made a touchdown and added many yards to our credit.

The team went to Mt. Vernon on Nov. 9th, everybody feeling fit. They came home with the big end of a 21-0 score, earned by hard playing. Moad and Weyrauch in the half-back positions made gain after gain. Buck Hurst returned punts beautifully, and never made a slip in running the team.

On Nov. 18th, the boys had a date with Iowa. Our hopes ran high, but pessimists said that the record we had been making was too good to last. That spoiled it all and we were defeated 20-7. Iowa had a backfield, light and extremely fast on its feet. Our boys failed to get their plays off in good shape, lacking the snap and vim that characterized their earlier games. Iowa played a clean, hard game, and earned their victory. Hurst played up to standard, while Reeve kept his position corked tight. Hanson and Trickey were towers of strength in the Iowa line.

The last game of the season was played with Drake at Des Moines on Nov. 23d. It was a great display of real football, and the Cyclones wiped out the defeat of the week before on the blue jerseys of their opponents. Buck Hurst played the best game of his long and brilliant football career. He finished his captaincy of the Cyclones in a blaze of glory. As a fitting climax to his gridiron achievements, he ran sixty-five yards through the whole Drake team for a touchdown. The rest of the team followed the example of their captain, and repeatedly forced their opponents across their own goal line. Weyrauch and Burge, old warriors for the Cardinal and Gold, gave all that they had, and wrote their names with gold letters in the minds of every true I. S. C. supporter. The score was 23 to 3.

This game finished a season, which, taken as a whole, was eminent-ly successful. The Cyclones finished second in the state race, and took the Missouri Valley honors to themselves.

The Reserves

THE Varsity in the fall of 1912 were forced to buck up against the most promising bunch of Scrubs that ever appeared on State Field. In strength, weight, speed and general knowledge of the game they were almost the equal of the Varsity squad, the pick of the eligibles. Every night after four o'clock regular football games were staged, each vying in interest with regular intercollegiate games. Some mighty clever playing was brought into notice and the Reserves must be given due credit for the splendid showing made by the Cyclones throughout the season.

The backfield men showed up especially strong. "Jock" Sloss, quarterback, ought to make another Buck Hurst. Uhl played a dashing game at fullback and was almost equal in line bucking of any college or university man that the Cyclones ran up against all last season. Mattison filled the position of left half with wonderful ability. He is mighty fast, large and strong, and is a splendid kicker. Simpson and Rath will make good quarterback men, and Beyer, Davis, Nelson, Neel and Truax will furnish material out of which, with the old Varsity men available, we should be able to pick a backfield that will outclass any others in the entire Missouri Valley. Not only do we have splendid backfield material, but the line has shown equally as good quality. Tiernan, Holmes, Costigan and Garst should be able to beat some of the Varsity men out of the end positions. They have all played good games this fall and under Clyde's tutelage should show wonderful progress. Wormhoudt will without a doubt make one of the greatest tackles Ames has had. He has the size, strength and enough experience to develop rapidly into a whirlwind. We have plenty of material for other tackles in McKinley, a hundred and ninety-five pound infant, with lots of strength and nerve, Hawkins, a two hundred pounder, with much room for development, Webb, Thayer, Carr Bowers and Frink, all of whom are big, with plenty of strength and speed, and a bunch of battlers, one and all. From these men also could be picked the men for the guard positions and we have all kinds of star centers in John, who has kept the Varsity guessing all fall, Bird, who has played good ball, and McClung, right at his heels all the time.

The Track Season

THE track season of 1912 was a most successful one, when one considers the handicap the team suffered through lack of training quarters. While we lost to Nebraska and tied with Drake, we more than "came back" in the Missouri Valley Meet. "Jack" Watson's pride was a well-balanced team and was easily the best team in the state.

The beginnings of the season were unusually gloomy. Work started as usual with "Jack's" pep meeting early in February and training was begun in the old shed. But it was not until the early part of April that the men were able to get out on the track. When once out, work began in earnest, distance men going out twice a day.

The Home Meet came April 13th, only two weeks after the men had gotten out on the cinder path. It was a cold, raw day, with a bad wind and there were no sensational records made. Dickinson, a Freshman, carried off individual honors. The Sophomores won the meet with a little margin, while the Juniors, Freshmen and Seniors followed in the order named.

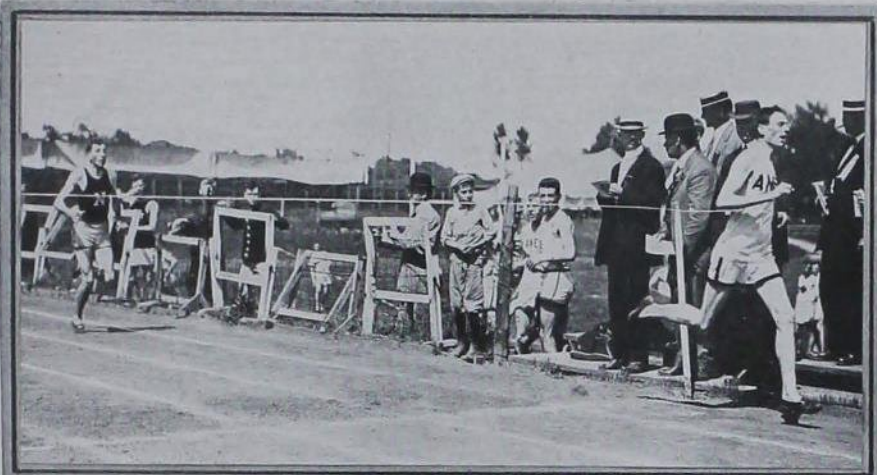

The next week the relay teams, picked in the Home Meet went to the Drake Relay Carnival at Des Moines. Ames' four-mile team added laurels to their list. As a whole, however, the better equipped schools had much the advantage. The twenty-seventh of April found the team in the Nebraska camp, where it was forced to leave a lion's share of the points. It seemed an unlucky day for the wearers of the cardinal and gold. Farquhar lost the mile only by a very slim margin, while Manning was beaten in the half-mile run that went in high school time. Moad had to stop jumping to catch a train just as he was getting his take off nicely.

The Triangle, on account of bad weather, was postponed until May 13th. Grinnell was unable to attend on this date on account of the State Meet, so that left only a dual meet with Drake. The outcome was a tie. Hoper and Vincent in the weights did good work, while Collins in the two mile run came out surprisingly strong. This was probably the last field day meet which will be held on State Field.

May 25th the team again journeyed to the Capital City to take part in the Fifth Missouri Valley Meet. This was the crowning success of the season. Last year Ames pulled five points; this year her total was seventeen and a half, giving her third place. Farquhar was Ames' star man and one of the stars of the meet. His record in the mile run will stand for some time to come. The mile came early in the meet and Farquhar's success seemed to put more life and determination into the team, as the results seem to testify. Hoper and Vincent in the weights, Sloss and Smith in the pole vault, Manning in the half-mile and the relay teams all did their part in putting Ames up to third position.

Cross Country Run

AT THE opening of the 1912 Cross Country season Jack Watson found that Captain Ward was the only man of last year's championship team. The home try-out was held on Nov. 2d, with about thirty men contesting. Manning, followed closely by Snyder and Ward, covered the five-mile course in twenty-eight minutes and thirty seconds. The first six men to finish were Manning, Snyder, Ward, Haggard, Grass and Hoyt.

The team, weakened through the absence of Snyder, journeyed to Columbia, Missouri, on the 9th to participate in the Missouri Valley Meet. Missouri, accustomed to the hard roads and paved streets, won the meet easily, Ames second, with Kansas third and Drake fourth. The Ames men finished 5th, 6th, 8th, 9th and 21st. (Only four men counted in this contest.)

The "Big Nine" Cross Country run was held at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., on Nov. 23d. Ames left imbued with the determination to even up with Missouri for the beating that she gave us two weeks previous. The team weakened by the illness of Grass, McWhorter was substituted. Ames finished second, with Wisconsin first and Missouri third. The Ames men finished 7th, 11th, 14th, 26th, 29th and 30th. The standings of the team were as follows: Wisconsin 61, Ames 87, Missouri 111, Northwestern 128, Ohio State 140, Illinois 145, Indiana 152, Purdue 209, Iowa 209, Chicago 248.

The Season in Baseball

FROM the first call of the coaches up until the end of the season baseball was indeed a success. Captain Kerrigan's men were filled with the old Ames fight, and fought bravely all teams they met. With the men left from last year's squad and several good men to pick from the Sophomore class Coaches Williams and Hubbard soon rounded an ideal team into shape.

The pitching staff consisted of Levison, Gates, Frazin, Mead, and Wether.

The first line up was Kerrigan, ss.; Buckman, 1st; Mason 3d; Hansel 2d; Miller, l. f.; McMillan, c. f.; Ringham, c.; and Brennan, r. f.

On April 18th, the team left for Columbia, Mo., and on the 19th of April met the Tigers in the first game of the season. In the first inning the Ames team sifted out the Missouri pitcher's curves and made away with four scores. Levison struck out ten men. Score: Ames, 6; Missouri, 2.

On the next day Mead stepped into the box and showed his old form by only allowing one hit and retiring ten Missouri batsmen. Score, 6; Missouri, 4.

On April 26th, the team journeyed to Grinnell. The game was hard fought, but was characterized by many errors costing us the game, 2-1. Levison pitched.

1-3. On the next day the team met Simpson at Indianola and took them on in a hard fought battle to the tune of 2-1. Levison pitched.

On May 4th a monster crowd saw the Cyclones make their initial bow of 1912 on the State Field. Page's Colts from the University of Chicago were here for the occasion. Levison pitched with might and main, his team mates could get only one hit and the visitors went home with the score 4 to 0.

Three days after the Chicago game, Ames showed an improved ability to pound the ball and with the help of Grinnell's tendency to throw the sphere into the stands secured a score of 8 to 6, and sweet revenge for a previous defeat on Grinnell's field.

On May 9th and 10th, Frazier and Levison went to the mound successively in an attempt to tame the Tigers, but the men from the south had their war clubs with them and were easy victors. Hackney performed stunts never heard of before on State Field and the entire Missouri team was not far behind.

"Beat Iowa," "Beat Iowa," such was the call that came from the two thousand rooters on May 14th, and the Cyclones responded nobly. Iowa was rattled. Berry kicked the sphere all around the diamond and the boys were playing havoc with the cover stitches. The weather was threatening to stop the scrimmage, but the boys hustled up a little and the victory bell was ringing when we went home that night.

Nine purple clad warriors invaded the camp fires of State Field on May 17th and engaged in battle with Williams' first regiment. After numerous efforts to turn the enemy's flank, Kerry led a charge at their center and when the smoke cleared away Cornell was in disorderly retreat. Levison had the twelve purple scalps hanging to his belt and not a single visitor had pounded the sphere for a safety. Hinkly was the only member of his tribe to reach first base. One week after this Ames returned the visit, but lost the game in the ninth inning by the close score of 2 to 1.

On the next day Ames traveled on to Iowa City and although Levison struck out twelve of the Iowa batters we lost the game 4 to 5.

The next and last game of the season was played with Simpson and they went down before the whirl of the Ames Cyclones to the tune of 4 to 2.

BASKET BALL

Basketball

THE 1913 basketball season, although not a victorious one, marked the opening of the dedication of a new gymnasium to the basketball interests.

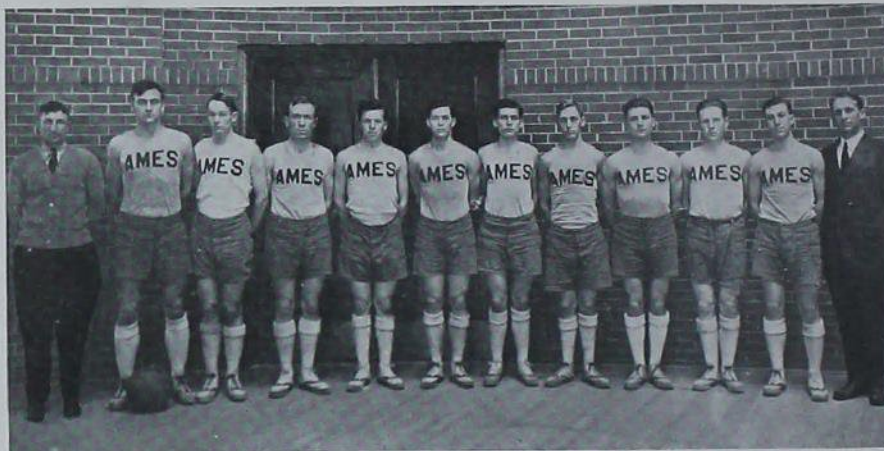

Immediately after Christmas the aspirants were back imbued with a determination to bring victory to their new home. The material though practically new with the exception of Pfund late developed into a comparatively strong team. However, "Hub" had a big job rounding out his warriors for the trip south.

The season opened with a trip south and of the five games played including two with Washington, two with Missouri and one with Drake, all were lost with the exception of the last one. Victory resulted in the Drake contest with a score of 11 to 6. Barring Ames' weakness in scoring when opportunity offered they played encouraging and consistent basketball.

A second victory followed for Ames on February 6th, with Drake, dedicating the new gymnasium in proper style to the score of 32 to 18. Grinnell and Iowa came next in order with defeat following the Cardinal and Gold trail.

Following these came Missouri, Grinnell, Nebraska and Iowa in rapid succession, accompanied by the same bad story except in the last Missouri game. Ames' supporters and enthusiasts of the basketball squad will long remember the fight displayed to whip Missouri for her past unkindness. The old I. S. C. spirit ran rife that day and the old fight revived, which the loyal student will always hold in memory.

The season closed with two defeats from Nebraska U.

Though defeat was the password for the 1913 season all hopes are banked on the increased gymnasium facilities in moulding future victorious teams.

R. A. Rath, College Singles Champion

THIS year developed the strongest team that has represented Ames for several years. Good weather was slow in coming. Practice did not begin until late, but there was plenty of good material out and the slow start was soon made up.

Ames was represented this year at two tournaments, the Missouri Valley and the Triangular, including Coe, Grinnell and Ames. In the first of these we were not very successful. The team was composed of Cave and Summers who played singles and Elijah and Warsaw in doubles. Although we won but one match, our men were beaten only by the best at the tournament.

In the Triangular meet we were victorious in every match. The same team that played at Columbia met Grinnell on their courts.

Cave (Ames) defeated Hopkins (Grinnell) 6-4, 6-4.

Elijah (Ames) defeated Dawjah (Grinnell) 6-0, 6-0.

Warsaw and Summers

(Ames) defeated Hunter and Harrison (Grinnell) 9-7, 6-4, 6-3.

At the same time Coe received the same treatment at Ames.

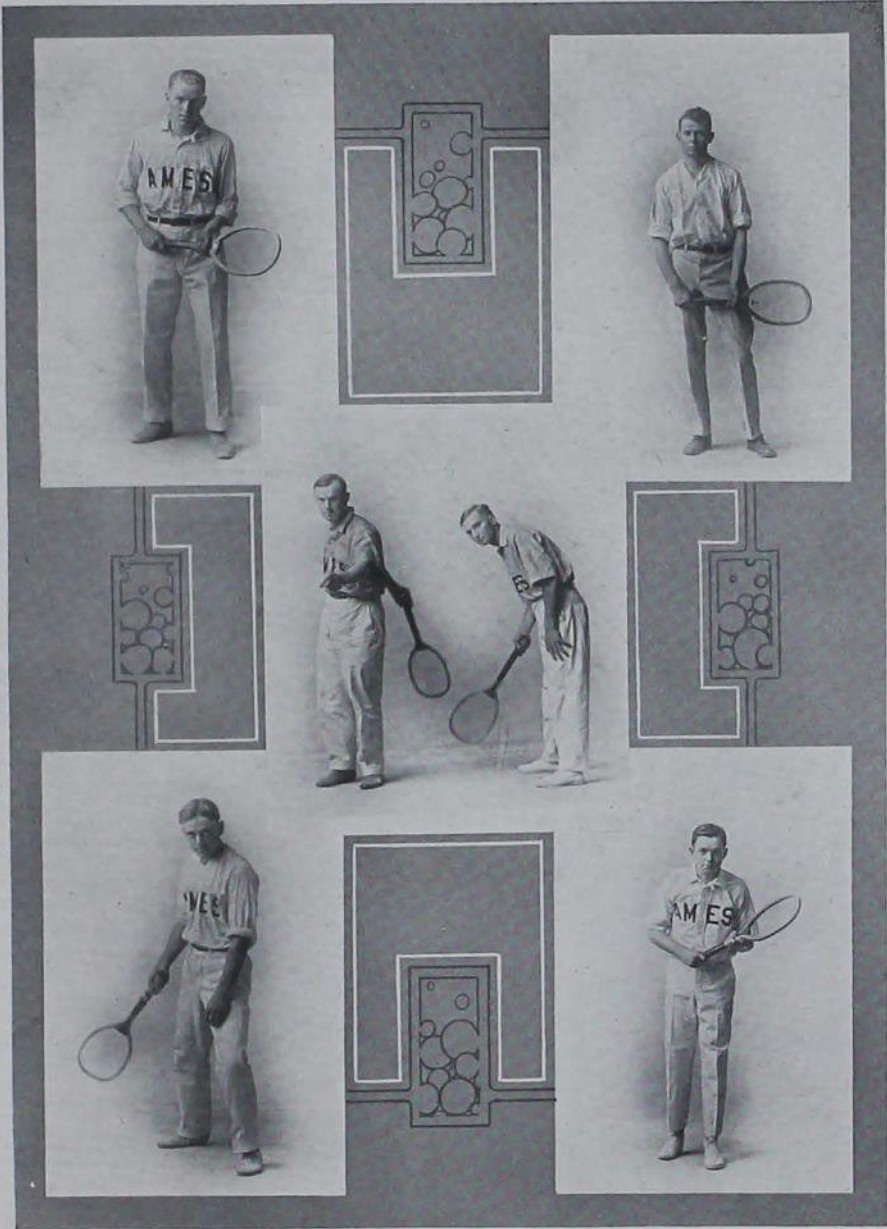

Whitehead (Ames) defeated Rogers (Coe) 6-1, 8-6.

Fenton (Ames) defeated Nesbit (Coe) 6-4, 6-1.

Porter and Tompkin (Ames) defeated Parker and Drifer (Coe) 6-3, 6-8, 6-3, 6-4.

In the home meet for the McKay cup the freshmen won both in singles and doubles. Rath won the college championship in singles and Beach and Aldrich in doubles.

We hope that with added facilities when the new athletic ground is completed, this sport will become more prominent and popular than it is at present.

Women's Athletics

WOMEN'S Athletics are divided into two distinct divisions, indoor and outdoor work. The first six weeks of the fall term and the last six weeks of the spring term are devoted to outdoor work; the intervening time is taken up with indoor work, which includes marching tactics, calisthenics, fancy dancing, apparatus work, and fencing. At the close of the indoor season an exhibition of the year's work is given, at which time honors are awarded to the freshman girl who has done the best work throughout the year, and to the sophomore girl who wins the greatest number of points in the "try-out."

This year, for the first time, a silver cup is to be awarded to the freshman girl who shows the most development at the end of the year, and to the sophomore girl who shows the most development after two years of work.

Outdoor work consists of basketball, hockey and tennis. Medals are awarded in the basketball and hockey to the girls who play two out of three, or three out of four games and pass a satisfactory examination over the rules of the game. Tennis medals are awarded to girls winning in singles or doubles and passing an examination over the rules. To win her first medal in a sport, a girl must have an average of eighty per cent, for her second medal, an average of eighty-five per cent, and for her third medal, an average of ninety per cent.

"A's" are awarded to the girls winning three medals of any kind. To the girl winning three medals, no two of which are alike, a silver cup is given.

Keep the Girls at Ames

JUST as a historian of old wrote, "The history of the human race is a history of war"—so may we write the history of 1912-1913 college year at I. S. C., as a history of war against the State Board of Education. No sooner had President Pearson assumed his duties than a severe blow fell upon Ames. On the eve of October 2d, up from Cedar Rapids came reports of the Educational Board's action—an action which implied the combining of the engineering courses of Iowa City and Ames, at Ames and the removing of the home economic courses and general science courses of Ames and Cedar Falls to Iowa. When the report fell, the college students, as one, staggered beneath it, hardly believing.

The next morning chapel was a sight long to be remembered. Long before 7:45, the girls of the college were standing before the closed doors—a silent company. Solemn and short was the morning worship. When President Pearson made the announcement public of the Board's action, there was hardly a dry eye among the girls while the boys, as deeply grieved, endeavored to suppress their feelings.

It soon became apparent that the action of the Board was final. If so, the time for action of the student body had come. The night following the issuing of the report, four mass meetings were held to determine a method of action: one by the Commercial Club of Ames, the other by the girl students, the agricultural students and the engineers. From these three student meetings, a student committee with representatives from each department of the college was elected. It was significant of the movement that the chairman of this student committee should be a girl, Helen Osler. Could walls speak, the east room of the Alumnae Hall might tell of the denunciations poured out on the heads of the Educational Board by that committee. That room, could it speak, could tell of heated discussion and gigantic plans of campaign—plans worthy of comparison with Napoleon's for conquering Europe.

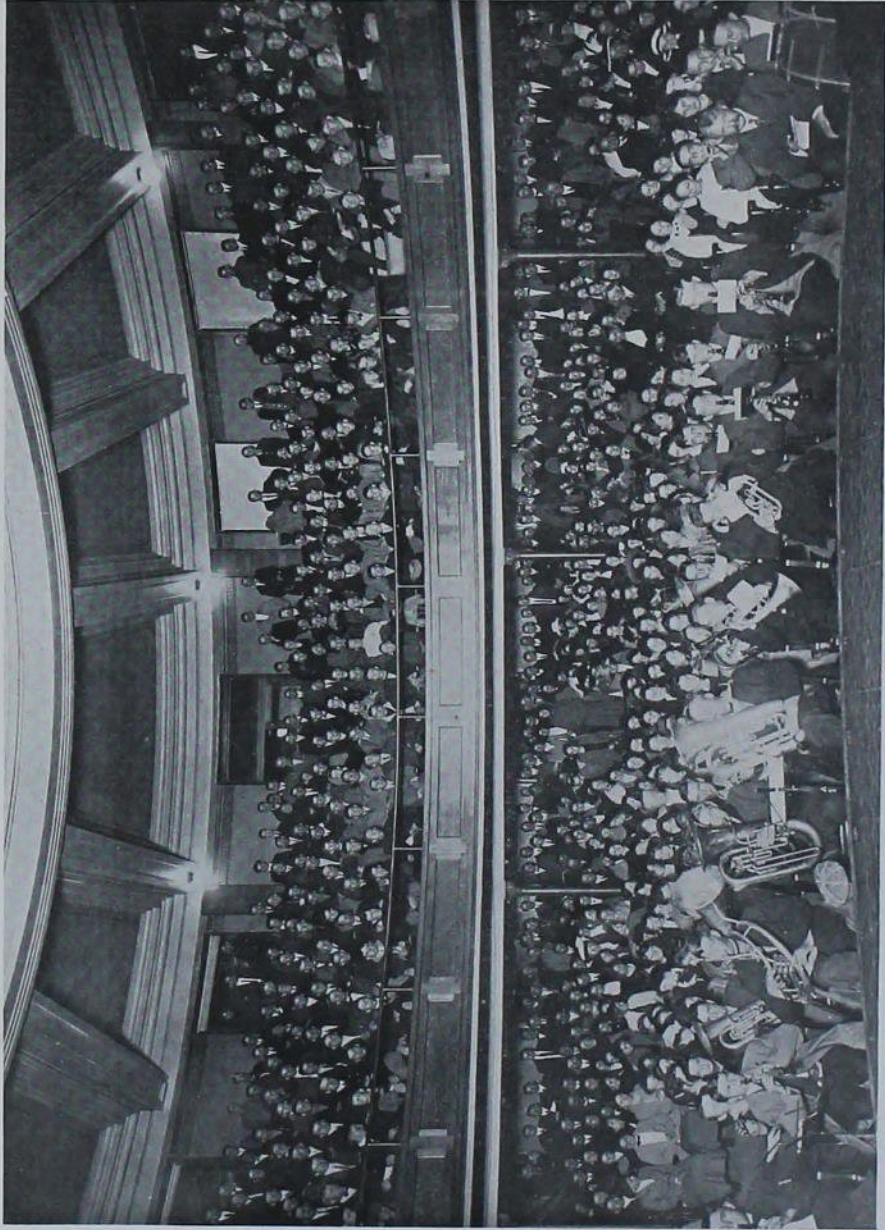

A set of resolutions demanding that the board rescind their actions was first drawn up. When these were absolutely ignored by that body, the committee next drew up a campaign. Chairmen of students from each county were appointed, information incorporating the arguments for retaining the girls were widely distributed and pressure brought to bear upon the candidates for seats in the state houses. The Alumni Association contributed their share by giving first aid and generally superintending the campaign. A tag day to defray expenses brought $200.00. When the State Board visited Ames every courtesy was accorded them and their judgment shown due respect. The Home Economics Department heaped coals of fire upon their heads by preparing them a most delicious luncheon.

The result terminated in a fight on the floor of the House and Senate.

It gradually became apparent that the removal of the girls was the most unpopular of the Board's changes. The outcome seemed fully settled long before the House took final action (April 19) providing for the Home Economics at Ames.

FORENSICS.

FRANK MARASCO

The Forensic Year

I. S. C. has just closed another successful year in the realm of forensic art. Although a great many valuable veterans graduated with last year's class, new recruits sprang up and have proved to be valuable men in the forensic field.

Literary and forensic work at I. S. C. is not all "grind," but it is sandwiched here and there by some of the lighter and more frivolous affairs of college life. Indeed, the real work of the semester did not begin until after the great Inter-society Picnic, October 18th. Hundreds of faculty and students, in response to that hidden impulse, gathered in the north woods, played games, listened to witty speeches and devoured the "eats" which the committee had prepared. Truly that was a great day. It seems that such a day should come oftener than once a year.

On November 8th, the first round of the Kennedy Cup debates was held. Eight societies competed in this round. The Pythian affirmative team met the Forum negative and won a clear-cut, 3-0 decision. The Delphian affirmative battled with the Welch negative, but they could not stand the pace set by the experienced Welchmen and as a result lost the debate by a 2-1 decision. The Crescent negative team met the Beardshear affirmative with a fierce line of argument which gained the unanimous decision of the judges. On this same night, the Bachelors and Phileleuthori's clashed swords, but the Bachelor team of veteran seniors carried away two points to the Phile's one.

The annual debate with the State Teachers' College was held on the night of November 15th, just after the big "pep" meeting for the Iowa game. The enthusiasm of the evening enabled Fenton, Ellis and Clyde to win a 3-0 victory. While this was going on, the other team, composed of Dorchester, Joy and Smith, were at Cedar Falls fighting to keep their opponents from gaining more than a 2-1 victory.

On December 6th the second round of the Kennedy Cup Debates was held. The Crescents won a close 2-1 victory over the Pythians and the Welch won a unanimous decision from the Philomatheans.

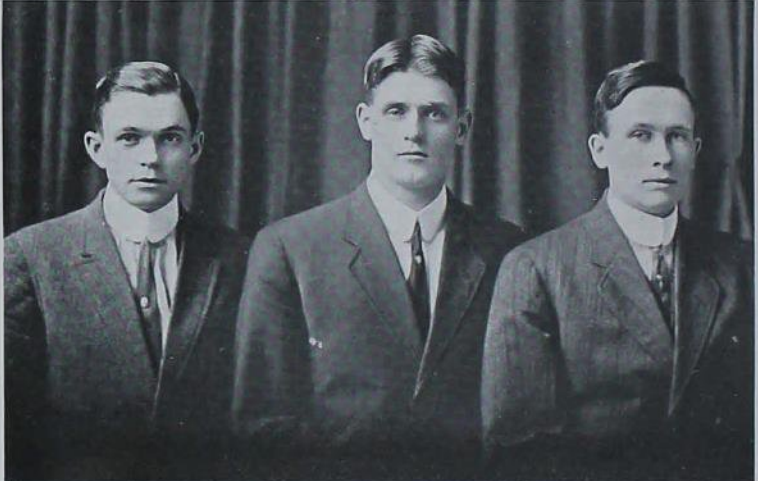

The annual triangular debate with Drake and Grinnell was one of the events of the year which will long be remembered in forensic circles. Joy, Gillette and Wambeam won an easy victory over Grinnell on our home floor. The team composed of Wasser, Dorchester and Burlingham lost to Drake.

In the home oratorical contest, Floyd Wambeam won a close first over Glenn Campbell and Verne Wasser. Wambeam is an experienced man on the platform and a good thinker, and we are looking forward to his work next year with great expectations.

The Declamatory contest, which was held April 4th, was of the usual high order. Miss Alma Tonsfeldt won first place in the dramatic section and Chester A. Goss won first in the oratorical section.

The forensic calendar for the year will close with the final Kennedy cup debate between the Welch and Crescent literary societies.

JAMES G. WATSON
College orator for 1913

Personal Sketch

JIMMIE," "The best known man in Ames," "The hardest worker on the campus," "Everybody's friend"—that is James G. Watson, the College orator for 1913.

Twenty-six years ago in the village of Crosshouse, Ayrshire, Scotland, "Jimmie" was born. Early he developed some of the qualities which have made him famous, and at the age of two years, persuaded his parents to move to Girvan. Not satisfied here he went a year later to live in Hargs and then to Beith, where he attended school for several years. At fifteen he became clerk in the freight department of the Glasgow and Southwestern Railroad, and laid the foundation for a necessary trip to America for his health. Experience gained in these few years has proved invaluable in college and enables him to systematize his work so that in the last semester he carries six hours of work with little difficulty.

When "Jimmie" came to Ames in 1906, physicians told him certain things which, if they were not pleasant, were at least definite. For two reasons he spent no time in drawing up his will, the main one being that he didn't need it, for today he is the liveliest invalid Ames ever saw. Canada claimed our Scotchman's attention for a while, but he was never built for cold weather and returned to Ames in time to enter with the thirteens at Christmas of 1909. In three and one-half years he has completed a four-year course, ranking high in his class in scholarship.

The Beardshear Literary Society did a good piece of work for Ames when it opened the way to forensics for James Watson. Immediately active in all college events he soon began covering himself and the organizations to which he belongs with honor. In 1910 he won the declamation prize in the Declamatory contest with "Tam O'Shanter;" in 1911, he turned the same trick in the Oratorical section with "John Hay, Peacemaker." He helped debate the State Teachers' College off the floor in the fall of 1911. His name is engraved on the Shirley Allen cup as winner of the Home contest in the spring of 1912. He is a member of the Adelante Club, Cosmopolitan Club, Forensic League, Beardshear Literary Society, Junior Class Play Cast, Delta Theta Sigma, Delta Sigma Rho, 1912 National Dairy Judging Team, and various departmental organizations. In athletics he is a lesser light, being constructed more for small lateral spacing and to see over things than to heave weights or even serve as a windbreak.

As we near commencement days we dread parting with "Jimmie." No member of the senior class will be more missed in the days to come. In class rooms and in technical work instructors will regret his absence; on the athletic field the men will miss his cheering voice; in forensics he leaves a place which is hard to fill. He keeps up his record by being graduated early and has engaged passage for Scotland on May the thirty-first. "Of course, there is no hurry," he says, but as the days go by he looks more frequently at the picture of his "sister" in the back of his watch and speaks of her as his "wee bonnie Scotch lassie."

Two State Extension Departments offer him good salaries when he returns to America, and other positions stand open to him. Dairying is his hobby, and his ambition is to further its interests and "to make two streams of milk flow where one flew before." He will make good in whatever line of work he takes up and will always be a worthy son of Iowa State College.

James Watson, we are proud to have been your classmates. We honor you.

Ames Glee Club

ON January 9th, 1913, the I. S. C. Men's Glee Club, consisting of twenty-five members, accompanied by a soprano soloist, an accompanist, and a reader left Ames on their first annual holiday tour. A great deal of care had been taken in planning, in advertising, and in rehearsals, to make this tour a successful one. The towns visited were January 9th, Jefferson; January 10th, Carroll; January 11th, Logan; January 12-13th, Omaha; January 14th, Red Oak; January 15th, Corn- ing; January 16th, Ottumwa; January 17th, Keota; January 18th, Hed- rick. At nearly every stop the club received entertainment, in most cases in private houses. The programs rendered consisted of club num- bers, soprano, tenor, and baritone solos, readings and cello solos, and was very much appreciated. In most cases good crowds assembled for the concerts. This was especially true of Keota and Hedrick, where all the available seats were sold a considerable time in advance. Feel- ing very well satisfied with the success which attended the club's first efforts, the managers planned a short tour for the spring vacation be- ginning March 26th. The cities visited were Marshalltown, Mason City, Webster City, and Nora Springs. Good weather and appreciative audi- ences were instrumental in making this short trip even more successful than the holiday tour had been. A great deal of credit is due Professor A. S. Thompson, director, for the work he did in training the club. The reputation which the club earned, of being one of the best college glee clubs of the middle west, is largely due to the training which they received under Professor Thompson. Others who were not members of the Glee Club, but who contributed a great deal to the success of the two tours, are Miss Gladys Ufford, soprano soloist, Miss Alice McClure and Mrs. H. H. Plagge, accompanists, and Mr. C. H. Lissenden, reader. Everything considered, both trips were decidedly successful and the managers are planning more extended tours for the coming year.

JUDGING TEAMS.

Mott Wilder, 1914

Judging Teams

WINNING two firsts and two seconds in four judging contests is a record that any school might well envy. This, however, has been accomplished by the teams representing Iowa State College during the past year. The men on these teams are well deserving of their judging A's in recognition of the honor they have brought to the college. Yet it must not be forgotten that contests are won not by good luck or by superior natural ability, but rather by hard, consistent work in practice and in training.

Winning a place on the teams was almost as difficult as winning the contests. Competition throughout the preliminaries was intense. Practically the entire senior animal husbandry class took part in the work-out at the Inter-State Fair at Sioux City, and made the various minor trips in addition to the judging work at home, in their endeavor to make the team. The men of the apple and dairy judging teams were likewise the survivors of the same keen competition. In short, the contests were so thorough that there could be little doubt that the men picked for the team were the men fitted for the position.

At the American Royal Stock Show at Kansas City, the Ames team, composed of L. O. Wise, Earl S. Girton, Ray Gatewood, R. C. McChord, R. E. Coverdale, with J. W. Schwab as alternate, were unfortunate in losing first place to Nebraska. The team profited by last year's experience, nevertheless, for instead of losing the contest because of poor judgment on mules, Ames was high on the long-eared variety. This contest decided definitely that Iowa State College must win first place at the International and she did. Four members of the Royal team and J. W. Schwab, with H. E. Boyts as alternate, had their pictures taken together this time. Here, in a contest with eleven other colleges, Ames won first with 203 points to spare, Wise and Girton being first and second high men of the contest.

C. L. Burlingham, G. L. Thompson, L. S. Gillette, and Howard Barker, alternate, attended the National Dairy Show at Chicago and pointed out to the judges Iowa's idea of a good milk producer. Fourteen schools participated, five of them coached by I. S. C. alumni, and again the Cornhuskers beat us out of first place, this time by a narrow margin of 68 points. C. L. Burlingham finished high man in the contest on Holsteins, winning a scholarship by so doing.

Early in January, M. M. Allender, O. H. Joy, A. J. Terrall, L. S. Gillette and L. F. Watts, in their trip to the National Fruit Show at Lincoln, Nebraska, demonstrated that Ames is "wise" on apples as well as on fat swine and dairy cows. Consistent team work, rather than individual starrng, won the contest, for there were scarcely three points difference in the scoring of the five men. F. W. McBride was alternate on this team.

Military at I. S. C.

A LONG with the rapid growth of our college in the last few years has come a corresponding growth in the Military Department both in numbers and in spirit and enthusiasm shown. The department now has two good battalions of four companies each, or a total of three hundred and fifty men all receiving two hours' drill each week under the able leadership of General Lincoln and an efficient corps of officers.

In the selection of officers, an examination system is used, and after this is passed, seniority and ability to instruct determine the promotions. In this way a well organized and trained body of officers is maintained. To assist further in their training, the officers are required to attend officers' school one hour each week.

During the last three years many new features have been added to this department so that at the present time, in addition to the annual sham battle between the two battalions in the spring, several competitions are held between the companies and the lesser units. Each fall and spring a sabre is given to the captain having the best drilled company and in addition a suitable prize is given to the first and second lieutenants of each company.

In the spring of 1912 a shooting gallery was put in so that those that desired it might receive instruction in firing and target work.

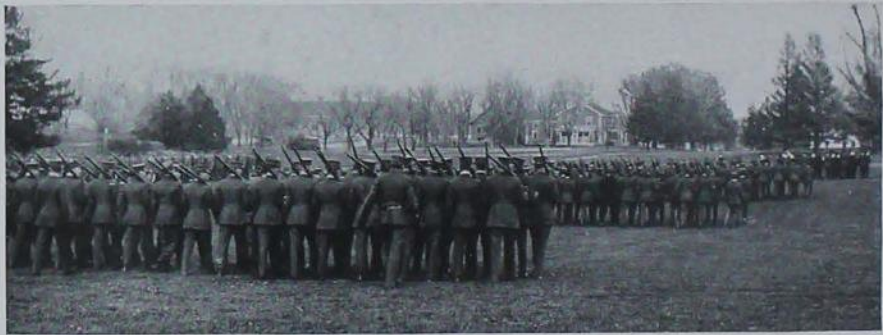

At the present time the department is badly in need of an armory, but is using instead the basement of the new gymnasium.

As our school grows we hope and expect to have a larger, more efficient and more popular department each year.

Mr. Dooley on the Ag. Carnival

AND wor ye sick yisterday, Hennessey?" asked Mr. Dooley of his old friend, as they chanced to meet the day after the Ag. Carnival of 1912 had passed into history.

"Phat makes ye joomp at the conclooosionations, Misther Dooley?" returned Hennessey, in some surprise. "Ye know about the dog named August that joomped at the conclooosionations av a mule, Misther Dooley."

"Yis, and th' next day wor th' first of September, f'r that wor th' last of August. But ye miss th' mark. Th' nixt day is today, and ye wor not at th' gr-rand carny-vale yisterday, Hennessey."

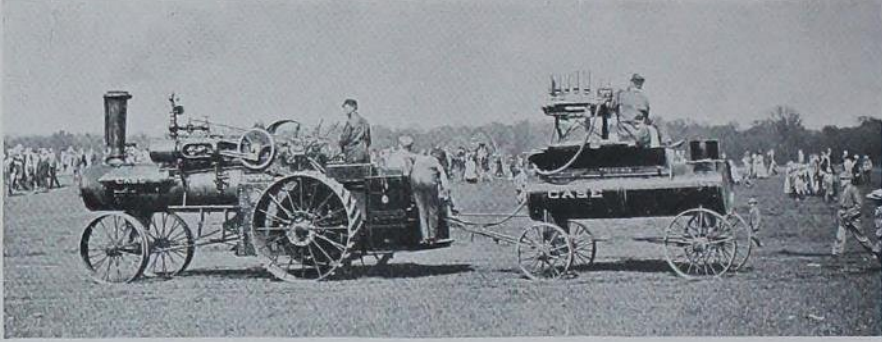

"'Twas this way, Hennessey. Th' aggie bys had been secretly plan-nin' f'r some time t' have a cilibration this spring, which they named the carny-vale. Ye see, it's jist a new college terr-um for St. Patrick's day, f'r ye see it wor hild on th' sivinteenth. Oh, yis, Oi know it wor not th' sivinteenth av March. But th' lads mint well, Hennessey, but there wor so minny Dutch amongst thim that they got there jist two months late."

"A noble son av th' ould sod, Jawn Kelleher, wor boss av th' show. He issued a proe-ly-mation dismissin' classes at noon, and th' Deans said thot Jawn was a wise by. So I got curious, Hennessey, and wint out. And there wor a soight to make yore eyes glad. Even th' grass av th' meddy wor green in honor av howly St. Patrick. But th' crowd, Hennessey. All th' bys wor there, and all av th' gurrils and more, too. Th' perfissors wor there, and even Bugs Summers had slowed down t' a walk. Down th' wan row av shows, Oi wint, Hennessey. Wud Oi go see the same wans a gain, did ye say? Oi hardly think it, thot Oi wud raise th' price av admission t' prohibitive figgers to prevint th' people goin' in. But Oi had started in, Hennessey, and it didn't look peelite t' pass by th' rist av th' shows. Sol-ld, did ye say? No, Oi wor giv away."

"F'r instance, Hennessey, they had a place called th' 'Dairy loonch,' and shure, all ye cud see wor a runty calf about the color of Floyd Wambeam's beard. And thim they had a track mate, in which th' gurrils held th' most promy-nent place. They had a sorororitty race, Hennessey. 'Twas grand. Some swate lookin' daughters av th' ould sod slipped lightly onto some wheel-barreys, and thin some noble-sowled sons of Oireland whaled 'em across a given space, and that wor the sorororitty race, Hinessey. Phat is a sorororitty, did ye say? In these days av higher larnin' and Jim Trewin, ye should be bitter informed. A sorororitty, Hinessey, is a new-fangled name f'r a wheel-barrey. Phat wid Alice McClure gittin' doompd out onto th' ground, and th' Piphis winnin' by a nose, we got raley excited.

"As Oi said befor, everywan and their little brothers wor out, exceptin' Doc Burlingham and his cousin Jimmie Watson, who didn't loike it because they wor lift off th' committee list. Dad Gillmor had a frish hair-cut f'r th' occasion, and th' Dean had a new smile that had niver been used befor. All av th' boys that wor not workin' wor fussin'. Some av thim weren't known to be addicted to th' habit, loike Harley Walker and Ardo Joy, but they wor a strollin' around wid th' purtiest gurrils th' Kappa Delts cud boast av.

"Thin, Hinessey, we went to th' bull foight, to which we got bids from Jeb Warner and Hi Williamson. And a glorious bull foight it wor, as Oi says befor and betimes, f'r ye know that wor where the title av Mixican athlete wor invinted to be applied to Eddie Weyrauch and Ray Gatewood, nather av which Oi'll claim f'r th' Irish. Thin Oi went out and ate me supper av pickles and cold beans, which Oi obtained from th' dispensary at th' top av th' hill. Yis, Hinessey, we had a grate toime, and th' bist part av it is that it will be repated f'r th' second toime next year."

Engineers' Campfire

AT about two-thirty, Helen and I started for the Engineers' Campfire, which was held in the North Woods on the third of last October. Contrary to the custom of the weather man, a fine day was set aside for the event.

The old road out to the North Woods was crowded with all kinds of couples, each carrying a large basket. Some tarried, others hurried, but the destination for all was the same—the Campfire. Just across Squaw Creek programs were given us; Helen immediately became enthusiastic over the novelty of the card, and exclaimed:

“Why, look here, we are going to have Pankhurst, Taft, Teddy, and Wilson here. What do you know about that?”

Being an Engineer myself, this little exclamation gave me no small amount of satisfaction. Just then we arrived at the scene of the parade and the crowd there was something immense. All at once everybody rose to their feet, and gazed in admiration, for the suffragette parade was coming.

“Look at that!” “Isn't that middle one gorgeously gowned?” “Oh, see the one in red!” In response to these exclamations, I tried to follow the whole parade at once. I don't really believe that any suffragette parade ever had anything on this. Bill Taft, with his steam roller came next, and then Woodrow Wilson passed in review with his donkey. They drew a half-hearted applause, but it remained for T. R. to stir the people by his speech, which was a masterful expounding of the word I.

“Who is he?” Helen asked.

“That's Tragge Shallenberger. Don't you know him?”

In the political race among the above mentioned people, Mme. Pankhurst won by a few feet over Teddy. Taft on his steam roller put up a great fight till the excessive pressure on his boiler caused it to explode.

Exciting games of Rugby football were pulled off between teams from the different divisions. The Ag. engineers proved both that they were good engineers and that their Ag. training stood them in good stead by winning from the unruly civils. After the excitement, we went up the creek a short distance, where supper was to be eaten. Everybody grabbed their baskets of lunch, and seated themselves about a large canvas which was spread out on the grass. Prof. Porter handed out the weeners and was exceedingly stingy with them. By the time we had finished our supper, night was upon us and a large campfire was built to keep off the damp air.

It was interesting to watch faces of boys and girls as they sat around and gazed into the fire. I guess I was dreaming as much as any of them till I was aroused by the cry, "Oh, Harry! what are they going to do over there?" It was nothing but the civils and their blanket-tossing stunt. The electricals certainly did add fame to their name by the installation of an electric light plant out in the woods. Two brilliant arc lights prevented very much fussing.

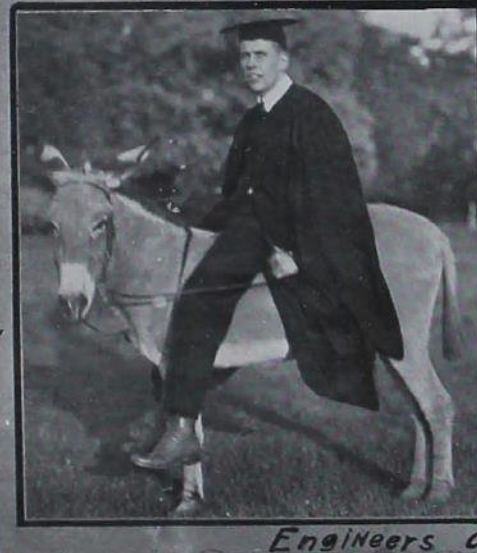

With the dying out of the campfire, we seated ourselves on the ground in front of the open-air stage. Helen again turned to her program, where she read that the opening act was to be a juggling act by Buck Hurst. "Why, I didn't know he was a juggler. Do you really think it is Hurst?" she asked. I had heard it whispered that there were three vaudeville acts coming from Chicago, so I told her about it.

"I knew it couldn't be true, for here is Paul Clapp billed to put on a vaudeville sketch with two co-eds. That couldn't be, for I never have seen him with a girl. Have you?" The vaudeville acts and the moving pictures were fine, and the quartet from our old school sang darkey songs and ragtime. The great electric footlights went out for the last time and homeward we went discussing some part of the program which was especially interesting.

St. Patrick's Day Celebration

IT was a bright day in the middle of April, 1913. St. Patrick sat on the golden stairs leading to the Royal Mansion, smoking his old Irish pipe. He was thinking of the good times he used to have when he lived on earth in Ireland. As he was meditating over the past he unconsciously drew his jack-knife from his overalls' pocket and commenced to carve the image of a shamrock on the golden staircasing.

Before the shamrock was finished he heard footsteps near. He looked up and to his surprise St. Peter was standing before him. "Patrick, what doest thou?" exclaimed his highness. "Have I not rebuked thee often enough for thy misdoings? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, unless thou redeemest thyself I must banish thee from this land. Canst thou give me any reason why thou shouldst remain here?"

The Irish twinkle showed in St. Patrick's eye, for he was confident that he could rectify himself. "Begorra, St. Peter, I am the Patron Saint of Oirland," he commenced. "Twar only for the good of the Oirish people thimselves that Oi driv all the snakes frum the Inerald Oisle and sanktified the land. There can shorely be no bether excuse fer me a shtayin here."

"But I canst not take thy word as the sole evidence. Hast thou any proof that thou wert a blessing on earth and art deserving of a place among the saints?"

"Faith, Oi can prove it to ye beyond a doubt the thickness of a red hair," exclaimed the Irishman. My mimry is dear to the hearts of the Amiricans thimselves that the laddies in the colleges hold sacred the day of my birth.

"But never before war there sich a cilibration as the one this year by the Oirish Civil Engineers of Iowa Shtate College. These loyal shpirited byes got their hades together and sez, 'This is the birthday of the Pathron Saint and niver a class will we attind before the sun sets over yon western hills; but we'll shpend the day a rejisin and a boostin for ould St. Pathrick.' And be-jabers, St. Pether, they lived up to their wurrd to the very minute.

"Afore the marnin services had hardly commenced, these true Oirish ingineers were a marrchin out of their Ingineerin buildin dressed in full regalia. They war decorated from head to foot with the green of Erin and they all war a smokin Oirish poipes oidinticle with my own.

"Ner did they fergit that they war engineers. Ivery blessed one of em war a carryin a shpirit level, the shpirits in em alookin like the ould Oirish rum that me and my friends used to dhrink, while we war on airth, but it were truly nothin but soapsuds that had a yaller color.

"And as they marrched acrost that school yard they war foiner lookin thon any sojers that iver sot foot upon the ould sod. But they was a goin to wake up the rist of the school to the fact that their Pathron Saint war an engineer, so they ramparted thru the buildins a singin songs and a shootin fire-crackers with all their might.

"Ner did they shtop whin they rached the Prsident's office, but they walked roight in and paid the gntleman a visit of which he moight well be proud. They all circled around the room with the Prsident in the middle; and thin the ordher was given to presint arms. The "arms" with the liquor in em war presinted, but his highness declined to accept any as there war so many people a shtandin around and a seein him. He war thin called on fer a shpeech and in his first wurds he remarked that he had niver before seen so many Indians at oncet. This remark was not very well received, as it war a poor compliment to sich a loyal set of Oirishmen.

"It war quite ivident thot

the Prsident war under the imprission that these fellers war not Oirishmen, for he expected them to return to their classes in fifteen minits. So he decided to put it to a vote whither they should go back to wurrk or not, and when they answered him it were loike a bomb had busted in the midst of em, fer every blasted one of em hollered 'NO' from the bottom of his heart. And, faith, whin the Prsident raelized that the 'nays' had it he war willin to give in. And whin the bye they called 'Capper,' leader of the bunch, comminc-ed to explainin the tradishion to him, he shtated that he refused to argue with a red-headed Oirishman.

"This last shtatement cheered the byes considerable, and as they filed out of the office, they all war singing a song in honor of the Prexy to the tune of 'Johnny fill up the bowl.'

"Then, begorra, what did these civils do but hand out the refreshments to the purty gurrls who war a fallerin em around and a helpin em cilibrate.

"Faith and bejabers, Oi niver ixpect in the past ner the future to have again sich an honor bestowed upon my mimry.

Using the Chain

It sure was lucky for that College to have the same birthday as me, fer the ceremony war shure a credit to the school. And now, St. Peter, what is yore verdict?"

"Thou shalt keep thy name as Patron Saint," replied his highness, "and thou shalt be given the highest seat in the Royal Castle, for thou art deserving."

Synopsis of Play—"Vision of Youth"

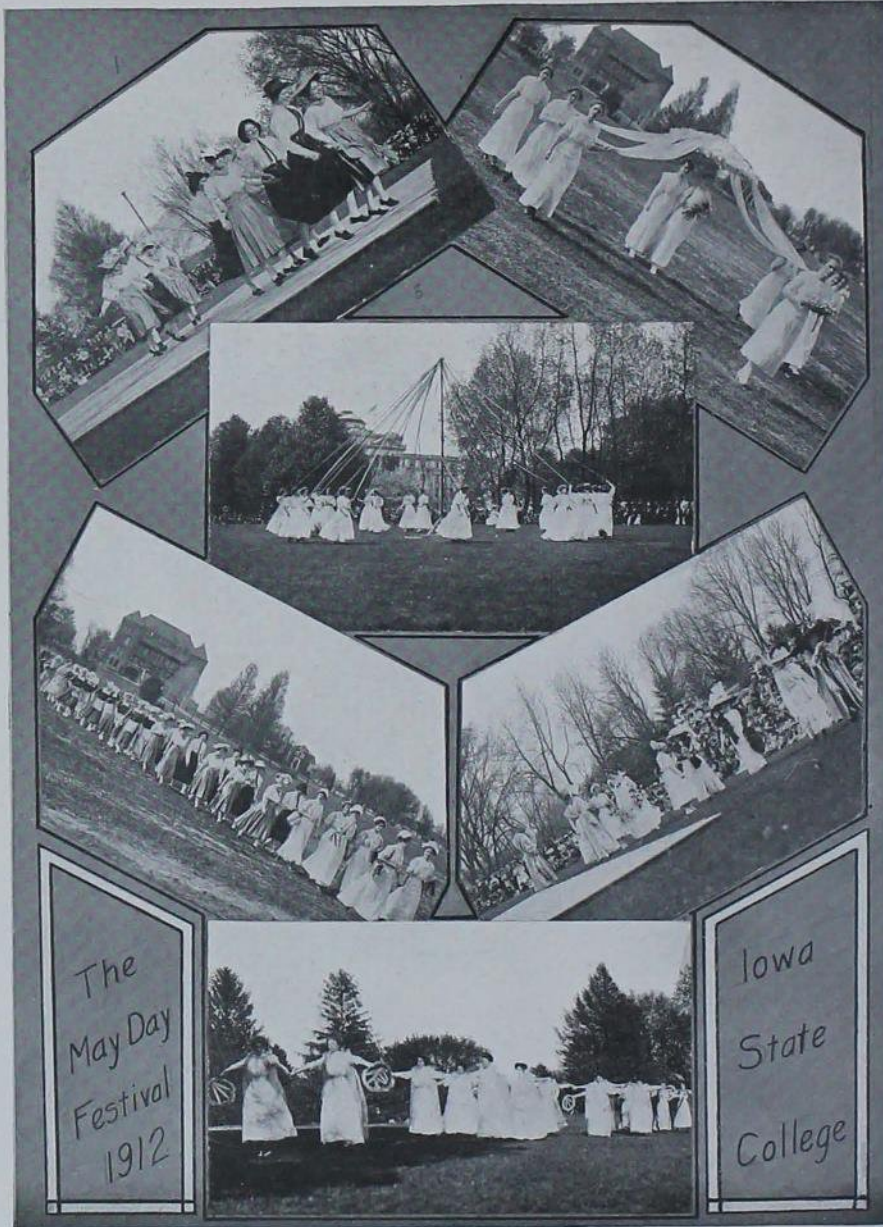

Father Time to comfort two little girls called "You" and "I" who do not wish to grow up, calls Sweet Memory who beckons out of Childhood's kingdom the things that once delighted the hearts of the little girls. Although the spirit of youth with "Overstudies," "Overdress" and "Foolish Pleasures" tries to carry away the little girls, Prudence restores them and they remain to welcome "Education" and her companions and to catch a glimpse of their future "Graduation Day."

IT IS the purpose of the Agricultural Club of the Iowa State College to promote not only the agricultural knowledge, but also the good fellowship of its members. The club has grown up with the agricultural division and has been the only organization in which the interest of all Ag. students is centered and as a result the annual Ag. Reception given in the fall term and the big Ag. Carnival in the spring have been the biggest affairs of the college. To stimulate more interest and to bring about more unity in the different departments of the divisions, there was organized last year the Department Clubs which have met every other week and have done much towards creating a healthy rivalry among the students and departments.

CURTISS CLUB

OFFICIAL
TWO YEAR AGRICULTURAL ORGANIZATION

The Two Year Course in Agriculture was outlined in 1910, especially for young men who had completed the eighth grade.

In March 1912 the Curtiss Club was organized with the object "to promote and foster literary, athletic, and social affairs; judging contests, and all other interests common to the class both here and throughout the state." In this club are men from Washington and Massachusetts, Georgia and Minnesota, Canada, Central America, Mexico, Holland, and Asia Minor. Of these men

99% expect to go back to the farm
78% expect to go back to the Iowa farms
1% expect to find some other occupation.

The Two Year Course has doubled in numbers.

The men are trained in the classroom and laboratory to become practical and progressive farmers, and this together with their work in the Curtiss Club fits each to become a leader in his own community.

CIVIL ENGINEERING SOCIETY

THE purpose of the Civil Engineering Society is to promote and broaden interest in the engineering profession. Because of their characteristic loyalty and stick-together civil spirit, and their activities in instituting and maintaining desirable college traditions, this society is generally known as the "spice box" of the Engineering division. A more whole-hearted, care-free organization cannot be found on the campus; and many a time from the open windows of the drafting rooms float songs from the "Civils' Hymnal," as they lustily sing "St. Patrick was an Engineer."

Hymn

Tw'as the Civils that proposed
To celebrate St. Patrick's day,
For St. Patrick was a Civil,
Studied structures and railway.

Chorus—
He built a bridge across the Jordan,
Laid a railway to the skies,
Made a track and road to joy-
land,
Let the Aggies walk the ties.

Oh, how nice to be a civil,
All so dignified and fine,
We have naught to do but
study,
Gathering knowledge all the time.

Chorus—

Water power and irrigation,
Evvie teaches us just so.
What a privilege to ask him
Everything we do not know.

What a friend we have in Kirkham,
On us knowledge to bestow.
What a privilege to ask him,
Everything we do not know

Chorus—

Oh, what loads we often figure,
Get the stresses all too low.
All because we do not ask him,
Everything we do not know.

Animal Husbandry

This is the bunch that pick out the good "p'int" of a cow. While it may be impossible to determine the age of Ann, it is entirely possible for the student of heredity, knowing that Ann's uncle wore brown socks and that her grandmother on the maternal side wore hoop skirts and smoked a clay pie, to say that Ann would be a militant suffragette. It is further demonstrated to the student of animal husbandry that the hen needs plenty of water in the ration for economical and efficient milk production. A ban has been placed on screw-drivers as weapons of offense within the A. H. domains. Each spring an epidemic of oral exams strikes the department amidsthips, and the boys choke on them much as they would on hay fever. It is suspected that the A. H. faculty have clubbed together and brought a carload of cigars (?) as they are invariably found consuming the same brand—Key West Tufers. Certain Seniors have been looking for the hiding place for two years, and at this writing were suspecting an underground cavern.

Bacteriology

This is the course where ultra-microscopic creatures are studied. Beef soup is one of the principal foods for the little critters. The head of the department is quite a busy man, for he has written several books telling us how the little bugs do us harm.

Bfusseri scott, a new species, has recently been discovered hovering around the laboratories. It is quite serious, although we hope it may be checked without any great damage. No artificial cultures are needed, the species growing best in the presence of the lab. instructor. Guinea pigs are kept as pets by this department.

Agricultural Journalism

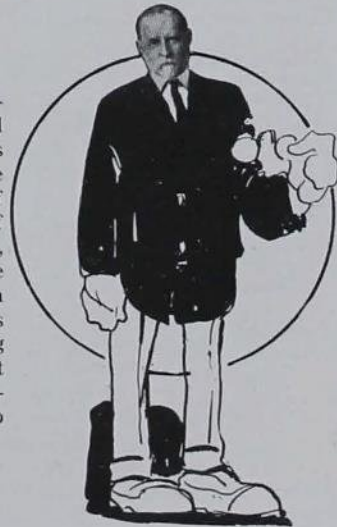

This is the department where hard work predominates. From an early hour in the morning till long after the chickens have gone to roost, the machinery of journalism is kept in motion. Innumerable things happen down in the southeast corner of the first floor. Here is where verbosity gets the hook, where Sam'l sends out pages of copy on such subjects as "Don't Let the Lambs Climb on the Strawstack" and "Straightening Corn Rows Decreases the Distance From One End to the Other."

Under the protecting wings of the Prof., the "boys" put out the Iowa Agriculturist—The Farmers' Magazine from the Farmers' School. This is the coming farm paper of the future, one which will put "Corn" and fifty-seven others on the blink. Yea, verily, these three—work, work and work, but the greatest of these is work.

Botany

Morphologically speaking, it takes a good student to pass up Botany. Also it takes a good judge of weeds, for, due to the generosity of his classes, Dr. Pammel has been kept in cigars since before Squaw creek ran up hill. The relation of botany to agriculture is taken up in the study of horse nettle, pigweed, lamb's quarter, cowslip, chickweed and dogtooth violet. Oral exams are terrors; one doesn't easily forget them. Though a church member, Doc takes his classes on trips to Boone every year, conveniently abandoning them in the evening. Just why some people want to major in Botany is more than we can understand. We never knew before that they liked to work so well.

History

The why and wherefore of the great deeds of our ancestors are explained to us in great detail by these people. Nobody ever takes more than one course at a time in History because it would be impossible for them to get their library work done. "Messages of vital importance and special significance" are carried to the student body by the genial college chaplain, who is seen in a typical pose. So conscientious do students become after taking work here that they never cut class except with special permission of the Prof. "The March of Progress" is a constant source of worry to the faculty, because they fear that they may fail to catch the significance of some event. All the same, they are a mighty good bunch, and nobody ever has a hard word for them. "The following are the announcements to be made at this time."

Electrical Engineering

Prof. Fish here depicted furnishes the life of the department. In spite of his ferocious appearance he is quite lenient and often forgets to give the scheduled exams. This is the most theoretical course in school. It is here said that one electron in a molecule of matter has as much room as a grain of sand in the universe. The practical work in this department consists in removing electric lights from the campus, building "Beat Iowa" signs and furnishing moving picture shows for the Engineers' Campfire. The students work hard the first three years and then spend the last year wondering what to do when they get through.

After graduation they either work for the Ft. Dodge, Des Moines and Southern, or go East and learn the business.

Physics Department

A department whose fame reaches to the other end of the campus. This is the only department in school that can make an egg stand on its end.

The following debate covering one entire afternoon session was recently staged between two lesser Physicists:

Question: "Resolved, That the rest point is the same as the point of rest."

Aff. P.—Pomeroy. Neg. P.—Plagge

P. "According to your reasoning, that rest point is the same as the point of rest, it's as far from New Years to Christmas as it is from Christmas to New Years."

P. "Well, isn't it?"

P. "O Pshaw! Yes, of course, but that isn't what I mean."

P. "I suppose if you call the annex a barn and I call it a house, they are different, are they?"

P. _____

P. _____ etc., etc., ad infinitum.

Conclusion the Phis. department is a rest point in more ways than one.

Zoology

Where "Ontogeny recapitulates Phylogeny." Beware, oh ye stude, and do not enter into the office of the chairman of the post-graduate committee at 1:29 or 2:16, for they do not coincide with his notion of office hours (office hours 1:30 to 2:15 daily). The relation between the Dipnoi and modern life is studied, also the significance of the Proselachii to soil fertility. Blue books are on the black list, for the department wishes to save expense to their students. As an aid to practical farming, a thorough study of the entrails of the necturus is made. The Honor System, which classifies all students guilty till proved innocent, was invented by the bugs department. Steam boats are kept plying up and down the Squaw all summer in search of crawfish (crayoleum fishoribus) and crabs (Phthirus inguenalis) for use in the laboratory. There will be a vacancy in the department next fall, due to the fact that one popular (?) instructor is to be chaperon of one of the sorority houses then.

Horticulture and Forestry

Where the Jonathan apple rules. This department investigates everything from the shearing stress of a raspberry to the cause of meristic variations in potato seed. The feature of the work is the course in apple judging—the teams are invariably made up of students in animal husbandry. Front yards are planned with just enough of the winding effect so that the young man caller has little chance of escaping the family dog. The east side of the department is interested in the conservation of the woodpile. The foresters believe that nature's hirsute appendage—the forest—is in need of combing, currying and in some cases, of trimming. Scientific methods of chopping trees are considered, the problem being to conserve ax handles. The latest methods of pill-rolling are considered, and this feature comprises the foresters' outside work. This is the only department where Sunday work is forbidden.

Mining Engineering

In this department are included such courses as Scientific Pickology, Mule Management and Conservation of Physical Energy. Its activities are directed by Dr. Beyer during his spare moments preceding tennis matches, football games and track meets.

Only by means of the thorough training of this course is a man enabled to master the intricacies of coal heaving or to distinguish the flora of the carboniferous era.

Graduates are capable of undertaking work of any caliber, from lacerating rock on the city stone pile to managing the Philadelphia mint.

History

Where cul-tu-ah prevails. Nobody but the Vets. escape the English department, and the reason is that an irresistible force and an immovable body can't get along. The prime object of the course in English is to teach students to use the maximum amount of available space to say the least. The "head's" desk (see page 375) resembles nothing in the heavens above nor in the waters beneath, hence can be worshipped without violating any commandment. Teachers keep complete files of the Red Book and Jim Jam Jems to keep students from practicing the theory of plagiarism.

N. B.—All Bomb Board members have passed up their English.

Home Economics

It has been said that the happiest part of a young man's life is spent within the home. The prime object of this course is to gladden the home life of the young men. Many things are taught over in the splendid red building on the north side of the campus. The course demands that the students know everything from darning socks to serving luncheons to distinguished guests. This course is also death on mice, for nary a crumb of bread or scrap of meat is left over for the little creatures. Economy is also a great factor in this course. A cut of meat from a canner cow can be cooked and served as though it had come from one of our international champion steers.

Agricultural Engineering

This department is a cross between the east and west ends of the campus, and hence is known as the neutral strip, or J. B.'s preserve. The boys taking Ag. Engineering are a good bunch, if some are overlooked, and others not counted. They stick together like two drops of molasses. They adjust carburetors, construct drainage systems, design henhouses, convey ice cream to picnics in the tractor, and grab all the big jobs in sight. The Profs. from Beck and Clem clear up to J. B. have all the ear marks of good scouts. All the same, they couldn't get along without George Iverson, who nurses the tractor through ills and feeds it through health. He insists, however, that it shall never go to Nevada again. One characteristic of the department is its system of fines. If the boys forget to erase a pencil mark from the side of the manure spreader or to sign their name in ink they receive the same treatment a common drunk gets in police court—they are fined.

Public Speaking

The head of the department originated out in Kansas shortly before it became known as the Cyclone state. Platform control (not political) is the idea held out before the student. Everything is strictly practical—even the class plays, where the boys are shown how to embrace a girl properly. Strength of voice is cultivated by making the embryonic orator speak the Ten Commandments at the rate of 170 words per minute. Stage presence, as taught here, consists principally in neatly dodging bouquets (of eggs) thrown by admirers. The motto: "He that tooteth not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted for him." This is a real live department—one that is responsible for the debates, class plays, recitals and general work in public speaking which has characterized the college.

Mechanical Engineering

Every Mechanical is justly proud of their department head, Prof. Meeker. They all go to chapel once a term and that is when Meeker talks. The picture shows just how he looked on one of these occasions.

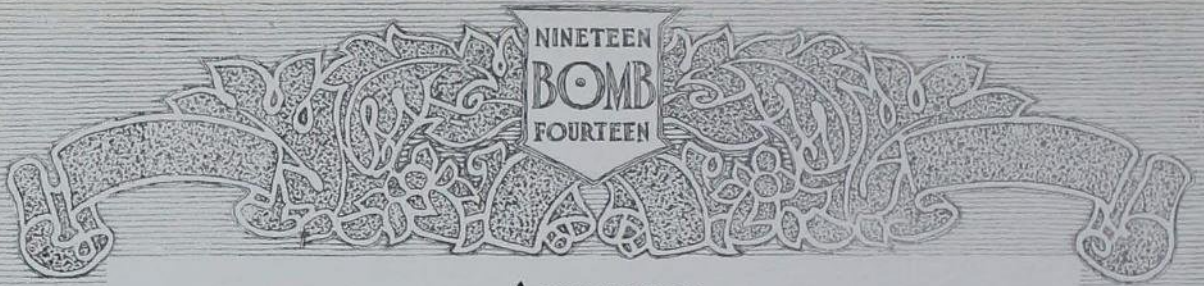

The mechanical course is the dirtiest course in school. The first thing to learn is how to be at home in a pair of greasy overalls. After this is mastered steady progress is made until in the Senior year the boys can take down a machine, reassemble it and have several pieces left over.

The professors throughout are noted for their "hoss sense," amount of "dater" and "moment of inertia."

Modern Language

When we sit down to record our impressions of the "Dutch" department, we are reminded of the student who got 100 on a history exam. There was only one question, "Discuss Nero and his reign." The student in his paper said, "The less said about Nero and his reign the better." Really we could say the same for this department, which is located so near Stanty's office that there is a private entry to the carpet. "Broadening the mind" is the paramount idea held out to the students—flat-heads result. One thing that the Prof has on other Profs—he has a specially meerschbaum-tinted office.

Agronomy

While it is true that a prominent member of the Agronomy faculty has only lately discarded rubber collars, the department is really quite up-to-date. The excessive population of Missourians is probably the cause of the "Show me"—your notebooks. Seminar is so exclusive that special invitations are sent out for the event.

"We shall not call the roll this morning—it seems unnecessary to take up so much time. Buh-uh! Where did we leave off last hour? Ah! yes, with the consideration of the subject of soil fertility, a grave problem which is being augmented with the passing of the years and the centuries. Now the crux of the problem is this—all the propaganda of fertilizer agents cannot save the soil. I have here some data which I have gathered from many sources (see Hopkin's Soil Fertility) on my Illinois farm. Buh-uh! Now the gentleman on the next to the back row will please note that I am the only lecturer in the room. He will please remember that I am Dutch, and may be compelled to use physical force to remove him from the room."

Extension

The connecting link between science and practice. The knights of the chart roll are these; they chase late trains, run hog and dairy specials, start co-operative cheese factories, boost for the college, and develop champion draw pitch players from Epworth League presidents who chance to go out on the crew. Like Noah Webster's dictionary, department members must be complete classified bureaus of information on every subject from hen dentistry to chocolate cake composition. Good looking men never get a job here for the simple reason that farmers doubt the word of a handsome man, even when they know he is telling the truth. Duck hunts are the closing events of the winter's work.

Economics

Prof.
John
Brindley

WELL ! SWAN!
IF MY VALEY
HAIN'T FER GOT TO FILL MY
MATCHSAFE
AGAIN !

Now, class, the point is right here and you see what I am getting at. This course teaches the history of ancient jokology. With subjects so deep that the class is drowned in them, Professor John goes on his way undisturbed except when the car is late or he is out of matches. "Now, class, it really was unfortunate, but the car was late, so it wasn't my fault." A new professor has recently stirred up things by trying to make the course hard, but as a rule the students pass it up the first time they take it.

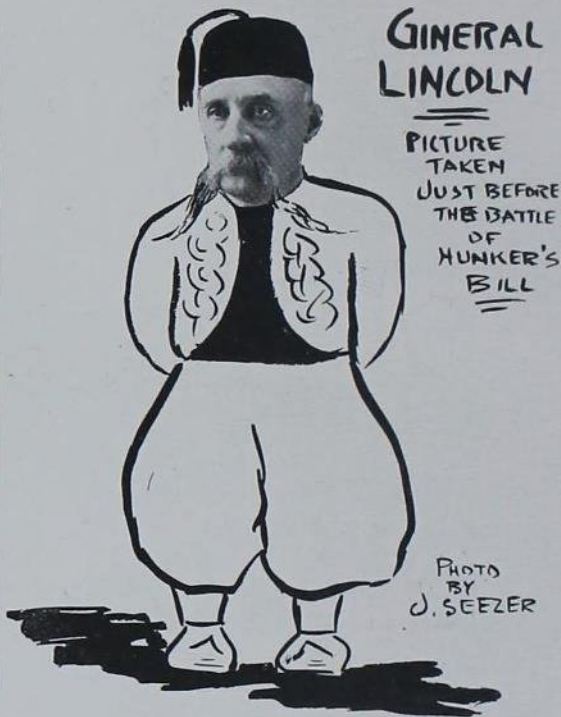

Dairying

"Let me live in the house of lacto." The dairy building is the place where wooden shoes clack on the floor, where the one-year men get a "college education" in seven months, where strong cheeses slit around the corner and hide behind the churn or in the elevator shaft. Some of the problems before the practical creamerymen of today are the difference between pasteurizing at 139° C. and 141° C., the complexion of bacteria, etc. The headquarters of the Cosmopolitan club are found within the limits of Mog's office. He keeps the "Furriners" united, teaches the yearlings the difference between Koumissette and Kephir, runs a lit. society or two, and sells cheese. The head of the department is the genial gentleman we see at the right of the page; he is replete with advanced ideas on the subject of new frozen dairy products. Just at present he is engaged in distilling hair tonic from Roquefort cheese. The investigation thus far has shown that the stronger types of cheese make the best tonic. The dairy building is the cheapest spooning place we know of, for there heavy plated spoons can be purchased for one cent each.

What a joke

This is a flashlight of Professor Noble's desk after Nellie and Mrs. Noble had spent hours trying to clean it up. The occasion was the arrival of the new president.

I Like to Fuss in Awtumm

I like to fuss in awtumm,
When the leeves begin to fall,
And the woods is full of campfires,
With the picknickkers and all,
I taik my gal to football gaimes,
With a blanket on my arm,
And I got to cuddel up reel close
To keap my cumpny warm.

I like to fuss in wintur,
When the snow is on the grownd,
And the rodes is good fur sleddin,
And thair skaitin on the pond.
We go to lots of dances,
Like the Freshman-Sophomore,
Where we leeve abowt ten-thirty,
With feat that's mighty sore.

I like to fuss in springtime,
When the sky gits clear and bloo,
And the grownd squrls come a-crawlin out
And the robins hop round in the doo.
I taik my gal to trak meats,
And watch the athulettes so grand
A-traipsin round in undercloase
With us shiverin on the stand.

I like to fuss in summur,
In the shaid of the campus pines,
And let Prof. Hoffman chase hisself,
With his killograms and dines.
Yes, I luv to fuss in summur
And, come to think it through,
I like to fuss moast ennytime.
Now, on the dead, don't you?

There was a young lady also,
Her name you probably all know,

And All for a Date

The time posted for drawing men for the Junior Trot read: "Senior girls, 6:30-7:15; Juniors, 7:15-8:00," and all day long excitement reigned among the co-eds. Any squad of girls could be heard asking one another, "Who are you going to draw tonight?" And the answer came, "I don't know, do you?"

By six-thirty that evening, the corridors leading to the south parlor were a humming mass of femininity. All were breathlessly awaiting the opening of the doors. Finally the committee in charge arrived, and the crowd surged after them into the realms of Junior Trot dates. Great as the excitement had been outside the door, that inside was greater. Everyone talked at once; the girls standing next the table were pushed forward until they assumed a leaning position, while as many as three chins rested on their shoulders and what seemed a 250-pound weight leaned on their backs.

A list of about six pages was handed to the nearest girl, who eagerly scanned its first page and was about to turn the leaf when no less than six hands reached out and grabbed for one sheet or another, the owner of the hands saying, "Turn to the 'W's.' His name doesn't begin with 'C.'" "Oh, those are Juniors! My man's a Senior." "I can't see anyone I know who dances." And thus the first possessor of the list lost her place.

As the time went on, various names were crossed off, each one in utmost confusion. Some girls crossed off not only one name, but two—and even three—not that the one girl meant to take them all, but that she was a "good friend" to some one. And some poor girl would sadly say, "The man I wanted is crossed off. I can't go now. I might as well get out of this jam and go home," while others joyfully pushed their way out with their ticket safely held between their lips—hands had other things to do in this crush.

Indeed, if the men in question could but look under the curtain and see how much in demand they were, even for an hour or so, they would be in danger of such conceit that they would be undesirable for ever after.

Prof. Erwin (in Hort. 8): "This is a specimen of moon vine. Doubtless you are all familiar with it. It is very abundant in the College Park."

After returning a poor set of exam. papers to the girls' class in Zoo., Prof. Summers impressed them with the fact that they had merely a mechanical memory, the kind that is found in a mule or donkey or the lowest African tribes. Was he complimenting the donkeys?

A CLASS IN COOKING

The day was fine, the sun shone warm,
The breath of spring was in the air,
The sky was blue, and clouds were few,
And all the world seemed fair.

'Twas on this bright and gladsome day,
That Martin Sar a-fussing went.
To South Woods then they strolled along,
This man and girl content.

And now it chances some friends, who, too,
Were that day strolling in the woods,
Met Mr. Sar and Alma T——
And thought that if they could

Just get a picture of the two
It would indeed be fine
To illustrate the fussers' page,
And fun and truth combine.

So Fay and Charlie prepared the trap,
And Barker snared the prey,
The unsuspecting couple learned
Too late, that sometimes friends betray.

That's how it happens so you see,
This splendid likeness does exist,
And really it deserves a place
Within the "fussers'" list.

The Betrayal of the Vets

1. And in the beginning the Sophomore class created the Bomb Board.
2. And the Bomb was without form, and was not written. And ignorance of Bombs prevailed in the heads of the Board.
3. And the editor said, "Let there be write-ups," and there were write-ups, diverse and varied.
4. And five Ags. did inquire about the iniquities of their brethren, and did write them down.
5. And three Engineers did learn of the evil-doings of the Engineers, and recorded them with malicious intent.
6. And three fair maidens did note the peculiarities of their sisters, and it is found in the Book of Revelations.
7. And there was fear and trembling in the hearts of the Juniors, for they desired not to be thus advertised.
8. And they yielded to fate, and said not a word, for they knew the way of Bomb Boards.
9. And one Vet. started out to determine the reputation of his fellow Vets.
10. And his fellow Vets. raised a large howl, for he knew too much about them.
11. And a delegation met with the editor and the assistant editor.
12. And protested against his selection, for they said, "We want one to write down our deeds who is ignorant about us."
13. And the editor said unto them, "Ye are unreasonable, oh ye Vets."
14. And the blood rose up in the eyes of the delegation, and they became sore.
15. And the editor bade them go their ways, and they refused, saying, "One of us must inspect the write-ups for the Vets."
16. And the editor hastily reconsidered, for he saw their rising wrath, and he said, "It is so. Depart in peace."
17. And the one they selected looked at the write-ups and became angry, and he conveyed their import to his fellows.
18. And he wished to change roasts into praises, truth into taffy, and the editor became excited.
19. And when the Vet. was gone, the editor called unto two of his trusty henchmen, and said, "Go thou and write the purveyors of thermometers and apostles of sterilization up in correct shape."
20. And the henchmen said, "Even so."
21. And then while the Vets. rejoiced, the henchmen told the truth in large quantities.
22. And the truth was written and printed while the Vets. slumbered and slept.
23. And when the Bomb cometh out, we shall seek shelter. Amen!

When a Man Comes Back to College

When a man comes back to college,
and's just said goodby to dad,
And he hears the chink a-jinglin' with
a sound that makes him glad;
Then the whole world's glad to see him
and a welcome to extend,
Everybody's glad to see him, everybody is his friend.
Gone are all last term's distresses; no
more nerve destroying thrills,
Waiting for a check from father, dodg-
ing duns, avoiding bills;
For he hears the chink a-jinglin' with
a sound that makes him glad
When a man comes back to college,
and's just said goodby to dad.

There's something sort of prosperous
about the way he's dressed;
His coat betrays a recent hand, his trousers sharply pressed;
No hole peeps up above his shoe to meet your startled gaze,
As it was always sure to do before the holidays;
His shoes so loud a shine display, they
fairly make you blink,
And he blushes like a maiden with his face massaged all pink.
Oh, the chink is jinglin' gaily, all the world is feeling glad,
When a man comes back to college,
and's just said goodby to dad.

A Study in Vanity

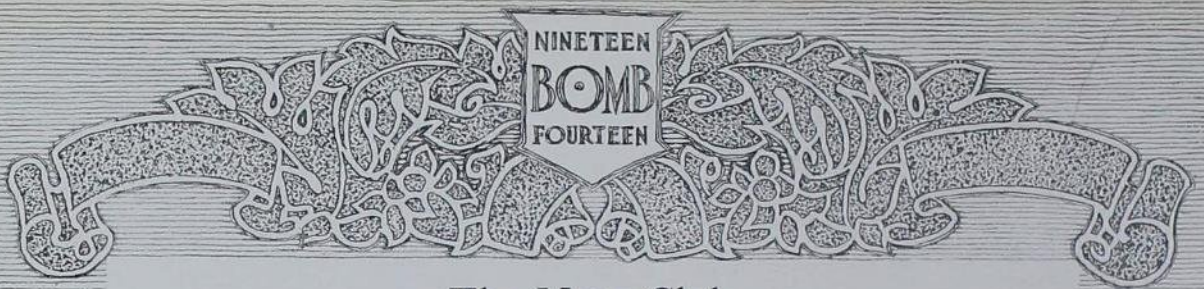

It's queer how much amusement
Man for girlish whim affects,
How shocked if on her chin one
Speck of powder he detects;
Or what a pained expression on
His sactimonious face,
If on a maiden cheek he spies
Of rouge a single trace.

But what of his own vagaries,
Has he no foolish whims?

Makes vanity no coy demands,
No artful claims on him?
Then what of all his talcums,
His pompadours and creams,
Pray what of all his manicures,
Massages pink and steams?

Oh, men may laugh at vanity,
And girlish arts condemn,
For all the while the maidens
Really have a laugh on them.

The Mary Club

I've often been told, haven't you,
That under the sun nothing's new?
As old sayings go
I thought it was so
Until I heard tell
Of the Mary Club, well,
Now I don't think that it's true.

And what is the Mary Club, pray?
Do tell you about it, you say?
Well now I declare,
I don't know that I dare,
'Tis a secret I'm told,
But I think I'll be bold
And tell you about it today.

I'll tell you how and why and when
This club was started by five young men,
As they sat together,
Discussing the weather,
And other things, too,
As young men do,
One Sunday evening, after ten.

They were Adelantes, these five, you see
There's Burlingham and Howard B,
And A. M. Heath,
'Tis my belief,
Wallace Reynolds, too,
And, yes, 'tis true
L. S. Gillette who joined quite free.

For in order to join this club, 'tis said,
There needs must be a fair "co-ed,"
Who was not contrary,
But whose name was Mary,
Tho' to four not at all
Did trouble befall,
The fifth Miss Mary was Winifred.

But Marion Winifred was her name,
Altho' not Mary, 'twas nearly the same.
Now the others to tell,
There is Miss Mary L.
And Mary "Mont" (that's three)
And Marys N. and V.
Who members of this club became.

The girls who joined this club, I'm told,
Have jollier times, a hundred fold,
Than we poor folk,
(It is no joke)
Who can't be a Mary,
But just ordinary
College girls with names less old.

And now, dear girls, though 'tis a shame,
We're not all Marys—we're not to blame,
There are other boys,
And there are joys,
For you and me
At I. S. C.
And after all, what's in a name?

WASH DAY AT MAG HALL

When the Rushing Season's O'er

It's great to see the Freshmen girls get rushed around in state;
To watch the friendly "frat" maiden fix up each Prep a date.
O! wild is the excitement for everyone concerned;
What wonder if, amid the fuss, the Preppy's head is turned.
But let the Preppy have her fun, as Preps have done before,
Until pledge day has passed away, and rushing season's o'er.

But hearken here, fair Preppy; nor count your chicks too soon,
For many things can happen in the passing of the moon;
The Soph that yesterday did smile with smect and winning mien,
Perhaps, today, will turn away and pass you by unseen.
So squelch your expectations, nor let your fancies soar,
Lest you be not of the chosen when the the rushing season's o'er.

One day on the street,
A Soph girl did meet,
Her bashful young history Prof.
But so frightened he grew,
When she said, "How d' you do,"
He neglected his headgear to doff.

Now the maiden won't speak,
To professor so meek,
But frigidly looks far away;
For even a Soph
Likes respect in a Prof.,
At least so the Sophomores say.

Bomb Board Troubles

And, behold, as I looked out over the land there did appear a great commotion; it seemeth that a certain body of persons are making what they call a Bomb, yet it waiteth an interminable time to explode. Certain people do urge it on, still it waiteth yet a while.

It seemeth that a group termed the Bomb Board did conspire to make the Bomb, but the task becomes so great that many of the conspirators yawneth exceedingly. When there is work to be done, they with one accord begin to make excuses; one had to look after a new pipe he had purchased, another had to attend a dance, one had to go home, while a fourth wished to fuss.

While they pursue their ways, the work pileth up; a few work far into the night to get it done, and much weariness of the flesh and sunkeness of cheeks resulteth.

Some of the literary committee did much, some little, others none at all. When their labors were over, pens were beaten into pruning shears and much verbosity did get the hook.

The athletic committee made a great ado about a little work, and when they were through, the waste basket did groan under its exceeding great load.

The art committee filleth the air with much useless talk and bickering, instead of spreading pictures on pages. They hold little fudge parties, and giveth the editor much trouble.

The history committee fell by the wayside, and beareth little fruit; some was plucked green, and causeth the mouth to pucker.

Though forty people saith that they did help in the construction, lo, but six or eight were of service. These ye may blame for the explosion which accompanieth the bursting of the Bomb.

Behind the Scenes

When the last Junior luncheon's been given,

And the dishes are all washed and dried,

When the greatest visitor has striven
To tell us we're "Iowa's pride,"

We shall rest, and faith we shall need it,
Sit down for a lab or two,

Till the next noted speaker's arriving
Shall give us some more work to do.

And then we shall fix a big luncheon—
Make salad, veal cutlets and ice,

And in the meantime be munching
Like so many sly, hungry mice,

For while in the lunchroom they're eating,
As proper as proper can be,

With silverware, lunch cloths and doilies,
And everything served to a "T,"

We Juniors stand back in the kitchen,
And eat with a three-pronged fork,

A tin cup, a bowl and a soup plate,
And grab a bite while we work.

And sometimes we each have plenty,
While again sometimes we don't.

For sometimes what's meant to serve twenty—
Well, we find that sometimes it won't.

But then, the guests never know this,

They don't know what's back of the scenes,

They think that because we don't show this,

We're back in there dining like queens.

They think that our work is mere science,

That we never grow weary at all,
But each for the joy of cooking,

And each in her crisp pink dress,
Sits back and reads Fannie Farmer

For recipes just as they are.
But they "don't know the kitchen like

we do,"

Nor they don't know the good times
out there;

They don't know the fears of the hostess—
Don't know—and much less do they care.

So we girls still continue to feed them,
Still eat with those black forks so wide,

Till the last Junior luncheon's been given,

And the dishes are all washed and dried.

Do This for Ames

In your high school perhaps several capable young men and women are planning to enter college next September. Write to them or call on them when you can and explain to them what fine opportunities are opened up by an education at

IOWA STATE COLLEGE

You will do good thrice every time you send a new student to Iowa State College. You will do good to the student, to yourself and to the state of Iowa, which needs men and women with Ames training.

If every student and alumnus of the college did this, there would be wonderful growth at the college and a great increase of its usefulness.

The Registrar is ready to help in this work and he has catalogues, books of views and illustrated folders which he will furnish you for prospective new students. Ask him for them.

Why Worry?

This poor Junior maiden is giving
 Much thought to the high cost of living;
 For her luncheon's for twenty
 And she must serve plenty,
 So in a great stew she is buying.

A three-course luncheon's quite trying,
 With only five dollars for buying,
 Thus with puckered up brow
 She's figuring how
 Each cent she can best be applying.

There was once when a five dollar bill,
 Seemed to her quite as big as a hill,
 But with these bills arranged
 Her ideas have changed
 And five dollars is practically nil.

And so with a slip-stick she's trying
 To make each crumb worth the buying,
 So it's really no wonder
 Her mind's rent asunder,
 When this is the cause of her sighing.

We wish here to express our appreciation of the treatment we have received from the bureau of engraving and especially Mr. J. J. Sher and his department. We are indebted to them for the border design and the section design, besides many helpful suggestions for the plan and arrangement of the book.
